Baseball Games Will be Big Feature—Athletic Events Arranged—Battalion Drill and Sham Battle by Company K—Side Shows.

But a few days more and the Fourth of July will be here and with it one of the most complete celebrations Plainfield has enjoyed in many years. *The latter will be due to the enter*prise and progressiveness of the Hope Y. M. A., the hustling body of West End young men which is constantly coming to the fore with something new and novel.

Just what their Independence Day "County Fair" on Hope Common is to consist of has already been related in a general way, but at a meeting held last evening particulars were touched upon and made public. All combined the celebration will be a creditable one and provide amusement for the entire day.

The programme has been arranged to commence at 9 o'clock and will continue without abatement, in some form or other, until late in the evening. Among the principal attractions are the baseball games between the Hope team, at present holding the lead in the City League, and the Decatur A. C., of New York, amateur champions of the Metropolitan district. One will begin at 10 o'clock and the other at 2 in the afternoon.

At 12:30 a series of athletic events in which there have been many entries, will take place in charge of Albert Urich, George McCosh and other of the Y. M. A. gymnasium leaders. All the old time races such as wheelbarrow, potato, sack, obstacle and fat man's races will be seen and also a hundred yard dash, hammer throwing and many others.

In charge of Captain Browning, Plainfield's crack Company K will give a battalion drill on the broad field beyond the baseball diamond and will afterward engage in a thrilling sham battle with a visiting military company as an opponent. As this is something new for Plainfielders having been so long without a military company, it promises to be one of the best features of the celebration. Company K has taken part in several similar affairs and the members are well up in all the tricks of the play and intend to make a hot fight to come out victorious.

Without the usual side show, a county fair would be incomplete and the Hope Y. M. A. has taken particular care to see that it will have one of the best. An entertainment committee, consisting of Thomas Muir, B. C. Firstbrook and Arthur Fritts, will be in charge of a large tent where bounty vaudeville performances of the best character will be given. Among the artists who will appear are Joseph Butler and Theodore Owens, of Elizabeth, recognized leaders in southern singing and dancing; Mack and Mack, inimitable Irish comedians; Shepherd and Hansen, contortionists and slack wire artists; Lusardi and Bowers, champion buck, wing and "wooden" shoe or clog dancers, and others to be announced later.

The red lemonade men, candy butchers, peanut venders, cane racks, knife boards, "hit the baby" and other devices to catch the elusive nickel, will be there galore. This end of the show is to be supervised by M. D. Sweeney, whose reputation has been firmly established through his connection with other enterprises. In addition a brass band will be on the grounds all day and will discourse music, topping off the day with a grand burst of melody in the form of a display of fireworks.

Other attractions are in preparation and will be in shape before the day arrives. At all events the programme as arranged has been carefully considered and the members feel confident that Plainfielders can come prepared to stay all day as the refreshment end will be no mean feature.

The committee having charge of the entire affair is practically the same as that which conducted the successful minstrel show last spring, consisting of George E. Firstbrook, chairman, William M. Runyon, D. Brix Martin, Thomas Muir and John H. Cone.

Medical Student at Hospital.

I. W. Voorhees, a graduate of Princeton University, class of 1901, and now studying at the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, has taken a position at Muhlenberg hospital for the summer.

Miss Symons, of East Third street, is spending the summer in Vermont.

YOUNG WOMEN GAVE SOCIAL

PING-PONG AND REFRESHMENTS WERE THE CHIEF FEATURES.

Arranged by Young Ladies' Mission Circle of First M. E. Church in Basement of Church.

Under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Mission Circle of the First M. E. church a delightful social and cake sale was held in the basement of the church Friday evening. Ping-pong was a popular attraction.

Mrs. Harry Gee is president of the circle, and those assisting her were Miss Edith H. Dyer, Miss Alma Dyer, Mrs. Arthur Crone, Mrs. Sr. H. Tugwell, Mrs. Corse, Miss Elizabeth Stafford, Mrs. Clayton M. Nagle. At the lemonade booth Mrs. William Symons, assisted by Miss Florence Symons, was in charge. The young women also had the assistance of Nelson A. Miller and Harry Gee.

THEATRICAL.

It would be very hard to plan a more enjoyable afternoon or evening than is provided for its patrons by Keith's Theatre, New York, during this hot weather. From an ice chamber beneath the theatre great currents of refrigerated air are swept through a complicated system of piping to all points of the theatre and there discharged into the auditorium, while, far above the heads of the audience, a tremendous exhaust fan does its part of the work necessary to keep the theatre at a temperature many degrees below that of any roof garden. The programme for the coming week is a very strong one, and will be headed by Ida Melville & Co., in "Sis Hopkins Sister," a sketch which has added to the gaiety of nations, presented by the sister of Miss Rose Melville, who was the original "Sis Hopkins." Arthur Deming, the Minstrel Comedian, has some jokes and stories, which he makes affidavit are brand new; Jordan and Welch are as side-splittingly funny as ever in "Just Two Hebrews," to which has been added much new matter; The Farrell-Taylor Trio, eccentric comedians, have a very funny sketch with a pretty dance; Miss Amy Forsaland, a soprano soloist of whom great things are expected will take her professional debut here; while Johnson and Wells, the colored entertainers will live up to their reputation of "hilaristators." Twenty-one other strong features, with new pictures for the Biograph and Stereopticon make this a characteristically good Keith bill.

ASKED FOR WATER.

Strangers Then Robbed Home of Conrad Smith, While Owner Ploughed Field Near By.

While Conrad Smith, of Washington Valley, was ploughing in a corn field two strangers advanced towards him and politely asked for a drink of water. The unsuspecting Mr. Smith directed the visitors to the well near his home.

Their absence seeming unwarrantedly long, Mr. Smith went to the house to see what detained them. They were still lingering around and when ordered off the premises made a pretence of going away. Later in the day Mr. Smith discovered that an entrance had been effected to his house through a back window, that the bureau drawers in a room upstairs had been rifled and $40 in money and a gold watch stolen.

The theft is supposed to have been committed by the same gang who have been so active in the horse-stealing business in that vicinity recently.

BLEW SAFE OPEN.

But Valuables at Varnish Factory Had Been Removed the Night Before.

Burglars dynamited the safe in the office of the Price-Bond-Woolston varnish factory at West Front street and Rock avenue early this morning. The door and sides were wrecked but in vain as all the valuables had been removed Friday.

A clock near the safe stopped at 2:30 and the police believe it was then the explosion occurred. Chief Kiely is of the opinion that it was the work of experienced cracksmen.

TO BUILD EXTENSIONS.

Permits Granted by Building Inspector Doane for Two.

James Keenan, of East Fifth street, has filed plans with Building Inspector T. O. Doane for a one-story extension, 12x15 feet, to the north-east side of his store and dwelling. N. Peterson will do the carpenter work.

H. K. Miller, of LaGrande avenue, has filed plans for an extension to his dwelling. Architect, George Pallister; masons, Tallamy Brothers; carpenter, Bateman Thatcher.

Trip Through Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Voorhees, of Arlington avenue, sailed Thursday for Hamburg on the Hamburg-American liner, Fuerst Bismarck. They will visit the principal places of interest in Germany, France and Switzerland, and after touring in England will sail for home about August 5.

CAME OVER THE SEA TO WIN HIS BRIDE

Trans-Atlantic Romance Culminated in a Marriage in This City Thursday.

DETAILS OF CEREMONY.

MARRIAGE OF MISS LUCY CLIFTON TO JAMES ARDERN, OF THIS CITY.

Now Schoolmates in English Hamlet—Renewed Acquaintance in Liverpool—Met Here to Wed at Home of Groom's Brother.

A pretty June wedding which took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ardern, of South Second street, Thursday, was the culmination of a trans-Atlantic romance which began in Liverpool, England, and which ended in this city. The contracting parties were Miss Lucy Clifton, of this city, and James Ardren, formerly of Liverpool but now of Plainfield.

Early in life the two were schoolmates in a little English hamlet, but the removal of Miss Clifton to America resulted in their losing sight of each other until two years ago. Miss Clifton was then on a visit to friends in the great sea port city of England and by chance met the friend of her school days. Their acquaintance was renewed and when Miss Clifton sailed for home she left her heart behind her. Mr. Ardern shortly afterward came to this country and the wedding was set for last evening.

The parlor where the ceremony took place was a mass of crimson roses, artistically arranged, while in one corner was an arch of roses, sweet peas and other flowers, beneath which the young people stood while the words which united them for life were pronounced by Rev. Dr. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

Attending Miss Clifton was Miss Polly Gurran, who acted as bridemaid. The former was becomingly attired in a fawn colored gown of crepe de chine, trimmed with silk applique. In her hand she held a cluster of white carnations. Miss Inman's gown was of grey crepe de chine with chiffon trimmings. John Clifton, a brother of the bride, acted as best man and the party was completed by the flower girl, Miss Emmeline Foster, and the page, Willie Ardern. The Lohengrin wedding march was played by Walter Foster.

The completion of the ceremony was the signal for congratulations to be showered upon Mr. and Mrs. Ardern, after which the guests partook of a collation. Later in the evening the bride and groom departed for a wedding trip of a week's duration, the destination of which they refused to divulge.

Both young people were generously remembered by their large circle of acquaintances with numerous pretty and costly gifts of silverware, bric-a-brac, pictures and other articles. Among the guests present were many from New York, Brooklyn and Worcester, Mass.

NEW BUILDINGS.

An Addition Will be Made to Lounsbury's Embossing Works on South Second Street.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane has granted a permit to Charles L. Stanley, of South avenue, for the erection of a new greenhouse, 90 by 6 feet, in the centre of the lots on South avenue, near Leland avenue. One of the old greenhouses will be taken away to make room for the new and more commodious construction. Mr. Stanley was also granted permission to erect an extension to his barn 12x15 feet, and 12 feet in height.

A permit was yesterday issued to Frederick C. Lounsbury, of Plainfield avenue, for the erection of an extension to the embossing works on South Second street. The extension will be a frame building, 40x50 feet and three stories high. Architect, Fred. L. Lancaster; mason, Oscar Moore; carpenter, George Hummer.

HILLSIDE DAY AT PARK CLUB

Park Golfers Defeated Hillside Men in a Club Team Match Saturday Afternoon.

OTHER EVENTS HELD.

Team Match Won by Score of 62 to 34—Roberts de S. Newhall, Park, Won Driving Contest—Approaching and Putting Honors to Miss van Herwerden and Mr. Hibbard.

Hillside Day, postponed from the week before, was held with much success on the course of the Park Golf Club, Saturday. While the course was open to the visitors all day, the events were held in the afternoon. All but one of the prizes went to members of the Park Golf Club.

Chief of the events was a team match between the two clubs. The Parks had thirty players ready but only eighteen Hillside men appeared in time to play and the other members of the home club paired off for play in the regular club competition for the President's cup. The team match resulted in an easy victory for the Park Club by a score of 62 to 34. While the best of the Hillside men had no trouble in winning their matches, some of the others were not so fortunate. The event was scratch.

Following was the result of the team match:

FOR MELLICK CUP.

Play Continued on Courts of the Hillside Club Saturday.

In the continuation of play at tennis Saturday morning for the Mellick cup on the courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, Miss Helen Martin and Mrs. James R. Blake played the best two out of three matches. Mrs. Blake won the first set 7-5, and Miss Martin won the second, 6-3. Miss Loizeaux was to have taken part in the tournament, but she failed to put in an appearance. She will probably play Miss Martin, who was declared the winner on Saturday, sometime during the week.

AFTER SAFE WRECKERS.

Detectives Have Found Where the Materials Were Secured.

Detectives, who have been working on the Price-Bond-Woolston safe wrecking case, have located the place where the dynamiters secured their material to do the job and several other important clues. The local police are actively engaged in searching for the men, but although it is evident they have made some important discoveries, they are reticent when queried. Chief Kiely admits that he has strong hopes of landing the robbers.

Referees in Bankruptcy.

Among the referees in bankruptcy who have been re-appointed by Judge Kirkpatrick, of the United States District Court, for a term of two years, is Atwood L. Decosta, of Summit, for Union county.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Vilas, of Newark, have returned home after a visit with Miss Mary A. Brown, of Washington avenue.

The Thrust of a Lance is scarcely more agonizing than the recurrent pains in the abdomen which follow the eating of improper food or too free indulgence in ice-water. Careful housekeepers give it the place of honor in the family medicine chest.

GUESTS AT THE NETHERWOOD

BOOKING TO DATE IS MOST SUCCESSFUL IN HISTORY OF HOTEL.

Many Guests Have Assembled at the Big Summer Hostelry on the Netherwood Hill.

There was another large registry of guests at the Hotel Netherwood last week. The booking to date shows that this season is by a large margin the most successful yet experienced in the career of the hotel. Nearly 125 people had rooms at the house. On the corresponding day last year there were but seventy-eight guests, and on the same date two years ago fifty-eight.

Among those who took up a residence at the hotel last week were Louis Rodney Berg, New York; Mrs. Paul Sheldon, New York, D. K. Brown, Brooklyn; Miss Cotton and maid, Newark; Mrs. K. V. Cotton and livery, Newark; Mrs. Wm. H. Kirby, New York; Charles Brown, New York; L. de L. Cammanno, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, and Mrs. Cammanno; Mrs. M. Donnelly and family, Miss Koughran, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. S. Seely, Brooklyn; John T. Lee, Brooklyn; J. W. Nichols, Mrs. Nichols, Miss Marjorie Nichols, Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Ping-pong is one of the various pastimes at the hotel, and recently clock golf has been laid out on the green in front of the house and a tennis court will be in readiness this week. Saturday afternoon the golf links were patronised by forty people.

AT TEACHER'S HOME.

Rev. G. M. Shott Taught the Last Teachers' Meeting for the Summer.

Thirty of the officers and teachers of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school enjoyed a very pleasant time Saturday evening at the home of Rev. G. M. Shott, of Scotch Plains. It was the occasion of their last teachers' meeting for the summer, and Mr. Shott gave a review of the lessons of the next three months. The talk was both interesting and helpful to all who were privileged to hear it.

During the past two years Mr. Shott has taught the Sunday-school lesson at these weekly meetings held at the homes of the teachers, where the large attendance has testified to their appreciation of Mr. Shott's able instruction.

These meetings will be resumed in the fall.

Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of Washington Park, continues to improve from a recent severe illness.

The Peking Mandarin Paper.

By the courtesy of Mr. Hwang Chung-hueï, of Peking, for the editors, we have received the first number of the mandarin paper, the inauguration of which we chronicled in this column some days ago. The subjects treated are: Why we are issuing a paper in mandarin not in wenli, Chinese and foreign news, the treaty, the history of Pohlid, the last hundred years of women in the west, a catechism on the earth, two fables, and concluding with the rules of the paper. The first journal of this kind was issued at Hangchow, and now Peking follows suit. It will be issued once in ten days at ten cents per number. This startling departure we might expect to emanate from foreigners—e. g., missionaries—who are tired of the trammels in which chinese wenli wraps the human mind and strike off in a new line, aiming at the diffusion of knowledge as against its present concentration in the hands of the select few. But no, it is leather-conservatorship which thus dares to cast aside the canons of the past and brave the ridicule of the long-robed crowd by printing—actually printing, mark you—a language understood of the common mass of the people. All honor to those who thus break the ice. May their enterprise be successful.—Shanghai Mercury.

Swedes Make Odor-Proof Paper.

The Swedes, as well as the Germans, have invented some remarkable appliances for paper, among which is a grease-proof paper which is superior to any other so far produced, but which will soon be matched by an equally good, if not better, article made in this country. One of the uses of this grease-proof paper abroad is for the wrapping of butter for shipment. While there is plenty of merely grease-proof paper now made here, that is used extensively for the wrapping of hams, bacon and similar food products, it has not the merit of being odor-proof as well as grease-proof, and butter is so sensitive to odors that this paper would not serve in packing it for shipment. The Swedish grease-proof paper, on the other hand, is absolutely odor-proof as well, and nearly all the vast quantity of butter shipped from Denmark to England is wrapped in it. The butter reaches Great Britain in pound packages closely enveloped in the grease and odor-proof paper—packages that in a sense are hermetically sealed.—N. Y. Sun.

The Glaciers Are Going.

According to Prof. Forel, who has made a special study of the Alpine glaciers during the past 25 years, the day of the glacier is gone. They are decreasing in size, and the law of steady pesistence, and diminution becomes more marked from year to year. There is only one exception to this rule—that of Rosier, in the valley of Entremont, which since 1892 has shown continuous growth. The famous glaciers of the Rhone have shrunk 755 meters since 1874, or an average of 29 meters a year. Many have so changed during the past few years that old tourists find a few seasons of absence have failed to recognize them. Some hotels once standing in the immediate proximity of glaciers are now at a considerable distance from them—to the serious loss of the proprietors. — Pall Mall Gazette.

A Rich Territory.

Western Australia is one of the richest territories in the world, as man counts riches, and its wealth lies in that which mankind has been striving after ever since he made it an article of value—gold. There is gold in abundance in western Australia, scattered in irregular patches all over the state. Some of these patches are 100 miles in length by 30 or 40 in breadth. To-day it is said that the total area of the gold fields of western Australia is over 324,000 square miles, or just one-third of the area of the colony itself.—N. Y. Sun.

An Insinuation.

"Dear me!" said the British belle, "so worse it is than horrid Yankee papers are daring to insinuate that we have large feet." "Why, dear?" asked her friend. "Oh, I was just reading one that said: 'The American shoe has invaded England, and the British Lion must be wearing large numbers?'"—Philadelphia Record.

The Best Lifter.

Hiram—That boy of yours what went to college could do some powerful lifting with the clubs and dumbbells.

Silas—Yes, but I always thought more of the other one's lifting powers.

"No; he lifted the mortgage."—Philadelphia Record.

Dangers of Modern Education.

Fond Mother—Oh, I am so glad you came in! I think there is a horrid Yankee in the nursery. He has swallowed my baby and the cook is calling the police.

Caller—Shall I run for the doctor?

"No, for an interpreter. His French nurse left suddenly to-day, and nobody can understand what he says."—The Wave.

Fatiguing.

"Come on," said Weary Waggles, as he gave his sleeping comrade a kick. "Shot'gave a review of the lessons of the next three months. The talk was both interesting and helpful to all who were privileged to hear it.

"Wot made youse tired?"

"I dreampt I wuz wurkin'," replied Willie.—Ohio State Journal.

MAJ. OGDEN'S GRAVE.

It Marks the Geographical Center of the United States.

Shaft Erected to the Memory of a Brave Army Officer is Proof of the Fact That Truth is Stranger Than Fiction.

The geographical center of the United States is on a high point of land in the public reservation at Fort Riley, Kan. It is marked by a large monument, erected in memory of an officer in the regular army, Maj. Edmund Ogden, U. S. A., who died near this fort.

The monument was erected by Joseph O. Sawyer, the father of Dr. E. O. Sawyer, now a resident of Pico Heights, Los Angeles, who was named for the major several years prior to his death.

Between Maj. Ogden and J. O. Sawyer there existed a warm friendship which lasted through many years. Back in the '50's Mr. Sawyer, who was a noted civil engineer, had a contract with the government to build a wagon road between Fort Riley and Santa Fe, N. M. Maj. Ogden was in command of the government troops commissioned to guard the road builders, for Indians were plentiful and hostile to the whites in those days, but a far more to be dreaded enemy was soon with them, for the cholera broke out in their camp and Maj. Ogden was one of the first to succumb to the disease. After his death the army engineers became panic stricken and ran away. All of the commissioned officers and their wives died and at one time the death rate reached as high as 60 in one day. Mr. Sawyer took complete charge of the expedition, becoming doctor, nurse and commander of the troops, some of which had already mutinied. Very little was known in these days about the treatment of the disease; about all they could do was to deal out quinine; and after a long fight the scourge died out, leaving but a mere handful of men to return to the fort.

In the year 1858 Mr. Sawyer determined to mark his friend's last resting place and a shaft of Kansas graystone was erected. It is 26 feet high and has a seven-foot base and bears the following inscription:

Sacred to the Memory
MAJOR EDMUND OGDEN,
Erected by His Friend,
Joseph O. Sawyer.

It will be recollected that several years ago the government sent out surveying parties to find the geographical center of the United States. These parties, coming in from different directions met at the grave of Maj. Ogden, and the monument marked the exact spot they were looking for. Truly, "Truth is stranger than fiction."

It is situated on an elevation which can be seen for many miles, and it seems fitting that the center of this great country should be marked by the last resting place of one who gave up his life for it and was a promising pioneer officer of the frontier army service.

Dr. E. O. Sawyer, says the Los Angeles Herald, has in his possession a silver mug presented to him by the major when he was named for him, and also a gold-headed cane which was once the property of the major and which was presented by his widow to J. O. Sawyer at the time the monument was erected.

Snakes Sent to Patti.

Patti had a terrible shock this week at Paris. Some one sent her from Mentone a box containing three snakes, each about a yard long. She thought she was getting a nice present, and on opening the box and seeing nothing but dry grass, confidently ran her hand to the bottom into a cold, slimy, wriggling mass. She uttered a cry and ran into another room, and was hysterical for two hours. The snakes escaped and crawled about under the furniture until finally they were killed. On examination it was found that they were not poisonous reptiles.

Biggest Bag at One Shot.

The biggest authenticated bag secured at one shot, of which I ever heard, consisted of one rabbit, the cause of the shot), one hunter, one onlooker (a French cook), and two dogs. I once shot nine snipe at a shot—but this was in South America. They were on the ground, and they were shot for the pot. I have read of a sportsman (not Baron Munchausen) who shot a bumblebee and a butterfly, right and left; and, indeed, sometimes a large bumblebee does, for an instantaneous second, look uncommonly like a distant advancing grouse—just as, when on the alert for partridges, the fieldfares, brousting the hedge, often cause a nervous twitch of the gun. Curious circumstances sometimes occur out shooting. A friend walking in line down a turnip field saw a startled hare running fast and straight toward him up a furrow. He stood still, waiting for her to turn, but the hare, with its peculiar vision, did not see him, and ran her head plump against his shin, killing herself and very seriously bruising his leg. Our Many Bachelors.

The last census showed that there were in the whole country 5,427,797 bachelors, against 3,224,494 spinsters—an excess of 68 per cent. of bachelors over the unmarried women. There was not any state or in the union that did not have more bachelors than single women, even Massachusetts exhibiting a small fractional overplus of unattached males of marriageable age. To account for this situation of affairs it was explained that the mass of the population of each state being paired off by marriage evenly as between the sexes, only a relatively small fraction of single persons old enough to marry was left over. In most states the male part of this fraction was much in excess of the female part. And it must also be remembered that women marry much younger than men.—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

A Wonderful Region.

It is one of the strange features of this wonderful section that the two extremes are sometimes placed in juxtaposition, as in southern California, for example, where one may look out from an orange grove teeming with fragrant blossoms and ripening fruit, or a luxuriant rose patch, upon the snowy summit of the Sierra Madre only a few miles away, and seeming, in the pure, translucent atmosphere, startlingly near. At Pasadena it is possible to gather oranges and roses in the morning, and then take the mountain railway and indulge in a snowballing frolic in the afternoon.—From Luther L. Holden's "Land of the Sunset Sea," in the Four-Track News.

The Two-Minute Horse.

This is a speedy age. In 1865 Dexter, the famous trotter, made a mile in 2:18¼, and astonished the world. In 1891 Sunol took ten seconds off of that record, and the eyes of the world opened wider yet. Last year Crescens dropped the record to 2:02¾. To-day we are looking for the two-minute horse, and he is not far away. The pacer has reached 1:59¼, Star Pointer's brilliant record; Salvator has run a mile in 1:35½, and the two-minute trotter is now confidently expected.—From "Vanity Fair Confidences," in the Four-Track News.

"You don't seem to be interested in our advanced woman movement. Don't you care for equality with man?"

"No, I don't," retorted the pretty young woman. "Why should I? I'm his superior now, and he knows it, so if I gained the equality you seek I'd merely surrender the advantage that I now possess. No, ma'am; no equality for me. I'm not unselfish enough for that. I don't want to vote with man; I want to control him."—Chicago Post.

A Swallow's Swift Flight.

In recent experiments at Antwerp a swallow, which had its nest in the gable of the railway station in that city, was sent to Compiegne, France, a distance of 140½ miles, and liberated. Purchased Adjoining Property.

Councilman George P. MORE ROOM IN IRVING SCHOOL

Plainfield Board of Education Has Leased Other Quarters to Relieve Overcrowding.

THE OTHER BUSINESS.

Engaged Sunday-School Rooms of Monroe Avenue Church for Accommodation of Classes—Increase in Surplus—Various Repairs Recommended in the Schools.

Ample provision to alleviate the congested condition of the Irving School for a long time to come, was probably the most important matter of business transacted at Tuesday evening's meeting of the Board of Education. By the unanimous vote of the members the Monroe Avenue church Sunday-school rooms were engaged for the purpose at an annual rental of $500. The newly acquired building will house many pupils and will allow of many improvements to be established in the school building proper.

In the way of routine business nothing of any importance was transacted. The yearly report of the custodian of school moneys was presented and it showed a highly gratifying state of affairs in regard to the treasury. The board has on hand $11,000 more than the same time last year, the surplus being gained by practicing rigid economy in all departments. The full report was ordered published in the daily papers.

For the month the custodian showed a balance on hand of $2,283.82 and Tax Collector Smith reported receiving $3,251.59. During the month of June forty-two pupils were examined by the medical inspectors. The latter, Drs. T. H. Tomlinson and A. F. VanHorn, were appointed for another year at the present salary. The committee on rules and regulations presented its report and it was ordered printed to the number of 300 copies.

Through Chairman Abbott, the committee on buildings presented its report and recommended repairs to the various schools to cost in all about $1,654.50. Among some of the improvements asked for was the establishment of cesspools at the Whittier building, a new flag pole in the yard of the High School, drinking fountains and a cesspool at the Irving and the installation of new furnaces at several of the buildings. The Wadsworth school was reported to be in very bad condition and the committee recommended that it be disposed of as soon as possible. The report was accepted entire and the clerk was instructed to ask for bids to have the necessary work accomplished before the fall session.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company was granted permission to erect three poles on the edge of the sidewalk surrounding the Wadsworth property with the proviso that they were to be removed whenever the board so desired. The Whittier school lease was also renewed on the condition that the Seventh-Day Baptist trustees have certain repairs made. The annual rental is $300.

In regard to the Monroe Avenue church lease, it was specified that the rental should include heating, playground, coat room and other accessories. The building was taken for one year with the express understanding that the board should have the privilege of as many more as it desired. In connection with the lease the question of an assistant janitor for the Irving school was discussed but this was left over until the proper committee investigates the matter more fully. It is desired by some of the members to have a woman assistant as she can take of the Monroe part and also help out at Irving.

Home From East Indies.

Hugh McGeehey, of this city, returned home last evening after being one of Uncle Sam's men in the Philippines for the past three years. He was a member of the Nineteenth New York Volunteers. After remaining in town a few days he expects to take a permanent position in New York.

Vacations for Police.

NELSON RUNYON WILL ACT.

Given Out at Corporation Counsel's Office That He Will Continue.

On inquiry at Craig A. Marsh's office as to who represented Mr. Marsh as corporation counsel during his absence it was learned that Former Judge Nelson Runyon would act for Mr. Marsh as usual while Mr. Marsh is abroad. Mr. Marsh's brother said that he was very much surprised that there should be any doubt about it as Judge Runyon has acted for Mr. Marsh in that capacity for the past ten years while Mr. Marsh has been on his vacation.

LITTLE BUSINESS.

Monthly Meeting of the Somerset County Freeholders Was a Very Tame Affair.

Somerville, July 9 — The regular monthly meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, held in the Court House here yesterday, was a very tame affair. Very little business was done.

The Somerset Lighting Company was given permission to lay its pipes on Union avenue, between this place and Bound Brook.

Engineer Doughty and Supervisor Taggart reported the progress of the work on the Skillman county road.

A party of people appeared for the purpose of stirring up the board about a petition for a stone road in the vicinity of Davidson's lane. This petition had been filed five years ago, but the board did not take any action in the matter.

A meeting will be held at Hab Hollow Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

The County Collector was authorized to borrow $35,000.

WHEN THE EXCURSIONS GO TO ASBURY PARK

Dates for Day's Outings at the Favorite Shore Resort of Most Plainfield People.

LAST WEEK WAS LIVELY.

FOURTH OF JULY SAW A HUGE CROWD AT THE PARK AND THE GROVE.

Governor Murphy Visited the Park Twice Last Week—New Contract for Music—Full List of Excursions on the Jersey Central.

Asbury Park, July 9—There has been another week of prosperity for this section of the seacoast; fairly typical of a Fourth of July week, although the holiday comes rather late this year in the seven days. All the hotels were well filled, and most of the attractions were kept busy. Governor Franklin Murphy came here Monday of last week and assisted in the inauguration of the First Methodist church bazaar. The Governor made a speech and was heartily received. The Governor's presence proved a big card, for over $400 was cleared by the church for that evening alone. The bazaar continued all the week.

The Governor came back to the shore again Friday and presided at the Fourth of July exercises in the Ocean Grove Auditorium. The oration of the day there was delivered by Congressman R. Wayne Parker. It was the thirty-second time that Ocean Grove had celebrated Independence Day.

A triangular plot of the bench has been fenced off in the corner formed by the Asbury avenue pavilion and the board walk, for the use of James J. Taylor, the sand artist. The fence has the sand banked against it, and on this Artist Taylor gave his first exhibition Tuesday. As usual, a prize of $250 has been offered to the artist who can excel Mr. Taylor.

Early last week there was some doubt expressed whether the fishing yacht Emma B. would be here this summer, but Wednesday morning sunrise disclosed her at anchor off Asbury avenue. She has been repainted and otherwise improved. She made her first trip Thursday.

The contract with Ander's band for the summer music was approved last week. It had already been executed. It provides that the band shall be permitted to be out for the week of July 13—19, when it has to be with the First Pennsylvania brigade in summer encampment.

The excursions which came here last week over the Central Railroad were as follows: Wednesday, Park church, Newark (two sections); Friday, Epworth League, Newark, and Hudson County Christian Endeavor, Jersey City; Saturday, half holiday, Newark, and DeGroot M. E. church, Newark. The list of Central excursions for the summer is as follows:

LEWIS THOMAS IS ALIVE

LETTER JUST RECEIVED FROM HIM WRITTEN IN JAPAN.

He Left Philippines Four Days Before the Other Thomas is Reported to Have Disappeared.

Friends of Lewis S. Thomas, formerly of this city, but lately a Government school teacher in the Philippines, are gratified to learn that he is alive and well and not murdered as supposed. This news was received by his old chum, Robert Craig, of Dunellen, in a letter Monday evening. The letter was dated Nagasaki, Japan, June 13, and states that Mr. Thomas has been in the latter place since June 10.

Mr. Thomas says that he left the Philippines on June 6, which was four days before the disappearance of the other school teacher Thomas, who is believed to have been murdered. Judging by the letter Mr. Thomas has had no intimation of the newspapers reports of himself for he makes no reference to them at all.

He says that in company with two other teachers he sailed on a Japanese collier for Japan on June 6. They were four days in reaching Nagasaki. He is much pleased with what he has seen of Japan and evidently has no desire to return to the United States. He will undoubtedly resume teaching next year.

Mr. Thomas has corresponded with Mr. Craig ever since he left home and this last letter telling of his safety brings great relief to his many acquaintances in Plainfield and vicinity.

BOTH WANT FARM.

Mrs. H. Smith Will Try to Eject the Tenant on the Ground That No Rent Has Been Paid.

A summons has been issued in a landlord and tenant case by Mrs. H. Smith against one Sweinfurth for the possession of a farm in Warrenville. The case will be called before Justice Smalley at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, W. G. DeMeza appearing for the plaintiff.

The plaintiff, Mrs. Smith, alleges that the defendant, Sweinfurth, leased from her for the period of three years the farm on which he has been located for the past six months, and up to the present has refused to pay one dollar of rent as compensation for the same. Whatever Mr. Sweinfurth's defence may be the fact is that he remains on the farm and refuses to be ejected. The case promises to be an interesting one.

COULDN'T USE BACK WAY.

That Was Reason Captain Hand Gave for Not Moving Goods.

Through his counsel, George Ball, of this city, Captain William Hand secured a verdict in his favor in Justice Harbison's Westfield court, Monday, in the suit brought against him by Theodore Miller, of Westfield.

The plaintiff sued for $200 damages which loss he suffered, he claimed, through Captain Hand's men refusing to move his household goods at a time agreed upon. Counsellor Ball brought proof that Miller stood by while the men using the front door of his home to carry the goods out and ordered them to go around back which they could not do owing to a narrow driveway.

Dimensions of the driveway prepared by a surveyor were shown in court and one of the vans used by the defendant was brought to the court room door where it could be seen by the jury. The defendant also filed an offset for $20 and the jury allowed him $10.30. Miller was non-suited.

It was one of the mostly hotly contested trials that has ever taken place before Justice Harbison and required a whole day. Counsellor W. S. Angleman, of this city, represented Miller.

Had a Charge There.

Rev. Dr. Pepper, who will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church next Sunday, is not a pastor of the New Brunswick Baptist church, as stated. He formerly held that charge, but now represents the Old Ministers' Home for Baptists. He lives in New Brunswick.

Changes in Choir.

At the First Presbyterian church, Sunday, Frank McDonald presided at the organ in place of Clifford Braider, the regular organist, and Morris C. VanArsdale and Ralph K. Miner sang in the place of Elmer D. Cutting and Sydney R. Titsworth, who were out of town.

Back to Old Quarters.

The W. C. T. U. will take possession of its old rooms in the Babcock building tomorrow afternoon for the first time since the fire. The room has been put in the best of condition and meetings will be held regularly.

FEARED FIRE.

So the Mouse Took Refuge Under Coat of Fireman Manning at Monday Evening's Fire.

The saying that "in times of fear men and beasts fly together for protection" was exemplified at the Thorp fire Monday evening. While Howard Manning, of No. 3 hose company, was working his way through the thick smoke of the barn, he felt a peculiar sensation about his left shoulder. He brushed the spot several times but to no purpose and thinking it was due to something in his rubber coat he withdrew from the scene to investigate. With Patrolman Vanderweg's assistance he shed the coat and found a large lump beneath his small coat. This too, was removed and clinging fast to his shirt he found a terribly frightened little mouse that had flown to him for succor. The little rodent made no attempt to get away and Manning placed it in his pocket for safe keeping. It had evidently leaped on Manning's clothing in a moment of terror and had luckily discovered the unique hiding place.

LOST TWO FINGERS.

When Robert Horn Dropped a Casting He Forgot to Remove Fingers.

While at work in the Pond Tool Works, yesterday, Robert Horn, of South Plainfield, met with a peculiar accident which may cost him the loss of two fingers, one on each hand. The lad is only seventeen years of age and was trying, unaided, to lift a heavy casting from the floor. He raised it a short distance and then found it too heavy and let it drop but forgot to remove his hands. Several fingers were badly crushed but at Muhlenberg Hospital where he went for treatment, the physicians hope to save them all but two.

A suit on contract has been instituted in Justice Hand's court by Mrs. M. D. Hunt against Mrs. E. Wright. The hearing is set down for Monday at 2 o'clock. W. G. DeMeza appears for the plaintiff.

NEW INDUSTRY FOR THIS CITY

Survey Being Made for Big Iron Works and Machine Shop, Near Evona.

EMPLOYS MANY MEN.

A Philadelphia Concern Has Purchased Tract of Land Between West Front Street and Railroad, Just West of Evona Station— Engineers are Surveying Plot.

The West End is in luck. Another tremendous boom is in sight for that section of the city. Engineers may have been noticed for the last two days engaged on a survey on that strip on West Front street, running west from Clinton avenue station parallel with the Jersey Central Railroad tracks.

It has leaked out that a large Philadelphia concern, one of the most prominent industrials in the east, has quietly but successfully negotiated for the purchase of the property and will erect thereon a massive machine shop, a large brick structure, the main building of which will cover an area of 40,000 feet.

The company concerned is the Pedersick & Ayer Company of Philadelphia. The Jersey Central Railroad Company is interested in the deal, the land having been purchased from the Central Land Improvement Company.

The new concern will give employment, it is understood from authoritative sources, to 800 men or thereabouts, the majority of whom will be skilled mechanics. Work on the construction will be commenced as soon as the survey is completed if no hitch occurs.

Much secrecy has been maintained about the location of the company in Plainfield. The property negotiations were carried on in the quietest manner. No permit for the new building has yet been filed with the building inspector.

LACK OF EVIDENCE.

Case Against George Jones Was Dismissed by Justice Nash.

The case of George Washington against George Jones, on a serious charge, was called before Justice Nash, Tuesday afternoon, but was dismissed for lack of evidence. The plaintiff was not represented by counsel, but Assemblyman William Newcorn appeared for the defendant, while Lawyer Francis J. Blatz represented Mrs. George Washington. Several witnesses were called, but the evidence was considered worthless by Justice Nash and he dismissed the case. Jones declares he is entirely innocent.

Concert at Watchung's Chapel.

The Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel at Watchung was filled with an appreciative audience Tuesday night when Martin Korff's orchestra of twelve pieces from this city presented an attractive programme of ten selections. The musicale was given for the coal fund of the chapel and a goodly sum was realized. After the entertainment the chapel committee served refreshments and a social time followed.

Tally-Ho Party.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Parker, Miss Marryman, Miss Coons, Miss Parker, Neilson T. Parker, Austin Smith and F. W. Parker, of New Brunswick, composed a jolly tally-ho party to Plainfield last Tuesday. They arrived at the Plainfield Hotel at 6:15 o'clock, where they had dinner. It was about 7:30 o'clock when the party made the start on the return journey.

To Paint Steeple.

The work of painting the high steeple on Trinity Reformed church was commenced yesterday by George W. Bilyeu, the painter. Mr. Bilyeu made all arrangements yesterday for his hazardous work so that he could start on it today.

Injured in Fall.

J. W. Graham, superintendent of the Metropolitan Insurance Company in Plainfield, suffered a very painful injury Tuesday by falling and straining one of the tendons in his left arm, necessitating a tight bandaging of the entire limb.

Business Meeting.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church will hold a business meeting Friday evening preceding the regular meeting.

SHIRT WAISTS AND BLOUSES

They Are Studies in Themselves and Must Be Fitted With Care.

How the separate waist has altered during the past few years! Nowadays the cut of the shirt waist and the blouse presents a study in itself, and the dressmaker who can make a perfect blouse can fit the most intricate bodice. The ideal blouse this summer must be cut by a master hand. The shirt waist does not require so much work. It can be charming of wash silk, flannel mixtures, lawn and batiste, piquet and zephyr and in the fantastic muslins which are beloved by French manufacturers. The shirt waist can be simple, and the deficiencies may be hidden by a large fichu or muslin collar, which can be bought ready made for almost nothing in extremely pretty designs.

The blouse and the shirt waist are very distinctive details of fashion, and therefore it is worth every woman's while to carefully consider the same and not take upon herself lightly the task of making a blouse. First she must get a strictly good pattern and invest a fair sum in the purchasing of one pretty model.

The smart collar illustrated is of cream chiffon edged with narrow black velvet and trimmed with black lace applique figures.

THE ECONOMICAL GIRL.

With a System of Separate Slips She Can Have Many Gowns.

An economical way for a woman to dress is to choose one or two colors and adhere to them. For instance, she may choose black and white, with faint touches of the pastel tints.

First, she will provide herself with a separate black silk and a separate white silk slip, cut, boned and fitted correctly with a well hanging train. Over the white slip she can wear a cream spotted net gown with a pouched blouse and a wide collar. Then she can have a couple of muslins, one green and white, the other pink and white, made with shaped ruffles and smart girdles. Thirdly, she can have a black net covered with incrustations of white lace.

Over the black slip she can wear a black point d'esprit dress, a pale blue and black lace gown and a pompadour muslin black with pink and pale green roses. Separate slips are a great saving and enable a woman to have a great many more gowns than she would otherwise be able to afford.

The chic little house jacket shown is made of pale blue satin ribbons and ecru lace. The lines of the ribbon and insertion are made to take the form of a bolero, low under the arms and high in the back and front.

FASHION HINTS.

Foulard General Utility Gowns. Beige and Ecru Laces.

Some smart Paris gowns are made of silk linen ornamented with huge chenille spots or woven linen spots. Scarlet or green with spots in white is most effective.

Foulards in dark shades spotted in white make charming shirt waist costumes with unlined waists and skirts. They are trim and most useful for ordinary occasions. The only trimming consists in a few clusters of tucks.

Beige and ecru laces are now so much the fashion that white laces hardly have any sale at all except for underwear. Beige net ornamented with big spots is considered ultra smart this year.

The new volles are of very fine make and artistic coloring. They closely resemble silk canvas and are much nicer than the wiry fabrics of old.

The carriage wrap shown is of pale gray peau de soie lined with gray silk. The wide sleeves have frilled undersleeves of net, and the wide collar is trimmed with bands of black velvet. There is a soft jabot with long ends of ecru lace.

WASH DRESSES.

Irish Crochet Collars Are Seen on Many of the Prettiest Models.

With cotton, zephyr and piqué suits the chief feature is the collar. This must be of the coarsest lace. Do not imagine, however, that this means a common lace, but one of the thick new makes in vogue at the present hour and resembling as near as possible Irish crochet. Some of the applique lace collars look charming with edgings of black velvet or colored silk worn on an all white dress.

Linen suits this year will mostly boast of short coats instead of the blouse bodices of which we wore so many last year, added to which instead of the black gray and neutral shades of last season there will be a perfect craze for the reddest of scarlets and brightest of pinks. In fact, brightness of color is the key to the summer modes.

One of the favorite combinations and one which looks very well in wash materials is pale blue and pale yellow.

The cut shows a boating costume made of drill or canvas. The color is cream white, trimmed with bands of red taffeta. The loose Eton jacket has revers and is bordered with the taffeta. The crush belt is of the material. The scarf around the neck and the undersleeves are of white mull. The hat is of white straw trimmed with rosettes of red silk.

WOMEN MECHANICS.

Pneumatic and Machine Shops Where They Earn Good Wages.

The natural result of taking away from them nearly all the work that women formerly did at home and transferring it to shops and factories, where it is done by machinery, is that women follow the work into the shops and factories. To assist in making the machines and appurtenances employed in the shops is only one more step, and that step some of the girls have already taken.

In a beautiful region of New York state, a place where the air and water are as pure as they were at creation's morn, where smoke and dust do not as yet veil the sunshine so that mortal eye never sees its true brightness, there is a great milk condensing plant, one of the largest of all. A few women are employed in it, and scores of women come driving to it every day in their clean wagons full of shining cans to deliver milk to the factory.

Near the cannery itself stands another building, like everything else about the establishment, immaculately clean. In this building all the cans used in the great condensery are manufactured, and manufactured by girls and women. Scarcely a man is to be seen anywhere except the trained machinist-superintendent, who directs the work. Sheet tin is brought in packages to the factory. Girls manipulate the machines that cut it into strips for the cans. Others shape the strips round. Still others cut at a stroke the circular pieces that form the ends of the cans. On the pieces move as by clockwork to the soldierers, likewise nice, clear eyed, clear skinned girls and women. The founder of the great milk condensing industry in the United States had cleanliness for a ruling hobby, and he enforced it so rigidly that every soul in his employ had to be spotlessly neat as to skin and clothing or get out.

The iron willed old gentleman's spirit seems to hover over that machine shop and cannery to this day, for both are really cleaner than many a city woman's parlor. The women in the machine shop wear pretty, light cotton wash dresses, for the work does not greatly soil hands or clothes. You could not find a pleasanter sight in a year's journey than these women at work. They earn very good wages, too, for a country neighborhood, $4 to $7 a week.

In Philadelphia the new woman has gone beyond making milk cans and is actually employed today in an iron and brass foundry. For her task here considerable physical strength is required. She does not do the actual work of making castings, but she makes the cores which are used in the process. If a wheel with a hole in the center is to be cast, it must have something in the center to keep the molten iron from running all together solid. That something to make the central opening is called a "core." It is required for all hollow castings. Most castings are hollow; many cores are necessary.

A core must be of material that red-hot iron will not melt or burn. Such a material is sand, which must be mixed with other noncombustible substances to make its particles stick together. The new woman takes the mixture and rams it solidly into a mold to give it shape. After she has done this another new woman covers the still soft core with lampblack paint. It is now ready to be baked like a piece of earthenware in an oven. Now comes in the task of a third new woman. The first and second girls turn out the cores shaped and painted as rapidly as possible; the third one gathers as many of them as she can conveniently carry upon a tray and takes them carefully to the oven, precisely as if they were biscuit upon a molding board. The oven is very hot, and the core is kept in it till the raw material is fused and baked hard and brittle. The lampblack paint comes out a hard, shining polish, so smooth the molten metal will not stick to it.

Of the cores that are small and easily made one set of three girls is able under favorable conditions to turn out 3,000 to 4,000 a day; of the larger, more complicated ones, not so many. The work is not so clean or so light as making tin cans, but is as well paid.

Women are employed in preference to men for the making of the cores because their fingers are more nimble and they can turn out more work in a given time than boys could. The girls are well treated and enjoy their occupation.

A woman, too, has lately made a small hand loom which is an article of perpetual use and entertainment in the home and schoolroom. She is Mrs. M. P. Todd of the Minneapolis public schools. Her invention grew out of her endeavor to give her pupils object lessons in the textile fabric industry.

MARY EDITH DAY.

What the New Woman Is About

A YOUNG woman who was a witness in the trials following a noted murder tragedy tells a newspaper reporter that "liberty is bad for girls." She herself was a spoiled child who went to parties, balls and theaters at the age of thirteen; seems to have wandered about loose wherever she liked with youths of her own age and older ones. First her school lessons interfered with the social goings on; then the lessons were neglected; then next this precocious girl child abandoned the high school, where she would have graduated in a year more, to "have fun." From her own experience the shallow brained, vain creature utters the dictum that "liberty is bad for girls." Well, it depends on the girl and her mother. A babe, a lunatic or an idiot must be restrained to prevent self injury and hurt to others, but even a girl of thirteen who has ordinary common sense and has been properly taught is safe from all harm. A girl who has the right kind of mother knows the follies and the dangers that beset young women. The schoolgirl who has brains, too, will be protected by her love of study or favorite pursuits from running after boys to have a brainless, harmful "good time." If a mother is sensible and intelligent, if she is not restrained by what is really impure prudishness from properly instructing her children and if such a woman's daughter has average good sense, that daughter, though only thirteen, can be trusted to go around the world alone. If, however, she is of the idiotic sort of the seventeen-year-old experienced young woman who laid it down that "liberty is bad for girls," then the parents of such a fool should restrain her, by force if necessary, from running at large.

This morning I saw a well dressed young woman go out through the door of a restaurant and walk along the street chewing a toothpick!

It is curious to note how many English writers there are, from Ouida down, who indulge in ill natured flings at American women whenever possible. Sarah A. Tooley, for instance, describing in a London periodical the crowning of a certain queen, says, "She had what our American friends call a most elegant coronation." Sarah, from her superior height of knowledge of the English language, would criticise such incorrect use of the word "elegant" as specially American. If Sarah knew as much as she thinks she does, she would be aware that this sense of the word elegant is not American at all, but was brought to us originally by British subjects themselves. In what, judging from her name, was her own native country did Sarah never hear mentioned "an elegant wake?"

Clara Barton, the original Red Cross army nurse during the civil war and the American president of the Red Cross society, seems endowed with perennial youth. In Cuba with her nurses, doctors and supplies at the time of the war there, in Texas after the great storm devastated Galveston, she journeyed this year to far St. Petersburg to attend the Red Cross conference, where she has lately received an ovation that must have warmed and thrilled her heart. The Spanish delegates to the conference especially vied with one another in attention to her because of her kindness to their fellow countrymen in Cuba. By nature Miss Barton is of delicate build and rather fragile looking, but her enthusiasm for her beloved work keeps her young and strong.

The Chinese believe in reincarnation. A China woman who died not long since and knew she was going out of life expressed the earnest wish and hope that in her next incarnation she might be born an American woman. But American women themselves do not seem to appreciate this priceless heritage.

A woman in an address has made this gorgeously intense statement: "There is nothing this side of heaven like the beauty and power of consecrated womanhood." I wonder if she lives up to it.

Mrs. J. G. Laughlin of Seattle has manifested business talent that is remarkable. She had first to lose all the money she possessed before it occurred to her to manage her own affairs. Many a woman would have slumped down under such circumstances and gone to live with a burdened brother-in-law or some relative, but not Mrs. Laughlin. She established herself in an office as a real estate dealer. A woman's name upon the office door attracted the curious at first, but immediately she showed her ability, added other lines of business, was helped greatly by the Klondike boom and is now worth nearly a million, all acquired in comparatively few years.

LONG GARMENTS.

The Newest Are Made of Colored as Well as Black Silk.

Long wraps are very popular this summer. They are made of unlined silk and are most useful to protect light costumes from the dust. Long coats of pongee are trimmed with heavy brown lace and softened with chiffon ties of the same tint.

Coats of blue, brown and gray taffeta are newer than the black ones and are considered very smart. Moire unlined makes an ideal wrap, as it has body and looks rich.

Long coats of lace with linings of accordion plaited chiffon are used for carriage and very dressy wear.

The lose box plaited coat sloping at the waist line has gone out of fashion as far as really smart people are concerned. It was at best an exaggerated garment and not in good taste.

Three-quarter length box coats are being worn by tall women, to whom the full length loose coat seems too trying.

The smart tailor made of veiling seen in the cut has the jacket tucked and box plaited into a loose blouse with straight open fronts. The vest is of stitched white silk. The skirt has a straight front gore, and the rest is composed of three box plaited ruffles. The applique trimming is of silk.

The hat is of tulle trimmed with roses and a lace scarf.

DRESS TRIFLES.

Fashionable Colors Are Pale—The New Sashes.

All tints of rose will undoubtedly be much worn this summer, but the paler and more delicate tones will be the most fashionable. Blue and green in the very palest hints will be smart, and the combination of black and white or of delicate mauve with either black or white lace will be used on many costumes.

Cottage roses and wild roses are seen on many of the most costly hats. Chrysanthemum straw and dainty satin straws are deservedly popular, and in many cases these straw hats are simply trimmed with a wreath of flowers.

The pearl cabochon has been imitated so that it can be now purchased for a few cents; therefore it will soon disappear from smart millinery. The osprey is also being imitated so successfully that women will no longer have the excuse of wearing the real article.

Sashes are to be as popular as ever, only the bows are to be more complicated, with many knots and more than two ends.

The pretty waist in the cut is made of liberty satin. It has a double bolero effect, with chiffon front and undersleeves. It is trimmed with heavy guipure lace.

Sip Your Milk.

"Try sipping it," says a physician to a patient who rebelled at the milk diet prescribed. Sipping was tried with perfect success. Cream, even, or milk into which cream is poured may be assimilated by the sipping process, when to drain a glass suddenly prohibits digestion.

PARASOLS AND BOAS.

Handles Set With Precious Stones. Chiffon Fichus.

The new parasols are even prettier than those of last season. Many show borderings of black velvet, while others are masses of tiny chiffon ruffings edged with fine lace. The handles are very rich. The favorite is a plain stick, with one large stone set in or an initial worked in brilliants. The all white or cream parasol is no doubt the most useful, and women should be careful in buying a parasol to choose one covered with a material which will not crumble and look passe after it has been used a few times.

Hats are growing larger and larger. They are also just as flat as formerly.

All over Irish lace is much used for waists.

The new chiffon boas are flat on the shoulders, with a cape effect. Many of them resemble fichus. The handsomest are thickly sewed with flower petals. They are expensive and perishable and therefore not for the woman with a small dress allowance.

A smart little blouse of all over Irish lace is shown in the cut. It is made in the shape of a bolero, falling over a crushed belt of satin. There is a fitted collar over the shoulders, and from under this two ends of chiffon start and are brought together in a big bow down the front. The sleeves are large and have full puffs gathered into cuffs of lace.

SUMMER EVENING GOWNS.

They Are Made With Excessively Long Trailing Skirts.

The summer evening gowns are models of grace and elegance. They are made with excessively long trains and fronts and sides which more than touch the ground. This long style of skirt is almost universally becoming, as it tends to lessen whatever defects there may be in the figure.

Floral garnitures are a striking feature of nearly all the smart evening dresses. The garniture may range from a simple bunch of artificial violets smothered among loops of chiffon to a long, trailing branch of flowers reaching from the shoulder to the bottom of the skirt.

Tiny rosebuds are intermingled with puffings of pale pink chiffon, and they are used all over a gown after the manner of insertion.

Flowers appliqued flat are no longer the style. There must be a raised effect in the shape of petals or heavy embroidery.

The favorite combination is still the low neck with the short elbow sleeve.

A smart evening gown for summer hops is here shown. The material is white dotted chiffon, with the upper half of all over ecru lace touched here and there with a faint tracery of black embroidery. The elbow sleeves consist of three straps of lace and a lace and chiffon ruffle.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

BELTS, STOCKS, GUIMPES.

Little Things Which Help Make a Gown a Success.

Belts are playing a very important part in the fashions of the moment. Black and white elastic bands decorated with cut steel paillettes are still worn, but they are somewhat giving way to satin and glace bands boned and fitted as carefully as a bodice. Then there are all sorts of pale colored kids and leathers arranged with gold buckles. Soft girdles in suede are novelties. They are allowed to wrinkle as they please and are finished with straps and buckles like a saddle girth.

The little accessories of a summer wardrobe count up to quite a deal, especially this year, when daintiness is the keynote in everything. Handmade lawn collars supposed to be washable and trimmed with medallions of lace are to be worn with the soft French white waists.

Linen belts, with the collar to match, are among the novelties. In some cases there are also cuffs and a strip to wear down the shirt waist front. These sets are embroidered on pale colored linens having buttonholed edges.

A couple of guimpes are a necessity for the woman who has a limited wardrobe. She will find that by means of them many of her evening muslins may be utilized for smart afternoon wear.

The dainty dress accessories shown will prove useful additions to the wardrobe of the summer girl. The collar is made of pale blue linen embroidered in red. The flowers are done in outline stitch, and the border is worked in French knots. The belt is of linen stitched on a canvas foundation. It is of blue linen also to match the collar. The sailor collar is of white linen with a border of navy blue linen, and the embroidery is done in blue and white wash silk. The little tucked lawn tie is ornamented in pale green featherstitching.

FASHIONABLE HATS.

Smart Caps For Automobiling. Coarse White Straw.

Smart caps for automobiling and yachting are made of dull red linen. Coats of red linen strapped with black taffeta are among the latest automobile fancies.

Burnt straw has been done to death, and there is a revival of pure white straws in all the fashionable shapes.

One of the most useful hats for everyday wear has a rolling brim and a very short back. It is worn slightly tilted on the left side, and the sole trimming consists of a chiffon veil draped loosely around the brim with long ends behind. These veil hats, as they are called, are very smart when made of rough straw, the brim being bound with an edge of taffeta of the color of the suit.

The dressy hats are models of simplicity, but they are also expensive, as handsome lace forms part of the trimming of nearly every one of them. In many cases the sole trimming consists of a wreath of small flowers thinly veiled by a scarf of lace.

In the picture there is shown a picture hat of tucked black chiffon. This has the irregular upturned sides so fashionable now. For trimming on the right side there is a rosette and under the left brim a group of three black ostrich tips.

SAVE THE CHILDREN.

That Seems to Be the Object of Modern Philanthropy.

Grand Work Done in the Five Points District of New York by Two Up-to-Date Charitable Organizations.

[Special New York Letter.]

THOUSANDS of bright, clean-faced children are playing in Paradise park to-day. Their clothes are faded, but they are well washed and comfortable, and their eyes are sparkling with happiness. A tinkling of a bell is heard. The boys and girls instantly stop play and hasten into the large, airy school rooms. On the other side of the square, in a tall building, 50 round babies with fat cheeks and fluffy hair are being taken out of tiny iron cribs, and amid much wrestling and considerable noise, are becoming as presentable as water, soap and neat bib and tuckers can make them. A few years ago in this very spot even the policemen did not dare to walk alone in the daytime in the streets, which were practically abandoned to criminals and thugs. Education has wrought the change.

And in no place in the world is the refining influences of education and light over debauchery, crime and poverty more marked than in this same district of New York, known as the Five Points. There, surrounded by the lowest forms of human vice and depravity, have arisen the noble walls of two institutions that every year lead out of darkness and slavery into civilization and good citizenship armies of unprotected, unfed and untrained children of the slums.

These institutions are the Five Points Mission house at 63 Park street and its big neighbor just across the way, the House of Industry, 155 Worth street. They are in the heart of a locality that is still the synonym of all that is vicious and degenerate in the metropolis, although the moral condition of the surroundings has improved vastly over the old order of affairs. So frightful did Dickens think the place that he said of it in his "American Notes:" "Debauchery has made the very houses prematurely old. Where dogs would howl to lie, women, men and boys slink off the street."

Worth, Park and Baxter streets meet there in such a way as to form five corners, and from this topographical peculiarity the name is derived. The little plat of ground made by the crossing of these streets was converted into a pleasure common by the city in 1848, and, as if in mockery to the ragged, miserable dwellers of the shambling tenements, it was called Paradise park.

One day in 1853 the residents of the district stood in open-mouthed wonderment as workmen began to tear down the "Old Brewery," and the word was passed around that the site was to be occupied by a building of the Ladies' Home Missionary society, of the Methodist church, an organization that had been working among them for three years, with headquarters in a small room in one of the rickety buildings in the neighborhood. The "Old Brewery" was one of the landmarks of criminal New York. It was erected as a brewery in 1792, and in 1837 was changed into a tenement house. It became the headquarters of the worst cutthroats of the new and the old world. Many men were murdered there, and the expression, "sudden death of the Old Brewery," became a common one in police circles. The house was called the "Den of Thieves," and the narrow alleys that ran around it was known as "Murderers' alley."

Into this building the mission moved, and in commemoration of the event the poet Mercein wrote:

God Knows it's time thy walls were going;
Through every stone his blood as through a heart is flowing.

The new building was completed in 1895, the one erected in 1853 having become inadequate to the wants of the institution. The work of the Five Points mission is carried on in a most practical manner. In addition to a day school, a sewing school, a reading room and fresh air work and a kindergarten, a kitchen garden and a day nursery. All the pupils come from the lowest order of civilized society. The greater per cent. of them are of foreign parentage. They would receive no education whatever were it not for the mission.

The mission does not wholly take care of the children, and it is not a home in the sense of giving them shelter at night. All who attend the day school are given their dinners at noon, and their clothing is furnished to them by voluntary contributions from the outside. The meals are furnished by an organization known as the "Dinner club," the members of which, unlike similarly named associations, do not dine themselves, but each subscribes five dollars annually. For this sum a child can be supplied with dinners for a year.

Another society is called the "Shoe club." It undertakes to keep the children in shoes for a year, and the membership for that time is one dollar. While the chief endeavor is to educate and care for the little ones, relief is also furnished to men and women, many of whom receive clothing. On an average between 1,000 and 1,200 children are taught at the mission during the year. There are twelve teachers in the schools, which are of the primary and first grade of grammar. In addition to their studies the children are given physical culture. The girls are also taught household duties and cooking, and, in order to appreciate what is being done for them, must make themselves useful to others. An instance of this work is shown in the neat scrap books they are preparing for the children of the Harriet Skidmore orphanage in India. The books are made purely for the amusement and instruction of the Indian children, few of whom have ever seen pictures outside of the text-books. Dressmaking is another branch of learning that has been commenced this summer.

The boys are likewise taught those things that will be likely to be the most practical to them in their stations in life. Their physical development is attended to in the gymnasium, and in order to arouse their spirit of patriotism and instill a love for the country which is now to be theirs a company has been formed, and with Quaker muskets the young soldiers keep step to the beats of the drum every day after school. One point is insisted on by the management; the children must be kept clean. Those who come dirty to school are hurried away to the bath rooms and undergo a thorough course of scrubbing.

Two years ago an generous gift was received by the mission. A beautiful home, surrounded by 22 acres of land, located at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, was given by John Olmsted and his sister, Miss Sarah Olmsted, both of whom have been greatly interested in the mission work and have contributed to it generously. To this place the children are taken during the hot summer months, when their poor homes become heated ovens. They go in groups of 100 at a time for two weeks.

In addition to the children taught at the day school and fed, every day assistance was rendered last year to 600 families and 7,000 individuals. Over $500 was donated for coal and nearly 25,000 articles of new and second-hand clothing were given to needy persons, not including 1,600 pairs of shoes. One hundred and ten thousand meals were served to adults.

Another great work in rescuing children from this locality is being carried on by the House of Industry. It was originally incorporated in 1854 as an industrial school for adults, but is now confined to children entirely. It is a large, well-ventilated brick building and is divided into chapel, class rooms and dormitories. One of the points of most interest to the visitor is the sleeping-room of the babies. They all take naps at noon, and, just before going to sleep for the night, kneel down together in their night clothes in their little cribs and pray. The dormitories are large and airy and the beds are spotlessly clean. The little ones are seated in tiny chairs in the chapel during religious service. Their cleanliness and the manner in which they deport themselves would do honor to any fashionable upper West side quarter in the city. They are like white flowers in this oasis of East side depravity.

FREDERICK BOYD STEVENSON.

Preparing Dates.

The preparation of dried dates is carried on largely at Awabi, and as the season had now commenced, I took the opportunity to observe the process, and was taken round the factories by the sheik. The dates selected are picked before they are quite ripe. The factory had a chimney about 15 feet high, and contained several open, circular, copper boilers, capable of holding five gallons each, and nearly full of water. Into these vessels the dates are put, and allowed to simmer over a slow fire. As the water in the copper decreased from evaporation, it was filled up again, but it gradually became insipissated by the extraction of the juice of the date. The fruit is left in the water about half an hour, and is then taken out and spread on mats or chotis in the sun to dry, after which it becomes hard and of a pale red color. It is exported in large quantities from Muskat to India.—Geographical Journal.

Sailing Over a Mountain Range.

Modern exploration of the ocean bottom has shown that the sea has its mountains as well as the land, even including those that are of a volcanic formation. Ships sail over these mountains of the sea as eagles pass above the Alps, but owing to the darkness that reigns in the ocean depths, we cannot look down and see their peaks, slopes and ranges lying far beneath the keels of our vessels. But we can discover them by feeling, as it were, that is to say, by means of soundings that reveal their outlines. One of the remarkable chains of submarine mountains discovered in this manner lies about 100 miles east of the coast of Australia. It was found in surveying a track for a cable to Norfolk Island. The sea over the tops of its highest summits is about 1,500 feet deep, but around them the plummet sinks to a depth of two or three miles.—Youth's Companion.

Electromagnets as Lifters

The use of magnets for handling great masses of steel and iron has of late been quite common. The magnets, composed of soft iron, are connected with electric power circuits so that their attractive force can be instantaneously developed or destroyed by the turning on or off of the current. Attached to a crane, the magnets take the place of the hooks, or chain fastenings, ordinarily employed. Lifting magnets usually have a capacity of five tons each, although they are seldom called upon to exert their full strength. Experience has shown that magnets will lift and successfully handle material in cases where a chain would slip.—Youth's Companion.

A Luckless Queen.

The queen of the Belgians, who has just celebrated her sixty-first birthday, comes of a most ill-fated royal house in Europe—the house of Hapsburg—and her cup of grief is more than full. Her hair is said to have been white while she was still in her thirties. The queen's only son, the duke of Brabant, died suddenly under circumstances which suggested poisoning; her son-in-law was the Crown Prince Rudolph, who ended his life in a most tragic manner; her favorite nephew was killed in an accident, and her only niece is in an insane asylum not far from the palace at Brussels.—Detroit Free Press.

Hows 700 Times an Hour.

When passing through the streets to perform some ceremony the king of England takes off his hat on an average of 12 times a minute, that is, the almost incredible number of 700 times an hour. The king requires a new brim to his hat every forthnight. Being very economical in his headgear, he does not buy a new hat every time the brim requires renewing.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Serious Case.

Late one evening a doctor received a note from a couple of fellow-practitioners, saying:

"Pray, step across to the club. We are one short on a game of poker."

"Emily, dear," he then said to his wife, "I am called away again. It appears to be a very serious case, for there are two doctors already in attendance."—London Tit-Bits.

DOCTORS IN ONE BLOCK.

Sixty-Five Medics Have Their Shingles Out in That Space in Philadelphia.

New York has the most thickly populated block in the United States, and many curious congregations of men may be seen in its street. But Philadelphia has the prize block for one species of aggregation. Sixty-five physicians live in one block in that city. It is also stated that within a radius of four blocks in that city more than one-seventh of its medical practitioners is located, reports the New York Herald.

From the tendency of physicians and dentists to congregate in one street certain blocks of this city present an almost unbroken array of doctors' signs upon the house fronts. It might seem to a casual observer that none but members of the medical profession reside there.

In Chestnut street, Philadelphia, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, this is almost literally true. Sixty-five physicians have offices there. Many of the most prominent practitioners located there many years ago, and younger physicians have of late years been attracted thither. Another factor in the surfeit is the area mentioned is almost the center of the city.

Yet neither in Philadelphia nor New York is there as great a number of physicians in proportion to the population as there are in the District of Columbia.

VERSATILITY OF AMERICA.

Our Artists Paint "Old Masters" and "Imported" Soap, Wines, Etc., Are Made at Home.

There are some articles which seemingly cannot be produced in America, but we must remember that "Things are not always what they seem—skim milk masquerades as cream," as Gilbert says. We are told that there are artists here in New York, who are making a good living painting some of "the old masters," which bring large prices at auction. Imported wines are now made in California, the labels alone being French. It is a very common-place soap factory that cannot turn out Castile soap, and Maine herring are shipped to France, and returned as French sardines, says "Vest Pocket Confidences," in Four-Track News. Up in northern New York they are making all manner of imported cheese, and down in Kentucky they are turning out many successful brands of Scotch whisky. Nor does this Yankee ingenuity cease in its endeavors to supply the demand for foreign goods, for western manufacturers are making maple sugar from ingredients that never came within the shadow of a maple tree, and are actually buying Vermont newspapers in which to wrap the cakes so that the unsuspecting purchaser will think he is buying genuine Green Mountain maple sugar. The land of wooden nutmegs is no longer a curiosity.

FIVE INTELLECTUAL FEET.

Library That Is Long Enough to Furnish Information Sufficient for the Needs of Any Man.

According to President Charles W. Eliot, of Harvard university, there is no good reason why the normal human being should not have an intellectual training that would meet the requirements not only of our advanced civilization, but be up to the highest standard as fixed by the learned president himself, for recently he said: "A library that will go on a shelf five feet long is enough to give an intellectual training to any human being that ever came into the world," says the New York Herald.

Just think of it! You can hold the five feet of volumes between your extended hands, and all you have to do is to transmute their contents into memory cells that can, at the will, be put into action for the production of understanding.

Only five feet! I have taken the trouble to put the rule on this and apply a little mathematics. As books in the library average, five feet means 37 volumes; which is not an array calculated to frighten a reader.

Again, is not known that these 37 books contain 30,000 pages, made up of 1,000,000 words. Not so very much material from which to imbibe intellectual training.

Authority on the Crops.

There is an old fellow out in Chicago who has written so much on the subject of crops, and written so honestly and entertainingly, that he has become a power in the land. He signs himself S. Thornton K. Prime, his full name being Samuel Thornton Kenneys Prime, says the New York Press. Born in Connecticut, educated in Rahway, N. J., and raised in the western school of journalism, he early became a specialist in domestic and foreign crop statistics, and is to-day in all probability the highest living authority on the present and prospective condition of corn, wheat, oats, etc. The markets of the world swear by Prime regardless of the lying of bulls and bears. He is sixty-eight years old, with a country home at Dwight, Ill.

Ping-Pong Dinner Parties.

The ping-pong dinner party is the latest thing. The guests come to dinner; and after the feast, which is not a very long affair, they all go into the dining room to wait until the dinner table is cleared. They all come back to the dining room, the net is spread and the ping-pong game begins.

Too Late.

During the inquisition of the police department on the saloon question by the grand jury one of the range members made himself notable for his persistency in asking questions, and he went into every possible way of violating the Sunday laws, like one who knew his game.

A member of the force who speaks a good Scotch brogue was one of the witnesses. After he had testified that he knew nothing of the saloons being open contrary to law and that he had tried several side doors without success, the inquisitive juror suggested:

"You know that any one wishing to buy a drink could get in the back door at No. —— Superior street last Sunday by knocking in a certain way?"

" did na ken thot. I wish I could ha' found somebody wi' experience to tell o't aitlier," replied the witness.

Then some of the other jurors smiled, but the inquisitive juror never saw the point.—Duluth News-Tribune.

Italians in the Church.

The influence of the Italians in the affairs of the church can be better understood when it is known that more than half the members of the college of cardinals are Italians. There are now 67 cardinals, of whom 61 have been appointed by Leo XIII. since he was elected pope, in February, 1878. Of these 37 are from Italy and 30 from the rest of the world—eight from France, seven from Austria, five from Spain, two from Germany, two from Ireland and one each from Poland, Hungary, Portugal, Belgium, Australia and the United States. Three of the Italian cardinals are from Sicily, representing a population of 3,682,766, while there is only one in all America, with a population of 70,000,000. Thirty-two cardinals reside at Rome and are in actual control of the affairs of the church. Of these 19 are Italians and three are foreigners.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Testifying to Great Cures.

Wheaton (Ill.) lady, who had "tried everything in vain until I commenced taking your valuable remedy," has written, if the Wheaton News can be believed, the following testimonial to a country druggist who is booming a new tonic:

"Dear Sir: Before taking your medicine I was too weak to spank the baby, but now I can lick my husband. Heaven bless you!"

This reminds one of the Shakopee man who was nearly blind and took Dr. Sawyer's wonderful elixir. He wrote: "Dear Sir: Before taking your elixir I could not see six inches before my face. Yesterday I saw wood. I feel that I ought to let these facts be known. Send me another bottle."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

From Cairo to Khartoum.

The temple, tombs and ruins of Egypt prove that the government of the Pharoahs spent 19,000 years in getting from the pyramids, Cairo, to the land, which, when it died out. It took Kitchener 13 years to get from Cairo to Khartoum, and, on his arrival, Mahdyism, with all its lusts, rapacity and cruelty, died the same day, and was buried beyond hope of resurrection. To-day a traveler can do the same distance in 5½ days.—From George Eade's "Egypt—Then and Now," in The Four-Track News.

Careful estimates of the force of a cyclone and the energy required to keep the full-fledged hurricane in active operation reveal the presence of a power that makes the mightiest efforts of human striving in comparison. This is about 15 times the power that can be developed by all the engines within the range of man's capabilities during the same time.—Science.

LEARNED WOMEN AND A MOUSE

The Interesting Experience of a Lone Man at One New Women's University Club.

When the question of permitting members to invite men guests to dinner at the Women's University club was discussed, the opposition gave as an argument against it that the men would steal spoons. They admitted frankly that on occasions when they had dined at men's clubs, a spoon was considered a legitimate plunder.

It was finally decided to instruct the club servants to watch the spoons carefully, and with this safeguard to admit men guests. All this was explained to a lone man who dined with a member of the club several nights ago, reports the New York Sun.

He hardly dared to use a spoon, and to avoid even the appearance of evil he looked away from those in front of him and inspected cautiously the university women dining around him. One was pointed out as having been a distinguished member of the faculty of a well-known college, and several others had made reputations as teachers.

Suddenly these women became very much agitated. They turned around in their chairs and faced the rear of the room.

The man wondered if some one was stealing spoons. The signs of agitation increased; and, unable to resist his curiosity any longer, he turned around to look.

Out in the middle of the floor of the back room was a small playful mouse. Not until it had escaped into the kitchen was the club decorum restored.

ROBBIE AND THE AUTOMOBILE.

The Youngster's Lucid Explanation Thereof to His Father When He Got Home.

Robbie had never before been in an automobile. He is a very small and serious-eyed youngster, just emerging from babyhood, and an automobile is not looked upon with favor or wonderful to him than an elevated train or a surface car. But the mild excitement and apparent interest in the vehicle shown by his mother and his aunt, to whom the experience was also new, communicated itself to Robbie.

He bobbed agitated between them as the automobile went up Fifth avenue, and asked a string of questions that evidently had sequence in his mind, although to a scatter-brained person to his feminine relatives, who, absorbed in their own good time, answered him somewhat at random.

The result of Robbie's investigations became apparent, says the New York Mail and Express, when, before going to bed, he stood at his father's knee that night and conversed with a masculine intellect.

"Well, sir, what have you been up to to-day?" inquired his parent.

"Up on a big sewing-machine wis mamma and aunty," replied Robbie.

"A sewing machine? What do you mean?"

"Yes, sir; we rided on Fifth avenue on a big sewing-machine. Mamma wanted to go 'in the stage, but aunty said it would take all the tuck out of the stage."

TO PRESERVE OLD CHAPEL.

First Shrine for Christian Worship in America Is an Interesting Landmark.

The lovers of the antique and picturesque architecture of former centuries in the City of Mexico are pleased at the announcement that an architect lmnamark, the little chapel of La Concepcion, is not to be destroyed, says the Chicago Chronicle. It has been variously claimed for this chapel that it marked the spot where Cuauhtemoc surrendered to Cortes, also that it was the first Catholic temple in which mass was said in the City of Mexico. A recent investigation of these points among the best authorities on ancient history of the capital did not establish them positively, but at the little chapel is without doubt one of the earliest places of Christian worship built in the city by the Spaniards and probably in the whole of North America.

The chapel of La Concepcion now stands in the rather neglected little plaza of the same name, which is the public stand for the heavy carts and wagons licensed for hire. It is to be rescued from this unromantic surrounding, however, and a park laid out about it. The chapel will be given a few needed repairs and protected by a suitable railing. It has been proposed that the new garden to be called Jardin Berriozabel, after Mexico's late minister of war.

Bees for Use in War.

It has been suggested that honey bees be tried as military messengers in place of homing pigeons. A bee would carry a good deal of information if it were transferred by micro-photography to a minute piece of paper fastened to the insect's back. Carrier pigeons are frequently intercepted and killed by the enemy, but it would be difficult to do this in the case of bees. The homing instinct of a bee is as strong is that of a pigeon.

Summer Vacation Schools.

Nearly 1,000 men and women are employed to conduct summer vacation schools and playgrounds in the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx. Last summer more than 100,000 boys and girls were in more or less constant attendance.

"Infantry."

The term "infantry" was first used by the Spaniards in the wars with the Moors to designate the bodyguard of a royal prince or infante. It was extended to the entire body of foot soldiers, and finally adopted throughout Europe.

WHAT A LIBRARY IS.

George R. Peck Defines It as an Epitome of the World.

A Scholarly Plea for Literary Culture—Dreams, Fancies and Imaginations Contribute Much to Human Happiness.

Galesburg, Ill., dedicated its new public library not long ago, and Mr. George R. Peck, the well-known attorney of Chicago, was the orator of the day. His address, like all of his "occasional" efforts, was scholarly in style, happy in illustration, and particularly felicitous from a literary point of view. Mr. Peck's close sympathy with books and his wide reading eminently qualified him for a task of this kind. His address was a strong tribute to the intellectual riches, and as eloquent plea for literary culture, as not only productive of mental growth, but as destructive of what is obnoxious to that growth. From his point of view the library should be organized, not alone for the classification of such knowledge as is for the encouragement of dreams and fancies and imaginations. He believes there is more help to average minds in "The Odyssey," "Don Quixote," "Les Miserables," or "The Newcomes" than in all the encyclopedias, however important they may be in their place. While proud of the conquests of science in the present epoch, he yet has the courage "to long for the literature that used to be" and the faith to believe that it "can be brought back by clinging to it." In these practical days it is pleasant to read the thoughts of the scholar and the dreamer, and such an eloquent plea for literary culture as that made by Mr. Peck at Galesburg. He spoke in part as follows:

A library is an epitome of the world. Though it has no speaking tongue, no lips to proclaim the wisdom and the beauty enshrined in its volumes, yet the searcher wherever he may be, finds both wisdom and beauty, and takes them into his own life, undisturbed by the noise and clamor of crowds. There is a calm delight in seeking the refreshment and repose of a cloistered seclusion. At such time he may forget how rapid the tired earth is compelled to revolve on its tired axis, to give us assurance of a rising and a setting sun. And yet, while he thus rests, he grows; he inhales a diviner air, and becomes, by the contact with other minds, and by the habit of meditation thus formed, more and more 'man thinking,' and more and more man 'looking before and after.'

"Some one has said that all which has actually happened in the world is small and unimportant compared with what has happened in the dreams and fancies and imaginations of genius. That is the secret of Shakespeare's unrivaled power in the intellectual world. His creations are real. His Lears, his Mercutios, his Falstaffs, his Shylocks, would be ours if we possessed his genius, and for us he thinks is without doubt one of the earliest places of Christian worship built in the city by the Spaniards and probably in the whole of North America.

"And this is why I plead that you do not shut your hearts against the great imaginative works that constitute the world's best literature. Let them come in; and you may find, as when strangers enter your doors, you have thereby entertained angels unawares."

TROLLEY CONSOLIDATION.

All this talk about a consolidation of the trolley interests in northern New Jersey must certainly have some foundation, no matter how small. Where there is so much smoke, there must be some fire. It remains to be seen, however, whether the attempt at consolidation will succeed.

It does not seem likely that a move would materially affect Plainfield. It might mean an improvement in the local service. As now, the local system would be but a very small and insignificant part of a large one. This has its advantages and disadvantages. It ought to mean better equipment and greater thorough facilities. As now operated, when he defeated Robert Abbott, 5 up and 4 to go, there would not be the anxiety to keep the road running under all circumstances as would be the case were it independent of all other lines.

It is not likely, however, that Plainfield will be consulted in the deal. The old Plainfield Street Railway Company is now in the hands of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company and another change in ownership would not be difficult. The local franchises would remain in force and the new owners would be just as much bound to observe them as are the old. As has been the case before, some out-of-town official might attempt to inaugurate certain plans that would not conform with the contract with the city. It would then be necessary for the city officials to act. Otherwise the city could have nothing to say.

REMOVE IT.

It certainly looks as if that unsightly stone curb in the roadway in front of the west bound station of the Jersey Central Railroad is soon to be removed. The new management has shown itself able to look from the popular standpoint and the result has been that many changes, inaugurated during the regime of Vice President Warren, have been done away with and a return made to the former methods. There is no reason why this case will not result as the others have.

If the report is true and the company is willing to remove the curb if the city will agree to keep the hacks back where they belong, it is certainly up to the city to see that its part of the agreement is carried out. The hack ordinance and the control of the hackmen has long been a troublesome subject. It ought not, however, be beyond the power of the city officials to devise some means whereby the hackmen may all obtain equal privileges and yet not encroach on the rights of the public.

North avenue is the widest thoroughfare in the city and it is too bad that a stone curb or wall should mar the appearance of it at the widest part and right in front of the principal railway station in the city. This curb has really been of little or no use and it has been decidedly in the road at times when there has been a large assemblage of carriages at the station. General Manager Besler has shown himself thoroughly in sympathy with the public and the patrons of the Jersey Central and he can undoubtedly see as well as anyone else what a useless thing it was to place the curb there. Report has it that Mr. Besler has agreed to use his influence for its removal if only the city will care for the carriages and keep the hackmen back to their proper place. That is no more than fair and there should be no difficulty or delay in bringing this desired end to pass.

LIBERTY CORNER'S FOURTH.

Sale and Supper Given by Women of the Presbyterian Church.

The Fourth of July was celebrated by the people of Liberty Corner and vicinity by the holding of a sale and supper on the grounds of the Presbyterian church. The large crowd present, which included many summer visitors, enjoyed the hospitality of the women of the church, who furnished a bountiful supper in the lecture room. Outside a large tent had been erected, in which were booths for the sale of ice cream, candy, etc., while the many Chinese lanterns which were everywhere hung, both furnished light and added to the beauty of the scene.

A pleasant feature of the occasion was the presence of the Mendham band which, from an improvised band stand, played throughout the entire evening. The entertainment closed with a display of fireworks and an old-fashioned auction sale. The proceeds of more than $100 will be devoted to the interests of the church.

Otto Tramm, of Park avenue, has entered Bellevue hospital, N. Y., for the purpose of having an operation performed.

REINHART WON AT HILLSIDE

Defeated Robert Abbott 5 Up and 4 to Go in Finals for Championship Cup.

PLAYED IT MONDAY.

School Boy Played a Plucky Game, But Could Not Beat Reinhart at His Best—Abbott Lost Chance for Closer Match by Two Poor Putts—The Detailed Account.

Playing in grand form, Frank O. Reinhart scored the first win for the Club Championship cup on the course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, Monday afternoon, when he defeated Robert Abbott, 5 up and 4 to go. Reinhart was at his best but the plucky school boy made a hard fight for it and but for two unfortunate misses on the putting green would have made it necessary to play the full compliment of holes to decide it. It was good golf and the course record came very near taking another drop.

Lacking the confidence acquired by the Princeton champion through frequent play in tournaments, Abbott sliced his first drive into the long grass and required two to put him over the fair green. Reinhart spoiled his approach and won the hole in a five. The second hole was halved in four, par golf. Another drive into the long grass, combined with an over-approach, cost Abbott the third hole, Reinhart making bogey figures, four.

On the fourth, Reinhart drove in the road but recovered splendidly to divide honors in a par four. The fifth was also halved in five, which is bogey. Reinhart missed his second putt and stymied his opponent, otherwise both should have made a four. Another stymie lost the short sixth hole for the school boy. A par five halved the seventh. Then Abbott regained one of the lost holes by a long putt on the eighth green which gave him a three. Reinhart laid the ball dead on his third shot in the journey over the road, giving him the hole in four, one better than bogey. That ended the outward journey with Reinhart three up.

Reinhart's drive on the tenth struck the top of the bunker on the left of the green and bounced on the green. Abbott sliced his drive in the bushes, losing the hole three to four. The eleventh, which is 468 yards long, saw Reinhart on in two. He holed out in four, one to the good on bogey. Abbott was one more. The twelfth was halved in a perfect five, although Abbott missed a five foot putt which should have given him the hole in four. He repeated the performance on the next hole, where he failed on a three foot putt for a three, which would have given him the hole. Reinhart then had the match well in hand, dormie five. Abbott is ordinarily very accurate on the green and should have been three down and five to go.

The fourteenth hole completed the match. Both were on the green in two. Abbott's only chance was a long putt which he missed by a few inches. To beat the course record it was decided to finish out the eighteen holes.

Both scored a three on the fifteenth and Reinhart missed a four on the next after a magnificent brassey shot from a poor lie by a slow putt. He drove on the seventeenth green but failed for a two by an inch. An unfortunate kick to the ball gave him difficult approach and he had to take five for the last hole. It made a total 74, which is one of the course record made by himself a few days ago. Abbott's total was 79, good going for anybody.

The cards of the two players, including the last holes played after the match was finished, were as follows:

Reinhart, out, 5 4 4 4 5 3 5 4 4—38
Abbott, out, 5 4 5 4 5 4 5 5 5—41
Reinhart, in, 3 4 5 4 4 3 5 3 5—36—74
Abbott, in, 4 5 5 4 4 3 4 5 4—38—79

LITERARY.

As usual, the American Boy is full and running over with good things for the American youth, and this July number is a patriotic number. "The Independence of Ad Hunter" is the leading story for this month. It is written by one of the most famous writers for boys and tells how a boy struck for independence and got it. "The Fourpenny Good Hopes" is a story of how a boy lifted a mortgage from his mother's home by his luck and foresight and his knowledge of rare postage stamps. "How the Boys Beat Governor Tryon," by Fred Myron Colby, is a story of revolutionary times very well suited to a Fourth of July number. Of practical interest to boys are the articles: "How to Make a Balloon;" "Tricks With Handkerchiefs" and the usual departments; "The American Journalist and Boy Reporter;" "Familiar Talks With Boys," "Boys as Money-makers and Money-savers," "The Boys' Brain Gym.," "The Agassiz Association," "Boys in the Home, Church and School," "Boys and Animals," "Boys in Games and Sport," "Oratory and Debating," "The Order of The American Boy," "The Boys' Library," "The Boy Stamp, Coin and Curio Collector," "For Boys to Think About," "The Boy Photographer," and the "Puzzle Department." Handsome illustrations adorn every page. This best of boys' magazines is published by the Sprague Publishing Company, Detroit, Mich. Subscription price $1 per annum.

THEATRICAL.

There is no diminution in interest or attendance upon the Proctor entertainments. All of the playhouses on the big circuit are in full swing, and will remain open all summer. The Proctor Stock Company remains the leading feature of the diverting programmes, and good vaudeville is, as usual, interlarded between acts.

Frederick Bond, general stage director of the Proctor Stock, is in active harness, and is playing at the Fifth Avenue in a series of lively comedy revivals. Beatrice Morgan is the leading woman on the Fifth Avenue branch of the big organization, and other favorites at Manager Proctor' Broadway house are: Florence Leslie, Bessie Lea Listina, Ada Levick, William Gerald, Charles M. Seay and Daniel H. Jarrett.

Ideal summer vaudeville programmes are offered at the Twenty-third Street, where the weekly change in bills brings forward the best acts to be found in the vaudeville field. There are always twenty or more star acts on the big continuous bill, and there is no let up in the entertainment from noon till nearly midnight. The Twenty-third Street, like the other Proctor theatres, will remain open all summer, and vaudeville will be the exclusive offering.

Up in Harlem the Proctor Stock Company continues to occupy popular attention, and the summer is bringing new records for tremendous crowds to the credit of this favorite up town resort. Edna Archer Crawford is the leading women of what may be called the Harlem branch of the Proctor Stock, others who have won favor in the permanent organization being Helen Sallinger, Florida Kingsley, Drene de Wolf, Richard Lyle, Jas. Castle and E. M. Bell. Sunday concerts are a feature of the weekly programme at the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, as they are at the other Proctor theatres in New York City.

Proctor's, Newark, continues the presentation of the best vaudeville twice daily as its summer plan. The daily bargain matinees—when 25 cents admits to any seat in the house—are immensely popular, and the attendance upon the evening entertainments is on the capacity order. In Montreal and Albany the Proctor Stock Company is enjoying a summer of phenomenal prosperity, and "All's Well" over the entire circuit.

INSTALLED AT QUEEN CITY

BIG TIME FOR ODD FELLOWS AT THE MEETING MONDAY NIGHT.

District Deputy King and Staff Did the Installing—Then Followed Entertainment for All.

In connection with the installation of the officers which are to govern its affairs for a half year, Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. It was one of the enjoyable affairs which promotes the fraternal feeling in Odd Fellow circles and which is characteristic of Queen City.

The work of installing was performed by District Deputy Grand Master George King, of Elizabeth, and his staff as follows: Grand Marshal, H. The officers were installed as follows: Past grand, B. W. Hand; noble grand, R. J. Neal; vice grand, William Leithansser; recording secretary, R. E. Humphrey; permanent secretary, F. D. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of T. C. Smith, R. E. Humphrey and H. H. Hoffman.

LICENSE TO HUNT.

Considerable Confusion Concerning Provisions of the Game Laws Passed Last Winter.

Considerable confusion exists in the minds of many sportsmen, both in and out of the State, concerning the provisions of the act passed at the last session of the Legislature to require non-residents to secure licenses before hunting or gunning in the State. The law is very plain, and a careful reading of its provisions will not admit any misconstruction. It requires non-residents to take out a license, which will be issued by the county clerk of any county in the State upon the payment of a fee of $10 and an issuance fee of fifty cents.

The license holds good for one year from the date of issue, and authorizes the owner to hunt and kill in any part of the State during the open seasons of the year. To all non-residents who are the owners of freehold estate in any lands in the State, who reside thereon a portion of each year and who pay taxes thereon, the license will be issued without any charge except the issuance fee of fifty cents.

The act does not apply to hunting or gunning on game preserves at present established, or to gunning or hunting for wild water fowl, snipe or mud hens. The law then prescribes the right of arrest upon failure to show a license, and the method of proceeding to collect the penalty for violation of the act.

Up in Hunterdon.

Mrs. J. F. Grandin entertained a party of Plainfielders at her beautiful home, Grandin Mere, Hunterdon county, from Thursday until Monday. The party consisted of Borough Councilman and Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Force and daughter, Miss Lillian A. Force. The grand scenery and air of old Hunterdon county were greatly enjoyed by all, as was the hospitality at Grandin Mere, and all were loath to leave for home this morning.

MUSICAL SERVICE AT THE FIRST BAPTIST

Rendered by the Choir Under the Direction of E. J. Fitzhugh and Organist Case.

THOSE WHO TOOK PART.

A SERMON ON MUSIC WAS PREACHED BY REV. DR. JUDSON.

Enjoyable Service Given Last Sunday—Regular Choir Was Assisted by a Few Others—The Selections and Those Who Sang Them.

The special musical service at the First Baptist church last Sunday was one of the most enjoyable yet given. The excellent chorus choir rendered the several numbers perfectly under the direction of E. J. Fitzhugh, who was in charge, with Howard Case at the organ. The choir was augmented by Miss Julia Carman, Miss May Mulford and Miss Lena Bass, soprano; Stacy Reynolds, bass, and William M. Miner, tenor. Dr. Leonard Waldo assisted in the programme with a 'cello.

The programme opened with a selection by Schumann for organ and 'cello, followed with an anthem, "Whose Dwelleth," by the choir. After the invocation by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, an evening hymn "On High the Stars," was given by the choir and preceded by a bass solo, "O God be Merciful," by William Holmes, who sang in excellent voice. He was accompanied on the organ by Mr. Fitzhugh.

One of the most effective numbers was the alto solo and chorus, "Lord, How Long," by Mrs. F. M. Ward and choir. Another delightful number was the soprano solo, "Hear My Prayer," by Miss Luella C. Harris, and a chorus part by the choir.

The offertory, a tenor solo, "Be Thou Faithful," by George W. Smith, was given in pleasing style. The offering was for the King's Daughters' Baby Camp and the Netherwood Fresh Air Home.

After an anthem, "Evening Sacrifice," by the choir, Rev. Dr. Edward H. Judson gave a short talk on music in the church. He complimented the choir giving the programme last evening and thought that a chorus choir surpasses any kind of music for a church. He did not depreciate the quartette choir, but believed the chorus choir better.

Dr. Judson believed that the congregation should be taught to sing and thus make the services of the church more helpful and interesting. He believed that through songs of praise people are brought nearer to God and are lead to worship Him better.

Following the short discourse, another anthem, "Still, Still With Thee," was given by the choir, and after the congregational singing of "Abide With Me," the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Judson. The services throughout was impressive and the very large congregation present thoroughly enjoyed every number.

WILL NOT ACCEPT.

Rev. John R. Atkinson Announced Sunday That He Would Not Come.

Rev. John R. Atkinson, rector of Trinity church, Elizabeth, announced at the morning service Sunday that he had decided not to accept the call extended by Grace Episcopal church, of this city. The rector stated that his desire and that of his congregation was that he should stay in Elizabeth. Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson will leave on July 26 for an extended trip to Europe.

Pleased With Music Hall.

Prospects for the opening of Music Hall are still somewhat encouraging. Two parties are now engaged in looking over the premises with a prospect of buying and both appear to be well pleased with the prospects. In the event of their coming to terms with the owner, it is said repairs could be made soon enough to have the opening this fall.

HOPE Y. M. A.'S COUNTY FAIR WAS A HUGE SUCCESS

Ten Thousand People Visited Hope Common Friday and Saw the Host of Varied Attractions Which Were Gathered There for the Occasion.

A SHAM BATTLE WAS HELD IN THE AFTERNOON.

FROM EARLY MORN UNTIL LATE AT NIGHT THE VISITORS SWARMED THE PLACE AND FOUND MUCH THERE TO INTEREST AND AMUSE THEMSELVES.

The Show in the Tent Was a Great Success—Those Who Participated —The Attractions on the Midway Included All the Usual Ones— Baseball Games Played Morning and Afternoon—Company K Boys and Guests Gave a Realistic Picture of War—Athletic Events Were Held During the Noon Hour—A Band Concert Was Held at Night—The Details of the Affair.

"The greatest success of its kind that has ever been seen in the city" is the one comment that is heard today with reference to the great "County Fair" of the Hope Y. M. A., held Friday on the Common at West Eighth street and Spooner avenue. The difficult task of converting the field into a typical seaside resort with its varied list of attractions, minus the water, was accomplished by this organization of young men and, as a result, Plainfield witnessed the largest celebration that it has had in many years. At one time in the afternoon more than 5,000 people were on the grounds and at no time during the afternoon did the attendance go below half that number. In the ten hours that the celebration lasted there was not a dull moment. When the close came last night, the tired but happy young men realized their efforts to entertain the city had been appreciated.

It is estimated that fully 10,000 people visited the grounds during the day.

Visitors began to arrive on the grounds at 9 o'clock and their first view of the grounds impressed them with the fact that it was no "boys' affair." Weeks of work was represented by a complete midway supervised by "barkers" who might have been taken for veterans in the business and a group of booths and tents that it was hard to realize were only placed for the day.

At the entrance to the grounds beyond the executive committee's tent, which was used as headquarters for the sub-committees, was a steam carousal which was crowded all day. The sight of the children enjoying themselves on this end of the fair and the notes of the wheezy organ were all that was needed to enliven everyone's interest and start them going. The rest of the attractions were lined up in a double row leading from the carousal to the large tent which housed the concert and vaudeville show. These consisted of a soda water stand in charge of H. D. Thompson and A. Berry Marsh; a rifle range guarded by Arthur Ford; the "African Dodger" which consisted of a curtain through which Professor Walter Jones protruded his head and kept himself busy dodging the baseballs thrown at him; a candy and peanut table where these features of every fair were sold by Miss Laura Hangliter and Miss Eliza Osmun; a fishing pond where the visitors were beguiled into angling for prizes by M. D. Sweeney, Thomas Chamberlain and John Slorah; a roly-poly board consisting of boards with holes through them into which balls were rolled for prizes, in charge of Arthur Fluck; a "hit the baby" rack where the rows of dolls suffered at the hands of the expert throwers and the latter afterward suffered from the cigars handed out by Hugh Gray; a grab-bag in charge of Irving DeHart and John Fritts, where prizes were grabbed for; and a cane and knife rack looked after by William Firstbrook.

Beyond the midway in the south end of the field was a large refreshment stand with adjacent tables placed for the accommodation of all day visitors. This important part of the affair was supervised by a committee consisting of Fred Wharton, chairman, H. D. Thompson and Thomas Hendry. They received invaluable assistance from Mrs. Charles Dixon, Mrs. A. B. Lewis, Mrs. Arthur McVoy and the Misses Belle Slorah, Marion Porter, Nellie Mullen, Mabelle Firstbrook, Mary Duvier and other members of the Hope chapel Christian Endeavor Society.

As the day was warm, the cooling refreshments were much in demand and the young women were kept very busy filling orders. Some idea of the business transacted at this stand may be gleaned from the fact that three times the supply of ice cream and soda water became exhausted and as many truckloads were brought to replenish it.

Particularly laughable was a scene enacted at the main entrance to "the big show." Thomas McMaster Muir, costumed as a typical "Reuben," strutted up and down, advertising the affair. His make-up was indirecus and it scored a decided hit. Before him, perched on a high stand, was W. L. Holbert, who heralded the wonders of the aggregation and incidentaly kept himself busy disposing of tickets. Bertram Collins Firstbrook, resplendent in an immaculate suit of duck, played the part of a "scalper," and divided honors with the regular ticket agent. Close by stood City Judge Runyon, whose manner betrayed the fact that the burden of the enterprise rested on his shoulders. This group of representatives easily convinced the spectators that it was worth while to patronize the affair and a brisk business was done.

The "concert," as it was called, was given at intervals of an hour and consisted of exceptionally fine vaudeville acts, six in number. Among them were head balancing and trapeze acts and feats on the unsupported ladder by James Irwin, a former member of the Irwin Brothers acrobats, known all over the country fifteen years ago, club swinging and other feats on the revolving sphere by Master Leo Irwin, Ethiopian songs and rag-time medleys by Butler and Owens, parodies on popular songs by Bowers and Haggerty, back and wing and clog dancing by the ever popular Lusardi and Bowers, and sentimental ballards by James Herne Haggerty, a former member of one of Proctor's stock companies. Thomas Muir acted as announcer and William N. Runyon as accompanist.

With the host of smaller "fry," namely souvenir sellers, peanut venders and others who haunted the crowds with their wares, this completed the attractions on the midway, everyone of which a liberal patronage, some of them being surrounded by a crowd all the time.

The larger events which were included in the day's programme and which were as varied as they were numerous completed a programme which beyond doubt exceeded any ever given at a local Fourth of July celebration. Among them were two baseball games, one at 10:30 and the other at 3 o'clock between the crack Hope team and the Decatur A. C., amateur champions of New York and Brooklyn, both of which were won by the Hope team. These contests alone were witnessed by 2,000 people, in the morning and half as many more in the afternoon. At noon as series of athletic events were held in which the best and most laughable was the fat man's race which as won by John Krinen. The winner boasts of 275 pounds of avoirdupois but sped over the ground with surprising swiftness. His opponent as the genial John Conroy who was only a short distance behind when the line was crossed.

The event of the day was the sham battle given in the far part of the field in the afternoon between Company K of this city and a company of delegations from Company H, of New Brunswick, L, of Princeton, M, of Somerville and I and C, of Elizabeth. Captain W. K. Browning was in charge of the Plainfield company and acted on the offensive while Lieutenant Harry Kitchell, also of Company K, in charge of the visitors, remained on the defensive.

It was the first sham battle that has been given in this city in many years and it was witnessed and enjoyed by the largest crowd that was on the field during the day. The defenders attacked and retreated several times, then essayed a charge which ended in a surrender. The celebration terminated in the evening with a band concert which was listened to by a very large crowd.

In charge of the whole affair was an executive committee consisting of George R. Firstbrook, chairman, William N. Runyon, John H. Cose, Thomas Muir and David B. Martin.

They were ably assisted by other committees as follows: Entertainment, Thomas Muir, chairman, R. C. Firstbrook and Arthur Fritts; refreshment, Fred Wharton, chairman, H. D. Thompson and Thomas Hendry; fakir, M. D. Sweeney and William Schorb; baseball, John H. Cose and D. B. Martin. The merry-go-round was in charge of William Porter, and Walter Foster and Albert Utzinger. All the other members of the association assisted in many ways mainly in ticket selling and of these the principals were Charles Meyer, Charles F. McCann, William Nash, Raymond McVoy, William Newman, Harry Knight, George Fritts, Fred and Charles Dixon, Teddy Howe, Thomas Porter, David F. Stewart, Charles Harris, George Slorah and Archibald Haequer.

The proceeds will be devoted to the Y. M. A. treasury and will be used in the fall for improvements to association's gymnasium. A business meeting will be held Tuesday evening when all the affairs connected with the day will be settled.

SHORE RESORTS.

Unequalled Service to Them Offered by the Jersey Central.

New Jersey is the natural summer resort for New Yorkers and for the easterner as well for the simple reason that it is accessible. Exceptional train service, its locations, wonderful bathing facilities, and a wreckless climate are the chief attractions.

The popular route is the Sandy Hook, which leaves New York, Pier 8, N. R., and runs to Atlantic Highlands, where connection is made with the New Jersey Central for all New Jersey coast resorts, including Seabright, Normandie, West End, Monmouth, Long Branch, Asbury Park, Allenhurst, Ocean Grove, Avon, Belmar, Spring Lake and Point Pleasant. The boats which comprise the fleet are models in convenience and equipment, and are the fastest plying from New York. The sea trip is delightful, and the rail portion of the journey is close to the water's edge.

The New Jersey Central also operates a rail line to these resorts, passing Shrewsbury, Red Bank, Matawan, Beach Haven, Atlantic City, Ocean City and Cape May. Its trains are fast, frequent and finely equipped, and the principal ones have buffet parlor cars. The general passenger department of the New Jersey Central, Sect. G. B., has just issued a hotel book, giving information regarding the principal hotels and boarding houses on its line. It's free for the asking; send for it. c Sea Shore Service.

The New Jersey Central has arranged a through sea shore car service between Manch Chunk and Point Pleasant, by which one is saved the vexatious Junction changes which perplex and bewilder the tourist and traveler. A through coach will be run on the train leaving Manch Chunk at 11:18 A. M., arriving at Point Pleasant at 5:00 P. M., and 11:35 A. M. train from Point Pleasant will have through coach to Manch Chunk. c

At Felmly Farms.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Arnold and daughters, Edith and Marguerite, of Plainfield, arrived at Felmly Farms Saturday for their usual summer vacation. Mr. Arnold is the efficient cashier of the Plainfield National Bank, and fills other responsible positions in his native city. His fancy horses and elegant carriages are a valuable acquisition to the Felmly Farm boarding stables.—Clinton Democrat.

sylvania, mainly from southern parts of the State and Pennsylvania.

The raise in the temperature Wednesday and Thursday sent an increased number of bathers into the surf. Wednesday morning the first rescue of the season was effected when Al Mintzner, bathing guard at the Asbury avenue grounds, plunged in and brought out a woman who had gotten beyond her depth and couldn't reach a lifeline. She was more frightened than hurt.

A Western manufacturing company has the honor of having sent the first prize contributed for the baby parade. It is a go-cart which can be converted into a dining chair and which can be carried under the arm in a public place, such as a railroad car.

It is said that several hotel-keepers asked Mayor Bradley to increase the size of the band and charge people ten cents for the privilege of listening. The Mayor vetoed the proposition emphatically, and that was as long as he controlled the beach its attractions would be free to all.

Ocean Grove has added four more policemen to her force. Asbury Park has also filled her quota of officers, including Vought Burke, the Englishtown giant. Burke can be seen daily on the boardwalk. He measures close to seven feet. His uniform consists of a blue suit, made to order, helmet and white gloves.

The Ocean Grove Citizen will make its first appearance next week. The proprietor, Tali Esen Morgan, has a number of unique ideas for his publication, one of which is to place the heading in the middle of the first page.

Vacation Days.

Vacation time is here and the children are fairly living out of doors. There could be no healthier place for them. You need only to guard against the accidents incidental to most open air sports. No remedy equals DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for quickly stopping pain or removing danger of serious consequences. For cuts, scalds and wounds. "I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for sores, cuts and bruises," says L. B. Johnson, Swift, Tex. "It is the best remedy on the market." Sure cure for piles and skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits. with some new and untried medicine for such serious troubles as diarrhoea, cramps, dysentery, when you should know that for over half a century Painkiller has cured millions of cases? Look out for imitations, there is only one genuine, "Perry-Davis'."

SHOT IN THE HAND.

Wm. F. Arnold, of City National Bank, Meets With an Accident.

William F. Arnold, cashier of the City National Bank, met with an accident at Lebanon, Hunterdon county, on July 4th, which nearly cost him his left hand. He with his nephew was discharging a large Dewey cannon, and the cannon was loaded to the muzzle for a final explosion. The charge did not go off the first time and Mr. Arnold was examining it to learn the cause. His left hand was close by when the charge went off. The small finger on the left hand was just filled with powder and the next finger was also injured. Since then Mr. Arnold has suffered much pain and has had the hand under treatment. He thinks it is miraculous that he did not lose the best part of his hand.

BRISK BLAZE IN WEST END

Butcher Shop and Barn of C. S. Tharp, on S. Second St., Were Destroyed by Fire.

TOTAL LOSS OF $1,300.

Quick Work by Fire Department Prevented a Serious Conflagration —Adjacent Double House Was Partially Damaged by Flames —Loss Covered by Insurance.

Flames which broke out mysteriously shortly after 11 Monday night, destroyed the barn and butcher shop of Charles Sarvie Tharp, at 1011 South Second street, and partially burned a large double house at Nos. 1007 and 1009, entailing a total loss of $1,300. Quick work on the part of the fire department was all that prevented a serious conflagration as there are many residences in that vicinity clustered together. Of the loss $600 is placed on the structures at 1011, $400 on the contents and $300 on the furniture and second part of the double house occupied by C. M. Ward. It is all covered by insurance.

When the fire was first discovered by George Fisher, of Manson place, the butcher shop and barn, which are connected, were wrapped in flames which had evidently been smoldering for some time as residents tell of smelling smoke at 9 o'clock. He ran shouting "fire" but before he reached a box an alarm had been turned in from box 47 by Patrolman Saunders. Within two minutes the West End Hose Company had two streams on the blazing structures and on the arrival of the headquarters apparatus another was played on the flames. The chemical engine was devoted to saving the double house which had caught fire on the west cornice and was burning merrily.

Only a portion of one side was injured but a short delay in getting a stream on would have ruined half the building. The furniture of the Ward's was damaged by water to the extent of $75 which is covered by insurance.

There were rumors last evening to the effect that the origin of the fire was incendiary but this is scouted by Chief Doane. He made a thorough investigation Tuesday morning and discovered nothing which would warrant his believing so. Everything seemed to show that flames had originated in some mysterious way and had smoldered until the whole interior was afire.

WEDDED LAST SEPTEMBER.

Miss Mertie Randolph and Frank Kellogg Have Just Announced It.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Mertie M. Randolph, of Park avenue, to Frank Kellogg, son of E. P. Kellogg, of Mt. Pleasant, which was celebrated at Manch Chunk, Pa., September 2, 1901. The couple is well known in this city and vicinity and the announcement came as a great surprise to all, even the parents of the bride and groom, who did not know of the event. The bride is a member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and quite active in the various lines of work there.

Lost Stack of Hay.

The brief thunder storm of Saturday afternoon cost Alonzo Greene, a farmer living near Metuchen, about $200. A stack filled with hay valued at that amount was struck by lightning and totally destroyed. The ground for many feet around the structure was furrowed by the bolt as if with a plow.

Roadway is Lighted.

Through the generosity of Charles J. Fisk the driveway leading from the road outside of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds, to the clubhouse, is now lighted with oil lamps of the most approved pattern. This has always been a dark driveway and the improvement is greatly appreciated by those who visit the clubhouse in the evening.

LIGHTNING UP TO TRICKS

SPLINTERED THE FLAG POLE NEAR CITY HIGH SCHOOL SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Severe Thunder Storm Accompanied by Vivid Lightning and Slight Fall of Hailstones.

An electrical storm of more than usual intensity broke over this city about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Following the excessive heat rain came down in torrents and in outlying sections of the city a slight fall of hailstones is reported. The storm came up from the southeast and the accompanying lightning left in its wake many fantastic freaks.

The flag pole on the grounds of the City High School was struck at the top, knocking a big chunk out of the wood just below the ball. The current played all the way down the pole, cutting away slivers as it passed, till it finally entered the ground.

The lightning also struck a board in the Park fence near Campbell's hotel on Park avenue. It ran along the barb wire on the top of the fence, played down another board, knocking a big hole in it, and tore up big lumps of sod at the point where it disappeared into the earth. A kennel situated near the fence, in which was fastened a dog belonging to Mr. Campbell, was overturned, and the chain holding the canine was snapped in twain. The dog ran howling down the street, but escaped the shock without injury.

ALL CASES OF DEAFNESS OR HARD HEARING ARE NOW CURABLE by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable. HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY. F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 26, 1901. Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment, and I feel sure it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours, F. A. WERMAN, 736 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

BURGLARS AT WORK AGAIN

Visited Two City Homes and One in the Borough, Capturing Some Booty.

SEEN BY MR. MINTZ.

Cash and Jewelry Taken From a Home on South Avenue—Working in Herman Mintz's Butcher Shop When He Walked In—Home on Craig Place Also Entered.

After a fairly long period of inactivity, burglars again resumed work in this city [July] 2. Two places were visited but at neither was anything of great value secured. The intended victim of one of them secured a good description of the prowler by which the police hope to land him behind the bars.

The home of James Kiley, who lives on South avenue, it is thought was entered about 12:30, as some of the family heard strange noises at that time. A loose catch on a porch window furnished means of ingress but only one room, that of Miss Kiley, was ransacked. Five dollars in money her gold watch and three rings were taken. As far as can be ascertained nothing else was taken from the premises.

At 2 o'clock Thursday, Mrs. Herman Mintz, who lives on West Third street, between Plainfield avenue and Liberty street, was awakened by noises coming from the butcher store beneath her apartments. She awakened her husband. Both got up and creeping stealthily to the shop, they surprised a tall, smooth faced individual, in the act of tapping the till.

The fellow had left a side door open for just such an emergency and when he discerned the attacking party he fled through it. Mintz grabbed up a cleaver and gave chase but was no match for the fleeing robber in point of swiftness. The latter leaped the Boulevard back fences with the agility of an athlete and disappeared on South Second street. Mintz secured the assistance of Patrolman Vanderweg and the two made a thorough search of the block but without success. The butcher saw enough of the man to describe him accurately and Mrs. Mintz is positive she would recognize him. Nothing was taken from the shop.

Chief Kiely is actively engaged on both cases and has secured clues enough to entitle him to hopes of success.

The borough also received a visit from knights of the jimmy. Burglars entered and looted the house of A. R. F. Randolph on Craig place last night or early this morning. They were evidently experts at the work as they performed the job in an up-to date manner, beginning operations on the third story and working towards the basement. They were daring individuals, since they stole Mr. Randolph's trousers out of the bedroom where he was sleeping on the third story. The job was not completed to a looter's taste, as evidence of a hurried departure on the part of the unwelcome visitors testify.

Mr. Randolph is an early riser and he is of the opinion that when he rose this morning at about 4 o'clock he disturbed the burglars in the midst of the job. An entrance was effected through a back window, as an elevation of twelve feet or thereabouts from the ground. It is evident that at least two men were engaged in the work. They left footprints on the back stairway outside, on the window sill, and on the carpet in the dining room.

The burglars were of the high-toned variety that have come into style recently. They took Mr. Randolph's white vest and threw away on the first story a hat they had taken from above because it had a slight dinge in it. They corralled four pair of shoes, Mr. Randolph's best suit of clothes, a purse containing about $21 and a small sum of money that Mrs. Randolph had left on the table, five pair of trousers, and altogether enough clothing, good and bad, without discrimination, to start a second hand establishment. No other articles have been missed as yet.

Dr. F. W. French has his office in the same house with Mr. Randolph but the burglars did not molest that part of the building.

Ready for New Pump.

The pit at the pumping station of the Plainfield Water Supply Company is now ready for the new pump. It is not expected, however, that the new pump will reach here before September.

New Stand in Use.

The Union News Company's new stand at the railroad station has been erected and Alfred Lacey, the agent, has taken possession.

BASEBALL ON THE FOURTH

HOPES AND ST. MARYS BOTH WON TWO GAMES FRIDAY.

Scotch Plains Also Netted Two Victories—The Scores of the Day's Games.

In addition to the other attractions in and about the city, Friday, baseball was very prominent. Two of the League teams and other nines held forth and attracted good crowds.

The principal games in the city were those of the Hope and Decatur teams which were played in connection with the County Fair in the morning. The Hope team came out ahead in both games although they were close and good exhibitions. Six to two was the score for the first and 8 to five for the afternoon.

The scores by innings were as follows:

	Morning.
Hope	1	1	0	0	1	2	0	1	0	—6
	Afternoon.
Decatur	0	0	1	0	2	0	0	0	5
Hope	2	0	0	1	1	0	0	4	—8

The St. Mary team went out of the city for both its morning and afternoon games. In the morning they crossed bats with the New Providence nine and defeated it by a score of 5 to 3. Scott and Keefe were in the box and Keene caught. The New Providence team made only three hits.

Score by innings:

St. Mary	0	2	0	0	2	0	0	1	0	—5
N. Prov.	0	0	0	0	0	0	2	1	0	—3

The Summits, A. C. was the opposing team in the afternoon and the St. Mary's walked away from them. They made 17 runs to the Summits' 3. Scott and Keene formed the battery, the former allowing but five hits.

Score by innings:

St. Mary	0	2	3	0	5	0	5	2	—17

Scotch Plains added two more to its long list of victories Friday when the team defeated the Rahway Field Club and the Garwood A. C.

The Rahway Field Club was taken into camp in the morning by the score of 7 to 5. The score while close was never dangerous, as Harvey, of the locals, pitched a steady game and kept the hits scattered and did not give a man a base on balls. In the afternoon the Garwoods, the only club which has defeated the team this season, were the visitors, and the team played to redeem itself, and succeeded, shutting the visitors out, while they batted and ran bases like veterans.

Following are the line-ups of the two games:

Plans for Chair Factory.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane granted a permit Thursday afternoon to James Craig, of West Front street, for the erection of a chair factory on North Front street, near Jefferson avenue. The new building will be 32 feet front by 80 feet deep, a frame structure, two stories high. Frank Stites will do the masonry work and Edward Lockheard has the contract for the carpentering.

Benefit of His Mother.

For the benefit of the mother of the late Thomas Flynn, who previous to his death a few days ago had been an employe at the Hibbard-Rodman-Ely Safe Works, the men on the night force of that industry have recently subscribed $26.50. Part of the amount was spent in flowers, but the balance, $22.50, was turned over to the bereaved parent.

Mother Always Reaps It Handy.

"My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains and general ill health due primarily to indigestion," says L. W. Spalding, Verona, Mo. "Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now, at the age of seventy-six, eats any thing she wants, remarking that she fears no bad effects as she has her bottle of Kodol handy." Don't waste time doctoring symptoms. Go after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol tones the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. L. W. Randolph.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 12—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Constant companionship.—John xiv, 1-20; Matt. xxviii, 20.

No words of Christ perhaps have been dearer to His people in all ages than the last ones to His disciples, "Lo, I am with you alway." Nor did Christ mean by these words that He would be in their memories, influencing them and sustaining them. He spoke of real, personal companionship that was to be fulfilled by the sending of the Holy Ghost, who was to be to the disciples in spirit what He had been to them in the flesh—their consciously present helper, instructor and guide.

The disciples realized afterward to have had a vivid realization of the constant presence of Christ. He fulfilled His promise of being with them always and of not leaving them comfortless in their own personal experience. Peter and John and after them Paul, the apostle born out of due season, had a realizing sense of Christ's constant presence. Paul speaks of "Christ in us" and says, "I live, yet not I; Christ liveth in me." And the experience of the great apostles have not been unlike those of the most lowly followers of Christ. All have been cheered and comforted and filled with hope by the realization of the abiding presence of the Master, in accordance with His promise.

The companionship of Christ, being constant, extends to all times in this life. "Lo, I am with you alway," He says, "even unto the end of the world." The most important part of Christ's constant companionship so long as we live in this world. Adversity may come, and as a result of it our earthly companions may forsake us, but not so the Lord Jesus Christ. He is with us in adversity, in prosperity; in sorrow, in joy— always! This fact should be and is to all who realize it a great comfort and a great blessing. We need Christ's constant presence that we may meet the trials and temptations of life about us and should therefore cultivate a realising sense of His abiding presence.

Christ's companionship, being constant, is assured to us at death. How this promise is applied to death was realized in Stephen! He "saw the heavens opened and Christ standing at the right hand of God;" and seeing Christ and being sustained by Him, he faced death without trembling and without fear. Such also is the effect of Christ's companionship at the end of life. Being assured of His presence at that time no Christian need view death with alarm. Death loses its sting and the grave its victory in the assured companionship of Christ.

Christ's companionship, being constant, extends throughout all eternity. "Today thou shalt be with me in paradise," said Christ to the repentant thief, and Paul declares that after the resurrection we shall be "ever with the Lord." Thus the chain is complete. Christ is ours and we are His, here and hereafter, now and forever.

Endeavor Home For Japan.

While on my trip around the world I visited Nagasaki, Japan, and while there became much impressed with the work of the Christian Endeavor or Seaman's home, says Harry Steele Morrison in The Christian Endeavor World. A friend in Manila had advised me to visit the place, and when I inquired for it the landing stage I had no difficulty in finding a jinrikisha man *to take me there. It is centrally lo*cated near the docks, where sailors land from the ships in the harbor, and it is admirably adapted for the work it does. It is the only charity of its kind in the world. The home was started on a small scale at its present site and was gradually improved until at present it is able to do a wonderful work among the soldiers and sailors who come ashore from foreign ships in Nagasaki harbor. The sleeping accommodation consists of seventy-five beds, and when these are all taken the visitors are satisfied with a "shakedown" on the floor. In the dining room more than 50,000 meals have been served, and it is the only place in Nagasaki where a sailor can get a good meal at a reasonable price. From 600 to 700 meals a day can be served.

A Promise of What May Be Done.

The church has grown. The religious and spiritual condition of the people has improved. But what has been done is only a promise of what may be done. We are by no means yet measuring up to what we are capable of doing in the Lord's service, but we are moving in the right direction. Our present enthusiasm for missions will not die out. It can be increased. And what we need is a comity of feeling, a spirit of unity and co-operation. Love to God, zeal, enthusiasm and love to our fellow men will bring the latter to the cross of Jesus Christ.—Reformed Church Messenger.

Epitaph.

Life called to me—a changeful call
Of joy, of sorrow, and of woe;
Each day I pondered, "Shall I make My answer 'Yes' or 'No?'"

Death called to me—a wondrous call,
So sweet, so calm, so clear!
I did not wait to question it,
But quickly answered, "Here!"

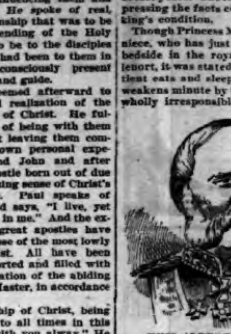
SAXON MONARCH DYING.

Passing Away of the Venerable King Albert Is Momentarily Expected by His Court.

Saxony momentarily awaits the news of the death of King Albert, its venerable monarch. His majesty has suffered from violent attacks of hemorrhage, to which he has been subjected of late years. The local papers are suppressing the facts concerning the aged king's condition.

Though Princess Mathilde, the king's niece, who has just returned from his bedside in the royal palace of Sibyllenort, it was stated that while the patient eats and sleeps well, his vitality weakens minute by minute. He is also wholly irresponsible for his actions.



KING ALBERT OF SAXONY
(Venerable Monarch Who Is Now Lying at the Point of Death.)

The Saxon diet, which is scheduled to close, is unable to do so without the king's signature. His majesty, in his dazed and dreamy state, refused to sign the decree, declaring it unnecessary. Court gossip asserts that a certain medical empiric, Dr. Goessel, has promised to keep the king alive by means of a gelatinous preparation, the active principle of which is a vegetable alkaloid derived from an unknown weed. This drug, it is said, is being administered to the king without his knowledge in the tea he drinks.

Many women of fashion, in anticipation of the king's death, have already orderd mourning.

Albert, the reigning king of Saxony, was born in 1828. He is the eldest son of King Johann and of Queen Amalie, daughter of King Maximilian I. of Bavaria. He succeeded to the throne in 1873; married, in 1853, Karola, daughter of Prince Gustav of Wasa, and will probably be succeeded by his brother, Prince George of Saxony, whose eldest daughter, Princess Mathilde, has been devoted to the king during his illness.

The royal house of Saxony is one of the oldest reigning families in Europe. It dates back to 1089, and is closely related to the royal houses of Prussia and Great Britain. King Albert is the possessor of rich estates in his own right, and enjoys a civil list of $750,000 annually.

POPULAR IN WASHINGTON.

Capital Society Is Pleased with Mr. Herbert's Appointment as British Ambassador.

Hon. Michael Herbert, secretary of the British Embassy at Paris, has been appointed to succeed the late Lord Pauncefote as British ambassador at Washington. As Sir Edward Monson, ambassador to France, is now absent from his post, Mr. Herbert is charge d'affaires and performing the duties of his chief.

Mr. Herbert is the brother of the earl of Pembroke and has been long in the diplomatic service. In 1888-9 he was charge d'affaires at Washington, returning in 1892-3 as secretary of the legation. Since then he has been stationed at The Hague, at Constantinople, at Rome, and lastly at Paris.

Before the new ambassador at Washington takes up his duties the salary attached to the position will probably be put upon a par with the highest paid in Great Britain's diplomatic service—namely, that which is paid the ambassador at Paris, £9,000 ($43,000) a year.

Hon. Mrs. Michael Henry Herbert, wife of the new ambassador, was formerly Miss Leila Wilson, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, of New York. Her marriage to Mr. Herbert, then charge d'affaires at Washington, was one of the brilliant events of the season of 1888. Two sons have been born to them—Sidney Herbert and Michael George Herbert. The elder is at school in England, and the younger is now at school near Paris. Mrs. Herbert is a brilliant and accomplished woman, and an excellent linguist. She is a sister of Mrs. Ogden Goelet and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. Her only brother, Mr. Richard T. Wilson, Jr., married recently Miss Marion Mason, of Boston.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 12, "Evangelizing the World in This Generation"—Isa. lxi, 1-4; John xvii, 6-8, 18-20. Read Matt. vii.

What are the views of the leaders of the church upon the possibility of evangelizing the world in this generation? It depends largely upon their point of view.

Some think the gospel is to be preached among all nations not with the expectation that any great numbers will be converted, but that it shall be a witness against them. This is in the spirit of denunciation and with the idea of their destruction rather than their salvation.

Others are sanguine that all that is needed is sufficient numbers of missionaries and money, and the great bulk of heathenism can be reached and converted to Jesus Christ.

Still others see the gospel penetrating slowly but surely the mass of the heathen peoples, winning some converts, gradually breaking down prejudices and opposition and little by little lifting those it touches into new life of spirit and into a different grade of social civilization. The advances of Japan since Commodore Perry entered Yokohama harbor in 1854 point eloquently to the power of the gospel to *renovate an antique and effete civiliza*tion if the people have the virility for recovery and renovation. The case of Hawaii also shows how untrue is the impossibility of rescuing a race when it has once lost its vitality by vice, even though the multitudes of its members may be individually Christianized. The romance of the lifting of Uganda above the most debased and cannibal nation of barbarians can be evangelized and turned into new courses in a brief period if only the heroic endurance of witnesses for the truth can be secured at the first. No age has shown more steadfast devotion to Jesus than that under fiercest and deadliest persecutions than has the last half of the past century. No land has seen martyr blood more freely shed than this region of central Africa, which but a few years since was unheard of by the Christian church. Stanley found it. The chief asked for teachers of the Bible. They went. The people listened, believed and turned to God in great numbers. Opposers entered and poisoned the minds of some. Persecutions arose, and hundreds were slain, suffering death to forsaking their Saviour. Again the tide turned. This time it sets with a strong flood toward liberty of worship and purity of faith. Uganda is now the banner among the lands which are Christianized.

The story of Fiji and Tonga and the other south sea islands ought not to be forgotten. But a brief time ago they were cannibal islands. Now there is no land more hospitable and morally elevated and religious.

How India is awakening! Long years have been spent in preparatory work. This needs to be constantly kept in mind in estimating results. Now the harvest is more abundant than the workers can properly care for. Thousands are asking for baptism whom we have no teachers for and so dare not receive as yet.

The great need is an awakening of the church in the home field to supply more abundantly the means for schools, hospitals and preaching places and support for the needed workers.

How God Helps Us.

"God is my helper" is a truth as old as the Bible and confirmed by myriads of human experiences. But it is important for us to know how our loving Father helps us, for we may expect things that He never grants and lose things that He offers to give us. There are a right way and a wrong way of looking at God's dealings; the one sets us to murmuring and complaining, the other gives us a wonderful uplift. If we looked at God as always wise and always loving and always holy, we should know, in the first place, that He often helps us by a sharp discipline that tries us most terribly. It helps the grass on my lawn in summer to put the mower over it, and it helps my grapevines to apply the pruning knife. As head winds make a steamer's fires burn more briskly under the boilers, so adversity often drives a true Christian ahead in the spiritual life. Everything that makes you and me purer, humbler, braver, stronger or holier is a mighty help, and if we keep the eye of faith open we shall see a loving God behind the pruning knife and behind the furnace of affliction.—Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler in Evangelist.

Life an Easy Lesson.

These hurrying days, these busy times of ours, are wasted when they take our hearts away from patient gentleness and give us fame for love and gold for kisses. Some day when our hungry souls will seek for bread our selfish god will give us a stone. Life is not a deep, profound, perplexing problem. It is a simple, easy lesson, such as any child may read. You cannot find its solution in the ponderous tomes of the old fathers, the philosophers, the theorists. It is not on your bookshelves, but in the warmest corner of the most unlettered heart it glows in letters that the blindest may read, a sweet, plain, simple, easy, loving lesson. And when you have learned it, brother of mine, the world will be better and happier.—R. J. Burdette.

Little Things.

If you would advance in true holiness, you must aim steadily at perfection in little things.—Abbe Guillore.

PICNICKED ON RIVER BANK

PRIMARY TEACHERS' UNION ENJOYED AN OUTING AT CRANFORD.

Party of Sixty Went by Trolley July 2, Morning—Had a Delightful Time.

The members of the Plainfield Primary and Junior Sunday-school Teachers' Union, to the number of sixty, enjoyed their annual picnic July 2, at Cranford. The trip to the latter place and return was made by trolley, the party leaving Plainfield in the morning at 9:30 o'clock.

Upon the invitation of Mrs. Brundage, of Cranford, a member of the union, the members were given the freedom of a pleasant grove near the Cranford river, where a most pleasant time was had. The time was occupied in playing games and in boating on the river, while at noon a bountiful repast was served.

A feature of the dinner was the cutting of a large cake which was baked by Mrs. M. C. Dobbins. Inside was placed a piece of money and the one securing the same is to bake a cake for the next picnic. Miss Florence Serrell was the lucky one to get the money. Through the hospitality of Mrs. Brundage the members enjoyed ice cream, which was a delightful climax to the excellent dinner.

The union remained at the grove until nearly 8:30 o'clock in the afternoon, when the return trip was made. All expressed their kind appreciation to Mrs. Brundage for her kindness and generous hospitality, and it was the hope that some day the union might return for another picnic.

NO FIRES ON THE FOURTH

INDEPENDENCE DAY WAS FREE FROM FIRES IN CITY AND BOROUGH.

One Alarm Sounded in City, But Department Didn't Turn Out—Borough's Single Alarm.

Not for many years has the Plainfield fire department had such a quiet Fourth of July as it enjoyed Friday. The apparatus did not have to go out for a single blaze.

One alarm was actually sent in from box 13, corner of Front and Somerset streets, for a slight ignition of the awning over the entrance to Blatz's hotel, but owing to a short circuit, the whistle failed to sound more than once, and the apparatus did not turn out. At any rate the services of the firemen would have been superfluous, as the blaze was easily quenched. Friday marked a record Fourth in that direction, probably a matter of luck more than anything else.

Over in the borough there was a similar lack of things doings in the way of fires. Just as the holiday came into existence, between 12 and 1 o'clock in the morning, the department was called out for an alarm from box 185. The cause of the alarm was merely a bonfire at the corner of Fairview and Watchung avenues, and although the department responded promptly its services were unnecessary.

The remains of a burning fire cracker alighted on the awning over R. W. Barnes' grocery store on Park avenue at noon yesterday and caused a slight ignition of the canvass. The blaze was whacked out with a broom before much damage was done.

TWO COMMITTEES.

One is Looking After the Pulpit Supplies and the Other for a Pastor.

The First Baptist church has a pulpit supply committee which is looking after the supplies until a successor to Rev. Dr. J. J. Yerkes is secured. Those secured by this committee to fill the pulpit are not considered as candidates for the regular pastorate. Another committee of six has been appointed to secure a pastor and this committee is entirely independent of the pulpit supply committee. As yet the committee has not secured a regular pastor has taken no action.

Thanked for Assistance.

The pledges in Trinity Reformed church on Sunday morning, June 22, for the Anti-Saloon League amounted to $74. They were forwarded to Rev. Dr. Brittain, of Newark, who occupied the pulpit at Trinity Reformed church on that Sunday. At the prayer meeting in the church last evening a letter from Dr. Brittain was read in which he thanked the members for the generous response.

Thirteen of Each.

A rather peculiar incident occurred at Jersey City last week. On Thursday there were thirteen weddings in that city and on the day following there were thirteen applications for divorce filed with the County Clerk.

Dunellen Lot Included.

Among the parcels of real estate conveyed by John M. Burke, the New York millionaire, to a corporation for the founding of a home for convalescents, is a plot of land situated at Dunellen.

MILITARY CODE FOR THE NATIONAL GUARD

A Special Commission is Now at Work on It and Will Report This Fall.

TO END CONTROVERSIES.

WILL BE BASED ON THE MUCH AMENDED MILITARY LAW.

Where There is no Law, the Regular Army Regulations Will be Adopted as Nearly as Possible—Law Has Many Amendments.

A special military commission, composed of Brigadier-General Edward A. Campbell, commanding the First brigade; Brigadier-General George E. P. Howard, Judge Advocate General and Major Thomas D. Landon, are now continuously sitting preparing a military code for the National Guard of New Jersey. This commission will *continue to sit until the end of sum*mer, and will by that time have swept away all clouds, doubts and the possibilities of future military controversy.

It is generally conceded that the National Guard has been disorganized because of too much reorganization, but it is now expected that the revised military law and a competent commission to reduce the provisions of this law to a comprehensive code that can be put into the hand of every National Guardsman so that he will be able to intelligently understand his line of duty, will work many changes.

It was ex-Governor Voorhees, when Commander-in-Chief, who gave the National Guard of the State its first reform squeeze. He moved from a civilian's standpoint, and his changes turned the guard somewhat topsy-turvy because of the stringency of his reforms.

The recent Legislature passed an act that amends in numerous places the general Military Act of 1900, dealing principally with muster, court martial and other changes necessary to conform the National Guard to the general army. There have been so many changes of recent years that a member of the National Guard never knew when he was right, for even officers are not adept in comprehending the phraseology of the law.

The muchly amended military law is to be the basis for the code which is to be prepared. Where there is no law the regular army regulations will be considered and adopted as near as possible. When this work is finished it will be submitted to the Commander-in-Chief and the State Military Board for adoption. Every officer and member of the guard will be expected to do his duty by that code without any of the many discussions that have jarred National Guard organization.

There is no provision made for the compensation of the members of this military commission. They are entitled to officer's pay for each day given to the work, and it is altogether possible that on the order of the Commander-in-Chief extra pay can be allowed.

NO LOCATION FOR FOUNTAIN

NO PLACE AT STATION WHERE IT WOULD NOT BE IN THE WAY.

Railroad Company Will Remove the Low Wall If Hackmen Are Kept Back Proper Distance.

The councilmanic street committee has been in communication with General Manager W. G. Besler, of the New Jersey Central, regarding a place on the company's property for the location of the drinking fountain now on North avenue. There does not seem to be any place near the station where the fountain would not be in the way more or less and the committee will probably have to seek another place.

Mr. Besler has practically promised the committee that if the city will see that the hackmen at the North Avenue station are kept back the proper distance so that other people can drive back and forth freely, the company will remove the low stone wall in the middle of the avenue. This has always been a source of annoyance, especially at night as strangers not knowing about it are likely to run into the obstruction. The committee promised Mr. Besler that the hackmen will be kept in line and the probabilities are the wall will come down.

No More Vaccination.

The Board of Health has notified the police department that for the remainder of the summer no more prisoners at police headquarters will be vaccinated, as has been the custom since the recent smallpox scare. Altogether about 200 prisoners and detained witnesses were inoculated.

Mrs. Robert Lowry, of Putnam avenue, has been spending a few days in Germantown, Pa., visiting friends.

TENNIS AND GOLF DIVIDED THE DAY'S HONORS

Enjoyable Programmes Marked the Passing of Independence Day at the Homes of the Three Local Tennis and Golf Clubs Friday.

PARK CLUB'S BIG TIME.

TENNIS, RECEPTION, FIREWORKS AND A DANCE WERE THE ATTRACTIONS AT THE PARK CLUB.

One of the Most Successful Celebrations of the Fourth Marked Yesterday at the Park Club—A Great Crowd Was in Attendance—The Details of the Various Amusements.

Never has a more successful Fourth of July been observed at the Park Club. Friday's round of entertainment was one continued success. All day the clubhouse and grounds were thronged with members and guests who enjoyed the tennis and informal reception of the afternoon, were mightily pleased by the display of fireworks in the evening and found in the dance which followed a fitting climax for all the pleasant times of the holiday.

The tennis began in the morning. A club tournament was started sometime ago, of which mention has already been made in The Daily Press. The concluding matches in the second round were played, Clifford M. McGee defeating Charles Dupee 6-2, 6-3, and Dr. H. K. Carroll defeating Morgan T. Townsend, 6-2, 7-5. Wallace Guilford and J. I. Taylor had already won their matches in the second round and had met in the semi-finals, Guilford winning 7-5, 6-3. In the afternoon, McGee defeated Dr. Carroll in the semi-finals 6-3, 6-2. The greatest match of the day came in the finals between McGee and Guilford. Both men were at their best and the play was very exciting. It was witnessed by a large audience. McGee won in three straight sets. The scores, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4, do not convey any idea of the closeness of the playing.

Never before has there been such a turnout at one of the afternoon receptions of the club. The pagoda and gallery were crowded and many others assembled on the lawn, occupying all the seats which had been arranged for the evening's fireworks. In the pagoda, Mrs. Wallace Guilford and Mrs. William L. Saunders received, assisted at the tea table by Mrs. A. E. Faber, Jr., and Mrs. J. H. Howell. The young women who assisted in serving the guests were the Misses Virginia Hegeman, Saidee Mae Howell, Nellie Valiant and Laura Long. Decorations of flags and Japanese lanterns added to the festive scene.

While seats had been prepared for five hundred, the members and their friends turned out for the evening's fireworks in such numbers as to fill them all and while fully two hundred more remained standing. The display of fireworks was the finest that the club has ever given and it has always been famed for its fine exhibitions. A little excitement was occasioned several times when the sparks drifted down into the crowd but there were no serious results, only a general scattering. Fine rockets and large calibre bombs were among the best of the programme of fireworks although the batteries and mines were well applauded.

For an hour the display lasted and then the final set piece, "Good Night," banked by batteries of Roman candles, ended it all. During that time, the orchestra, which had been playing during the afternoon, rendered various selections, occupying an upper room in the clubhouse.

After many of the guests had departed, the younger set gathered for an informal dance in the ball room, which had been prettily decorated with flags and bunting. For those who did not care to dance the gallery and pagoda were cool and inviting. The patronesses of the dance were Mrs. Augustus Van Deventer, Mrs. Henry A. McGee, Mrs. George D. Hallock, Mrs. Walter M. McGee, Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. J. H. Howell and Mr. S. St. John McCutchen.

Poisoning the System.

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dullness and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. DeWitt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. L. W. Randolph.

Miss Emma Manning has returned home after a short visit in Metuchen.

THE PARK GOLFERS OUT.

COMPETITIONS WERE HELD MORNING AND AFTERNOON AT THE PARK GOLF CLUB COURSE.

Bogey Handicap of Morning Won by S. St. John McCutchen—The Holiday Cup in the Afternoon Went to Roberts de S. Newhall—An Informal Reception Held in the Afternoon.

Independence Day attracted many of the golfers to the course of the Park Golf Club, Friday. A special programme had been prepared and the events of the day served to furnish plenty of exciting competition. Honors for the day were divided between S. St. John McCutchen and Roberts deS. Newhall.

There was something new in the bogey handicap ball sweepstakes which occupied the morning hours. "Colonel" proved too strong an opponent for everybody except S. St. John McCutchen, who finished 1 up. The other scores, with the handicaps, were S. Townsend, 26, 3 down; W. R. Faber, 28, 2 down; A. B. Laing, 18, 3 down; Roberts deS. Newall, 12, 4 down; Wm. A. Townsend, 19, 4 down; Charles W. McCutchen, 22, 8 down; Charles B. Morse, 20, 9 down; Chas. L. Nichols, 27, 9 down; E. M. Honeyman, 35, 11 down; L. W. Hallock, 12, 14 down.

The chief event of the afternoon was the competition for the Holiday cup. S. St. John McCutchen and Roberts DeS. Newhall tied for first place and Newhall won on the play-off. The scores better than 100 were:

	G	H	N
Roberts de S. Newhall	95	12	83
S. St. J. McCutchen	102	19	83
J. O. McKelvey	107	22	85
Wm. A. Townsend	105	19	86
W. Vaughn McGee	116	30	86
H. Studdiford	117	30	87
Dr. A. W. Anderson	114	27	87
J. H. Simpson	98	10	88
H. C. Wells	113	25	88
Charles B. Morse	109	20	89
Chas. L. Goodrich	121	30	91
Samuel Townsend	121	30	91
L. W. Hallock	107	12	95

While the last players for the Holiday cup were finishing, an approaching and putting contest was started on the ninth green. It resulted in a tie between Mrs. George D. Hallock and Leslie W. Hallock and Miss Lydia Loiseaux and Roberts de S. Newhall, both pairs holing out their three approaches in ten strokes. Mrs. Hallock and G. D. Hallock won the play-off.

The other couples which participated in the contest were Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, Miss May S. Shreve and Henry C. Wells, Miss Mabel VanDeventer and S. St. John McCuthen, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Miss Laura Long and William R. Faber, Miss Adele Kirby and William A. Townsend.

An informal reception was held at the clubhouse during the afternoon. Mrs. George D. Hallock and Mrs. Samuel Townsend received.

FOR PRIZE ESSAYS.

Linden Bridgeman Won the Prize Offered to Class of 1902, P. H. S.

The prize offered by Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany to the members of the graduating class of Plainfield High School for the best essay on the probation officer, has been awarded to Linden W. Bridgeman; honorable mention, Miss Mabel Jenkins. The judges were Miss VanBoskerk and Judge Runyon. The essays have been sent to the office of the New Jersey Review of Charities and Corrections to compete for the prize offered through the Review recently for the best essay on the subject from members of graduating classes in New Jersey.

NEW WELL DRIVEN.

Now Old Well, Near the Cemetery, Has Gone Dry.

Michael Geary, who lives near the Hillside cemetery, has just completed driving a well on his property. The well is 165 feet deep and those who have tasted the water claim it to be of the finest quality. In connection with this there has been a shortage of water at the house in the cemetery grounds, which some claim is due to the new driven well. During the past few days the well in the cemetery grounds has been dry. Whether Mr. Geary's well has affected the other one is not known definitely, but many believe it has.

Miss Edna VanNest is entertaining company from out of town.

DAY AT HILLSIDE CLUB.

GOLF, TENNIS AND A DINNER-DANCE WERE PARTICIPATED IN AT THE HILLSIDE CLUB COURSE.

Hillside Members Played for Club Championship and the Kickers Handicap—The Holiday Cup Was Won—Handicap Tennis Was Also a Feature—A Successful Dinner-Dance.

Friday was an ideal one on the course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and with the course and greens in the best of condition everything was favorable for a perfect day of enjoyment. There was a very large number of players entered in the various events and good scores were the rule.

In the morning there was the qualifying round for the Club Championship cup and a kicker's handicap. This attracted an unusually large field. The scores counted in both events, although in the championship contest the play was from scratch. H. C. Munger won the kicker's handicap with a net score of 88, that being the score selected by the committee between the scores of 75 and 90.

Those who qualified for the Championship cup were W. L. Glenney, F. O. Reinhart, Frank Talmadge, Howard deP. Wright, Thomas R. Van Boskerck, R. S. Rowland, Morris J. Dumont and Robert Abbott. In the first round in the afternoon the play resulted as follows: Reinhart defeated Geo. deS. Newhall tied for first place and Newhall won on the play-off. The scores better than 100 were:

	G	H	N
Geo. T. VanBoskerck	91	15	76
F. O. Reinhart	78	0	78
D. H. Barrows	90	10	80
W. F. Murray	95	15	80
R. F. Murray	88	7	81
W. L. Glenney	84	2	82
P. L. Schoonmaker	92	10	82
G. A. Chapman	100	18	82
C. C. Burke, Jr.	106	20	86
Walter Peterson	97	12	85
D. W. Taylor	106	20	86
S. H. Patterson	115	27	88
W. L. Murray	107	15	92
H. D. Bulkley	108	10	98

The social features at the club during the day were greatly enjoyed by all. At noon there were fifty who remained for luncheon, while for the dinner dance, the second of the series, given in the evening, there were sixty who remained for dinner. The music for the dance was furnished by Pound, of New York, and the orchestra also played during the latter part of the afternoon. The clubhouse was prettily decorated with lanterns and American flags and presented an attractive as well as patriotic appearance.

Another attraction at the club was the tennis tournament for the Fourth of July cups, men's singles and doubles handicap. The doubles were completed, but the singles will be finished today. In the doubles there was only one match in the preliminary round Howard Huntington and R. A. Beebe winning from Hartley Mellick and D. Balkley by default. In the semi-finals A. R. Chamberlain and A. D. Beers defeated Howard Huntington and R. A. Beebe, 6-2, 6-1; and F. K. Fish, Jr., and F. W. Goddard defeated G. H. Taylor and W. S. Tyler, 6-3, 6-1. In the finals Fish and Goddard defeated Chamberlain and Beers, 6-2, 6-2, 6-0.

In the preliminary round for the singles F. W. Goddard defeated R. A. Beebe, 6-4, 6-2; Hartley Mellick defeated Gifford Cooley, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2; A. D. Beers defeated Arthur Lovell, 6-2, 2-6, 6-0; G. H. Taylor defeated F. K. Fish, Jr., 7-5, 1-6, 6-0. In the first round W. S. Tyler defeated Howard Huntington, 6-1, 6-3, and D. Bulkley defeated A. H. Chamberlain, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2. The remaining matches in the first round, as well as the semi-finals, will probably be played today.

Later in the afternoon there was an approaching and putting contest and clock golf, a large number of entries being made for both events. Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Patterson won the approaching and putting contest with a score of 7. This is the second time this year that a similar score has been made. This gives them a preliminary win for the Schoonmaker cups. The clock golf contest was won by Miss VanHerwerden with a score of 26. Her nearest opponent was Mrs. Edward J. Patterson with a score of 27.

TO BUILD A NEW CHURCH

BUT THE SWEDISH PILGRIM CHURCH WILL CHANGE ITS LOCATION.

Decided Thursday Night to Build on New Street Instead of Plainfield Avenue.

The members of the Swedish Pilgrim church met Thursday evening and transacted business relative to selecting a new site for the church and receiving bids for the erection of the same. A lot was previously purchased on Plainfield avenue but afterward this was not considered a desirable location. Several days ago another lot at the corner of West Sixth and New streets was offered by C. W. McCutchen, and it was decided to take this one. The lot costs $1,000, but Mr. McCutchen contributes half that sum to the church. In the mean time an effort will be made to dispose of the other property on Plainfield avenue.

The bids for the work were then opened. Herman Hansen, of East Front street, was the successful bidder, his figures being $3,200. James Manning, the other bidder, submitted the figure of $3,500, but changes were made in the plans whereby the work will come within Mr. Hansen's figures. The latter takes the whole contract. The painting will be done by H. Zegar, of Perth Amboy.

The church will be chiefly of frame construction, gothic style, with tower on the corner. There will be a large auditorium, a lecture room, a gallery in the main room, a study and a kitchen. The interior will be furnished in a plain, but attractive style and everything will be constructed in the most approved manner. It is the intention to start the work on the new church within a few days. The pastor, Rev. O. G. Norseen, was authorized to sign the contracts, which has already been done.

Dropped From K. of C.

Daniel Colwell, of New Haven, national secretary of the Knights of Columbus, has just received word of the decision reached by the committee on appeals in the cases of persons whose membership in the order was questioned because they were in the liquor business. About seventy-five cases were before the committee and about fifty men were adjudged violators of the liquor law provisions and their names were stricken from the rolls.

LITERARY.

With the present number the Forum begins not only a new volume but a new series, having been transformed from a monthly into a quarterly. The general character of the magazine is the same and its high standard is maintained, but its purposes are more specifically those of a review and outlook. It is divided into nine departments, each conducted by a specialist who writes a critical exposition of such events of the last three months as come within his own sphere. These reviews include in most cases estimates of general tendencies as well as comments on specific incidents. In the issue for July-September "American Politics" are discussed by Henry Litchfield West, "Foreign Affairs" by A. Maurice Low, "Finance" by A. D. Noyes, "Applied Science" by Henry Harrison Suplee, "The American Drama" by John Corbin, "Literature" by Frank Jewett Mather, Jr., "Architectural Art" by Prof. A. D. F. Hamlin, "Educational Events" by Cesian K. Lang, and "Educational Research" by the editor, Dr. J. M. Rice. In addition to these reviews, the new number contains three special articles of the type that appeared in the former series, namely, "Chinese Exclusion," by Hon. Charles Denby, "Germany as a World Power," by Wolf von Schierbrand, and "Sir Walter Besant," by Prof. W. P. Trent. It should be mentioned that the size of the magazine has been permanently increased from 128 pages to 160.

The July McClure's is a notable number. Three of its contributions are of national importance — two sketches of Admiral Sampson, by ex-Secretary Long and Captain A. T. Mahan respectively, and an article entitled, "Fighting Life in the Philippines," by Dr. Henry C. Rowland.

Extremely instructive as well as entertaining is Sterling Heilig's account of "The Over-Sea Experiments of Santos Dumont," being a record of his flights over the Mediterranean at Monte Carlo, by an eye-witness, a personal friend, and an authority on aerial navigation.

Miss Stone's third paper on her experiences among the brigands is devoted to the birth of Mme. Tsilka's baby and the incidents of the first weeks of its life in captivity. Cyrus Townsend Brady contributes the fourth of his Border Fights and Fighters series in a splendid sketch of "George Rogers Clark and the Great Northwest."

The second instalment of Booth Tarkington's new novel of Indiana, "The Two Vanrevels," goes to show still further that the author of "The Gentleman from Indiana" and "Monsieur Beaucaire" has lost nothing of his art of entertaining.

The short fiction, which is beautifully illustrated, is of most tempting diversity, and includes another of Mrs. Martin's delightful little stories of married life, "In the Married Quarters;" a Newfoundland fisherman's story, "The Fruits of Toil," by Norman Duncan; a bank story, "Our Red-Headed Kid," by Frederic Walworth; an Emmy Lou story, "A Ballad in Print o' Life," by George Madden Martin; and a story of farm Life in Missouri, "Mrs. Shanklin's Ambitions," by K. E. Young.

What makes the happy relation between man and woman, is an eternally interesting question, and a clever discussion of why marriages fail, presented by Rafford Pyke in his article "The Woman's Side," is certain to receive the very wide consideration which has been given to this author's previous articles on the discussion of woman versus man. The July Cosmopolitan seems to be almost equally divided in interest between men and women. "An Experiment in Domestic Finance" is another entirely novel article which will appeal to women, while some twenty pages devoted to the "Captains of Industry" will receive the consideration of men in all classes of business. The Cosmopolitan has undertaken to present a series of brief sketches of the men who are leaders in finance, manufactures, and commerce, not prepared in an offhand way, but by writers of the greatest ability who have an exact knowledge of their subjects. The series thus far produced has attracted the widest attention. The industrial changes which have of late been occurring with such rapidity have the widest possible interest for all classes. The knowledge of these men, their derivation, leading characteristics and weaknesses throws much light upon the news of the day in which their names constantly recur.

There are four particularly notable illustrated articles in The Outlook's Magazine Number for July. One of these is an appreciation or characterization of the newly crowned King of England, under the title "His Britannic Majesty." The writer is George W. Smalley, now the American correspondent of The London Times, and for many years the London correspondent of The New York Tribune. Another is called "A Hundred Years of West Point," and is written by James Barnes, the author of "Admiral Farragut" and other well-known books; it is devoted not so much to the history of the century the close of which has just been commemorated as West Point, as with the spirit and tradition of the place and the life of the students. The third article referred to is "Talk on Birds," by W. E. D. Scott, the curator of Ornithology of Princeton University; Mr. Scott has a remarkable collection of live birds as Princeton (some five hundred in all) and probably no other living American knows so much about the life and habits of song birds. There are several pictures by Bruce Horsfall, whose specialty is bird portraiture. Finally, of great industrial interest in the paper called "Our Ships of the Sea," by John R. Spears; it describes the immense advance made in ship building in this country lately, and is illustrated by many fine pictures, mostly photographs taken for this express purpose.

NO MORE WAR TAXES; WHAT CHANGES ARE

Most Important Changes in Revised Schedule of Internal Revenue Taxes.

THOSE NOW AFFECTED.

MOST IMPORTANT FEATURES REGARDING TAX ON BEER AND TOBACCO.

Among Taxes Repealed are Those on Brokers, Proprietors of Theatres and Circuses and Manufacturers and Dealers in Tobacco.

The war revenue taxes imposed by the national government under the law of 1898 to provide revenue for the Spanish-American war, ceased to exist July 1, when the act of Congress repealing the war revenue act went into effect.

The original law was amended a year ago and some of the taxes were abolished or the rate was reduced. All war taxes not abolished last year are now repealed and the new order of things has gone into effect.

The important changes in the law, as they affect this district, relate especially to the tax on beer and tobacco. The tax on beer is reduced from $1.60 per keg to $1 net, and the tax on tobacco and snuff, which was twelve cents less 20 per cent. per pound, equivalent of 9.6 cents, is reduced to six cents.

Among the taxes repealed are those on brokers, dealers in grain and securities, pawnbrokers, custom house brokers, proprietors of theatres, circuses, or all other similar exhibitions; proprietors of bowling alleys and billiard rooms, dealers in tobacco and snuff, manufacturers of tobacco and cigars, and manufacturers and packers or re-packers of mixed flour.

All taxes imposed under sections A and B are repealed. In section A is included the internal revenue tax on bonds or other certificates of indebtedness, stock certificates, sales or agreements of sale, on forms of association or copartnership, bills of exchange, inland and foreign, bills of lading, bond, contract, deeds of conveyance, certificate of entry or withdrawal of goods and passage tickets to any foreign ports.

The internal revenue tax on legacies is repealed, except that the tax on any legacy made by any person who died during the period of operation of the act, from July 13, 1898, to July 1, 1902, may still be collected and must be paid.

The revised list of articles subject to special taxes now in force is as follows:

	Rate
Brewers of less than 500 barrels	$ 50
Brewers of 500 barrels or more	100
Rectifiers of less than 500 barrels	100
Rectifiers of 500 barrels or more	200
Dealers, retail, liquor	25
Dealers, wholesale liquor	100
Dealers in malt liquors, wholesale	50
Dealers in malt liquors only, retail	20
Manufacturers of stills	50
And for each still manufactured	20
And for each worm manufactured	20
Retail dealers in oleomargarine	48
Wholesale dealers in oleomargarine	480
Manufacturers of oleomargarine	600
Manufacturers of filled cheese	400
Wholesale dealers in filled cheese	200
Retail dealers in filled cheese	12
Manufacturers and packers of mixed flour	12

Twenty items which were taxed under the act of July 13, 1898, were Tuesday expunged from special taxes and every item freed is tobacco in some form.

RAIN STOPPED THE GOLFERS

Large Fields Started, But Many at the Golf Clubs Failed to Turn in Scores.

HILLSIDE TEAM WON.

Defeated the Crack Team From St. Paul's School 25 to 5—Reinhart and Abbott for Club Championship—S. St. J. McCutchen Leads for President's Cup at Park.

A hot wave and a shower both combined against the local golfers, Saturday afternoon. The regular competitions were played nevertheless and the Hillside team managed to handily defeat the crack players of the famous St. Paul's School. Of next importance was the semi-final round for the Club Championship cup at the Hillside Club in which F. O. Reinhart and Robert Abbott qualified for the finals.

In the regular competitions Arthur Peterson and Robert Abbott carried off the first honors at the Hillside Club and S. St. John McCutchen the first honors at the Park Golf Club.

HILLSIDE CLUB.

While the rain reduced the number of contestanrs who turned in their scores at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Saturday afternoon, there was a large field to start. One of the chief attractions of the afternoon was the team match between Hillside and the team from St. Paul's School.

The visitors were outplayed throughout the contest, Hillside winning by the score of 25 to 5. Howard Wright and Robert Abbott each scored 8 points, while T. R. VanBoskerck made 7 points. N. P. Rogers, Jr., made the other two points. For the visitors, R. Storey Rowland, a member of the Hillside Club, scored 2 points, while Frank Talmadge, also of Hillside, failed to tally.

The scores were as follows:

Hillside.		St. Paul.
H. deP. Wright	8	Frank Talmadge	0
Robert Abbott	8	Wilbur, Jr.	0
W. L. Gleaney	0	R. S. Rowland	2
N. P. Rogers, Jr.	2	H. Griffin	0
Morris Dumont	0	B. Stockton	3
T. R. VanBoskerck	7	Scudder	0

The other event for the afternoon was the weekly play for the Golf Committee cup. The heavy rain interfered with this play and it was rather late when the competition was concluded. Robert Abbott won first honors. He now holds second place in the weekly competition, while H. F. Baker holds the lead.

The scores for the Golf Committee cup are as follows:

VanD. Hedges and Dudley H. Barrows will play the finals for the consolation cup.

PARK GOLF CLUB.

A good field of golfers turned out Saturday afternoon in the weekly competition for the President's cup at the links of the Park Golf Club. But just as things were going most happily, a brisk, young thunder shower wandered over the mountain. Of the score who started only eight finished and half that number completed their rounds in a drenching rain.

First honors for the day went to S. St. John McCutchen, increasing his lead for the trophy. Charles B. Morse, who was a close second, divided second honors with William R. Faber and still holds second place in the race. The course was in as good condition as on the Fourth. The great heat of the first part of the afternoon and the rain which followed were not conducive to low scores.

The scores, better than 100 net, were as follows:

Exciting Experience.

Arthur Leland, of Providence, R. I., has been spending several days with his mother in West Fifth street. He left Providence last Thursday on the steamer Massachusetts and early Friday morning the walking beam broke. The steamer had to be towed back to port, where a train was made up and the passengers did not get to New York until Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

During a violent thunder storm Saturday afternoon, lightning struck the barn of John Hartpence at Landsdown, Hunterdon county, and burned it to the ground, as well as a hay barrack near by. The loss was about $1,000 and the insurance was $400.

FOURTH AT THE NETHERWOOD

CULMINATING EVENT WAS THE PATRIOTIC BALL IN THE EVENING.

Tennis and Clock Golf Were Among the Attractions of the Day at That Hostelry.

The Fourth at the Hotel Netherwood was spent in a gala manner. There was a continual patriotic air about the house. In the morning the orchestra gave a concert with music appropriate to the day. The afternoon witnessed a tennis tournament and a generous patronage of clock-golf.

But it was in the evening that the greatest interest centered when the day's proceedings culminated with the grand patriotic ball, a function that had been eagerly looked forward to for the past week. Plainfield's society turned out in good force, and along with the hotel residents, kept up the dancing till the small hours of the morning. The music by the orchestra, under the direction of Frederick H. Landolt, was of the usual high order, and won many commendations from the assembly.

Those who found the atmosphere somewhat warm for the Terpsichorean art luxuriated amid the cool breezes that lingered around the piazza. That section of the house was indeed a favorite resort Men and women in evening dress sat around, giving the place an animated appearance. During the intermission all enjoyed the hospitality of the manager, when a delicious and cooling punch was served.

The decorations throughout were of an elaborate order. In the ball room over and around the windows hung boughs and leaves, while woodbine formed a green frame around and stretched diagonally across the mirrors. The mantel pieces were banked with pagonias, fuchias, geraniums, interspersed with varieties of ferns, with small American flags scattered effectively through the scheme.

The affair was the most successful function yet held at the Netherwood and surpassed anything of the kind ever given in Plainfield. This evening there will be the usual hop.

DOG NURSES CHICKS.

A Truly Remarkable Example of Brute Intelligence.

Odd Alliance Between a Dutiful Little Fox Terrier and a Clucking Old Hen as an Indian Poultry Farm.

George Ullrich, of Bammond, Ind., is the owner of a dog that is, perhaps, the most remarkable example of brute intelligence ever heard of outside the fairy books of Grimm and Andersen. Mr. Ullrich, who is a poultry raiser on a small scale, noticed a few days ago that one of his setting hens was in the habit of frequently leaving her nest and remaining away for a long time. Fearing that he might loose a brood of chickens through the hen's neglect, he set about to make arrangements for keeping the eggs warm during her absence, and to that end decided to transfer the nest to the basement, alongside the furnace.

Upon entering the henhouse, however, he discovered that his wishes had been anticipated by his pet dog, Princess, a female fox terrier, which he found crouching on the eggs. He endeavored to induce the animal to leave the nest, but she refused to do so until the hen returned to her duties.

This state of affairs continued until the eggs were hatched. The moment the hen would leave the nest the dog would dash into the henhouse and "sit" upon the eggs until the clucking biddy had finished her outing and was ready to assume her rightful place.

As soon as the chicks were out of the shell Princess asserted her right to share with the hen the care of the progeny.

Last week a reporter of the Chicago Record-Herald called at Mr Ullrich's home, which is situated on Conkey avenue, on the outskirts of Hammond, and found Princess out in the yard with her adopted young about her. A few yards away the hen clucked and clucked, but the chicks seemed to prefer the society of their foster mother.

The day was damp and cold and "as a hen gathereth her chicks under her wing" so Princess with gentle paw persuasion and nose was trying to cuddle the peeping brood into the shelter of her maternal breast.

To the reporter Mr. Ullrich said:

"I put 15 eggs under that hen, and every one hatched out a chicken. A pretty good record, wasn't it? But that was due to Princess. The eggs didn't have a chance to get cold or spoil. At first I was afraid the dog would break them, but when I saw how carefully she 'set' upon them I decided to let them alone. In fact, she was a better sitter than the hen."

Just then one of the chickens attempted to run away, when, quick as a flash, Princess opened her mouth and for a brief space it looked as though the dog had swallowed "a warm bird," but in an instant the chick was dropped to the ground unharmed. The canine instinct which prompts a mother dog to carry her young in her mouth had momentarily asserted itself.

"Don't be afraid," said Mr. Ullrich, in answer to the reporter's startled look of anxiety, "she does that often, but never hurts them."

As the newsgatherer made ready to depart a strange dog entered the yard.

"Now you will see some fun," said Mr. Ullrich.

But it was the hen that came to the rescue. With outstretched wings she flew at the invader and chased him ignominiously from the premises.

"Old Biddy has perfect confidence in Princess. But woe to any other dog that tries to come near," said Mr. Ullrich. "I have tried several times to wean her from the chicks by keeping her in the house, but it was of no use. The moment I would let her out she would make a dart for the henhouse and wine until I let her in. By and by the chicks will begin to scratch for themselves, and then I don't know what Princess will do."

Bullets Made of Garnets.

Bullets made of precious stones are rarities in warfare. But during the fighting on the Kashmir frontier, when the British troops defeated the rebellious Hunzas, the natives used bullets of garnets incased in lead. The British preserved many as curiosities.

Still Keeps Strange Vow.

Among the Boer prisoners at Bermuda is one whose hair now reaches his shoulders. At the beginning of the war he vowed he would not have his locks cut until the Dutch had conquered in South Africa.

GOOD JOB FOR NAST.

Cartoonist Now Is Consul General at Guayaquil, Ecuador.

Although Born Abroad He Is an American of the Highest Type—The Father of Pictorial Art in Weekly Journalism.

Thomas Nast, the veteran cartoonist, is again prominently before the public, having recently been appointed consul general to Guayaquil, Ecuador. Nast was born in Landau, Bavaria, in 1840. His father was a musician of ability, and held a position in the Bavarian army; but in '46, having received a timely warning of the approach of the revolution which later swept over Europe, he emigrated to America, where he became a member of the famous Philharmonic society, of New York city. The son, Thomas, was educated in the public schools of that city, and early displayed marked artistic ability. After a few months of study under Theodore Kaufman, he began to furnish sketches of Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, which accepted and appreciated his work from the first. Before he was 20 years of age the New York Illustrated News sent him to England to sketch the great international prize fight between Heenan and Sayers. Soon after that memorable affair, Mr. Nast went to Italy and joined the army of Garibaldi, and served throughout the victorious campaign in Sicily and Calabria. During this time he contributed numerous "battle pictures" to the illustrated press of New York, London and Paris, and as an aide on Gen. Garibaldi's staff he was entrusted with several diplomatic missions of importance.

Returning to the United States in 1861 with an experience and training enjoyed by no other American artist, he was well equipped to prove himself a factor in the stirring days of the civil war. He was connected with Harper's Weekly, and his work in that periodical soon placed it among the foremost journals of the day. Mr. Nast espoused the cause of the union, and it is said that President Lincoln once remarked that Mr. Nast's pictures were the best recruiting sergeants on the side of the north.

THOMAS NAST.
(First to Realize Power of Pictorial Art in Journalism.)

It was, however, during the reconstruction period, after the close of the war, that Mr. Nast did his most memorable and historic work. In the campaign against William M. Tweed and the political rings which had control of the various departments of the New York city government, his humorous cartoons exposing these frauds and corruptions so influenced public opinion that investigation was ordered and the rings were broken up. Tweed once remarked that he cared little for the published stories of his shortcomings, but he would admit that he was much afraid of Tom Nast's graphic pencil. The clever caricatures of well-known men in the "Bal d'Opera" show strikingly his ability to portray the individuality of a subject by caricaturing some characteristic pose or peculiarity of apparel, never leaving a doubt as to the identity of the object of his satire. His work in this direction was one of the pioneer efforts in the substitution of the topical cartoon for the "leader" of the old-fashioned newspaper. Comparatively few would read and appreciate the former, but the latter appealed to all classes Many symbols which are the common stock of present-day cartoonists were originated by Nast, notably the American tiger for Tammany, the republican G. O. P. elephant, the democratic donkey, and the inflationist rag baby. As a painter he has also attained signal success, and for beauty of execution and conception he ranks high in American art. His largest painting is called the "Defense of the Seventh Regiment," and hangs in the regimental armory in New York.

Mr. Nast has made several successful lecture tours, and all of his entertaining and witty talks were accompanied with off-hand sketches in crayon pictures in colored crayons. Some of his best efforts in the latter line were published in a weekly paper which he started in '92, and called Nast's Weekly.

It was Thomas Nast who first realized the power of pictorial art in journalism, and his signal development of its possibilities made him famous.

IN MEMORY OF JERSEYMEN

MONUMENTS ARE TO BE ERECTED ON ANTIETAM BATTLEFIELD.

The State Commission Appointed to Establish Them is Considering a Location.

The State Commission appointed some time ago, to erect monuments at Antietam in honor of the New Jersey regiments and battalions that participated in that battle, Sept. 17, 1862, met in New York. The commission consists of Chairman James O. Smith, of Newark, Thirteenth New Jersey Volunteers; Lieut. Joseph E. Crowell, of Paterson, Thirteenth New Jersey Volunteers, and Col. John J. Toffey, of Jersey City, Thirty-third New Jersey Volunteers. Col. Toffey is the former State Treasurer and is now Port Warden of Jersey City.

Chairman Smith reported the result of a conference with Gov. Murphy as to the work of the commission, which has full power to go on with the erection of the monuments and markers of the New Jersey regiments participating in the engagement at Antietam. Two of the commissioners, Smith and Crowell, have already visited the battlefield and are familiar with the ground, while Chairman Smith at Washington last week held an important conference with Brig.-Gen. Ezra A. Carman, formerly Colonel of the Thirteenth Regiment, and who is now Commissioner in charge of the Antietam Cemetery.

The site of the main monument, which will be a handsome affair, will not be definitely decided upon until after a careful inspection of the battlefield by the entire Commission. Mr. Crowell put in a strong plea to have it located at about the spot where Capt. Hugh Reilly was killed and where the Thirteenth Regiment received its "baptism of fire," which is at the side of the Hagerstown pike, and about three-quarters of a mile from the famous "Dunker Church." It is quite possible that the main monument will be located somewhere in that vicinity, as it is one of the most prominent spots on the battlefield.

The contracts for the principal monument will be awarded to the one who offers to do the best job for the smallest sum, without choice or favor, and the contract will include the designing, execution, transportation and putting up the monument complete, under the jurisdiction of the Commission. So far as possible the work will be confined to residents of New Jersey.

Every Healthy Boy

likes to get himself into places of danger. Hence bruises, strains and sprains. Mother scolds and brings out the bottle of Perry Davis' Painkiller and rubs it on the injured spots with an energy and frequency depending on the seriousness of the case. There is nothing like Painkiller to take out the soreness. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'. Price 25c. and 50c.

Big Trolley Business.

The Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company operated fifteen cars over its lines on July 4, and every one did a big business. During the busy hours of the day two cars were operated on the Arlington avenue line. On the main line the cars were operated under ten minutes headway.

MORE TENNIS AT HILLSIDE

TOURNAMENTS CONTINUED THERE ON SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Rain Stopped Finish of Semi-Finals in the Handicap Tournament for Singles.

The men's singles at tennis were continued on the courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Saturday morning and in the afternoon the rain put a stop to the semi-final play between G. H. Taylor and Duncan Bulkley, the score being 5-1, when they had to stop. They will play off next Saturday, when the finals will be played also.

This is a handicap tournament and the matches in the first round were completed in the morning when G. H. Taylor, with 2-6 of 15, defeated A. D. Beers, with 1-6 of 15, 6-0, 7-5. F. W. Goddard, scratch, defeated Hartley Mallick, with 15 1-6, 6-4, 6-1.

The first match of the semi-finals completed was between W. S. Tyler, with 2-6 of 15, and F. W. Goddard, scratch. The latter won 6-3, 11-9. G. H. Taylor, with 1-6 of 15, and Duncan Bulkley, with 3-6 of 15, played one set, as stated, the score being in favor of Taylor 5-1, when the rain stopped the match.

This play will be completed next Saturday, when either Taylor or Bulkley will play Goddard in the finals.

UP-TO-DATE.

Changes That the Jersey Central Has Recently Made in Its Passenger Service.

There was a general change of time on the New Jersey Central on June 29, when the fall summer schedule went into effect, including a complete service on the Sandy Hook branch. It has been the aim of the managers to give the best service possible and for months preparations have been going on. Nearly sixty new locomotives have been put in service within the past two weeks, and many new cars added to the equipment. The roadbed has received much attention—miles of new rail laid and thousands of tons of rock ballast spread. The station grounds improved and beautified, and all this in addition to the increased service.

A new morning train for Newark, starting from Dunellen, has been put on, several trains have been added to the Newark and New York Branch. There is a fast train to Somerville at 5:10 p. m., making Plainfield first stop.

New flag stops have been arranged for several of the Philadelphia expresses at Elizabeth and Plainfield.

Perth Amboy is to have a fast train mornings to New York and a fast train from New York at 5:10 p. m. The seashore division including the Sandy Hook boats will have complete schedules, and new connections have been made wherever possible. There will be a Saturday special at 1 p. m. for Atlantic City, and a Sunday train at 5:20 from Atlantic City to New York, both of which for Beach Haven, this in addition to the connections made by the other shore flyers.

Through car lines have been provided between Newark and Pt. Pleasant and Manch Chunk and Point Pleasant and Manch Chunk and Philadelphia.

FOUND DEAD IN A FIELD

Aged German Gardener Had Successfully Attempted to End His Own Life.

TEMPORARY INSANITY.

His Health Had Never Been Good Since a Sunstroke Two Years Ago —Body Was Found by Little Margaret Wilcox, While Picking Berries at Trolley Terminus.

Dunellen, July 16—While looking for blackberries in a vacant lot near the Front street trolley terminus at the place yesterday afternoon, little Margaret Wilcox stumbled on the body of a man. It was that of Matthias Schmidt, an aged German, who had the night before successfully attempted to take his own life.

When the little girl saw the dead man lying there, she screamed and ran away. She notified the neighbors who hastily summoned Dr. Brakeley. It was then found that the man was dead and had been for some time. He lay on his back with a brand new 38 calibre revolver grasped tightly in his right hand. There were two exploded cartridges in the revolver. A pocketbook and a silver watch were found in the man's clothes. There was no money in the pocketbook but it contained a paper on which was written the dead man's name and the names of his five children, and also a receipt from the American Express Company at Tarrytown for a telescope bag.

It was evident that the act was done with much deliberateness. The body was found beneath a tree, on a limb of which was found hanging the man's cane. The first shot passed through the abdomen and the second through the heart. The latter wound apparently caused death. It is thought that the deed was committed about 9 o'clock Monday night as two revolver shots were heard then by residents of that neighborhood. The body laid there until yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock when little Margaret Wilcox was the first to see it.

Matthias Schmidt was born in France sixty-five years ago. He came to this country thirty years ago. For several years he was employed by Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains, as head landscape gardener and took much pride in working on the beautiful grounds surrounding Dr. Coles' fine residence. Afterwards he and his son managed the greenhouses on East Front street, now owned by A. D. Shepard. He was also employed as a gardner about Plainfield for a number of years.

Two years ago, he suffered a sunstroke and since that time he has been somewhat irrational at times. It is believed that he had one of these attacks of temporary insanity when he took his own life. The first of the year he went to the Industrial Home to live, May 1, he went to the home of Samuel McMann near Dunellen, having a fancy that he would be poisoned if he remained. He remained at the latter place until eight days ago when he went to Tarrytown to visit a son who is employed at the home of one of the Vanderbilts. Of late, he has been complaining of sickness and a buzzing in the head.

At Tarrytown, he received some money with which he purchased a revolver. He evidently came to this place with the express purpose of making way with himself as he was seen by no one here and did not visit any of his accustomed haunts.

The body was removed to Runyon's undertaking parlors last night and was viewed by Coroner Carroll this morning. A burial permit was then issued. The funeral will be private.

He leaves three sons, Peter, of this city, John, of Scotch Plains, and Matthias, Jr., of Tarrytown, and two daughters, Miss Lillian, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Maggie Coley, of this city.

Good Weather Promised.

The weather conditions for Thursday will no doubt be ideal for the annual excursion of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school and Marcounier chapel to Asbury Park. By all means make arrangements to go on this excursion and have a good time at the shore. Train leaves Plainfield at 6 o'clock, and returning leaves the shore at 7 o'clock.

INDIAN RELICS GO.

Disposing of Col. Scott's Valuable Collection to Various Museums and Private Collections.

Through the representatives from the Field Museum of Chicago, a large number of the valuable Indian relics in the Col. Scott collection, have been purchased and they were shipped to Chicago Tuesday. They include Indian suits, Buffalo skin cases and many other Indian articles of rare value.

Other valuables, including the pottery, will likely go to the Natural Museum of History in New York, that institution having secured an option of them. The representatives are now waiting to get H. P. Scott's price on them.

J. E. Linde, of Brooklyn, has also purchased considerable from the collection amounting to between $100 and $200. He has a large collection himself and is constantly adding to it.

H. P. Scott will probably return to his home in Kansas this week. He will come back to Plainfield next fall, when he will make arrangements to sell the valuable paintings in the collection. They will likely be sold in New York.

KORMAN IS NOW IMPROVING

HAS REGAINED CONSCIOUSNESS AND ABLE TO TAKE NOURISHMENT.

Lawyer Wm. G. DeMeza Will Soon Ask the Court to Release Drake on Bail.

Edward Korman, the young man who was assaulted Friday, is decidedly better at Muhlenberg Hospital today. He has regained consciousness and Tuesday was able to take a glass of milk. Great hopes are now entertained for his entire recovery, although his chances are still no more than even.

William G. DeMeza has been retained as counsel for Charles Drake. As soon as there is a sufficient improvement in the condition of Korman, Lawyer DeMeza will go before the Court of Special Sessions and ask that bail be fixed for the release of his client. An erroneous impression was given the public, it appears, from the fact that Drake was arrested at Westfield. He had not fled thither to avoid arrest but had gone there to attend to his work, having obtained a position as motorman a few days previous to the unfortunate occurrence.

NEW FACTORY BUILDINGS.

Permit Granted to L. J. H. Grosshart for Four Large Buildings.

Building Inspector E. O. Doane has granted to George Bass a permit for the erection of a dwelling on West Second street, near Rock avenue. W. H. Clum is the architect, Wm. Thompson, mason, and Titus & Pope, the carpenters. L. J. H. Grosshart, on behalf of the Pederick & Ayer Company, of Philadelphia, has been granted a permit for the erection of four buildings at the corner of Clinton avenue and West Front street. The largest will be 388 feet deep by 100 feet front.

MAY SEND DELEGATION.

Warren Engine Company Expects to Act on Invitation to Atlantic City.

There will be a special meeting of Warren Engine Company some night this week to consider the invitation recently received from the fire department of Atlantic City to take part in the grand parade and celebration to be held there in September at the time of the firemen's convention. It is probable that the North Plainfield firemen will make arrangements to send a delegation.

Dr. Bryan Will Speak.

At the Young Men's Christian Association, Sunday, Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryan, of this city, will address the men's meeting at 4 o'clock. Vocal selections will be rendered by Miss May Grant. Lemonade will be served free to all who come. All men are invited.

Will Remember It.

Miss Ethel Searing, of Park avenue, will always have occasion to remember her ninth birthday anniversary, for Tuesday she was agreeably surprised by the gift of a handsome upright grand piano faom her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Searing.

Repainting Old Cars.

All the closed cars of the local street railway are being repainted a bright yellow and relettered with the initials of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railway. New trucks are also being put under the majority of them.

Mrs. William Smalley, Jr., of Somerset street, has gone to Princeton to spend a few days visiting friends.

MAKING A NEW TIME TABLE

Vast Amount of Labor is Required in Changing Schedules on the Jersey Central.

HOW IT'S ACCOMPLISHED

Trains Are First Laid Out on a Monstrous Chart, and Not Until They Are All "Clear" Is The Working Schedule Made Up—Takes Many Weeks to Complete It.

Very few of the thousands of passengers who are daily patrons of the railroads which pass through or near Plainfield have any idea of the vast amount of labor required to make a timetable, and a less number are aware that what is termed "working" timetable must be as carefully balanced as the accounts of the United States Treasury. Every railroad of any pretensions has one or more experts, who, while not employed exclusively at this particular work, can be called upon at any time to revise an old schedule or to make up an entirely new one.

Most of the large roads have recently issued new schedules with additional trains and changes in time incidental to the summer vacation season. This task required nearly a month. It is one of the most vital features in railroad work, for a single error might mean loss of life, and damage to rolling stock. When it is necessary to change a timetable a meeting of the general manager, general passenger agent, general superintendent, division superintendents, trainmaster and assistant trainmasters is called, and the proposed changes discussed in an informal way.

Each official offers suggestions, which are noted and discussed. It is decided how many trains shall be added to the schedule or taken off, and at what hours they shall leave terminal points. Then the expert takes up the work. His intimate knowledge of the system and branches enables him to make up an advanced copy of the new schedule on paper. In order to do this he must be acquainted with the grades along the line and the capacity of sidings at passing points. He must also be particular to have no trains that move in opposite directions pass at a station where no fence divides the main line tracks.

The expert must make due allowance for crews at terminal points to have sufficient time to turn their engines, take water, coal and do the necessary switching. If this time was not allowed the train would be obliged to leave late, and the whole schedule of a division would be apt to be disarranged. Having figured out the new schedule on paper, the next work is to prove it, and this is the most intricate part of the expert's work.

The most improved system now in vogue and in general use by the large roads is what is known as a proof chart. This varies in size according to the number of trains run. One of the largest in use in this section of the country is in the trainmaster's office of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Jersey City. It measures eighteen feet in length and is over six feet high. On this chart the movements of over 200 trains are traced.

The back of the chart is constructed of wood pulp. It has been found that all kinds of wood would warp, but the pulp, bound with iron, retrains its form. Over this is spread a blue print, the size of the board. This gives the name of all the stations and passing points, and covers a time period of twenty-four hours. It is ruled off to show the distance from New York to Easton and the distances between stations. Every minute of the twenty-four hours is ruled off on the board. First class or passenger trains are shown by red silk strings if they move south or east, and with yellow strings if moving north or west. Freight and second or third class trains are denoted by pink strings.

In order to prove its timetable, the train master or his assistant starts at the point indicated as New York on the chart. A pin is driven in the chart and the time the train would make on the new timetable is carefully noted as it progresses across the chart to its stopping point. A string is wound around each pin, which is driven in the chart at the points indicating stations where the train is scheduled to stop. Tags giving the number of the train are attached to both ends of the string.

The fast express trains having been disposed of, the same method is followed with the locals, and then with the fast and local freights. When all the movements of the trains of all classes have been traced, the trainmaster seats himself in front of the chart and makes a careful study of it. He finds that some of the trains, if run according to his first schedule, will meet where there are no sidings to accommodate them. So time must be added to or subtracted from the running time to overcome this trouble. Then a freight train is discovered to be likely to get in the way of a passenger train, and the time of the latter must be altered, or an express is found to pass a station at the time a local is discharging passengers, and to avoid danger another change is made here.

It is not until the chart is "clear" that the expert calls in his superior officers, who carefully go over his work to suggest changes in running time. By this time the chart looks like an enormous spider's web, but to the experienced railroad official it is as plain as a map is to a school boy. Every time the strings cross he notes a passing point, and every pin head is a stop for the train, but even when the chart is "clear" the work of making up the timetable is but half completed. The conductors and engineers have no chart to guide them, and the working table must now be made up.

On an average the timetable governing each division and branch must be gone over and corrected four times before they will be found satisfactory. The working tables are for the government and information of employes only, and bear marks and symbols that would not be understood by the general public.

The last stage in the issuing of a timetable is the revision of the printer's proof, and this is a large undertaking in itself. As a rule many errors have to be corrected before the orders to print are given. The figures must be absolutely correct, and every official in the operating department must be sure that they are. When the working tables are printed, copies are sent to the general passenger agent, and from these the folders issued for the information of passengers are printed. It is not until every employe, who has in any way anything to do with the operating of trains, has received and signed a receipt for a copy of the timetable that the issue is regarded as complete. The chart is then placed in a cabinet until the next change in time is anticipated.

Before making a change in a timetable it is often necessary for the superintendent, trainmaster or his assistants to make a number of trips over the road to note the time the trains that have caused delays on the old schedule may be so handled under the new that no excusable waste of time can be claimed by operators or train hands.

HIT BY ROLLING STONE.

John Snyder Was in Cellar of New Building When Stone Came Down.

John Snyder had a narrow escape from serious accident Tuesday while engaged on the masonry work of Lafayette Rosenstiehl's new building on Somerset street. Wm. Smith, of Washington Valley, was unloading stone, when a big block rolled from the surface and fell into the cellar, striking Snyder in the side. He was knocked out for a few minutes but an examination proved that he was not seriously hurt.

Enlarging His Store.

E. H. Clevely, of North avenue, has leased the store adjoining his restaurant, which was formerly occupied by Conover, the expressman, and the work of improving the place was started today. Mr. Clevely will join this store with his main room, so that he will have a sufficient amount of room to meet his increasing trade. He is now having a tile floor put in the new part.

PRETTY WEDDING AT A PLAINFIELD HOME

Marriage of Miss Annie Kirch and Charles O. Smith Took Place Tuesday Night.

WILL RESIDE HERE.

THE CEREMONY WAS PERFORMED BY REV. JOSEPH O. M'KELVEY.

Attractive Home Wedding Which United the City and Borough—Attendants on the Bridal Couple—To Live on West Fourth Street.

One of the most attractive home weddings of the season was that of last Tuesday when Miss Annie Kirch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Kirch, of Liberty street, and Charles O. Smith, of 243 Somerset street, were married at 7:30 o'clock in the presence of the immediate relatives. It was a quiet affair, none outside of the relatives being present. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, the pastor of Warren chapel, officiated.

The bride was gowned in white organdie, trimmed with ribbon, and she carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses. She was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Phillip Kirch, who was also gowned in white. The groom was attended by Phillip Kirch. The wedding march was played on the piano by Louis M. Hummer, of the borough.

The home was prettily decorated with the season's choice flowers, and especially attractive were the decorations in the dining room. Following the ceremony and the congratulations, supper was served. Later in the evening the bride and groom left Plainfield to enjoy a short wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside on West Fourth street, between Liberty and New streets, where the groom recently purchased a home. They were the recipients of a great many presents, both useful and handsome.

Mr. Smith is employed by William G. Debele, of Somerset street, and is popular among a host of friends. His wife is also highly esteemed in a large circle of acquaintances.

STREET SIGNS.

Somerville Decides to Follow the Example of Plainfield in That Respect.

Somerville, July 16—The Board of Town Commissioners, at its regular meeting Monday night, decided to hustle a little and make some necessary improvements to the town. Signs at street corners will be renewed and the board is going to pattern after Plainfield, as Commissioner Houston said, and have enamel signs, even if they do cost a little more than ordinarily.

At the next meeting an important ordinance will be adopted in regard to licenses. When that goes into effect the license clerk will have the privilege of charging shows either $5, $10, $20 or $50 as he may see fit, whereas heretofore he has been obliged to charge either $5 or $50.

He will be supplied with a plate with the words "Somerville License" on it and will have a rubber stamping outfit to put the name of the one who takes out a license and the date on the plate.

ELKS BIG TIME.

New Brunswick Lodge Will Hold Its Festival at Riverside Park.

The New Brunswick Lodge of Elks has completed arrangements for the holding of its annual midsummer night's festival. It will take place Tuesday, July 29, at Riverside Park, the new resort recently opened by the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company, situated on the Raritan river. A feature of this season's affair will be the appearance of the celebrated Gordon Highlander Band, of Canada, which is now giving nightly concerts before thousands of people in Willow Grove Park, Philadelphia. It numbers forty musicians and a chorus of twenty sweet-voiced singers, bagpipe players and specialists who give Scottish dances and other acts. It costs the lodge $500 to secure this one attraction.

AUTOMOBILE LINE.

Capitalists Said to be Considering Project of Running From Freehold to the Seashore.

It is said that New Jersey capitalists are seriously considering a new and interesting experiment with automobiles. It is proposed to build a road between two places in this State where there is considerable travel and establish and run thereon a line of automobiles for carrying passengers.

The idea is for the automobile company to own the road just as a railroad company owns its tracks, and for it to be used exclusively for the run*ning of its passenger machines. They* could then go at a high rate of speed without endangering other vehicles and would make pleasant and, it is believed, very popular lines of travel.

There is some talk of such a road from Freehold to the seashore. Should such automobile road be built and prove successful they would be likely soon to supplant many trolley roads. Such a road from Trenton to Point Pleasant, through Lakewood, running in the summer on a half hour headway, would probably get all the passengers it could carry.

GRAPPLED WITH BURGLAR

MRS. WM. SCHOMP, OF NEW MARKET, ATTACKED MIDNIGHT INTRUDER.

But He Was Too Quick and Plunged Through the Window—Posse Pursued Him.

New Market, July 16—An attempt to burglarize the residence of William Schomp, of this place, early Monday morning, was foiled by the plucki ness of Mrs. Schomp.

She awoke from her slumbers just as a man crawled through a window of her room on the first floor. She made no outcry but bided her time and getting an opportunity, sprang from bed and grappled with the fellow, at the same time calling her husband. The would-be burglar struck her several stunning blows and wrenched himself loose, plunged headlong through the window.

Mr. Schomp was close behind him but the fellow disappeared in the darkness. A posse of citizens headed by Justice VonMinden scoured the vicinity but without success. Mrs. Schomp is positive the fellow was a negro.

ENDEAVORERS IN SESSION

State Christian Endeavor Convention Began at Bridgeton Tuesday Evening.

WHAT'S YET TO COME.

Preliminary Session Held Tuesday Night—The Delegates Gathered at Bridgeton Yesterday and All-Day Sessions Are Being Held—Today's Programme.

Bridgeton, July 16—The sixteenth annual convention of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Societies was opened last evening, with a very large number of delegates in attendance. More will arrive today and remain until the close tomorrow evening. Last evening the preliminary session was held in the Second Presbyterian church, when the State executive and local committees held a meeting to arrange for the large meetings to follow.

This morning at 9:30 o'clock the State executive committee met in Christ Lutheran church for prayer, conference and business, and this afternoon there will be the reception session, after which the convention will be called to order by the State president. There will be the address of welcome by Rev. Dr. W. W. Moffett, of this place, and the response by Rev. W. T. S. Lambar, of Moorestown. Then will follow the report of the secretary, Miss Ida B. Stevens, of Hackettstown; report of the treasurer, Rev. T. E. Davis, of Bound Brook; appointment of committees; press department report by A. V. Anderson, of Orange; correspondences, by F. A. Tate, of Newark, to be followed by a closing address, "The Power of Persuasion," by Rev. Addison Moore, of Jersey City.

Following the afternoon session there will be a secretaries' conference conducted by Miss Ida B. Stevens. This evening Rev. Dr. Cornelius Brett, of Jersey City, will preside, and after the devotional exercises by Rev. Dr. D. H. King, of Vineland, there will be the president's address by Rev. W. T. S. Lambar, of Moorestown. A feature of this evening's session will be an address by J. Willis Baer, of Boston, Mass., to be followed by the "quiet hour" conducted by Rev. Dr. Eben B. Cobb, of Elizabeth, and the convention sermon by Rev. Dr. W. H. Fishburn, of Camden.

All of the sessions are being held in the Central M. E. church, a large edifice well adapted for the purpose. It is believed that this convention will be one of the largest in the history of the society and one of the most successful, as there will be no international convention this year to detract from its interest.

Going by Lakewood.

The New Jersey Central train which will take the Plainfielders on Bemevolent Council's excursion to Atlantic City, Tuesday, will take the new and what is considered the most picturesque route to the pleasure resort. It will be by the way of Elizabeth and Lakewood, through the famous pines of the latter place. The ride is itself considered to be a feature of the trip.

Benefit Euchre.

A benefit progressive euchre in aid of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp will be held at the Hotel Netherwood on the evening of July 24. A small fee will be charged those who take part and an invitation to be present is extended to all those who hold their home in Ireland, the money being furnished by friends.

Of What the Foreign Nations Are Talking

Political, Industrial and Commercial Notes Gathered in Many Lands.

[illegible] RE long drawn out war in the south of Africa that has been just closed, has not entirely diverted attention upon the part of the English people, ever seeking new worlds to conquer, from their territory along the east coast of the same continent.

Probably in no other of the dark continent was civilization made such rapid strides after it once secured a permanent foothold as in Uganda and around the shores of Lake Victoria Nyanza. In the days of the explorations of Dr. Livingstone and Henry M. Stanley there was no darker spot in all Africa than this same east coast. Lake Victoria, Nyanza, was then almost inaccessible, and the great fertile, tropical region lying around it was practically closed to any advancement of civilizing influences.

But the route to Central Africa has been so changed by the building of the Uganda railway that it is now a very easy matter to reach the Victoria Nyanza. Most travelers proceed by the German mail boats from Marseilles to Zanzibar, or direct to Mombasa, or by the Messageries Maritimes vessels from Marseilles to Zanzibar, returning by coasting steamer to Mombasa. Passengers by P. and O. or British India steamers tranship at Aden, and proceed by a smaller boat direct to Mombasa, but it is to be hoped that before long direct communication by British steamers will be possible to a place that owes its existence solely to British work and money.

The passage from London to Mombasa, via Marseilles, occupies about 26 days. Communication from Bombay is through Aden by British India steamer, or direct by German steamer, the time occupied on the direct journey being about 12 days, or longer in bad weather. In prerailway days, the "jumping-off place" for travelers bound for the interior was Mombasa, and anything left behind there had to be done without for the rest of the trip. Much trouble was experienced in getting a caravan together. If any bullocks, camels, donkeys or horses were taken it was quite possible that none would survive the first 220 miles of the route. Desertions among the porters were common, and it was quite understood by many of them that getting in advanced three months' wages and disappearing after a fortnight's work paid very well, and seldom resulted in being caught. The rule has now been altered to one month's wages in advance, on engagement, and desertions are uncommon, the privations, dangers and discomforts of the road having disappeared. The Swahili porters being natives of a hot country and very susceptible to cold, were naturally adverse to crossing the high ranges between the coast and the lake, and it is not surprising that the naked Wakavirondo living near the lake should have the same objections to a caravan's going over the cold hill tops. Once over the hills, and in the land of plenty, the Swahili is quite happy and contented.

Anyone now wishing to travel up country, lands at Mombasa, and from there can walk across to the Mombasa terminus and get into a first-class sleeping carriage, in which he can travel through in comfort to the lake shore.

At present there is only one steamer working on the lake, a small vessel 75 feet in length, the parts of which were made in Glasgow some 11 years ago, and which, in 1900, were carried up to the lake and put together under the superintendence of the chief engineer of the railway. Two larger steamers, 175 feet in length, and properly fitted for passengers and cargo, are now being built to extend traffic over the lake. The trains will run alongside the steamers, and passengers will run from the coast to the west side of the lake in three and one-half days, on the completion of the permanent line.

DEEP CUTTING ON UGANDA RAILWAY.

There is a good club at Mombasa, and another at Nairobi, the railway headquarters, 320 miles from the coast, which any properly accredited traveler can use as an honorary member. Telegrams can be sent to all parts of the world from any station on the railway, and telephonic communication was established in 1900, by the railway telegraph staff, between railhead and Uganda headquarters, and Mengo, lately known as Kampala, the capital of the king of Uganda. The telegraph is now permanent as far as Port Florence; the telephone wire takes messages on to Uganda, and another telephone wire, also laid by the railway staff, connects Nakuro station and the Ravine Government station. Stores exist at all the larger stations, such as Voi, Makindu, Nakuro and Port Florence, while there is a large bazaar at Nairobi, and several European shops, at which most articles required can be got at fairly reasonable prices. The climate, after the first 200 miles are passed, is pleasant enough, and much resembles that of the lower hill stations of India.

As in the hills of India it is quite possible to get fever. The fact of its being a tropical country should not be overlooked by those desirous of making a home there, and those who may have to work in the less elevated parts of the railway route would have to reckon on a certain amount of ill health from exposure to the sun, bad water, fevers, etc. The railway runs through the game reserve of East Africa from the Tsavo river for a distance of over 200 miles, the north boundary of the reserve being one mile north of the railway line and parallel to it, as far as the Stony Athi river; it then runs down the Athi river some 30 miles to the northward. Shooting is permitted inside a ten-mile circle from Kikuyu Fort.

Game of all descriptions can be often seen from the train as it passes through the country. In the Tarn desert the tiny "pan" is frequently passed close to the line, hardly caring to turn its head to glance at the train. Herds of impala and Grant's gazelle often cross the line in front of the train, always clearing the track at a bound. Most wild animals appear to be afraid of treading between the rails, except the rhinoceros, whose deep imprints are often seen on the banks, although he never appears to have got so far as to attempt rooting up the rails, or to dispute the passage of a locomotive. From Voi to a short distance beyond Kiboezi (82 miles) there are few animals to be seen without hunting, but from there on to near Nairobi, where herds of game can often be seen from the train in open, or on the grassy plains.

Good fishing can be obtained in the Athi river, but followers of the gentle art would be well advised to be careful how they enter the water, crocodiles of large size and abnormal appetite being known to frequent it.

The actual construction of the railway line was done with coolie labor imported from India, the greatest number employed on the line being about 22,000. For surveys and other work beyond the actual construction, Swahili porters were used, and did excellent service. The Morendat cutting and viaduct on the Mau Escarpment give some idea of the heavier portions of the work.

The railway surveys were, during 1900, extended round the northern, or British, half of the Victoria Nyanza, and very large additions to our knowledge of the country made thereby. Two steel sectional boats were used by the surveyors employed in this work.

Several natural arches, the finest being the one illustrated, were found on the lake shores and its islands, a great number of which were visited and surveyed for the first time, the Uganda Group alone numbering about 90, including all its smaller islets. Ingira Island from Nakaranga Point will be remembered by the readers of Sir H. M. Stanley's book, "Across the Dark Continent," as the spot where the great battles took place between the Waganda and the Wavuma in 1875.

The salt fields of Kisingere, in Kavirondo, and about 50 miles from Port Florence, is a well-known place to which canoes constantly come from all around the lake to buy salt of a poor description that is obtained by the natives from the earth taken from the shallow excavations.

Ottoman Railroads.

According to an imperial Turkish irade recently issued, the Haifa-Damascus railroad concession, including the five or six miles already constructed, is bought back from the English company, in whose hands it is at present, by the Turkish government, for the sum of $682,000. It is intended to make Haifa the port of arrival for pilgrims arriving by ship across the Mediterranean, and the Haifa-Damascus railroad is to be connected with the proposed Damascus-Mecca railroad now being built, at Irbid. Dr. Schumacher, the United States consular agent, the engineer in charge of the Haifa-Damascus railroad operations, has not as yet received instructions to hand the property over to the Turkish government, but the latter's representative (Hamdy Pacha) has arrived on the ground with his staff, and a transfer may be looked for any day on payment of the money. It is intended to enlarge the harbor facilities at Haifa. Already, Beirut has a protected harbor.

In the bay of Alexandria, the Anatolian Railroad company (German) is planning a modern harbor in connection with the Bagdad railway. According to a statement in a late issue of the Moniteur Oriental, the popular subscription for the Damascus-Mecca railroad now amounts to about $1,640,000.

The Forests of Prussia.

Of the 86,151,083.3 acres of land in Prussia, 26,425,490.8 acres, or 22.3 per cent., are occupied by forests and orchards. More than one-third of the area of Hessen-Nassau, Hohenzollern and Brandenburg is covered with forests. In Schleswig-Holstein, on the other hand, forests occupy less than one-fifteenth of the area of the province.

The ownership of the forests is as follows:

Ownership.	Acres.	Per cent.
State property	6,315,707	30.3
Crown property	128,960.8	.6
Forests partly owned by the state	2,865.3	.01
Communal forests	2,727,199.7	13.1
Forests owned by institutions	262.09	1.3
Forests owned by companies	584,216.8	2.7
Private forests	10,205,757.1	49.1

The areas occupied by deciduous trees and trees of the pine family are, respectively, 6,317,446 acres, or 30.4 per cent., and 14,118,053.8 acres, or 69.6 per cent.

Of the entire area of the kingdom, 7.3 per cent. is occupied by forests of deciduous trees and 16.4 per cent. by those of the pine family.

These forests yielded in wood, in the year 1900, 861,050,775 cubic feet; in addition to 2,709,030 cubic feet of oak tanning bark, 3,408,032 cubic feet of osiers, and 1,809,722 cubic feet of other wood, a total of 868,977,586 cubic feet, or 105.9 cubic feet per 2.471 acres of the entire forest.

Russian Agriculture Commission.

The Russian government has appointed a commission to investigate agricultural methods and the condition of the peasantry in Russia, with a view to improving both. For some years past the efforts of the minister of finance have been directed to the development of manufacturing industries; but the results, owing to lack of experience in management as well as to the dearth of skilled labor, have failed to meet expectations. The present stringency in the money market and the depression in all classes of business, combined with continued failure of crops in many provinces and the resulting famine, have induced Russian authorities to turn their attention to the study of means for improving and developing the millions of acres of land upon which subsist 30 per cent. of the 126,000,000 people of the empire. The powers accorded the commission are the widest, and it is authorized to present proposals for bettering agriculture where agricultural labor in every way possible.

How Chicago's Multimillionaires Play the Game of Golf

SOME one has said that all men are boys when particulating in sports. But it is difficult for the average person to imagine a multimillionaire engaged in sport acting like a youth. How a man who has $75,000,000, who has an army of people working for him, whose interests are so widely scattered—yet all held together by the hawser of direction—that the sun never sets on his factories; who is regarded with such awe by thousands that only those with the most imperative business propositions can get to him in upon his time, plays golf is indeed a study for many critics. Does the captain of industry, the merchant prince, the famous statesman and lawyer play any differently than does the subordinate—the clerk, the credit man or the office boy?

Were I a William Allen White I would ask several pages in a magazine to paint some character studies of the wealthy men whom I recently watched for several days at play. None but a man skilled in Mr. White's descriptive powers could do justice to the subject. But in the democracy of the golf course, where every spectator is considered a gentleman, the poorest man may talk the argot of the green with a merchant prince whose millions serve to place him in an inaccessible world during office hours. Efforts put forth by the captain of industry while in his office may fail, but if they do Wall street reflects the disappointment—or pleasure—of millions of people. There in his place of business the millionaire must "make a perfect score" or the business world is acted upon. But once out on the links, far from the smoky city, the babel of the stock exchange and away from the clerk with the never-ceasing quotations and the omnipresent telegraph blank, the multimillionaire becomes quite an ordinary mortal, amenable to the club rules and subject to all the contingencies of the course. The bunker is no respecter of the millionaire. The water hazard is there to harass him as well as the most obscure member of the club.

It was my pleasure to be at the Chicago Golf club annual tourney of four days' golfing, and to meet Marshall Field, Samuel W. Allerton, W. M. Hoyt, Gen. Henry Strong, James L. Allen, Charles W. Ware—many others whose names are synonymous with success in business and professional life. Mr. Field is 68 years old, yet the word of all who have seen him traversing the miles of undulating old farm property, anon giving the little gutta percha globe a knock that would send it sailing over bunkers and roadways with the speed of a bullet, would say that the world's greatest merchant seemed to have found an elixir of youth.

Mr. Field owns many farms from Oregon and Washington to the New England country where he began life, but it is doubtful whether he has ever walked over one of them. Yet he will clear up the business of the day, catch a fast train, and in an hour will be in the locker room of the golf club exchanging his street clothes for an outing suit in which he golfs. The Derby hat gives place to the conventional cap. Immaculate white linen is changed for the flannel outing of the links, and his hands are covered with golf gloves. Usually Mr. Field has arranged with his close personal friend, Robert T. Lincoln, for a match. But some other well known man in the business or professional world may be his partner. Bowing to club members, visitors, caddies—everybody addresses him, or contenting himself with a salute that is characteristic of this merchant prince, he loses no time getting to the first tee. There, as if the whole matter was regulated by clockwork, he finds a solid, silent, but efficient caddy waiting with his bag of golf sticks and a new ball all teed up, ready for driving.

"I feel well and must play a good round to-day," Mr. Field may say to his partner, or to the spectators. When he returns to the club house for a cup of tea and some toast after his walk of five miles over the undulating course he may say something about "never playing golf again until they fill up the bunkers." To this Mr. Lincoln or his partner may reply, "Until the next time, Mr. Field. We have an engagement for next Friday, have we not?" How could a man who is the center of all gaze attempt to approaches the tee escape embarrassment? When he lifts his driver to send away the little globe he must know that all eyes are riveted on him. Yet Mr. Field will "slice" into the long grass or "pull" to difficulties, and without an excuse set out on a fast walk to take his second shot at a pace that fairly shakes up the caddy in his efforts to keep near his employer.

Well preserved, with hale almost as white as the proverbial driven snow, his moustache heavy and slightly tinged with gray, his skin as clear as a youth's, his eye flashing and bright, and his hands showing just the suspicion now and then from hard brassey work, Mr. Field is a keen golf player. He goes to the links for the health-giving exercise the sport affords, and returning to the city, is buried for a short time in the financial page of his paper. Courteous to all, fairly effective in his strokes, a good approacher, a keen putter, he tries hard to give the doughty but mythical Col. Bogey some hard Rings. The charge that rich men take their play too seriously does not hold good if you watch them play. They are infatuated with the sport, like to tell how they got on the sixteenth green in two, and took three putts, how they made brassy shots of 175 yards from a sand trap slap bang into the next bunker, etc.

Robert T. Lincoln is a heavy man. He wears a beard which is just becoming tinged with gray, and when dressed in outing flannel with a paper waistcoat on, a cigar in his mouth—he seems to recall to the old-timers the quiet man of war, U. S. Grant, while waiting his turn to start play. To see Mr. Lincoln in his office dealing with huge financial problems of the Pullman estate, to have known him when he was United States minister to the court of St. James, it would be difficult to imagine this man golfing like a Balfour-Melville or some other famous British statesman. But Mr. Lincoln hits a hard ball. He can send the little gutta percha from the tee so far that you lose track of its flight. His swing is the result of careful following of directions, for he took up the sport quite late in life. He seems to be happiest when playing with Mr Field or some other well-known man and "laying his approaches dead to the flag." His merry laugh will be heard far over the links. Appearing somewhat reserved and even gruff to many, Mr. Lincoln is really one of the most entertaining talkers who play golf. His courtesy and good nature, together with his kindness of manner, have endeared him to many who play golf.

"Where are these rich men, I'd like to see them play?" said a visitor at the golf links. "Do they get as much fun out of the game as the poor men? I'll wager they dress in costly clothes, wear silk hats and diamonds and use a new ball every shot. Guess they would have a common visitor taken out and dumped over the fence if he spoke to them."

Imagine the surprise of this scoffer to see them play?" said a visitor at the golf links. "Do they get as much fun out of the game as the poor men? I'll wager they dress in costly clothes,

The New Woman At Work

SHE goes on her way rejoicing, gain and victory all along the line! Men, poor dears, do not yet know what is just best for themselves, but they are giving legal and civil rights to woman as fast as they learn that these are as good for her as for themselves. And I must say they are on the whole doing well. The Woman's Journal lately brought out its good old dove with the olive branch to celebrate the enactment of the law giving Massachusetts mothers equal guardianship with fathers over their children. This is a victory that strikes at the very heart of the sex tyranny, and men passed the law. We thank them; women everywhere do. But Massachusetts mothers, mothers everywhere, do you know through whose persistent work for nearly a generation this just and humane law was passed? Well, it was the woman suffragists. It was not the antisuffrage women. The antisuffrage women never yet had a law passed that benefited their sex, and they never will do so. The Woman's Journal remarks also that it ought to have a whole flock of doves to commemorate the splendid triumph of women in Australia. That triumph is the greatest that the feminine sex has ever achieved. The women of all Australia, throughout its six provinces of New South Wales, Tasmania, Victoria and East, South and West Australia, now have full and complete suffrage, precisely the same as men, and are equally eligible to office. Thus Australia has advanced several degrees of civilization beyond the United States, with all its vaunted liberty and equality. Australia, too, is under a hereditary monarchical government, but it is this day freer than the greatest republic upon earth, and its people in general are better off financially. I really feel tempted to break away and go to Australia to live.

Several American women are really skilled animal painters. One, Miss Matilda Lotz, living in Paris, makes pictures of lions, horses, camels and cattle. She is called the American Rosa Bonheur. Mrs. Georgia Timken Fry, who has recently returned to America after being in Europe eight years and who will probably settle in New York city, has made a specialty of sheep, with distinguished success. Miss Elisabeth Strong, who obtained her first art instruction in San Francisco, is also a promising young animal painter. She tried in vain to establish herself in her own land, but failed to get encouragement. Then she went back to Paris, where her student life was passed after leaving San Francisco, and there she resides. Her specialty is dogs and children. She tried dogs alone at first, but could not make a "go" of them. Then she added children and is now very successful.

OUTING GOWNS.

Scarlet and All White Will Be Worn a Great Deal.

A great deal of scarlet is being worn for seashore and mountain wear. However, not every woman looks well in scarlet, though this year there are so many shades of red it is quite possible to find at least one becoming that.

There is something very charming about a white or cream linen, and linens this year are very smart, especially those of a very coarse make relieved by Irish lace medallions and embroidery. Most of these little costumes are made blouse or bolero style, and there are even a few which are made with "Frocks and Frills" coats jauntily box plaited and short enough to reveal the waistband nearly all the way around.

Coarse white wool etamine lends itself beautifully to the little sack coat, but it must be lined throughout with thin silk or satin, and here the coarse guipure lace collar will come in excellently and at the same time be in keeping with the rest of the costume.

A stylish gown made of grass linen is here pictured. The waist is made with a yoke of tucks and insertions; the fullness below this is gathered into fine tucks. The sleeves are full and reach to the wrists. The skirt is elaborately trimmed with ruffles and insertions. Narrow black velvet ribbon is looped into rosettes and used on the waist and skirt.

lined with silver thread. These gowns are quite inexpensive and can be bought in robe length.

A rather pretty idea for an inexpensive frock is to thread white cashmere or soft delaine through with velvet, about three rows around the bottom of the skirt, tucking or box plaiting the top of it. Then there is a square sailor collar treated in the same way and tied with a big bow in the front.

White glace dresses will be embroidered with cream lace on gold tissue and others with rose colored silk embroidered in gold and silver. Appliques and embroideries are extensively used to make summer fashions very magnificent.

Gowns of soft white veiling made up over white taffeta are very smart and becoming.

A serviceable tailor made is here shown. The material is navy blue cheviot trimmed with black braid. The wide collar is of muslin trimmed with ecru lace.

A FRENCH ROOM.

A Dainty Style of Furnishing Much In Vogue at Present.

The French style of interior decoration commends itself particularly for this time of the year owing to the general light and airy effect which characterizes it. With the French style of furnishing no rugs are necessary, the polished hardwood floor being considered sufficient, or, if rugs are used, they are merely small bits of color scattered here and there.

The chief beauty of a French room is in the walls, which are often laid in panels and otherwise tastefully decorated in pale colors. With a handsomely decorated wall of this kind no pictures are needed. The general effect of a French room is one of elegant simplicity.

The room in the illustration has white and gold woodwork, and the walls are laid in panels of pale green. This green forms an admirable background for the daintily colored furniture, which is upholstered in pink, pale yellow and white. The fireplace is white and gold; the frames of the chairs are of mahogany or gilt. A handsome empire mahogany chest stands in one corner and a quaint lamp stand in the shape of a cabinet in another. The windows of the room are also French and open through the center outward.

SELF CONTROL.

Teach It to the Child If You Want It to Succeed.

"What is the greatest thing in the world?"

"Self control."

"I thought you were going to say love. Love rules the world, but self control rules love, as indeed it rules everything else. If you want to give a man the key to success in life, give him self control; therefore, since it is the most useful thing in the world, it is one of the first things you want to teach your child. Teach him or her—for it is even more important for her—to be always master of the situation. Teach the child that to feel disappointment inwardly cannot always be helped, but to show it outwardly should always be avoided. This doesn't necessarily make a stoic of the child, but teaches it to enjoy the good things of life in moderation, as they are meant to be enjoyed. It teaches it that no one thing is worth staking one's entire self on or breaking one's heart over.

When it rains and little Mary stands crying before the window bewailing the fact that she can't go to the picnic, don't let her stand there and cry.

That is laying the foundation for future acts of weakness when Mary is no longer a child and more important things than rain are the trouble. Distract her attention and turn it in another direction.

Show the child the folly of being angry, the waste of energy, the waste of time; show her the power that lies in deeds instead of words. Even very young children are susceptible to reasoning where they would resent force. If you can succeed in showing little Mary that every deed of self control is one step nearer her ultimate happiness, you are leading the child toward success and, what will appeal to you perhaps even more, insuring your present peace of mind.

TAFFETA COSTUMES.

All White Dresses of This Silk Very Smart.

There is a craze for taffeta petticoats of every description. They have almost entirely taken the place of the white cambric and muslin underskirts. The evening petticoats are most elaborate, some being made of peau de soie trimmed with lace and insertions, while the cut is quite as important as that of the outer skirt. When all is said, the taffeta skirt is not so much of a luxury as one would imagine, especially for the evening, when pale shades can be worn many times without their getting soiled. They save the hem of one's frock as well as the laundress' bill, for a lawn petticoat can seldom be worn twice without a visit to the washtub, which is likely to prove expensive, as the skirt of the hour is compounded of a multitude of frills and tucks.

In the picture there is a smart white veiling gown. The waist has a tucked collar and short yoke; the rest of the fullness is laid in horizontal tucks and trimmed with three wide bands of lace appliqué. The sleeves are very full and reach to the wrists. The skirt clings about the hips and has two gored ruffles around the bottom.

The hat which goes with this is of scarlet geranium.

Children's Pique Coats—Yachting Costumes.

Silk gloves are the proper thing to wear now that warm weather has set in.

Pique coats are very fashionable for children, and these little garments are trimmed with bands of embroidery. The wide collars are made also of the embroidery. Sometimes wide beading is used around the collar, and black velvet ribbon run through it.

The new white pique skirts are very fancy, and even those intended for golf are trimmed with embroidery bands. The gored flounce is being superseded by the skirt, which is laid in wide tucks stitched down flat, but allowed to flare around the ankles.

Yachting costumes in white pique and white mohair trimmed with bands of taffeta will be as much worn as ever this summer. Even the shoes and stockings will be white to match.

The new shades of pale blue are less on the turquoise than ever this summer.

A little girl's summer costume is here depicted. The jacket is of white pique with a wide collar of embroidery in a double breasted effect. The gown worn under it is of tucked white organdie. The jacket is trimmed with three huge rosettes of soft blue ribbon and a wreath of green leaves and berries.

BLACK AND WHITE.

The Perfect Black Gown—Taffeta Much Tucked.

A great deal of all black and all white is being worn this summer by those who are weary of the crude colors presented to public notice early in the season.

Although there is a saying that black is no color, the perfect black gown is composed of many shades, being made not of one black, but of many. Take, for instance, the dead black of crepe de chine mixed with the beautiful cloudy effect of chiffon. It would be probably trimmed with a glimmer of satin and a becoming black chenille or velvet and further lightened with jet of varying shades. Then indeed it is a black dress which is a glorious creation and charming in every detail.

There is a great demand this season for black chene afternoon frocks, and these are a little newer than taffeta. They are useful and smart for summer wear, as the surface is an excellent protection against the dust.

To introduce a new note in taffeta it must be either stitched, strapped or tucked and should be decorated with soft lace and velvet.

A little child's white pique coat is the subject of the sketch. It is made on the highwayman pattern, with three capes stitched and edged with white wash braid. The belt is of stitched pique. The buttons are of pearl. The garment is unlined.

UNLINED DRESSES.

They Are a Feature of the Summer Fashions.

The unlined dress is a feature of the summer. It is chic and comfortable whether made of foulard or linen.

The newest ribbon girdle has a three-quarter length bow of ribbon with two blas ends.

Gowns of linen glace in old rose shades are the fad of the hour. They are made very much tucked and trimmed with black velvet ribbon.

The reign of the shirt waist is nearing its close, according to all fashion authorities, and it will in future be relegated to sporting and traveling costumes. But even for the latter dresses of serge and china silk are being used.

The cut illustrates the very latest style of chiffon neck ruffle. Unlike the old fashioned box, it is composed of three wide, flat ruffles lying out on the shoulders. These come down to a point in front, where they are joined to long streamers of narrow velvet ribbon.

The smart tailor made hat is of sunburned straw, trimmed with black velvet ribbon.

FASHION CHANGES.

Tight Fitting Waists Are Things of the Past.

The tight fitting bodice with many seams is quite a thing of the past, and vests blouses and bodices are almost universally pouched in front and worn with a band or belt. The back is short and invariably tight fitting, and the short waisted back and elongated front created by the fashionable straight front corset are now characteristic of the prevailing fashions.

Sleeves are so varied in style that every taste should be suited. The full, banded sleeve is extensively patronized, and this, too, is arranged with some variation. In soft fabrics the sleeve droops in Turkish fashion and is exceedingly long in the back, but the bishop sleeve has grown smaller and is now simply an almost tight coat sleeve drawn into a wristband. This is the effect, but the cut is simplicity itself.

The cut shows a tailor made costume of navy blue linen dotted in white. The jacket is made with an open Eton front and a fitted back having hip pieces. The sleeves bag at the wrist and show the latest style of cuffs. The skirt is perfectly plain, with a habit back and a single gored flounce. The entire costume is trimmed with bands of stitched taffeta.

The hat is white straw, decorated with black lace and white flowers.

MILLINERY HINTS.

Hats Trimmed Under the Brims. Amateur Milliners.

It is far easier to make a smart little dress at home than to trim a hat. There is no article of a woman's wardrobe so difficult to choose as a hat. It seems hard to give out one's good dollars for a little straw shape trimmed with an apparently simple twist of foulard or velvet when the material costs half the price, but dangers lurk in these simple little hats. It takes a particular skill to make a tailor made bow, and the amateur can more successfully trim even a picture hat.

Those who cannot afford much should be careful not to purchase anything exaggerated, as they are sure to get tired of it, for fashions in millinery change very quickly, and even good models often get vulgarized. The hat for everyday wear should be chosen with the utmost discretion. It should be well made and of lasting qualities, for it will be worn four days out of the seven at least.

In regard to more elaborate hats a great many of them are being trimmed under the brim. Crushed flowers are used for this, together with leaves and dainty buds. Some of the flowers used on hats this year are very charming, and the mixture of fruits and flowers, though often incongruous, is always chic.

The smart French hat in the illustration is of fancy straw trimmed with upright bands of red ribbon velvet and finished with a bow in the back. Clusters of buds and poppies are placed under the brim.

Why.... Women Join Clubs

THEY were talking about women's clubs.

"Pooh!" said the young man.

"My dear fellow, I wouldn't say 'pooh!'" retorted the old doctor. "Women's clubs are an ever increasing factor, and we can't afford to ignore them."

"If ever a wife of mine joins a club"—the young man began savagely, but he stopped, squelched by the look of utter scorn he received from the girl who earned her own living.

"If ever I marry," the girl remarked in distinct tones, "one of the first things I intend to do is to join a club—a club that will keep me well up on the subjects of the day and won't let me degenerate into a mere housfrau like most of the married women of my acquaintance."

"I suppose you will imitate Mrs. Binks," answered the young man indignantly. "The home runs itself, the three children go unwashed and in rags, and Binks says he hasn't had a decent meal since his wife joined her three new clubs. By the way, that makes seven to her credit now."

"She must have the club mania," said the observant woman thoughtfully. "Yes," in answer to the looks of astonishment of the other three, "there is such a thing. One club leads to another, and the woman who starts joining them will never cease until she owns a string of medals or certificates of membership. But seriously," she went on, "I have been studying the all absorbing question, Why do women join clubs? and I'm about as far from arriving at any one conclusion as you are probably. I really think the main reason is because the women are unhappy in their home life and seek a change. Some of them are childless; others are neglected by their husbands. Now, when a man finds his home life a failure he simply throws himself more and more into his business and finds a relief in the excitement of earning dollars. The woman tries to find the same excitement and interest in her clubs."

"I think women's clubs a good thing, for my part," said the old doctor. "In the old days when a woman was unhappy or fancied herself to be she took to herself mysterious ailments, tampered with drugs or cures or else worked herself into a morbid frame of mind reading novels. Now, thanks to the clubs, she has no time for that sort of thing. Her mind is filled with wholesome interest, and she turns into a fine, well developed, philanthropic woman."

"The woman in the towns or small cities appreciates her club most," said the observing woman. "It gives her a chance to enjoy over a sociable cup of tea a respite from the cares and drudgery of a small household. It gives her an opportunity of making friends."

"Ah, that's the side of club life I'm in favor of," interrupted the girl—"the side that increases social intercourse. Why shouldn't unmarried women who have to earn their own living have clubs like those of men? Why shouldn't there be athletic clubs for women, for instance, where they might meet in an atmosphere of good fellowship? Why should women's clubs be solely pink tea affairs where papers are read at one and chunks of solid information dug out of encyclopedias and doled out to the listeners? Think of the good to be done in a few clubs on the order of those for men would be to girls who come to a strange town to earn their own living—girls who don't know a soul, who have been used to their own homes and who have to put up with boarding houses and the like! Yes, indeed, women's clubs are a good thing, I say; only they might be made a great deal better."

GRACE ELMORE.

She Went Crazy.

Literary work in connection with women's clubs is said to have caused the insanity of a lady who went crazy recently and had to be sent to an asylum. Chairwomen, let this be an awful warning to you to stop writing and reading those dreadful club papers!

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, ... Proprietor

NO NEED OF TWO.

Careful investigation by both city and borough authorities has shown the impossibility of either municipality acting alone in the building of a sewer to tide water. If such a thing ever does come to pass, it will be by a union of effort on the part of a number of municipalities in this section. Meanwhile, it has been shown on impartial investigation that the most feasible method of sewage disposal is that now in use by the city of Plainfield.

It is fully realized by those who are interested in the welfare of the borough that the day is at hand when that community must have sewers. Lack of sewers has proved a serious stumbling block to real estate agents who have tried to locate new people there. There is a general feeling throughout the borough today that there should be no delay in equipping the place with sewers and a proper means of sewage disposal. The Borough Council has already considered the matter and appointed a special commission to consider the question.

One of the easiest ways of solving this sewage disposal question for the borough will be the consolidation with the city of Plainfield. It will then be unnecessary for the borough to duplicate the city's plant. The one is amply large enough to care for both city and borough for many years to come.

At best, sewage disposal works are not the most agreeable neighbors and property values are bound to be depreciated. Two such plants will inevitably result in a depreciation of much more property than one will affect. It is hard enough to have one such plant located in the south west without having two when there is no real necessity for it. Consolidation solves the problem easily, much to the advantage of the borough and without injury to the city. The borough would be saved the cost of the plant and would bear its proportionate share of the running expenses.

THE NEXT ELECTION.

North Plainfield is going to have a new fire department headquarters in the near future unless all signs fail. It requires considerable red-tape, however, to bring about the desired result. The last act is the election which, if favorable, will permit the Borough Council to issue the necessary bonds to raise the amount needed. Before, however, an election could be called, the Borough Council had to *receive a petition from property-*owners representing more than one-fourth of the taxable valuation of the borough property. That petition has been received and the election was called at the meeting of the Borough Council, Thursday night, for August 13. There is little doubt as to the result of the election.

There has been for some time a decided need for new quarters for the *borough fire department. The mem-*bers of the Warren Engine Company have been studying the subject for some time and their efforts have not been in vain. There has been more or less talk as to the probable result on the greater city question. As a matter of fact, the building of a new fire headquarters will not influence *the question either way. If the bor-*ough remains as it is, there must be new quarters for the firemen. If it becomes part of Plainfield, there must be some proper place to quarter fire apparatus in the part of the greater city north of Green brook.

It was long ago that the borough fire department outgrew its present quarters. The request for a more suitable building is therefore prefectly within reason and has the endorsement of all those who have taken the trouble to investigate the needs and requirements of the department. The building of a new engine house will not, however, interfere with the present arrangement of the West End Company. The latter company will continue as usual. The old building will not be wasted. The police department will then have quarters that are not a disgrace to the community while the upper floor will provide a meeting place for the Borough Council and thereby save the rental now paid for the present rooms.

PRESERVE THE FORESTS.

The subject of forest preservation was one which appeared to appeal particularly to Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees during his term of office. While Governor Murphy has taken no active steps in behalf of that movement, he has shown himself so thoroughly in earnest in working for the best interests of the State that there is every likelihood that he will follow the excellent example set by his predecessor.

When there were untold acres of forest land to be had almost for the asking, no one thought of making any attempt to save the valuable growth and millions of acres of forest land were stripped of timber. Great quantities of it were wasted. Now, however, it is possible to look ahead and see the day when forest land will be scarce indeed unless something is done by the authorities of the several States to protect the trees. There has been considerable thought of establishing a State park in the forests which now exist in the northern part of New Jersey. If these forests are to be preserved, action will have to be taken at no distant day.

Experts in forestry have shown that if the ruthless destruction and neglect of timber land are stopped, that the supply will be ample to meet all reasonable demands and yet continue these forests indefinitely. Forestry has now become a science and each year sees the number of trained men increase. The old methods cannot go on. The coming years will see the forests pass into the care of experts. The sooner New Jersey accepts the inevitable and prepares for the protection of its valuable timber land, the better it will be. Governor Murphy will do well to look into the subject and use his influence in the right direction.

WHAT LED TO START OF THE BABY CAMP

Mrs. F. G. Mead Told of the Work of the City Union of King's Daughters.

GROWTH OF THE CAMP.

UNION OF KING'S DAUGHTERS CIRCLES WAS THE FIRST OF ITS KIND.

Mrs. Mead Spoke at Christian Endeavor Meeting Held at Trinity Reformed Church Monday Evening—Informal Talk Followed.

At the Christian Endeavor meeting in Trinity Reformed church, last Monday, Mrs. Frederick W. Mead, of East Front street, who is greatly interested in the City Union of King's Daughters, and especially so in the King's Daughters' baby camp on the mountain, spoke in a most interesting and instructive way. A good-sized audience was present and deeply appreciated the engaging discourse.

After touching on the work of the King's Daughters in general Mrs. Mead told of the organizing of the City Union of King's Daughters in Plainfield, embracing all of the various circles hitherto established, and brought out the interesting fact that this union was the first of its kind to be organized in the whole United States. The placing of a bed in Muhlenberg Hospital marked the inception of active charitable work by the organization. A trained nurse was afterwards procured to look after the deserving poor of the city and minister to them in their illness. The services of the nurse have always been in demand, and with the moral and financial support of the Daughters she has done a great work in caring for those who might otherwise have been neglected.

"It was five years ago that the camp on the mountain was inaugurated, but in the second season of its existence it was destroyed by fire. The camp was then rebuilt on the present site, and with the erection of the addition which has just been completed last week, it is now possible to keep the babies on the mountain night and day, without reverting to the former method of bringing them to the city in the evening and having them brought to the mountain again in the morning.

While the King's Daughter's regular nurse is engaged in looking after the tots on the mountain, Mrs. Mead announced that the services of a second nurse had been secured to perform the work of ministering to the poor of the city, as necessities arose, no matter to what denomination they might belong, whether they were colored or white.

After the address there was an informal talk over matters relating to *the camp, in which Mrs. F. S. Mar-*tin, of Hillside avenue, answered a number of questions and related some touching incidents that came under her notice. It was brought out that yesterday Henry DeMott, of Somerset street, who has the contract to take the babies and their mothers to the camp for the trolley terminus, made a presentation to the institution of 100 pounds of ice. During the evening Miss King's Daughters Union had provided the police department of the city with an emergency box for infants.

A collection was taken up resting the sum of $13 which will be equally divided between the three camps at Netherwood, Westfield, and on the mountain. During the evening Miss Minnie Williams sang most acceptably a solo, "Keep My Savior Near My Side."

Last Monday for the first time, the babies who have been during the day enjoying the healthful surroundings on the mountain were retained at the camp all night.

SERVICES IN MEMORY OF OCEAN'S VICTIMS

Funeral Held at Sandy Hook Residence of Captain T. N. Horn Monday Afternoon.

THE STORY OF ACCIDENT.

FATE OF MRS. HORN'S BODY WAS NOT LEARNED UNTIL SUNDAY.

Memorial Services Held Monday—Little Daughter Buried at Greenwood—Story of the Disaster and Finding of the Dead Bodies.

When the ocean-going tug McCaldin Brothers returned to her dock in South Brooklyn Sunday, a deep sea mystery was disclosed. Captain E. G. Cutler declared that on his outward trip to sea, Saturday morning, when twenty miles off the Highlands of Navesink he found the body of a young and richly dressed woman. From the minute description given this was undoubtedly the wife of Captain Tieman N. Horn, who was recently drowned near Sandy Hook, as the rings removed from her fingers bearing the initials "T. N. H. to M. R., November 28, 1894," gave unmistakable evidence as to the identity of the body.

The woman was about twenty years old, with handsome features, and had long, light-brown hair. Her clothing consisted of a white silk shirt-waist, heavy dark skirt, white underwear, black stockings and low shoes. The body had been so long in the water that it could not be taken on board. Captain Cutler ordered that it be weighted and buried at sea. The rings were returned to Captain Horn, who identified them.

So many of Captain Horn's friends in Plainfield desire to know the particulars of the terrible calamity which befell him that a brief account is herewith given.

Captain Horn with a party of eight went for a sail on Sandy Hook Bay on Sunday, July 6. A light breeze was blowing and everything was going smoothly, when a sudden squall struck the sail, causing it to swing about, the boom striking several occupants of the boat. In an instant the boat was capsized and sank and the occupants were in the water. A steam launch, being near by five persons were soon rescued, but just then the machinery failed to work and three were drowned, these being Mrs. Horn, the captain's wife, his daughter, Frances, and Miss McMahon, from Nyack.

Those saved were the post surgeon, Dr. Waterhouse, and wife, Miss Bessie Horn, and the two-year-old son of the captain, who were rescued by a hair's breadth. The captain himself was the last one rescued, more dead than alive with exhaustion from his efforts to save the rest. Two of the drowned were recovered the middle of last week, Frances, the four-year-old daughter of the captain, and Miss McMahon, of Nyack.

Mrs. Horn's body, as stated, was recovered Sunday, and was positively identified by the inscription on her wedding ring. She was buried at sea and not until Monday did Captain Horn learn the particulars which appeared in a New York paper. The body of Miss McMahon was interred at Nyack.

Monday a memorial service for the wife and a funeral service for the daughter, was held at the captain's residence at Sandy Hook. The garrison turned out as one family, to pay the last tribute to the beloved dead. A guard of honor, consisting of four non-commissioned officers, stood "at guard," while the impressive Episcopal service for the dead was read by Rev. Dr. Lord, of Atlantic Highlands. After the singing of the beautiful hymn, "I do Not Ask Thee Lord That Life May be a Pleasant Road," by E. E. Runyon, of this city, the guard lovingly bore the white casket with all that remained of the little daughter, to the government steamer in waiting, which with flag at half-staff, steamed to Fort Hamilton, where the hearse and carriages were in waiting and soon the dear one was "asleep on the breast of mother earth" in beautiful Greenwood. The grave was literally covered with choice flowers.

A MID-SUMMER HOP GIVEN

SOCIAL EVENT OF SUMMER SEASON AT THE PARK AVENUE HOTEL.

Orchestra Was a Little Delayed, But the Affair Was a Great Success Notwithstanding.

The mid-summer hop at the Park Avenue Hotel was given last Monday with Mrs. John H. Bailey, Mrs. G. Harry Squires, Mrs. H. L. Stathoff and Mrs. John H. MacManus as patronesses.

The orchestral instruments arrived on time, but the performers were much delayed. This slight hitch in the arrangements did not interfere, however, in the slightest degree with the enjoyment of the evening by the following well known young people: Frank Allen, Laurens H. VanBuren, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. H. MacManus, Miss Helen MacManus, Miss Edith Brower, Mrs. Addison Wood, Mrs. W. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Webb, Ralph Bloomer, Miss Sadie Stimson, Miss Louise Mandele, Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Iler, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Stathoff, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cameron, J. Harry Stathoff, Miss Elizabeth Somerville, Mrs. L. Somerville, Mrs. Wm. Clifton Todd, Miss Carolyn Kampman, Miss Marie Kampman, Douglass Murphy, Hugh Clay, Hugh Pierce, Mrs. Pierce, Eugene O'Connor, Lester O'Connor, Dr. Chas. G. Davis, Miss Helen Davis, Miss Anna Davis, Harold Davis, Jefferson Davis, Miss Angela Brady, Miss Wynn, Miss Brady, Mr. and Mrs. Roger F. Murray, Miss Leila Howard, Homer Smith, Harold Chandor, Miss Perkins.

Before the refreshments were served, and they were most alluring, William Bailey obliged those present by responding to repeated demands for a flute obligato from "The Mid-Summer's Night Dream."

A Roman Holiday at Manhattan.

Ancient Rome as a spectacle and the way in which it is presented in Pain's Amphitheatre, at Manhattan Beach, is conceded to be the most realistic stage representation of its kind that has ever been seen there. It is crowded with incidents and during the performance is in one succession of stirring scenes. A large ballet and a good chorus help to enhance the magnificence of the stage picture. The chariot races are most spirited, and when it's borne in mind that these charioteers drive over an oval course of fully 1,200 feet, it must be admitted that there is ample opportunity to work up an audience to a great display of enthusiasm. The burning of Rome is a remarkably fine display of stage realism, and the fireworks display at the close is a most brilliant exhibition of fireworks.

Sang Scotch Songs.

Following a meeting of the Thistle Club, held last evening at the home of Wm. Wilson, of East Fourth street, the members were entertained in a most enjoyable manner. In addition to instrumental selections, a pleasant feature was the singing of Scotch songs in which all joined heartily. Refreshments were served before the affair terminated.

FAMILY HOTEL MAY BE BUILT

Number of Plainfield Citizens Interest in a Scheme to Build One Very Soon.

ARE CONSIDERING SITES.

Success of John D. Bailey at Park Avenue Hotel Despite Many Obstacles Leads to Belief That the Plan Will Succeed—May Build on Site of Park Ave. Hotel.

During the last two or three months a number of Plainfield citizens, who have the best interests of the city very near to their hearts, have been at work quietly seeking a site for a handsome new hotel for Plainfield. The successful management of the Park Avenue Hotel in this city has demonstrated to these men, as well as to many others, that the operation of a larger family hotel in this city would be profitable to the promoters. The necessity of such an abode is well known, and has been for some time.

Plainfield is fairly well supplied with hotels for the accommodation of transient guests; but there has always been a lack of accommodation for one well-to-do citizens and their families, who for one reason or another wish to live at a hotel, either temporarily or permanently. John D. Bailey has evidently managed the Park Avenue Hotel in such a manner as to fill the requirements of a family hotel so far as it lay in his power to do so. This hostelry was built many years ago, however, and it can never be made a modern house. During the last two years it has been filled all the time, notwithstanding the many drawbacks which Mr. Bailey has encountered.

The men concerned in the new hotel proposition have secured prices and information on several available sites, and it is not unlikely that a meeting will be called to consider the matter of building at no distant date. It is even possible that the Park Avenue Hotel will be abolished and a new structure placed upon that site.

It is proposed to erect a handsome *brick structure with about one hun-*dred sleeping rooms arranged in large and small suites for family accommodation, and supplied with every possible convenience. Such a structure would cost about $100,000, and could be made ready for occupancy within a year.

Aside from their endeavor to provide what is most assuredly a growing necessity for Plainfield, the promoters of this new enterprise feel certain that they can receive ample remuneration for their investment. The fact that the one hotel of this character in the city has been overcrowded for over two years, seems to indicate that a modern structure of about twice the size would be filled rapidly. Those interested in the matter say that the investment would pay at least six per cent. per annum, and possibly very much more.

No plans for the new structure have yet been drawn, as the company has still to be formed, and the site settled upon. There seems to be no doubt, however, that the project will be accomplished ultimately with profit to those involved, and certainly for the betterment of this community.

THE WAY THEY DO IT.

I. C. T. Club Will Have a Parlor Car For Its Use on Excursion.

The officials of the I. C. T. Club believe that what is worth doing at all is worth doing well. The club will go on the Junior excursion to Atlantic City in a body and the trip both ways will be made in a parlor car attached to the train for the exclusive use of its members. Accommodations for serving meals to the members while at the beach have also been arranged for with one of the leading hotels.

HOPE Y. M. A. AND Y. M. C. A. TEAMS STILL HEAD CITY LEAGUE

Hopes Batted St. Mary's New Pitcher For Victory 10 to 3—Y. M. C. A.'s Batting Streak Did It 6 to 2.

ATTENDANCE LARGER THAN EVER.

THE PLAYING OF ALL THE TEAMS WAS NOT, HOWEVER, QUITE UP TO THE STANDARD IN PREVIOUS GAMES.

St. Marys Tried Scott for Five Innings and the Hope Boys Batted His Delivery for Ten Runs —Then Doyle Shut Out Hopes, But it Was Too Late—Safe Works Led Until the Sixth Inning—Then Y. M. C. A. Scored Five Runs in Three Consecutive Innings.

RESULTS OF LEAGUE GAMES.

Hope Y. M. A., 10; St. Marys, 3.
Y. M. C. A., 6; Safe Works, 2.

*And still honors in the City Base*ball League are even between the Hope Y. M. A. and the Y. M. C. A. teams. Each scored a victory Saturday afternoon. The Hope boys found St. Mary's new pitcher an easy mark and batted him freely for five innings, enough to win the game by a score of 10 to 3. Y. M. C. A. had a more difficult task with the Safe Works contingent. A streak of batting in the last half of the game gave the Y. M. C. A. team victory by a score of 6 to 2. While the attendance at the two games combined was even larger than usual, the playing was not quite up to the usual standard.

Next Saturday will witness see the Safe Works and Hope Y. M. A. against each other while the Y. M. C. A. and St. Marys will battle the same afternoon. The week following the two leading teams will meet and unless the leaders are knocked out next Saturday, that contest promises to be one of the hottest of the season.

HOW HOPES DID IT.

Steady, merciless and unrelenting pounding of Dick Scott literally gave victory to the Hope team in its third game with the St. Mary's in the League series, Saturday. The onslaught started in the second inning and continued without cessation until the latter half of the fifth when Doyle was substituted. That stopped the merry go-round but the damage had been done and the Hopes finished the game with the score 10 to 3. In the five innings that Scott was in the box, the Hopes made nine bunched hits but not a one was taken off Doyle, in fact, not a man reached the initial bag.

Neither side scored in the first inning. In the second Montross, of the Hopes, struck out. He was followed by Gordon, who reached first on a fumble and passed second to third on successive hits by Hewitt and Hardfelder. He was brought home by Munro's easy grounder. Hardfelder was caught on second and Roseberry fanned. The St. Marys were blanked successively until the fifth when Taylor drove out a grounder which struck Montross in the leg. He reached first before the ball was fielded and made two phenomenal steals to third. A low throw to Martin by Hartfelder, which the former missed, gave him a free pass home. A second run was made by the side in the eighth by Doyle, who singled to first, stole second, was stealing third when Dalley threw wild to Martin and reached home. The third run was made in the last inning through two lucky hits, both doubles, by Lederer and Taylor, which brought the former home. A total of five hits was all the St. Mary's secured from Montross, who pitched a crackerjack game.

The Hope's batting streak, started in the second by Gordon, brought in two runs in the third, one in the fourth and six in the fifth. In this inning the batters went all the way around and Shortman had two chances at the bat. For the rest of the game, the innings were passed over in one, two, three order.

No better fielding has ever been seen in any of the League games than that which characterized this contest. Taylor, Roseberry, Keefe, Munro and in fact all the outlying men, seemed to be everywhere and scarcely a ball went out of bounds.

Y. M. C. A.'S GAME.

Y. M. C. A. demonstrated its superiority over the Safe Works nine Saturday afternoon when that team defeated the iron workers on Hope Common by the score of 6 to 2. Superb work in the outfield and timely work with the stick in the latter half of the game, after everybody was convinced that the team had left their batting eye at home, won the day for the association. Safe Works got but five scattered hits off Burt's delivery. Burns, too, tossed a good game, but a series of hits in the sixth, seventh and eighth, and one costly error made his work as a whole ineffective.

Charley Smith, of Y. M. C. A., was caught on third by a threadbare trick in the fifth inning. The bases were full with two out and prospects for runs looked brilliant. A conference had just occurred over a decision by Umpire Brown. Smith was playing well off third and napping, under the impression that pitcher had the ball, when Allen threw to Cooney, putting Smith out and retiring the side. About that decision—that a foul tip caught from the bat does not constitute a strike after two strikes have already been called—Umpire Brown, acting in good faith, was wrong, and the decision not being an error of judgment the Safe Works captain was within his right in questioning the same. However, the ruling had no effect on the ultimate result of the game, as the side was immediately retired before any runs were made.

The Y. M. C. A. boys made their first score in the sixth, when a base hit by Percy Hand brought Bolsterie and Barnes across the plate, making the tallies even. In the seventh, Charlie Dupee came up and negotiated a single, Burt sacrificed, Moore hit out a safe one, Bosterle followed with a two-bagger, bringing in Dupee and Moore got home on the ball being badly fielded. A double by Schoonmaker, a single by Dupee, and a double by Burt were responsible for two more runs in the eighth, sending the scoring for the game. Barnes drove a long one away out into lone territory in the ninth for three bases but was caught while trying to make home.

PLAINS WON GAME.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, July 14—The local ball team, accompanied by a large number of rooters, journeyed to Roselle Saturday afternoon and took the crack team of the Roselle Field Club into camp by a score of 7 to 3.

The game after the second innings settled down to all that could be desired. Scotch Pains went to the bat first and before the Roselle team knew it had 5 runs tallied. In their second half two more were added. After this Tabor, who was in the box for the home team, settled down and Scotch Plains was retired in one-two-three order for the rest of the game. Roselle managed by timely batting, assisted by several errors, in ther half of the sixth, to tally two runs and another was added in their half of the ninth.

The game abounded with double plays, heavy batting and base stealing. Brogan, of the Scotch Plains team, succeeded in making a daring steal from third to the plate during the first inning, and Pete also distinguished himself by making a home run drive to right field.

Saturday afternoon the team will meet the crack Xavier Deaf Mutes, of New York on the local diamond.

Following is the line-up and score by innings:

WHO'S TREASURER?

That Question Came Near Disrupting Pond Beneficial Association at Last Meeting.

An attempt to decide whether or not Patrick Nugent is treasurer of the Pond Beneficial Association, resulted in a stormy session of that organization at a meeting held in Pythian Hall, Saturday evening.

In the course of electing officers to fill unexpired terms, the treasurership was brought up which Nugent has been holding. Several of the members declare Nugent should be ousted as he was out of benefits and was therefore not a member. They were upheld by the president who declared that Nugent had not furnished a bond since his election and should be displaced on that account.

Nugent objected, strenuously maintaining that he was treasurer and was going to stay in office. The fire was fanned and matters were becoming serious when a truce was called by electing George Batchelor to the office temporarily. Nugent asserts that he will carry the matter to the courts.

Other officers elected were John Traynor as trustee for six months in place of Patrick Cray, and Robert Hangliter as trustee for twelve months in place of Charles Bowden.

GREAT DAY FOR LOCAL GOLFERS

Ideal Weather and Courses in Good Condition Attracted Many to the Local Clubs.

BRUNSWICK'S TEAM LOST

Most Important Event Was Hillside's Defeat of Team From New Brunswick Golf Club—Winners Were Abbott and Peterson at Hillside and Frank Rogers at Park.

Ideal weather and two good courses brought out the local golfacs in force, Saturday afternoon. The principal event of the day was the team match between the Hillside Club and the New Brunswick Golf Club on the Hillside links. The visitors were so badly defeated that they hardly knew they were playing. Then there were the usual competitions at both Hillside and Park Golf Clubs in which the honors at the former went to Gordon W. Abbott and Walter Peterson while Frank Rogers was low man at the other club.

PARK GOLF CLUB.

While everything was conducive to good golf on the links of the Park Golf Club Saturday afternoon, no particularly good scores were made. Most of the players seemed to have an off day and the scores turned in were unusually high. There was, however, a large field out, a score registering for the weekly competition for the President's cup and many others enjoying a friendly game.

First honors went to Frank Rogers who is now tied for third place with C. W. McCutchen. S. St. John McCutchen still leads. The scores for day, better than 100 net, were as follows:

	G	H	N
Frank Rogers	107	26	81
Jos. O. McKelvey	104	20	84
Nelson A. Miller	115	29	86

Late in the afternoon an informal approaching and putting contest was arranged in which Miss Mabel VanDeventer and Charles R. Morse were the winners, finding out their three approaches in ten strokes. Mr. and Mrs. William M. McCutchen and Miss May S. Shreve and Augustus VanDeventer tied for second place with eleven strokes each.

The usual informal reception was held at the clubhouse during the afternoon. Mrs. Augustus VanDeventer and Mrs. Walter M. McGee received.

HILLSIDE CLUB.

Golf enthusiasts were highly favored Saturday in their play for the various events on the Hillside Tennis and Golf course. The weather was perfect and everything was just to the liking of the contestants. The course was in fine condition and from early in the morning till late in the afternoon it was occupied.

In the morning there was the regular play for the Ackerman cup and the weekly play for the Boys' cup. In the competition for the for the former event there were but two entries, Miss Lida vanHerwerden, who scored a preliminary win with a net score of 100 from scratch, and Miss Daisy Elsberg who, with a handicap of 12, made a net score of 106.

Gordon W. Abbott won first honors for the Boys' cup, while Arthur Peterson, who holds the lead for the cup, and W. T. Glenney tied for second honors.

Gordon W. Abbott, 93, 18—75; Arthur Peterson, 98, 18—80; W. T. Glenney, 96, 16—80; Howard G. Lapsley, 107, 22—85; N. P. Rogers, Jr., 97, 0—97; A. D. Beers, 98, 16—82; E. M. Daniel, 96, 12, 20—92.

The weekly competition for the Golf Committee cup attracted a fair-sized field, but several did not turn in their scores. Walter Peterson won first honors. D. H. Rowland finished in second place, while W. L. Glenney finished third and thus secured second place for the cup. H. F. Baker leads by a single point.

The scores for the Golf Committee cup are as follows:

Another interesting event of the afternoon was the team match between Hillside and New Brunswick, although the latter was completely out of its class. The home team gave the visitors an overwhelming defeat, the score being 35 to 2. Thomas R. VanBoskerck was the only Hillside man beaten. He was 2 down. All of the others scored, with the exception of C. W. Abbott and he was even up on his opponent. The younger members of the team scored the most number of points, as the summary will show. E. L. Stevenson was the only man on the visiting team to score.

FREEHOLDERS DOING THINGS

COMMITTEES WERE APPOINTED TO MAKE VARIOUS REPAIRS.

S. S. Childs Wants to Lay Pipe Lines Through Bernardsville — To Paint Bridges Over Raritan.

Somerville, July 15—The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met at the bridge below Hub Hollow, near Peapack, Saturday, and transacted some important business. It was decided to rebuild the platform bridge there and lower the roadbed. A proper retaining wall will be constructed. The committee appointed to take charge of the work includes Messrs. Whitenack, Philhower, Codington, Mobus and Lutkins.

An application was received from Samuel S. Childs for permission to lay a pipe line for carrying water and a pole line for conveying electric current, along the county road through Bernardsville. This was granted, if, after a careful examination in the matter, it meets with the approval of Director Logan, Engineer Doughty and Counsel Frech.

The iron bridge across the Raritan river at Bound Brook, the Somerville bridge, the Raritan bridge and the North Branch bridge will be repainted. Bids for the same will be received until Tuesday, August 12, when they will be publicly opened in the Court House. The committee in charge of these improvements includes Messrs. Gibson, E. B. and R. W. Hoagland, Cruser and Logan.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.
F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, MD.
Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I send you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.
About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse and worse, my hearing in this ear entirely.
I then went a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, under a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would in no case, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.
I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain, Very truly yours,

VOTE ON NEW ENGINE HOUSE

The Borough Council Called a Special Election for August to Vote on Engine House.

LITTLE OTHER BUSINESS.

Frame Buildings Cannot be Erected on Somerset St., Between City Line and Mountain Ave.—No Report on Greater City Plan as Minority of Committee Was Not Ready.

Two important resolutions were presented at the meeting of the Borough Council Thursday. The first established August 12 as a date for a special election when the question of an issuance of bonds to cover the expenses of erecting the new fire engine house will be submitted to the voters of the borough. The second was an order hereafter prohibiting the erection of frame buildings on Somerset street between the line dividing the city and borough and the southerly side of Mountain avenue.

The meeting was short and harmonious. In the absence of Mayor Smalley, Charles L. Nichols, president of the board, occupied the chair. No report was made by the annexation and consolidation committee and that question did not come up in any form except when a communication was read from J. T. MacMurray, city clerk of Plainfield, stating that the request for a special committee to confer on the matter of consolidation with a similar committee from the borough board had been referred to the Common Council at the meeting of July 7. Mr. MacMurray's communication further stated that the request had been laid on table by motion to that effect until the return of the corporation counsel. This caused evident dissatisfaction among some members of the Council, but the matter dropped without discussion.

Chairman Arnold of the street committee made the following report for the month of June: Expenditures—Labor, $27; macadamizing, $157.23; street sprinkling, $101.80; stone, $303.96; total, $589.98. Robert M. Clark, chairman of the fire, water and lamps committee reported expenditures as follows: Electric Light Company, $484; special fire duty, July 3 and 4, $59.50; J. P. Humble, $20; Frank Mobus, $6; P. A. Magg, $1.60; C. H. Rugg, $5.50; A. M. Griffen, $1.95; gas company, $2.80; total, $513.35. Chief of Police Campbell's report, submitted by Councilman Lee, of the police committee, showed that during the month there were six arrests for drunkenness, two for disorderly conduct, and seven for stealing golf balls. The sum of $30 was collected in fines.

The report of George F. Brown, collector and treasurer, was as follows: Taxes and interest, $304.49; Board of Health, $4.51; special school, $171.18; Frank Rowley, clerk, license, $37.50; bills payable, note, $1,000; balance on hand, June 1, $2,003.74; total receipts, $3,611.42; disbursements, $3,156.34; cash on hand, July 1, $455.08.

A resolution was passed authorizing the board to borrow $1,000 to meet current expenses. A communication was read from the League of American Municipalities inviting the board to send delegates to the annual convention to be held at Grand Rapids, Michigan, August 27, 28, 29. Referred to proper committee.

The resolution providing that buildings erected on Somerset street shall be brick or stone goes into effect immediately and a fine, not exceeding $10 and not less than $5, will be levied for every day a building erected in violation of the ordinance shall be allowed to stand. Structures on other streets may be as heretofore.

OFFICER RESIGNED.

Result of Trouble Between Him and Westfield's Former Chief.

The Westfield Township Committee was greatly surprised Wednesday night when the resignation of Policeman Cyrus Wilcox was received. It is a well-known fact for some time past Mr. Wilcox and Past Chief of Police Connoly have been at odds. When Wilcox resigned Wednesday night at the committee meeting, he asked to see all the members of the committee, except Mr. Connoly, who is chairman of the committee, so that he could explain to them his reasons for resigning. The explanation resulted in the committee's acceptance. Mr. Wilcox was one of the best officers Westfield ever had.

Announcement Was Belated.

The marriage has just been announced of Miss Catherine Higgins, of West Front street, to B. A. Cook. The ceremony was performed in Elizabeth, more than a year ago, by Rev. Father Fersitt.

NEW JERSEY FIREMEN'S HOME

CONDITION SHOWN IN ANNUAL REPORT JUST MADE PUBLIC.

Report Is Long Delayed—Present Condition is Good—The Financial End of It.

The second annual report of the managers of the New Jersey Firemen's Home has been completed. The document is rather late in being made public, and the firemen throughout the State have been looking for its appearance for months past. The report covers the doings of the board of managers up to October 31 last.

The managers who have control of the home affairs are General Bird W. Spencer, chairman; John McKiernan, Paterson, treasurer; William T. Collis, Charles N. Reading, William H. Brown, George M. Wertz, Egbert Seymour and William S. Hancock.

The report, in part, is as follows: "During the year the following persons have been admitted to the home: Michael McNally, Jersey City, December 4, 1900; J. D. Brower, New Brunswick, December 17, 1900; Charles B. VanPelt, Matawan, December 17, 1900; Charles W. Knowles, Passaic, January 4, 1901; John DeGroff, Bayonne, April 10, 1901; Nathan P. Teed, Eatontown, May, 2, 1901; Joseph Kirwin, Hoboken, September 1, 1901; Adolphus G. Coombs, Trenton, September 17, 1901.

During the year the barns and buildings belonging to the home have been thoroughly repaired and painted, new line fences put up, fire escapes placed on the home, grounds cleared up and various improvements made.

The report of Treasurer McKiernan shows total receipts amounting to $12,993.50. The report of expenditures is: Subsistence, $1,004.81; clothing, $165.52; medical attendance, $39.96; farm expenses, $987.39; repairs to building, $3,643.86; salary to superintendent, $550; wages of farmer, farm hand, $734.30; forage for horses, cows, etc., $314.56; other wages of employes, $338.25; incidental expenses, $1,674.18; furniture, $24.49; balance on hand, $3,611.28; total, $12,993.50; cost of rations, $1,004.81; food cost per man per day, shoes, repairing, clothing, etc., $106.50; cost per man per year, $8.79.

The report of the physician, Dr. C. Wagg, says that during the eighteen months that the home has been opened there has not been one case of acute disease. While a few of the inmates have suffered at times from chronic troubles, without exception, all have greatly improved since living there, due undoubtedly to its salubrious location, excellent sanitary arrangements and the regular life the rules demand.

NEW ERA IN RAILROADING.

The New Jersey Central as a Leader in the Work.

No railroad in the country has made greater strides in railroading than the New Jersey Central—the road which has just put into operation hourly trains between New York and Philadelphia. These trains start on the first minute of every hour and many of them cover the distance of ninety miles in two hours.

The equipment is new and up-to-date. Buffet parlor car service is also provided. The coaches are carpeted, lighted by gas and vestibuled. The locomotives are powerful, high speed machines and brand new too. The road-bed is trap rock ballasted and the rails recently laid are heavy, assuring great speed and safety. Hard coal is burned, hence no dust, cinders or smoke.

This company also operates the Royal Blue Line to Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, operating the finest day train in the world. Its route is picturesque, passing throgh a most beautiful section of New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The idea of hourly trains is unique in as much as it is easy to remember—a train every hour and on the hour.

Mother Always Keeps It Handy.

"My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains and general ill health due primarily to indigestion," says L. W. Spalding, Verona, Mo. "Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now, at the age of seventy-six, eats any thing she wants, remarking that the pains no bad effects as she has ben bottle of Kodol handy." Don't waste time doctoring symptoms. Go after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol rests the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. L. W. Randolph.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 28.—Conquered by Love. R. M. Boyds.

Topic.—Means of growth.—Phil. iii. 12-16; Col. i. 10-14.

Christian growth is a necessity. It is necessary because we can never in this life come to a state of moral and spiritual perfection. At least this was Paul's opinion. After nearly thirty years of most devout and zealous service and consecration he declared that he still pressed forward, "not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended." Language could not be plainer. Paul at least knew nothing of perfection here, and hence he must needs always press on toward the goal. The same necessity for the same reason rests upon all Christians.

Paul was actuated in his desire for Christian growth and for progress by a profound reason. Christ had apprehended on said hold of him for salvation, and, if he failed in apprehending that for which he was apprehended in Christ, then Christ's work for him would be in vain and ineffective. Therefore he was zealously anxious to follow out and to lay hold on the eternal life which Christ had apprehended for him by His death. This profound motive should influence us all in desiring to persevere unto salvation. Christ died that we might be saved, and lest His death be in vain we should accept Him as our Saviour and persevere in Christian faith and life until the end.

Paul's method of progress and growth is also set forth in the topical reference. It consisted of singleness of aim. "This one thing I do. * * * I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Christianity must have the supreme place in our lives if we are to grow as we should. Christian progress can only be made by putting Christ first and making all things revolve about Him as the planets revolve around the sun. And then we may press forward with singleness of aim Paul suggests that we must forget the things that are behind. Paul's past would have interfered with present progress. But God had blotted out the past, and why should he dwell upon it to the detriment of his advancement in Christian faith and service? The past and everything else that interferes with our constant growth must be forgotten or brushed aside. Paying, doing for him, is our only sure method of success.

The goal set before us is worthy our utmost endeavors. It is "the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." The prize is the crown of eternal life, and God on high calls us to it. What an inspiration! The contestant in the Grecian games thought it an honor to win a mortal crown. What should we think, therefore, of a heavenly immortal crown? And God calls us on. How can we falter or refuse?

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. i, 1-6; iii, 7-9; Jer. xii, 1, 2; Hos. xiv, 5-7; Mal. iv, 1, 2; Matt. xiii, 31-33; Luke i, 8-10; Eph. ii, 19-22; I Pet. ii, 1-3; II Pet. iii, 17, 18.

A Call to Duty.

Every one may help to keep the standard of intellectual honesty at a lofty pitch, and what better service can a man render than to furnish the world with an example of faithful dealing with his own conscience and with his fellows? This, at least, is the one talent that is placed in the hands of the obscurest of us all. And what is this amile of the world, to win which we are bidden to sacrifice our moral manhood; this frown of the world, whose terrors are more awful than the withering up of truth and the slow going out of light within the souls of us? Consider the triviality of life and conversation and purpose in the bulk of those whose approval is held out for our prize and the mark of our calling. Measure, if you can, the empire over those of prejudice unadulterated by a single grain of rationality and weigh, if you can, the huge burden of custom, unrelieved by a single leavening particle of fresh thought. In the light of these things a man should surely dare to live his small span of years with little heed of the common speech upon him or his life, only caring that his days may be full of reality and his conversation of truth speaking and wholeness.—John Morley.

The Best Training.

It is never in ease or luxury, with freedom from sense of need and care, that the world's best and strongest helpers are trained. Those who have grown up in the midst of common human conditions, knowing care and the pressure of life's burdens, feeling the press of need and the pinch of narrow limitations, meeting trial and enduring struggle, learn in these very experiences to be sympathetic and helpful to others.—Forward.

Freely Give.

Christian beneficence is a duty, but what is the measure of it? We cannot fix a measure the same to every one, but the Scripture rule is plain and is a sufficient rule, "Freely give." The giving should be with a free spirit, the spirit of giving, and it should be liberal, and liberality is measured by the means at command. Do you give "freely?"—United Presbyterian.

Unfinished Work.

There is no ruin like an unfinished work. The incomplete stands for hopes never to be realized, and prayers to which no answer will ever come.—Presbyterian Journal.

The Whiteness of the Soul.

The man who in this world can keep the whiteness of his soul is sure likely to lose it in any other—Alexander Smith.

CADETSHIP TO PLAINFIELD

CONGRESSMAN FOWLER ANNOUNCES RESULT OF THE EXAMINATIONS.

N. P. Rogers, Jr., Was First in the Competition and Fred VanAuken First Alternate.

Word was received in this city last Friday from Congressman Charles N. Fowler, that two Plainfield young men stand at the head of the list in the competitive examination for the West Point cadetship that was recently held at Pingry School, Elizabeth. N. Pendleton Rogers, Jr., of East Front street, stands at the head of the list, and Fred T. VanAuken, of East Sixth street, is second.

The name of Mr. Rogers will be sent to the Secretary of War for the cadetship and Mr. VanAuken will be recommended as first alternate. The Plainfield young men are to be highly congratulated on their successful showing. The examinations were held just one month ago and there was a large number of competitors from every part of the Eighth district.

Mr. Rogers will take the entrance examination to West Point in the latter part of August, and if successful will enter the institution in September. In case of his failure to pass the examination, a physicial one being included, an opportunity will then be given to VanAuken, the first alternate.

TO BUILD SHOPS AT ONCE

MILLIKEN BROTHERS, OF NEW YORK, HAVE THE CONTRACT FOR WORK.

L. J. H. Groshart, Represents the Firm, and is Looking for Men at Once.

L. J. H. Groshart, of New York, is in Plainfield, looking after the survey for the new industry to be established at the corner of West Front street and Clinton avenue. Mr. Groshart represents Milliken Brothers, civil engineers and contractors, a large firm with offices all over the United States, and likewise in Australia, South Africa, England and several agencies in Europe.

Mr. Groshart will have temporary quarters erected near the site of the new construction to be used as an office. He is now prepared to hire laborers, and carpenters to begin work immediately, and in a very short time masons and bricklayers and other skilled labor will be in demand. Mr. Groshart is now casting an eye about for crushed stone, sand and material for concrete, which he intends to buy in the immediate vicinity. Work on the building will be rapidly pushed and it is the hope of the company to be able to occupy their new quarters in three month's time.

Besides the main building 400 by 100 feet, there will be three other structures on the property, a blacksmith shop, a boiler and dynamo building, and a pattern-storage building. The principal branch of the new industry will be the construction of hydraulic machinery, heavy machine tools, lathes, planers and instruments for use in railroad shops. The president of the Milliken Ayer Company, of Philadelphia, who are the builders is H. S. Manning, of the firm of Manning, Maxwell & Moore, of New York.

FOUND FINE SAND.

Vein Found in Excavating for Cellar on Somerset Street.

Workmen engaged in excavating the cellar for Lafayette Rosenstiehl's new building on Somerset street have struck a vein of very fine and valuable sand running through the west end of the cellar about four feet below the surface. The sand is being saved to be used in mixing the mortar. It is a remarkable fact that when the cellar was being dug for the building immediately adjoining no sand was struck.

Busy Season Promised.

Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood, of the Y. M. C. A., and the newly-appointed boys' secretary, Kenneth Robbie, are planning to make the coming autumn a busy one for the young men of Plainfield. A schedule of gymnastic and athletic events is now in preparation. Several outings are being arranged for the boys' department, one of which will be a visit to the Bronx menagerie.

Building New Road.

Mayor Smalley, at his private expense, is having a new stress laid out in the borough, running from Greenbrook road toward the mountain, directly west of Harrison street, and parallel with it. The new thoroughfare will be 900 feet long and will be named Jefferson avenue. The work is being done by C. M. Meeker.

Drinking Trough in Place.

The drinking trough for horses ordered by the Common Council has been put in position on Muhlenberg place, where it is proving a blessing to horses.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 28, "The Programme of Christianity"—Text, Matt. iv, 23; x, 7-8.

Preach, teach, heal.

The connection of soul and body is very close. Religion has much to do with both. A pure soul in a sound body is the need of every one. Jesus had much to do with healing when He was on earth and had entered upon His three years of ministry. We have no account of any cures performed by Him previous to His baptism. After that event His whole course seems a continuous series of healings of the sick.

When He sends His disciples out to prepare the way before Him in the towns and villages, He tells them to proclaim the nearness of the kingdom of heaven and, in token of it, to heal the sick.

The work of the Christian church is not done when men have been brought to repent and forsake their sins and to serve God. The work has, in fact, just begun. Now there must be training in all manner of work of mercy and beneficence. How to live rightly must be discovered and practiced and taught. Sin, which must be understood, their evils recognized, remedies found and applied.

In all ages the duty of giving alms has been recognized as binding upon Christians as truly as the duty to worship in the house of God, but almsgiving has not always been wisely directed. The effect on the one receiving has not always been good. Not always has the giver stopped to inquire or care what the effect was, but the act of bestowing has been taken to be all meritorious regardless of results. Now, a better and more intelligent view is coming to be held. We are to give, but give in such a way as to benefit the receiver. God is honored only as we follow His plan. Good intention must be followed by good deed.

A broad and comprehensive view of the history of the church shows a gradual progression and widening of the scope of Christian efforts. Men no longer place the chief emphasis on what is held as opinion on matters of doctrine. The form of service is not considered all important, so that all must conform to one ritual and ceremonial of worship. Many things once held as of vital importance are now forgotten or viewed with indifference.

But new emphasis is being placed on the relief of the distressed, the diseased and the unfortunate. How to cure sickness and relieve pain is coming to be studied as a Christly work. Christian physicians, trained nurses, sisters of charity, deaconesses, are coming to hold a place of much importance in the work of saving a sick and sin cursed world. Hospitals are rising side by side with schools and churches.

The reform of the vicious and criminal is engaging attention increasingly, and men are finding that punishment of crime is not the true end of justice and that government is to reform the evil is the true object of all correction. We are to save the sinful and cure the suffering. The blessedness of strength is best realized in helping the helpless to be strong.

The Sin of Magnifying Trifles.

The habit of magnifying trifling matters is very common. Most of us regard it as a weakness rather than a sin. Certainly it is a weakness, but it also is a sin. It involves self deception and often the deception of others. It is a violation of truth; it means the substitution as an object of thought and endeavor of something of little consequence for something of real importance, as if the moral values were reversed; it causes distorted views of life, misdirected effort, unsatisfying results and mental and spiritual unhappiness. They who are guilty of it soon lose the confidence of others in some measure because it becomes evident that their judgment cannot be trusted even if nothing worse is believed of them.—Congregationalist.

Thoughts.

Let the heart speak freely, but see also that it speaks prudently.

If we are like Christ, sorrow is on the surface an unfathomed depth of joy.

They hear the song of the angels who are waiting for the coming of the Saviour.

Who expresses the Christian confidence: "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

That is the best gift of love which will in some way be helpful to the person receiving it.—United Presbyterian.

In His Own Power.

Circumstances are beyond the control of man, but his conduct is in his own power.—Disraeli.

A Sunday Morning Hymn.

Dear Lord, Thy sacred day's at hand,
The dearest of the week;
We bow obey Thy just command
Thy house of prayer to seek.

We thank Thee for this blessed day,
This day of rest and praise;
We put all worldly thoughts away;
Our thoughts to Thee we raise.

We Thee adore, O blessed Lord,
For our atonement made;
Exalt Thy name with one accord
On whom our hearts are stayed.

We come to Thee with contrite hearts
To seek Thy pard'ning grace,
To seek the purifying peace imparts,
To see Thy smiling face.

We thank Thee for Thy promise sure
The sinners cry to hear,
To hope especially secure,
To free from ev'ry fear.

Help us, dear Lord, our lives to Thee
In loving trust to give;
From evil's thralldom make us free
That we for Thee may live.

In Thee we live, in Thee we die,
Thy will, dear Lord, be done;
With Thee on earth, with Thee on high,
Eternal life is won.

NINE HUNDRED WENT TO THE SEASHORE

First Excursion of the Season From Plainfield Took Place Last Thursday.

WENT IN TWO SECTIONS.

ANNUAL OUTING OF FIRST BAPTIST SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND CHAPELS.

Sun Was on Hand to Bid the Excursionists a Pleasant Trip, But the Traditional Rain Came for a Short Visit.

"First to go" were the members of the First Baptist and Mount Olive Baptist church Sunday-schools who left in a happy frame of mind, last Thursday, bound for Asbury Park to spend a day in healthful recreation. There were 900 of them, requiring eighteen cars in two sections to afford means of transportation, and a happier lot of excursionists never drew away from the North Avenue station. Old Sol smiled his sweetest and warmest during the hour of departure and the prospect of a fair day at the shore brought smiles to the faces of old and young. Then sundry clouds had hidden the sun from sight and there was the traditional rain on Baptist's day.

As is usual when a Sunday-school crowd gathers at the North Avenue station, eager and anxious to clamber abroad the train, the place presented a most animated appearance. What with friends to see the pleasure seekers off, the staid commuters waiting for the 7:55 and the customary onlookers there was very little room to spare on the spacious platform. It is a sight to be witnessed frequently in this city during the summer and gives the passenger in the fleeting trains the impression that Plainfield is a place of some importance.

That morning's outbound delegation was large in one sense of the word but for the ordinary Baptist excursion it was somewat below the average. The first section of the train, twelve cars, in charge of Conductor Walter Durling, of Jersey City, was filled to an uncomfortable degree. Those who waited for the second section were more fortunate as but six of them were occupied. The congestion was relieved, however, at Roselle, where matters were evened up. The second train was in charge of Conductor Frank Webster, of this city, whose genial face and assuring manner always inspires confidence in a train of Plainfielders that their journey is to be made in safety. Assistant Train Despatcher English was on hand to look after the start.

The run to the shore was made in the usual time and the return home in the evening was made at about 8:30, leaving the beach at 6:40. The committee which was in charge during the day consists of John McLaughlin, George Brown, L. W. Randolph, C. B. Rittenhouse and F. W. Jones.

DEACON IN COURT.

Spencer Conway Up for Violating Health Ordinance and Fined $5 for the Offence.

The familiar visage of Deacon Spencer Conway bobbed up serenely in the city court, Friday morning. This time the City Board of Health was responsible for his appearance. The board officials received word from a neighbor that the Deacon was reducing expenses by cleaning his cesspool and dumping the water in the backyard. Inspector Addis went to his home on West Fourth street, yesterday, and investigated.

The Deacon admitted violating the health ordinance but in court he observed that it didn't make much difference because he sprinkled "consecrated" lye over the water. City Judge Runyon said he guessed it did and imposed a $5 fine, which he said was very light as the ordinance demands a penalty of $25. After paying the amount Inspector Addis served the Deacon with a thirty days' notice to have his house connected with the sewer. Conway claims it is spite work on the part of his neighbors.

EXPERT ASSISTANT.

Jeweler Doane Has Secured Services of Wm. Robin.

Mr. Doane is now prepared to do any complicated watch or clock work from an ordinary alarm clock to the finest China, English, French or American, from an ordinary Swiss watch to the finest repeater. Mr. Robin is also a first-class optician and is able to fit the most complicated forms of defective vision. You can rest assured that your eyes will be properly fitted here as Mr. Doane himself is also an expert optician and has been honored with the degree of doctor of optics.

BABCOCK LOSS WAS SETTLED

Insurance Companies Will Pay $95,000 For the Loss on Babcock Building.

IT TOOK FOUR MONTHS.

Babcock Estate Will Undoubtedly Rebuild, But Two Executors Are Away and It Will Take Some Time to Prepare Plans and Estimates For Changes.

Just four months after the big fire in the Babcock building the loss has been adjusted on the building. As has been reported from time to time there was first one thing and another which caused delay in the settlement. This was largely due to the fact that nearly every company doing business in Plainfield was represented in the loss. This necessitated the calling together the representatives of these companies. Some lived at a distance and the work of adjusting was naturally very slow.

Tapscott & Hardingham, local agents, took up the work at the start of adjusting the loss, but the task was one of much magnitude that other and more experienced people had to be called in to assist. The well-known firm of adjustors, Miller & Maltby, which adjusted the loss for Woodhull & Martin, was engaged and they were assisted by Tapscott & Hardingham in the work. The Babcock estate secured the services of John Abbott to make an estimate as to how much it would cost to rebuild the structure. His figures are not known exactly, but it is reported that they were a trifle over $100,000. The insurance companies generally believed this sum to be too high and they figured on a lower basis. After a number of conferences the loss was finally settled for $95,000, which is considered to be a fair adjustment. Mr. Webster, of Newark, a well-known insurance broker, represented the companies, making one of the three parties selected to adjust the loss. This proved to be the only feasible and practical plan, thus bringing about the settlement.

There seems to be no doubt that the building will be rebuilt, but it will doubtless be on somewhat different lines. When the work will be started is not known. Wm. M. Stillman, one of the executors, has gone to California, while Mrs. G. H. Babcock is at her summer home at Watch Hill, R. I. Before any definite plans are made it will be necessary for them to be consulted. The chances are that the building will remain in its present condition this summer, as a good part of the season is gone and it will require some time to prepare plans, get estimates, etc., for rebuilding. The fact that Mr. Stillman recently left for the Pacific coast leads one to believe that the matter will be held up for the present at least.

To Choose a Successor.

The committee appointed by the First Baptist church to secure a successor to Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, has had a meeting and George A. Chapman, George H. Batchelor and Lucius H. Biglow, Jr., were added to the membership of the committee. The plan for securing another pastor was outlined. It is the intention of the committee to visit different churches and hear various divines preach, and not invite them to the church to preach as candidates. The instructions to the committee were to secure a successor at the earliest possible date. This will be done, and the chances are that a selection will be made within the next month or so.

GRADING PROPERTY.

C. M. Meeker Given Contract From Walsh Brothers.

C. M. Meeker has received the contract from Walsh brothers to complete the grading of their property at Third street and Clinton avenue. The work has been going on for some time and has been interrupted on several occasions, one of which was the sudden flight of Patsy Christmas, an Italian padrone, with the wages of the Italian laborers. For some time afterward it was impossible for the contractor to get workmen to go ahead with the job.

Poisoning the System.

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dullness and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. DeWitt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. L. W. Randolph.

CITY POLICE WON THE GAME

Defeated Baseball Nine of the Elizabeth Police Force by the Score of 21 to 4.

IT WAS VERY ONESIDED.

After the First Inning the Home Team Pounded the County Seat Pitcher All Over the Field and Made Runs at Will—Higgins' Great Catch—A Banquet.

Defeat-bald, stinging, unalloyed defeat—was administered in one large dose to the aggregation of bluecoats which came to this city from the county seat, Thursday afternoon, intending to give an exhibition of the national game. To use common parlance, their opponents, Chief Kiely's Colts, "put it all over them." For one brief inning the Elizabethans had hopes of keeping up their end of the game, but that was all. When the locals settled down to work in the second and got their eagle eyes and batting arms on the leather, they toyed, they played, they out-classed the visitors and when the one sided contest came to an end the latter wondered why they only brought in four runs while Plainfield piled up twenty-one. Nobody else was puzzled because it was a clear case of "one did and the other didn't" play ball.

Hope Common was the scene of the slaughter and although announcement that the game was to be played was made but a day previous, a crowd of 500 was on the grandstand and bleachers. The majority rooted for Plainfield but there was also a good sized delegation of leather-lunged fans from down the road who made the welkin ring with shouts when Elizabeth made a play, which was in deed very seldom.

Elizabeth won the toss up and took to the field at the beginning. Roundsman John Flynn was first to the bat and, disobeying Captain Overbaugh's instructions, "put" on some high ones and fanned. His brother, Patrolman Charles Flynn had the same eye and was retired, to the great alarm of the grandstand which began to think Rabig was a wonder. Patrolman McCarthy found the ball but he was put out at first and Plainfield went out with a blank but a determination to do something.

They did, but by a series of three hits Ulrich was chased around the bases and come home with the first run. It was all the visitors got for some time for they were blanked until the sixth inning. Winn played with them, from first to last. They swashed the air, whirled around after the leather had passed and some of them didn't even see it go by them. The batsmen were retired in one, two, three order and withdrew to the bench to formulate a plan of action. Every man that stood up at the plate was given a new code of instructions, but all to no purpose. S. P. T. Wilbur, who looked unhappy in the role of umpire, even gave some of them a chance to walk to first (so it is asserted) but even that didn't suffice.

When the Plainfielders got a chance with the willow it was certainly a different story. There was one continuous sound of sharp cracks as the leather was sent bounding to every part of the Common. The fielders went chasing around like mad and the inside men fell all ever each other in an effort to stop the carousal but they might just as well have tried to preserve order at a christening over the "Port way. "Carrie" Higgins surprised them with a three bagger and Jack Conroy, who was the life of the game, made two runs in one inning and at one time stopped long enough in his flight to field a ball for the short stop who was declaring the second baseman out of order for getting in his territory.

Moses Quass was a little off at first but braced up and pranced around the bases three times. Charlie Flynn rapped out a double and when one man made a break in the eighth inning, Captain Overbaugh gave it out that a failure to hit the ball would mean retirement to the bench for the season. He didn't have a chance to fulfill his threat for not one of his men failed to get at least a "piece" of the good ones every time.

In the seventh inning, the county seat people showed a willingness to give up the game, but remembering the two defeats of last season, the Plainfielders wouldn't listen to it. The spectators were only too willing that the fun should go on and it did. Out of pure consideration the locals made enough errors to give the amateurs three more tallies and that was all. Those who looked for a reaction from the good work at the beginning were disappointed for it continued until the end.

A most noteworthy feature of the outfield was a running catch made by "Carrie" Higgins which then and there earned for him his reputation as a ball teaser.

So it was until the last inning and it was with a sigh of relief that Elizabeth's pets saw the last three men retired and they received permission to gather up their traps and "get away back" before the small boy commenced his howls of derision and applications for a place on the team.

Following the game victors and vanquished repaired to the summer garden of the Waldorf hotel where the latter lost sight of the sting of defeat while disposing of the repast prepared for them by Mine Host Windham. The members of both teams alternated in singing songs and making brief speeches but owing to the limited time at their command the enjoyment terminated early. The visitors departed for home after giving three hearty cheers for the Plainfield municipal police team.

Two more games are to be played between the two nines, the next one at Elizabeth and the last here. Captain Overbaugh has also arranged dates with the local firemen's team and the letter carriers.

TROLLEY PARTY.

Successful Result of Initial Attempt of Retail Clerks' Association.

One hundred and fifty young people were carried in three cars to Boynton Beach, Thursday, on a trolley party given by the Retail Clerks' Association. Weather and all combined made it a most delightful trip and with one accord the officers of the organization voted to make it the first of a series of similar affairs to be held during the summer.

On the journey to the beach, the ride was made more enjoyable by cornet solos by Whitney Frazee and vocal selections by members of the party. Dancing became the feature at the beach and was kept up until 11:30 when the return trip began. This city was reached at 1:15 Friday a. m.

HOME FROM WAR.

George Gregory Returned From Service in the Philippines.

Brimful of stories of life in the far east, George Gregory, another Plainfielder, has returned home after serving an enlistment of three years in the Philippines. His army life has altered this appearance to a remarkable degree, but he enjoyed it and has intentions of again becoming a soldier. He will spend a few weeks in this city, however, before he decides upon plans for the future.

Owns Some Fast Horses.

Among the guests at the Hotel Netherwood is Percy Alexander, of New York, owner of some of the fastest trotting horses in the country. Mr. Alexander has with him at the hotel, Pallatine, the horse that drove the famous Royal Baron to his mark in 2:12. It is his intention to bring some other fast steppers here before the end the season. Mr. Alexander will shortly have laid out a private pleasure park for driving purposes at Lake Hopatcong. He races his steeds merely for pleasure and never enters a horse for a series of heats.

Building Permits Granted.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane has issued to Sylveste Delago, a permit for the erection of a barn on North avenue, near Leland avenue. A permit has also been granted to Joseph Guiseppe for the erection of two small separate buildings on North avenue.

Granted Pension.

A. R. Vail, of Duer street, a veteran of the civil war, has been granted a pension by the U. S. pension commissioner. The pension amounts to $6 per month.

THE MIDSHIPMAN OF TO-DAY.

When Landing in Irish Ports Inhabited to Treatment Damaging to Dignity.

The midshipman who presents himself to most of us has a flavor of Marryat's immortal creation of Mr. Easy. In Irish ports, where Mr. Midshipman Easy is not so familiar a sight as in England, our coming Neisons have sometimes a little difficulty in preserving their gravity. A boat comes to the stairs of a pier. The middy in charge is possibly more vigorously get up than usual, to impress the natives of the savage land. Biddy is looking at him. "Ho! Mister sailor, will we sell that cheild?" "In bow. Way 'nuff. Forward there! Clear the stairs! Liberty men to land!" So hails young Nelson, but Biddy will not let him have the dignity of his position. "Hand me up the pretty boy wid the roses in his cheeks —'tis him I want to kiss. Away wid ye, brown devils! Ah, me, Miss Kate Macartney, attindint of this pier since George the Fourth was king. You won't kiss me, boy? Then you shall not land." Midshipman Rodney Nelson Camperdown has to submit to slights of this kind, says Army and Navy. It is on record that one of the good breed which makes our admirals was once carried along the rigging of a flagship under the arms of a negress, who wished to complain to the captain that this disgraceful boy had not paid his washing bill.

BIRDS THAT CAN TALK.

A Rose-Breasted Grosbeak That Made a Complimentary Remark to His Mate.

Prof. Scott, of Princeton, says that wild birds sometimes introduce variations into their songs, and again, more rarely, imitate not only the songs of other birds, but the barking of dogs, mechanical sounds, like the creaking of wheels, the filing of a saw, and even human speech. A writer in Bird-Lore gives this well-authenticated incident:

"One morning while I was standing on my back steps I heard a cheerful voice say: 'You are a pretty bird. Where are you?'

"I wondered how any parrot could talk loudly enough to be heard at that distance, for the houses on the street on both sides are not near. Presently the voice came again, clear, musical and strong: 'You are a pretty bird. Where are you?'

"For several days I endured the suspense of waiting for time to investigate. Then I chanced him up. There he was in the top of a walnut tree, and his gorgeous attire told me immediately that he was a rose-breasted grosbeak.

"At the end of a week he was saying: "Pretty, pretty bird, where are you?" He and his mate stayed near us all last summer, and his spring they came again. He is making the same remark, as plainly as ever a bird can speak."

SALVATION STREET-CLEANING

A New Work Taken Up by the Army in Western Cities with Profit to Both Sides.

One of the newest achievements of the Salvation Army in the west is in the line of street cleaning. Besides sweeping the streets morally to some extent, the army in several western cities has taken up plain street cleaning, and not only does it well, but makes a profit out of it.

Mayor Hugg, of Duluth, a few days ago made a formal proposal to the army that it should undertake the whole work of keeping that city clean, using the unemployed to do the work and taking its profit out of the sale of rags, paper and street sweepings. The proposal is under consideration and will probably be accepted.

In Chicago the army has been collecting the city's rags, waste paper and junk for some time. Last year the wagons of the Chicago branch gathered up 780 tons of paper, 30,000 pounds of rags and 5,000 pounds of string, and sold the lot at a good price.

Many homeless waifs are employed in this work, and while coming under the good influence of the army this gets a chance to earn their food and lodging.

Concerning Tongues.

Although it is the Chinese language which is spoken by the largest number of people on the face of the earth, it is in English that more than half of all existing newspapers are written, says the Westminster Gazette. Against a population of nearly 400,000,000 which speak Chinese, English is spoken by about 100,000,000. Next comes German, with 85,000,000; then Russian, with 65,000,000. French and Spanish are the native tongue of 41,000,000, Italian of 30,000,000, and Portuguese of only 13,000,000. In the United States newspapers appear printed in twenty-four different languages. The Italian tongue is, outside of Italy, spoken in Egypt and America. The use of Spanish is decreasing, but it is still a very important language in commerce.

American Girls Win.

The number of American girls who are now holding important positions in French opera has caused no little discontent among the Paris public. Not that there is any personal prejudice against the American girl, but because it is considered that French artists should have the first showing where engagement at their national theaters are concerned. But it is unquestionable that voices are beginning to be scarce in France, whereas America is advancing steadily as the country for good material which requires only classical training abroad to develop all the qualities necessary for operatic success.

THEATRICAL.

For a long time an effort has been made at the Eden Musee, New York, to represent current events of importance in wax. The latest effort in this line has just been completed. The new group occupies a large room in the Chamber of Horrors. In the background is Mount Pelee belching forth ashes and molten lava. In front of the volcano is the City of St. Pierre with its houses and public buildings falling down before the downpouring mass of lava. In the foreground, partially covered up by the ashes and debris of the ruined city are a number of victims. Every detail has been carefully arranged and the group is artistic as well as realistic. Many other new groups have been placed on exhibition at the Musee. Nearly all the old groups have been rearranged so that the interior of the Musee presents a new appearance. Special attention has been given to the American Gallery in preparation for the Fourth of July. All the war groups and groups showing scenes and incidents of the wars, as well as figures of important leaders of the various wars have been remodelled and rearranged. The Musee was decorated both outside and in, and presented an unusually good programme during the entire week of the Fourth of July. A large collection of moving pictures has just been received from London and will be shown hourly day and evening in series of twelve each. The new pictures show scenes and incidents about London previous to the time set for the Coronation ceremonies. Many of the pictures are of a mysterious character and will be of special interest to all. The afternoon and evening concerts will have choice programmes.

Despite the mounting of the mercury, capacity audiences are still the rule at Keith's Theatre, New York. The bill which is provided for the coming week is undeniably a strong one, and goes far to bear out the boast of the house that "Keith and excellence are synonymous terms." Few of the one act comedies, generally called sketches, are better known or more popular than "A Wise Guy," which is the medium selected by Edmond Hayes for his starring tour. Mr. Hayes, with a competent supporting company, heads the bill at Keith's and is sure to renew the favorable impressions previously made at this theatre. Of next importance are the Ballerinis, father and daughter, who have widely different acts. Ballerinis' troupe of trained dogs come to this country with a well established European reputation, and Miss Clara Ballerini is a trapeze performer of international note. Worthy of mention, even upon this strong bill are the Six Blackbirds, a half dozen small negroes, who are vocalists of no mean order; Stella Mayhew, who sings "coon" songs; Fiske & McDonough, in their sketch; and Collins & North with a singing and talking act. Eighteen other good features with new and interesting moving pictures, complete a characteristically admirable Keith show—there is none better.

The circulators of the petition report that they could without the least difficulty have secured far more names to the paper, if such were necessary.

MGR. JOHN N. FARLEY.

Protestant Clergyman Thinks Praesul Coadjutor Should Be Made Archbishop of New York.

Those who know the history and general lines of the work of Mgr. John N. Farley feel an especial gratification that he has been so constantly mentioned as the probable successor to Archbishop Corrigan in the diocese of New York.

Mgr. Farley, writes a Protestant clergyman in the New York Herald, is not an American by birth, but almost wholly an American by education, and as private secretary for a long period to Cardinal McCloskey, created monsegneur in 1883 by Leo XIII. in view of his faithful services; for many years pastor of St. Gabriel's, administering that great ecclesiastical plant with its multitude of parishioners and host of school children with singular wisdom and executive ability; and, above all, bearing himself with that wise moderation and grace of action which have always characterized him. It would seem even to the Protestant mind that New York and its interest, so far as they are part of the care of the Roman Catholic church, would be in hands pre-eminently safe, and under direction singularly wise, should the choice for the archbishopric of the diocese of New York fall upon this painstaking and cultivated priest.

As adviser of the late archbishop he knows the diocese. As a parish priest he understands the people. As he is coadjutor bishop he is in the natural succession. If one ultra-Protestant may be allowed the expression of an opinion, it seems to the writer of this article that these antique which as Protestants we most value and those things which Catholics most love would be well cared for by the elevation of Mgr. Farley to the archbishopric of the diocese of New York.

DUCHESS OF BUCCLEUCH.

She Does Not Approve One of King Edward's Associates and Plainly Tells Him So.

An incident which is causing considerable commotion in royal circles is the disagreement between King Edward and the duchess of Buccleuch, a member of the old-style, exclusive aristocracy, who has not countenanced the so-called "smart set." The king was to dine with the duke and duchess of Buccleuch and intimated his desire that a woman of his surrounding be invited.

DUCHESS OF BUCCLEUCH.
(Mistress of the Robes to the Queen of Great Britain.)

This is usually tantamount to a command, but the duchess of Buccleuch, nothing daunted, refused point-blank to ask the king's friend to make one of the dinner party. His majesty was furious and threatened to cancel his promise to dine with the Buccleuchs, whereat the duchess of Buccleuch retorted that she was willing to send her resignation as mistress of the robes to Queen Alexandra.

Later in the day the king thought better of it, informed the Buccleuchs that he accepted the exclusion of his favorite and forbade the duchess to resign.

Many members of the nobility, especially old country families, make no secret of their disapproval of various events in the king's social life.

Horned Rooster in Missouri.

A horned rooster delights the heart of J. A. Short, of Joplin, Mo. The horns are on each side of the head, which is unusual. However, it is supposed that the fowl bears through its horns. It is a remarkable fact that the rooster has no spurs on its legs.

The biggest excavated dock in the world is in course of construction in Rotterdam. It is to have a length of 1,200 yards, a breadth of 150 yards and a depth of water of 45 feet. The dock will be subsequently dredged until the depth is 75 feet.

COMMANDER RUNYON HONORED

PRESENTED WITH GOLD CHARM AT MEETING OF PERSEVERANCE LODGE.

Was the Gift of the Past Chancellors Association—Speech Made by Stephen Higham.

Evidences of the esteem in which Chancellor Commander William N. Runyon is held by the members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., continue to be extended him. At the last election of officers he had an honor bestowed him never equalled in the history of the organization, his retention as chancellor commander for another term.

Friday evening the officers were installed by District Deputy Jeremiah VanWinkle. At the close Stephen Higham, on behalf of the Past Chancellor's Association, presented Chancellor Commander Runyon with a beautiful gold charm, suitably engraved and bearing the insignia of the order. The presentation was preceded by one of the most concise and admirably worded speeches ever given in Perseverance Hall, in which some of the reasons why the chancellor commander should be thus honored were made plain.

The recipient was wholly taken by surprise but in his usual modest manner thanked the donors heartily and followed it with an address which evoked a storm of applause.

WHY THE PROSECUTORS HAVE BEEN ORGANIZED

Aim is to Secure a Unity of Effort Not Otherwise to Be Obtained.

ARTICLE ON SUBJECT.

WRITTEN BY MIDDLESEX'S PROSECUTOR FOR N. J. REVIEW OF C. AND C.

Prosecutor Voorhees, Who is President of the Association, Tells About Organization and Motives Which Led Up To It.

The June issue of the New Jersey Review of Charities and Corrections contains an interesting article by Prosecutor John S. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, on "State Prosecutors' Association." Mr. Voorhees is president of the association. His article is as follows:

"No department of government has greater influence upon the welfare of the people than that which relates to the administration of the criminal law, for the reason that security of person and of property is directly dependent, not upon law, however excellent, but upon the prompt, honest and energetic enforcement of that law.

"In England there are no public prosecutors. Crimes are left like civil injuries to be prosecuted by the injured party. This prosecution is wholly voluntary, except that a magistrate in important cases may bind over the victim to prosecute the criminal. As a consequence of this many crimes go unpunished because the victim is unwilling to incur the trouble and expense of a prosecution, or is bought off by the offender.

"In Holland, however, every district contained a prosecuting officer called a schout. He was the representative of the government, and was charged with the duty of prosecuting all offenders. The settlers of New York and of the greater portion of New Jersey came from the Netherlands. They brought the schout with them, and the institution of the public prosecutor thus took early root in this new soil.

"As early as May, 1606, the Legislature of the Colony of New Jersey selected George Deacon as King's Attorney or Public Prosecutor for the county of Burlington and Joseph Tomlinson for the county of Gloucester. Subsequently a prosecutor was provided for every county in the State.

"The Constitution of New Jersey now directs that an Attorney-General and Prosecutors of the Pleas shall be nominated by the Governor and appointed by him with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall hold their office for five years.

"The Legislature has provided that it shall be the Prosecutor's duty 'to use all reasonable and lawful diligence for the detection, arrest, indictment and conviction of offenders against the law.'

"In the enforcement of the criminal law the Prosecutor stands in lieu of the injured party. Crime is an injury not only to the individual, but also to the State. The Prosecutor represents the State and wields in the 'detection, arrest, indictment and conviction of offenders,' all the powers of the State government. He may set in motion the criminal law against any one charged with crime. All complaints taken by magistrates are sent to him, and by him are laid before the Grand Jury for investigation and indictment. All indictments found by that body are returned to him for trial. He has more or less intimate control over every step of the criminal procedure from the inception of the complaint to the conviction or acquittal of the accused party. His power is therefore very great, and his responsibilities commensurate with his power. It is of the utmost importance that the Prosecutors of the State discharge their duties intelligently, energetically and fearlessly, and that there should be uniformity in the criminal procedure of the various counties, and in the interpretation of the several acts relating to crimes. It is also of importance that any defects in the criminal law or the law relating to criminal procedure should be promptly detected and remedied. No one is better able to point out such defects, or the proper remedy, than those, who, through the discharge of their duties as Public Prosecutors, become expert in this branch of jurisprudence.

"The prosecutors of the several counties are wholly independent of one another. They report to no superior, each discharging his duties in his own way, and they have no communication with one another, except such as is wholly voluntary. It is not surprising therefore, that more or less diversity crept into the criminal procedure of the State. Local ideas and customs gradually modified the methods of criminal practice. While the law was the same the State over, the method of enforcing it differed in some respects in the different counties. These considerations led to the organization of the Prosecutors' Association of New Jersey.

"A preliminary meeting was held May 16, 1899, and the association was incorporated on the twentieth of June following with Prosecutors Walter F. Hayhurst, of Hunterdon; James S. Erwin, of Hudson; Peter W. Stagg, of Bergen; Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerset, and John R. Voorhees, of Middlesex county, as incorporators. The purposes for which the association was formed, as expressed in its by-laws, are for promoting social intercourse among its members, for the consideration and discussion of questions relating to criminal law, procedure and practice, for obtaining uniformity in criminal procedure in the various counties of the State, and for promoting the due administration of justice.

"The Attorney-General of the State and all prosecutors of the pleas who shall have subscribed to its by-laws are members of the association. Ex-prosecutors and assistant prosecutors and judges of the courts of common pleas are eligible to membership. Regular meetings of the association are held on the first day of each term of the Court of Errors and Appeals. The annual 'meeting' for the election of officers is held in November, and the members dine together in Trenton on the opening day of the Supreme Court in February. At this dinner an address is delivered by the president and selected topics are discussed by the members, and some distinguished guest is present who addresses the association upon a topic of interest. At the meeting in February last, Governor Murphy was present and addressed the association.

"The influence of the association has been felt since its incorporation in the legislation affecting crimes and criminal procedure. Its meetings, and the discussions which have taken place at them, the interchange of experience and methods, have gone a long way toward bringing about uniformity in the criminal practice of the several counties.

"A committee of the association is now engaged in preparing uniform blanks for complaints, warrants, recognizances and the like. Efforts are being made also to further the probation system, and such other methods as tend to the reform of the criminal's character, while punishing him for the crimes which he has committed."

BIG CROWD AT HOTEL HOP

THE NETHERWOOD WAS A POPULAR PLACE FOR CITY SOCIETY FOLK.

Largest Attendance of Season Saturday Evening—Feature of Last Evening's Sacred Concert.

More largely attended than any function yet held was Saturday's evening hop at the Hotel Netherwood. In addition to the goodly number that spent the hours in dancing the piazza was crowded with people during the whole evening. Many Plainfield people were guests on the occasion. It is getting to be quite the thing for Plainfield's smart set to resort to the Netherwood on Saturday evenings. The music by the orchestra was up to the usual high standard. The rule requiring evening dress was strictly enforced by the management.

The prime feature of the sacred concert Sunday evening was a march, "The American Girl," by the orchestra, accompanied by the composer. Mrs. Blanche Dryden, wife of Meredith Dryden, formerly of Plainfield. Mrs. Dryden's composition was highly received by the two hundred guests who had assembled to listen to it and an encore of the piece was demanded. The composer has written music that has become well known to the public and many of her productions have been highly popular. She is now engaged writing two coon songs which will appear in the fall. Mrs. Dryden writes the words as well as the music.

BUILDING STOPPED.

Sigmund Frucht Had Plans Which Didn't Comply With Ordinance.

The work of erecting a building in the open space adjoining the building occupied by Miss Lincoln on Park avenue, is temporarily stopped by Sigmund Frucht, owing to the stringency of the building ordinance. There is a difference to be overcome in the kind of a roof and its position and Mr. Frucht claims it will cost him $150 more to build the roof according to the ordinance and he also claims that others have not adhered strictly to the ordinance in this respect.

Many relatives and friends were present to congratulate the couple, and a delightful evening was spent in games, music and dancing.

IN TIME OF DANGER.

Many Lives Saved by What Is Called Presence of Mind.

Men, Women and Children Who Averted Death by Thinking and Acting Quickly—Story of a Canine Hero.

There are certain mysterious attributes of the human mind which baffle even the most searching scientific investigation. For instance, who can account with any degree of satisfaction for that mental condition inspired by emergency and commonly designated as presence of mind? Hundreds of lives are saved every year through the brain function which makes it possible for human beings to think and act quickly with seemingly supernatural powers, yet no one can say positively whether he possesses a mind so endowed until opportunity opens the way for a practical demonstration.

By considering cases where lives have been spared through presence of mind it will be seen that even in accidents of the most shocking character persons are snatched out of the jaws of death by the ability of the mind to remain active even under exceedingly trying conditions. Oftentimes it is the person who afterwards is heralded as a hero who displays wonderful presence of mind, and not infrequently is it the victims themselves. But the general principle is the same in both cases. Another remarkable feature about the mental activity known as presence of mind is that it is as well developed in children as among grown persons.

This fact is proved by the heroic conduct of 6-year-old Edith Ruthem, of New Brunswick, N. J. The tot started from her home to take her small brother for a walk. The children passed directly in front of a rapidly approaching trolley car. The mother shrieked a warning and with wonderful coolness the little girl pushed her brother out of harm's way and then, unable to escape, jumped into the fender of the car and hung on until the motorman, white with fright, brought it to a standstill. She was unhurt save for a slightly bruised side.

It was surely presence of mind that saved Kate Collins from a horrible death in a cider mill at Haverstraw. While working near a rapidly revolving machine her hair caught in the wheels and she was being drawn with terrifying swiftness to a frightful death when her presence of mind asserted itself and she grasped her hair with both hands and pulled with all her might, thus retarding its progress. Then she fainted and a young man, who also had presence of mind, rushed to the power wheels and threw off the belt.

The fact that Gregory McGregor, a master plumber of Elizabeth, N. J., was a thin man with presence of mind, also saved his life. He was crossing the iron girder bridge of the Jersey Central when an express train overtook him. To continue across the bridge was an impossibility, and there was no way for him to get out of the path of the train except by pressing himself tightly against the iron work of the bridge. The situation flashed across his mind in an instant, and, by accepting the one avenue of escape, he saved his life.

Animals are frequently no less heroes than human beings, and an incident of the recent burning of the steamer City of Pittsburg near Ogden Landing presents a striking illustration of this fact.

Michael Burt and his family took the steamer at Owensburg, Ky. It was a family of 13, and but one survives, a girl of ten years. When the family boarded the steamer a large Newfoundland dog followed them on the boat in spite of the fact that every effort was made to keep it off. When the animal saw that it would be forced to leave the steamer it ran in hiding until the boat was under way, and during the trip would sulk along and hide, afraid to come out for fear of punishment at the hands of the master or some member of the crew.

When the fire broke out on the steamer the dog saw members of the family perish, and finally the ten-year-old child, with whom it was accustomed to play, plunge into the water. The child had no sooner fallen than the faithful animal went after her. It caught her dress in its teeth, and swam with her to the shore, where it kept watch until the child was taken in charge by rescuers.

MASTER OF CEREMONIES.

Time Is at Hand When Such an Official Is Absolutely Needed at the White House.

The necessity for an official "master of ceremonies" to be connected with the state department, and whose services would be at the command of the chief executive, is becoming more and more apparent, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Every foreign visitor's reception, every state dinner, every public exercise participated in by the president, and the congress emphasizes this necessity. The necessity is apparent at the big state funerals held at the national capital. The United States supreme court is jealous of its dignity and rank. The diplomatic corps is even more so. Individual members of the corps insist that the prerogatives of precedence be observed to the letter. The supreme court insists that, as one of the highest coordinate branches of the government, its members should rank with the members of the diplomatic corps. Members of the corps believe, because they are the personal representatives of their sovereigns or governments, they should rank next to the president of the United States. Embarrassments multiply at every state function. If a state dinner is to be given at the white house half a dozen officials of the state department must give hours of study to the relative rank of the guests to be invited and determine in what order they shall be seated. It is even necessary to trace the lineage of some of these diplomats of apparently equal rank back for two generations to discover which should rank the other.

Maj. Pruden, who died a few weeks ago and who was one of the assistant secretaries to the president, made a specialty of such things, but with his death his accumulated knowledge and experience was lost. At the funeral of Admiral Sampson the differences between the United States supreme court and the diplomatic corps were so grave that it became necessary to seat them respectively in seats exactly the same distance from the front and on opposite sides of the central aisle of the church where the ceremonies were held. This seemed to solve the problem until they each contended that they should be seated on the side of the aisle where the president and his cabinet were seated. A compromise had to be effected. The democratic tendency of the people in this country opposes there to a master of ceremonies. The republic of France has such a functionary, and the republic of the United States may have to come to it some day.

Berlin as a delegate to the international shipbuilding convention. He is one of the most distinguished officers of the navy, and since 1897 has been chief of the naval bureau of ordnance. The admiral entered the navy in 1861 as master's mate on the Cumberland, and was present at the capture of Forts Hatteras and Clark in August of that year. He fought in the famous engagement with the Merrimac in 1862, and on that occasion rescued Lieut. Morris from drowning. He was promoted to the rank of rear admiral in April, 1901.

CHINESE IN THIS COUNTRY MUST TEST EVERY WATCH

HUIE KIN TOLD HOW TO ACCOMPLISH MOST WITH THEM.

Convert Them in America and They Will Spread the Gospel Throughout China.

Something of the foreign mission work which is being done at home, namely, the spreading of the gospel among the Chinese of New York City, was related to a large audience at Y. M. C. A. Hall, Sunday afternoon, by Huie Kin, a native celestial. Mr. Kin speaks English fluently and from his address is thoroughly conversant with all biblical subjects.

New York City, he said, has a Chinese population of 10,000, nearly all of which are of a good class. When in the empire most of them command high positions but they prefer to leave them to cast their lot in America. They accept the teachings of the Bible readily and in fact seek it. It is only the ignorant coolies who cannot secure the money to leave China that regard missionaries as interlopers and reject their advances.

In New York there are many Sunday-schools where the native Chinese gather and hold regular services. By so doing, the speaker said, much more good is done than by sending ministers of the gospel to the celestial kingdom, as most of the Chinamen return home at some time and they spread the Word about of their own accord. Mr. Kin asked that his people be accorded a pleasant reception whenever the opportunity is offered, as it increases their respect for the American people and makes better citizens of them.

A delegation from the Exempt Firemen's Association attended the meeting in a body.

FUNERAL OF JOHN A. GRAY.

Services Held at His Late Home on Manson Place Saturday Afternoon.

At his late home on Manson place, funeral services were held Saturday afternoon, over the remains of John A. Gray, who died Wednesday in the New York hospital. They were in charge of Rev. John MacMurray, of the Monroe Avenue church, and were attended by delegations from Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., Iron Moulders Union, No. 81, of Elizabeth, and the local Iron Moulders Union, in addition to many relatives and friends.

At the close of the service the remains were taken to Hillside cemetery, where the Knights of Pythias conducted their ritual before the interment was made.

The casket was borne by Lawrence Maher, John Langford and Edward Higgins, of Union No. 81, and Donald McInnis, William Young and William Nicholson, of Perseverance Lodge.

This is just what Painkiller will do: try it. Have a bottle in the house for instant use, as it will save you hours of suffering. Watch out that the dealer does not sell you an imitation, as the great reputation of Painkiller (Perry Davis'), has induced many people to try to make something to sell, said to be "just as good as the genuine."

JERSEY CENTRAL APPOINTS A GENERAL TIME INSPECTOR.

Employes of the Railroad, Whose Watches Do Not Pass, Must Buy New Ones.

An order has been issued by the new management of the Central Railroad of New Jersey relating to the adoption of a standard system of time governing every employe in the operating departments from the chief trainmaster to locomotive firemen. The order dates from the first of the month, but will not go into effect until Tuesday. As one of the results, many of the employes of the company will be obliged to buy new watches, and there is naturally much grumbling.

The new arrangements are in charge of J. W. Forsinger, formerly of Chicago, who has been appointed general time inspector, with headquarters at Jersey City. Before next Tuesday every employe comprehended in the order is expected to submit his watch to the chief inspector or one of his assistants, and if the watch is not passed he will be expected to provide himself with a new one which is to conform to the following specifications: "Nickel, seventeen-jewel, patent regulator, adjusted to heat, cold and three positions, must not vary over thirty seconds a week." If a railroad employe buys a new timepiece it must have been made by either one of five American companies.

In order not to work too much hardship on the men the company agrees to accept pay for the watches in four instalments. At every important terminal or junction point local inspectors have been appointed. The time inspectors for Newark report that to date they have passed on about fifty watches for the employes of the Central. The majority passed the test, and only a few were rejected.

The visitors won every match, carrying off all the honors. Those who played for the Park Club were Samuel Townsend, G. W. Faber, Clifford M. McGee, Wallace Guilford and J. Irwin Taylor. After the play tea was served at the clubhouse by Mrs. Samuel Townsend, assisted by several other women.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXV. PLAINFIELD. N. J., THURSDAY, JULY 24, 1902. NO. 30.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

CITY JUDGE RUNYON FOR THE SENATORSHIP

Friends of Plainfielder Booming Him as Successor to State Senator Cross.

FRIEND OF FOWLER.

LOCAL DELEGATION WILL SOLIDLY SUPPORT HIM IN CONVENTION.

Many Districts Will Add to His Strength and a Warm Battle for the Nomination Is Probable—His Popularity Will Count.

Plainfield Republicans in particular and leaders of that party generally throughout Union county, are discussing the conditions brought about by the announcement of City Judge William N. Runyon that he will allow his name to go before the coming convention as a candidate for State senator. Although it was an open secret that much pressure had been brought to bear upon this popular young stalwart in this connection, the news of his candidacy came as a surprise to many in the councils of the party.

While Judge Runyon is known as a close political friend of Congressman Charles N. Fowler and Former Governor Voorhees, he is not considered to be a factional leader, and for this reason local political leaders declare that he will make a strong candidate in the convention. The position of the present incumbent, Senator Joseph Cross, of Elizabeth, is not definitely known, but in all likelihood his friends will ask a renomination for their favorite. Two aggressive men will be pitted against each other in the convention, provided Senator Cross desires to be returned to Trenton, and the battle to capture delegates, it is believed, will be exceptionally interesting.

Friends of Judge Runyon say that he will be supported by the delegates representing Roselle, Westfield, Cranford, and a part of Elizabeth. This strength coupled with the backing of Plainfield's solid delegation, they say, will make him a formidable quantity when the vote is taken in the convention hall. The primaries have not yet been held, and it is thought that when the delegates are chosen Judge Runyon will have the support of many of the country districts. While it is a trifle early for campaigning, the judges friends are already demonstrating that they intend to capture the nomination for him if a hard fight will do it.

ANOTHER TENNIS CLUB.

An Organization Called the Bronx Has Been Formed and Officers Chosen for the Term.

Another club for the promotion of tennis as an outdoor sport was launched in this city, Tuesday evening, when a meeting was held at the home of N. H. Briggs, of Albert street. Seven young men were in attendance and formed the Bronx Club with a proper constitution and by-laws. The following officers were elected: President, William Morgan; vice president, Clorence Rocap; secretary and treasurer, C. A. Brakeley. A series of games is to be arranged at once to be played on the club's courts located on Dunellen avenue.

Among the club members are some who are well up in the ranks of local tennis players. One is Professor Fowler, who holds the championship of Leal's School, while Clarence Rocap and C. H. Briggs were runners-up in the recent Plainfield High School championship match plays.

ABSENT TEMPORARILY.

Executor H. P. Scott Has Gone Home for a Vacation.

H. P. Scott, of Kansas City, who has been in Plainfield during the past seven weeks settling up the estate of his brother, the late Col. Julian Scott, left yesterday for his home where he will remain until fall.

He will return to Plainfield to arrange for the disposition of the balance of the collection comprising many valuable paintings. Prior to his departure, Mr. Scott sold a large number of articles of value to several well-known museums in the east and west.

Fairchild and Mair Win.

Quoit pitching occupied the attention of the members of Warren Engine company as they gathered at the borough house last evening. In a series of three games, George Fairchild and John Mair carried off the final honors by defeating Adam Seader and Charley Classen twice.

TRAGEDY ACROSS THE BROOK

EXCITEMENT REIGNED DURING THE ONE-ACT PERFORMANCE.

Chief Marshal After Killing Dog for Biting Boy Cases His Gun and Whistles "Aint That a Shame."

"Nothin' doin' today," is heard so often in the borough of late that anything that promises a diversion is welcomed as a sending of Providence by the want-to-be-annexed residents over the brook. To mar the ordinary quiet of the neighborhood is no easy matter, except for a policeman with a gun. Using his "shooting-irons" is the general method of a marshal for persuading the inhabitants that things are waking up.

Chief Campbell was the principal actor in the tragic melodrama that enlivened the vicinity of Dover street and Lincoln place last Tuesday about 7 o'clock. The rest of the cast included Irving Greader, a young boy, living over the corner store, and a spaniel, owned by Henry Dressell. All that preceded the climax was a shuffling of the lad's feet and the quick response in a playful nip from the dog. Then came the tragedy. The marksman was too near to miss his aim. Excitement must be made somehow. The official revolver belched forth; the dog meekly rolled over; and the borough came out in a body from its supper table to share in the general hubbub that betokened a real happening.

Needless to say that the usual division of opinion immediately ensued. While some declared the dog to have been mad and praised the brave marshal for not running away, others called him hard names and wept over the carcass of the pretty spaniel. The chief stoically cased his pistol, dragged the dog aside to await interment, and marched off, whistling "Ain't That a Shame." Dr. Pittis dressed the boy's wound, which was a mere scratch on the calf of the leg and not likely to cause any inconvenience.

CLERGYMAN INJURED.

Rev. Mr. Cranmer, of Somerville, Was Thrown From Carriage in a Funeral Procession.

Somerville, July 23—While accompanying a funeral procession to the cemetery here Monday afternoon, Rev. Wm. S. Cranmer, of the First Reformed church, was thrown from his buggy and quite seriously injured.

A storm was approaching and the horse behind which the divine was riding became nervous and finally ran away. The wagon caught into a tree and was overturned. Mr. Cranmer landed on his back, and it will be several days before he recovers from the bruises he received.

This is his third experience of a similar nature. The horse was caught along the river at the foot of the street. The wagon was a complete wreck.

AN EXCLUSION ACT.

New Brunswick City Council Makes It Impossible for Circuses to Show There.

New Brunswick, July 23—Advance agents of circuses will no doubt leave New Brunswick off their list in preparing routes in the future. The City Council now has in hand an ordinance requiring each circus or menagerie appearing in the city to first procure a license from the city clerk at a cost of $250 for the first day where the admission fee is to exceed twenty-five cents, and $100 for each day thereafter, and $100 for the first day and $25 for each subsequent day when the admission fee does not exceed twenty-five cents. All concerts not for charity or under church auspices are to be taxed $2 for the first day and $1 thereafter.

Junior Day.

It is a well-known fact that Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., run one of the best excursions of the season to Asbury Park. This year it is intended to make the affair doubly interesting. The date is August 14, and it is planned to have a big reunion of all the councils and State officers at the shore. The train will leave Plainfield at 8 o'clock in the morning and returning will leave Asbury Park at 9 o'clock in the evening. Reserve this date for your outing and you will not regret it.

Four Cars Chartered.

Indications point to extensive patronage for the trolley excursion to be taken by the members of the Retail Clerks' Association to Boynton Beach on Wednesday evening of next week. Four cars have been chartered and these will probably be well filled by the members of the organization.

TO BUILD HOUSES.

New Company Which Has Just Been Incorporated at Somerset County Clerk's Office.

Bound Brook, July 23—The Central Building and Construction Company filed articles of incorporation in the County Clerk's office at Somerville, Monday. The incorporators are Silas D. Drake, Charles J. Gummerbach, Wm. S. Terhune, of Bound Brook; Wilson D. Hunt, cashier of Pennington Bank, and Peter G. Polhemus, of New Brunswick. The company's offices are located at Bound Brook.

They have already contracted to build ten houses at Belle Mead, twenty at Dewey Park, ten at Lincoln and ten at Trenton. They will build a house for any shareholder upon the payment of $10 a month, this payment to apply upon the purchase of the house. By this means poor men are enabled to own a house of their own in a few years, and it has cost them no more than rent.

If shareholders do not care to own a house the company will pay them interest on their investments.

FINE COLLECTION OF BIRDS

LOANED BY STREET COMMISSIONER GAVETT TO LOCAL ART GALLERY.

It Contains Birds That Are to be Found in Nearby Fields and Woods.

Friends of the feathered tribe are expressing their gratification over the loan recently made by Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett to the art gallery, in the public library building. A splendid collection of birds has thus been thrown open to the public, which is permitted to inspect the specimens upon Tuesday and Saturday afternoons.

What adds to the interest of the collection is that the birds are not rarities, nor ones brought from distant places, but all are native to Plainfield or nearby sections of the State. There is scarcely a mount whose original may not be found in the field or woods in or about the city.

In an oak case five and one half feet high are to be seen the specimens upon four glass shelves. At the bottom are several magnificent hawks, with some wading birds, such as sand pipers, snipe and kindred species. Above are members of the thrush family, including robins and cat-birds; then fly-catchers and king birds. On the next shelf are granivorous birds, such as sparrows, finches, nuthatches and chick-a-dees. On the top are warbling birds, with a number of owls, king fishers, whippoorwills and others.

MARTIN'S SUCCESSOR.

People Are Wondering Who Will be Assistant Superintendent.

Rahway, July 23.—The question now uppermost in some minds regarding affairs at the reformatory is whom will the commissioners appoint as assistant superintendent, to succeed Captain Martin, following his promotion to the chief berth.

Superintendent Martin, in an interview, favors a promotion from the officers now connected with the reformatory. Friends of Warden Fred C. Abbott think that he would naturally be the one chosen, as he is the ranking official in that line. Besides, his admirers add, he is well qualified for the position. Names of candidates have been presented from various parts of the State, and some parties high in authority advocate taking a man from one of the southern counties.

The appointment will probably be made at the next regular meeting of the commission, in August.

UNIVERSITY QUARTETTE.

Will Sing at Seventh-Day Baptist Church Friday and Saturday.

A quartette from Alfred University, composed of the following, H. N. Jordan, L. C. Bassett, T. G. Davis and E. F. Lafburow, is expected to arrive in Plainfield. The quartette will sing and otherwise assist at the services at the Seventh-Day Baptist church on that evening and the following morning. It will also sing at the meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon. Many Plainfield field people have pleasant recollections of having heard the quartette at similar services on the corresponding date last year.

To Spread the Gospel.

Rev. and Mrs. Harrison K. Wright have left Plainfield preparatory to making their final arrangements for sailing to China, where Mr. Wright will engage in missionary work.

THE PRESIDENT'S VISIT TO CAMP

Arrangements Made to Give Nation's Chief Executive a Royal Welcome.

COMPANY K PREPARED.

At Asbury Park 400 Young Girls Dressed in White Will Line the Banks of Deal Lake When the Train Arrives, and Each Will Wave an American Flag.

(By a Special Correspondent.)

Camp Murphy, Sea Girt, July 23—Details of President Roosevelt's visit to Camp Murphy tomorrow, have been received by the officials in camp and all arrangements have been completed to give the Nation's chief executive a royal welcome. Everybody is on the qui vive and there is not a company in camp but what fosters the fond hope that it will receive special commendation from the noted visitor. There is no doubt but what Company K will do itself credit, for it has been drilling constantly and despite tired feet and aching limbs, the boys are prepared to do any amount of manoeuvering.

According to plans President and Mrs. Roosevelt and a party of women will leave Oyster Bay on the Mayflower, the Presidential yacht, and proceed to Atlantic Highlands. There they will be escorted to a special train of four parlor cars, including the private car of General Manager Besler, of the New Jersey Central, which has been placed at the President's disposal. Camp Murphy will be reached at noon and the review of the troops will begin immediately after. This will be completed at 3 o'clock and on conclusion the party will return to Oyster Bay.

All along the line of the Central, the people of the various cities have planned to give the party a royal welcome as it passes through. At Asbury Park 400 young girls dressed in white will line the banks of Deal Lake as the train arrives and each will wave an American flag. A salute will be fired as soon as the Presidential train is sighted.

Matters in camp yesterday were quite in comparison to the previous days, even in Company K's street, where the boys generally manage to relieve the monotony with a little fun on the side. With them everything is serene although three of the lands have had brief stays at the hospital tent through a slight indisposition. Last night the officers gave strict orders that every private except those on guard was not to be out of his tent after 10 o'clock and the mandate was obeyed. Of course, that didn't mean that everybody slept, as laughter was heard long after midnight.

Surf bathing and strolls in the surrounding country are the chief forms of divertisement and there is always a break for the water as soon as drills are over. Private Yerkes holds the medal for being in the ocean the most and he is getting to be quite an expert.

Several Plainfielders were in camp yesterday and tomorrow the boys expect to have a number when the excursion brings its load to Asbury Park. Everybody will be made welcome and after the departure of the President those who care to, will be shown around the camp.

DEMOCRATIC OUTING.

Will be Held at Point View Grove, Thursday, August 28.

The Democrats of Union county will hold a big outing at Point View Grove, Thursday, August 28. The committee in charge has invited to the outing and received acceptances from the following persons: W. Bourke Cochran, New York; Congressman Sulzer, New York; Mayor James M. Seymour, Newark; Mayor John Hinchliffe, Paterson; Mayor Frank Rosenbach, Trenton; Mayor Samuel Baldwin, Summit; Mayor Egbert Seymour, Bayonne; Robert Davis, Jersey City.

Tumbled Off Wheel.

A sudden turn of his front wheel sent George Perkins, of Cottage place, spinning from his bicycle at the corner of Richmond and East Third streets, yesterday afternoon. He was cut and bruised and had his clothing badly torn.

Council Meeting.

The next regular meeting of the Common Council will be held Monday evening, August 4.

OSGOODBY MISSING.

A Recent Aspirant for Congress is Said to Have Disappeared From His Home in Cranford.

Cranford, July 23—Friends of Russell H. Osgoodby vigorously assert that his absence from town has no significance. They are quite as emphatic in denying the stories that any of Mr. Osgoodby's checks had been protested recently. These stories had represented William Hulskamper, proprietor of the Hotel Berkeley, Elizabeth, and John Marien, a local druggist, as holders of the checks. Mr. Osgoodby was not at home today. He is better known as Judge Osgoodby.

Several weeks ago Mr. Osgoodby announced himself as a candidate for Congress, but his boom collapsed on the trip to Belvidere of the Union county Republican delegation.

He is said to have been connected with the Philadelphia Wardrobe Company at 1516 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. According to a Philadelphia paper the business of the concern was suspended last Wednesday and a constable is in charge.

MAY END IN A FATALITY

HUNGARIAN CRUELLY BEATEN BY A FELLOW COUNTRYMAN.

Fued Between Foreigners Responsible for the Trouble—George Gudas Charged With Crime.

Somerville, July 23—A fued between the Hungarian colonies of Raritan and Bound Brook may result in the death of John Mosko, who was assaulted and cruelly beaten while waiting for a trolley car in the latter place Saturday night.

Ever since the brother of George Eudas, of Bound Brook went to a picnic at Raritan and was injured in a drunken brawl Eudas has sworn vengeance on the Raritan Huns, and Mosko crossed Gudas' path Saturday night. His head was battered, several ribs broken and it is believed he is injured internally, as a result of the beating he received at the hands of the angry Bound Brooker.

Detective Totten went to the home of Eudas as soon as he learned of the crime and brought him before Justice Kitchen here, who held him in $1,000 bonds to await the result of Mosko's injuries.

BRIDGING RACEWAY.

Woodhull & Martin Opening a Thoroughfare to the Rear of Their New Property.

Woodhull & Martin, who recently purchased a large piece of property on East Front street, has just bought a strip of land belonging to the French estate, running between the raceway and Green brook, and extending from VanArsdale's alley to the rear of the firm's property upon which they are going to build. Masons are now at work building a bridge to span the race and spillway close by so that the main property can be reached through VanArsdale's alley.

The strip of land includes the old fat-rending factory at one time operated by the late George Pound, and this building will no doubt be removed to some other point. The firm has secured a right of way through the alley so that goods may be taken in and out without interfering with business on Front street.

AFTER THE CLAMS.

The Annual Affair of Policemen's Organization Monday Afternoon.

The Superior Officers' Police Protective Association of Union, Monmouth and Middlesex counties will hold its annual clambake Monday afternoon at John Bender's hotel and grove at Lorraine in Union township. Many county and city officials have been invited to the affair, together with the superior officers of the Newark and Jersey City police departments.

Sweet Charity's Sake.

Contributions are being donated frequently for the free trolley ride fund, a worthy object. The sum previously acknowledged was $24.25. Since then the following amounts have been received: Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, $2; Miss Florence Tweedy, $3; Miss Emma L. Adams, $2, making a total of $30.25.

Took His Clothes and Went.

Israel Goldberg, an itinerant peddler, was haled to court, yesterday morning, for disposing of wares without having the proper license. He promised to leave town and sentence was suspended.

—Delicious Jersey Lind and Rocky Ford melons, Georgia peaches and all varieties of berries are always found fresh at Neuman Brothers.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH

TWO LITTLE GIRLS PLAYING IN STREET MIRACULOUSLY AVOID INJURY.

Mad Antics of a Horse Causes Excitement on Park Avenue. Struggle to Quiet the Animal.

One of the wildest runs of a frightened horse ever seen in the business section of the city, took place on Park avenue, yesterday. That no loss of life or great damage resulted is miraculous.

A large bay horse belonging to the Boice, Runyon Company, was left standing in the rear part of the firm's lumber shed attached to a wagon loaded with barrels of lime. It became frightened at something and dashed out of the inclosure at terrific speed into Park avenue. It was going so fast it could not make the turn and ran upon the opposite sidewalk directly where two little daughters of M. Weinstein, of Park avenue, were standing. The wagon turned over and the heavy lime barrels fell about them but not one of them struck the children. A wheel of the wagon struck the smallest child and knocked it against the stone abutment of the railroad bridge, but it was saved by a barrel diverting the vehicle's course. The girl escaped with a cut forehead.

The frightened horse recovered itself and again took to the street dragging the upturned wagon after it, and sweeping the entire length of the street. Several times it went upon the sidewalk and pedestrians took refuge in stores and front yards. Several small posts were knocked over and at last the animal's progress was stayed by colliding with a barber pole in front of Patsy DeRosso's shop. Even then it broke from the harness and went whirling about the pole in a frenzy. Several men of whom John Manley was the first threw themselves upon it effecting a capture. In the struggle to quit it, David Antonio was thrown down and narrowly escaped being trampled upon.

Peculiarly enough, the wagon was only slightly damaged, as was the harness also. The lime was scattered about the street and will be a total loss.

CAUGHT IN STORM.

Harold Noble Was Out in a Small Craft in Susquehanna River and Had a Narrow Escape.

Harold Noble, of the borough, sroom for E. S. Hooley, had a narrow escape from drowning in the Susquehanna river at Wyalusing, Pa., last Thursday.

He was out in a boat fishing when a storm arose and burst directly over him. The little craft was swept down the river and despite his vigorous strokes at the oars he was unable to bring it to shore.

Several times he escaped crashing into rocks by a narrow margin and it was not until he had been taken well down the river where he encountered a small cove that he landed. He was out in the storm a half hour and was thoroughly exhausted from the severe strain.

FITTING CELEBRATION.

Friends From Many Points Gather to Wish Boroughite "Many Happy Returns of the Day."

Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, of Grandview avenue, celebrated the anniversary of her birthday Tuesday and that evening a reception was given at the home in honor of the occasion. There were guests present from Massachussets, Elizabeth, Hoboken, New York and Plainfield.

During the evening a pleasing programme of vocal and instrumental music was rendered by some of the guests, and a feature was the bountiful repast served by the hostess. Mrs. Utzinger received a great many useful and handsome presents and all wished her many happy returns of the day.

Building Improvements.

Chas. Bock, who recently purchased the Magie property on East Front street, has contracted to have the old home thereon moved to the east corner of the property, preparatory to erecting three handsome cottages. He has partially arranged to sell the old dwelling and a fifty foot frontage of the tract.

Trinity's Excursion.

Don't be discouraged because the Trinity Reformed church excursion was postponed. The committee was fortunate in getting an early date, Friday, and if you plan to go on this excursion you are sure to spend a pleasant and profitable day at the seashore.

Drinking Fountain Ready.

The drinking fountain for horses ordered by the Council has been put in position on Muhlenberg place.

AN UNKNOWN DOG POISONER AT WORK

Prized Canines Have Died in Agony, and There is No Clew to the Poisoner.

CATS ARE ALSO VICTIMS.

RESIDENTS OF FRANKLIN PLACE AND PUTNAM AVENUE AMONG LOSERS.

Indications Point to Use of Strychnine—Colllie, Spaniel and Great Dane Among the List of Dead Animal—Police Investigating.

Residents of Franklin place and Putnam avenue are up in arms against the wholesale slaughtering of dogs and cats which has been going on for several days, or rather nights. No less than six canines, all valued at many dollars and great pets in the families where they belonged have died in great agony and symptoms point strongly to strychnine poisoning. Cats, too, have been made victims of the despicable practice and the slaughter of the innocents has been beyond belief.

Among those who have lost valuable dogs in this way are Dr. Carman, of Franklin place, whose black water spaniel was made away with; Mrs. A. T. Slevin, of Franklin place, a valuable collie; Mrs. Charles S. Foote, of Franklin and Putnam avenues, on whose lawn a second dog succumbed a few days ago and a family on Putnam avenue living near Dr. Knott, who lost a highly prized Great Dane. The doctor did all possible to save the animal but without success. At least a half dozen felines have also disappeared and their loss has been laid at the door of the unknown miscreant. The residents have appealed to the police and the department is doing its utmost to locate the perpetrator whom Chief Kiely says will be strongly dealt with if apprehended.

NO NOTICE.

Postmaster Bird Has Not Received One Concerning Redemption of Uncancelled Postal Cards.

Postmaster E. H. Bird is away from the city on his vacation and the postoffice authorities have not received any notice from the Postmaster General regarding the redemption of uncancelled and unserviceable postal cards.

The order which has been received by every postmaster's provides for the redemption of all cards, in stamps or stamped paper when presented by the original purchaser at a discount of 25 per cent. of their face value. Bronzed, enameled or mutilated cards will not be redeemed. It is said that the new order will go in effect August 1.

It is likely that the local postmaster will receive an official notice concerning the above within a short time. Heretofore, cards have not been redeemable, and to the person who had an oversupply of printed cards they were a total loss until an inventive genius discovered that the cards could be covered with a white enamel that could be printed upon. The 25 per cent. loss on each card is less than the cost of enameling.

AN EXCITING TIME.

Cort Adams' Money Disappeared at Atlantic City Tuesday.

Accustomed to the quiet ways of Asbury Park and kindred resorts, Cortland Adams was unprepared for the swift game which met him on his excursion with the Juniors to Atlantic City Tuesday. What it was he refuses to say, but something which must have been truly terrible led to the receipt in this city at midnight of a telegraphic appeal for money to pay a return passage to Plainfield. Ticket and all other valuables were "lost" and the young man's employer was forced to redeem him from his unpleasant position.

Improving Netherwood Station.

The New Jersey Central has had a large force of men at work for the past week making improvements about the Netherwood station. Concrete walks with a substantial stone foundation is being substituted for the primitive planks and the grounds are undergoing a deal of altering. Inside the station the woodwork is being brightened by paint and varnish.

MUSLIN GOWNS.

Countless Bath For Dressy and Ordinary Occasions.

The fine summer weather will permit of the wearing of much muslin. The frivolous gown of muslin is a mass of dainty frills and lace, with the goods cut out from underneath in order to show a dainty slip of taffeta or lawn in some pale color. The useful type of muslin is of a more solid substance, the muslin not transparent and corded in a stripe or check design strewn with floral sprays of colored blossoms.

Organdie muslin has lost none of its charms and is now so silky in texture and so charming in coloring that it is used for fete and garden party gowns. The finer swiss muslins, with pompadour groups and bouquets of flowers, are as transparent and closely resemble mousseline de sole.

When tucks appear on the skirt, a cluster of them makes a nice finish for the back, or tucks in grouped lines can be arranged around the skirt, letting one group form the center line of back and front. The muslin gown, however, fits as tightly around the hips as the skirt of silk or wool.

A handsome organdie gown is the subject of the sketch. The waist is made with a soft front of white chiffon. The fullness opens over this blouse fashion. There are a frilled collar and elbow sleeves with many frills. The skirt fits very closely about the hips and has three frills around the bottom. The dress is trimmed with narrow black insertion and medallion trimmings of ecru guipure.

LINEN GOWNS.

They Play a Large Part Among the Outing Costumes.

Linens of every hue are being a great deal worn. They are made into tailor made suits and also little tucked dresses trimmed with medallions of lace and touches of black velvet.

Blue serge is being revived, and handsome outing costumes are made of it with little jackets, short in the back and coming down to a long point in the front. These coats are very smart when not overdone. Serges also lend themselves admirably to the Russian blouse, with a big collar of lace glace or tucked net.

In outing dresses of this sort there must be strapping of some kind. Braids, too, are excellent when they are simple, but somehow glace taffeta seems more adequate to meet the demand for trimming, as it is not injured by dust.

Pretty outing hats of rough straw are simply trimmed with a scarf of lace having long ends in the back.

Two pretty models for linen coats are here shown. One has a plain blouse, double breasted, with a collar of dotted silk and lace. The other has a box plaited front and back, the front box plait being fastened down with ring buttons.

The hat worn with the first coat is of white felt trimmed with a red scarf. The second is of rough straw trimmed with a blue and white foulard.

THE WOMAN WHO WEEPS.

Where Real Trouble Comes, She Is No Good.

I am not going to speak now of the woman whose heart is bowed down with grief, the woman who weeps because her heart is full. The particular woman I have in mind is the human watering pot whose tears will splash down her cheeks at the slightest notice and sometimes at no notice at all.

She is usually a woman of great feeling or fancies she is. "I feel so much. I am so sympathetic," she quavers, and even as she says this the moisture comes to her eyes.

If a girl announces her engagement, she cries. If the same girl breaks it off, she cries again. If she hears of the death of a caterpillar, she will weep buckets, and when she is enjoying a novel she does so from first chapter to last with a damp wad of a handkerchief packed tightly in her hand. Everything may be going dead wrong in her house from attic to cellar. The children may be screaming and the servants quarrelling, but still she weeps on, bowed with grief at the death of the heroine.

And when real trouble comes do you suppose this most sympathetic woman is any good? Not a bit of it. She sits on a stool and enjoys the utmost luxury of weeping while the victim of it all goes about dry eyed with her heart almost breaking trying to do the work of two.

A GIRL'S ROOM.

The Great Share It Plays in Forming Her Characters.

As soon as a girl has entered her teens she should have a room of her own. The closet should contain her dresses, the bureau her lingerie and ribbons, there should be a bookcase to hold her books and a little desk where she may write notes to her friends.

Giving a girl her own room fosters within her the love of home. It makes her orderly, methodical. It also is a help to her in controlling herself when things go wrong. She can retire into her little den secure in the thought that no one will disturb her. If she has a talent for writing or for drawing, she can indulge in it to her heart's content at her desk. Unconsciously but surely the influence of her room goes toward making her a woman.

Let the girl, then, have a room of her own, be it ever so small. Paper the walls in cheerful colors, have the woodwork white and the furniture, too, if possible. Let the walls be hung with good prints of pretty scenes, landscapes or attractive women by leading illustrators. Put in some low shelves or a bookcase and fill it with inexpensive editions of good works. Teach her how to keep her desk in order, what paper to use, how to write a dainty note.

Above all, insist that the room be kept in perfect order and show her how to take care of it herself.

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

Elbow Sleeves In Vogue—Frenched Waists.

Elbow sleeves are in great favor, but the long, clinging sleeves of transparent net or lace are too becoming to be ignored by the fashionable.

The lace collar is worn a great deal, and so are cascades and fichu arrangements or collars of lace put on very full and draped on the fronts in same fashion.

Pongee dresses are decorated with openwork embroidery and made over pale blue silk linings. The belt, sleeve rosettes and collar are of pale blue ribbon to match the lining.

Materials made up without linings frequently have the waist pouching both back and front. The pouching in the back is merely a trifle, but it gives a careless and rather smart effect which the waist would not have if the thin substance were drawn down plain.

The illustration shows a dainty cotton frock for a child. The material is old rose chambray. The waist has no collar and is ornamented with a deep round yoke of yellow lace run through with narrow black velvet ribbon. The sleeves are very full and terminate below the elbow with a deep frill. They are also threaded with the black velvet ribbon. The skirt has a double effect and is laid in fine plaitings.

The hat is of ecru straw trimmed with rose colored ribbon.

A White Evening Bodice—Popularity of Tea Gowns.

A charming white evening bodice seen in a smart shop recently was of white accordion plaited chiffon with a bolero and elbow sleeves of fine white mousseline de sole embroidered with silk spots in black and white and trimmed with strappings of black velvet ribbon brought down to a point both back and front and secured with tiny diamond studs. The bolero was edged throughout with vandyke applique. The same lace appeared also on the sleeves, which were finished at the elbows with soft frills of white chiffon. In the center of the front there was a rosette bow of black velvet ribbon fastened with four small diamond buttons.

Princess dresses are often made of wide meshed tulle or piece lace covered with a trellisswork of velvet ribbon.

Tea gowns are gaining in popularity, and soon no well dressed woman will be without one of these dainty gowns. The prettiest are made with princess sides and backs and full soft fronts of chiffon.

In the illustration is shown a dainty evening gown of pale blue silk mull. The waist is made with a lace and embroidery bolero, and below this the fullness is laid in shirrings. The sleeves, which fall off the shoulders, are elbow length and terminate in five ruffles.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

What They Talked Of

THREE women happened together at the home of one of them. Being familiar acquaintances and friends, they talked freely and said what they pleased. The sun was shining when they began, but it went down across the river, and the stars sprinkled thickly the sky ere one woman sprang to her feet with a start at the sound of a church clock striking and exclaimed:

"I declare, it's 9 o'clock!"

They talked all that time, and, though a man would scarcely believe it, not one of them uttered a word of scandal, gossip or criticism of a sister woman. The three ladies did not even discuss the celebrated question whether a woman can love two men at the same time. Once, and once only, they grazed the edge of the sarcastic in regard to either man or woman when one of them remarked in a tone expressing detestation not unmingled with horror:

"I know a lady who earns considerable money writing papers for clubwomen to read at their meetings."

But instantly another one of the three, who had lived in Washington, replied:

"That's nothing. Congressmen get their speeches written for them all the time."

Well, it was some comfort, anyway, to find that woman is no more of a fake than man.

But what did they talk of? Mutual friends and acquaintances were mentioned frequently, it is true, but it was to say something good of them every time. One actually told the others what a sweet old lady her mother-in-law was—mother-in-law lives with daughter-in-law—and how Mother Perkit poured out love, devotion and service at the feet of Daughter-in-law Perkit till Son Perkit declared his nose was out of joint and that if he died Mother Perkit would not miss him half so much as she would Daughter-in-law Perkit. I am telling you fact. I assure you.

Then another of the three said that any home might be happy if people only resolved they would be harmonious no matter what fell out. It came about then that all three of the women were deeply interested in the theory that by power of mind one could fashion outer circumstances to one's liking.

"I know it can be done," said the lady who loved her mother-in-law. "I have tried it enough to know there is saving power in it. We're none too well off at our house. I don't always have money to get new dresses and hats enough to make me look really up to date. This worried me in the old days when I let myself worry about anything, but now I say to myself: 'Never mind. The new things will come.' Then I dismiss it all from my thoughts. I just know they'll come and that ends the matter. It is wonderful the way they really do materialize when I take that attitude. If, however, I allow myself to feel worried and to wonder whence they will come or whether I shall get them at all, then I don't get them. Being worried and anxious drives them away from me, I've noticed."

"And I've noticed," said one of the trio who had dabbled in women's clubs, occultism, vestibules of mystery, psychometry, alchemy, magic and fads and ologies no end, "that hardly any of us ever knows exactly what she does want. That is why our wishes do not oftener come true. Fixing the thought and will line. Today we wish we had this, tomorrow something else, and women's minds especially are apt to be a scrap bag jumble of half formed purposes.

"It is a scientific axiom that every power and faculty of the human mind is latent in every mind. The beginning of doing or getting anything whatsoever is an intense desire, then a consciousness of power at the center to do or obtain the thing. This consciousness of power can be cultivated. A prime point is to know exactly what we do want most of all. We must get a clear and powerful mental conception or picture of the thing to be attained, then fix our undivided attention on that.

LAURA WARREN.

WOMAN'S MUSCLES.

What She Can Do With Them When They Are Developed.

How Charles Reade would glory in the physical strength and activity of a certain Oregon family of sisters! It was a favorite theory of his that the muscles of a woman's body below her waist are stronger than those of a man, and the feats of the Walker sisters show that at least in the mysteries of cutting out a steer and lassoing a wild horse a girl cowboy is an expert as a man when she has been initiated. There are eight of these Oregon sisters who do a man's so called work upon a wild, rough range.

The young women are employed on the range belonging to their father, a man distinguished for his high character. They have been in the saddle ever since they were old enough to bestride a steed, for, dear lady and gentleman, these fine girls ride astride and have always done so. No woman rides any other way in that mountainous region, where narrow trails edge dizzy precipices and a horse must jump like a rabbit over bank and bowlder. And, besides, how could a woman ride upon a sidesaddle and rope a steer?

When one of the Misses Walker needs a new horse, her pa does not go to the training stable and select it for her, examining every point to see that it is perfectly gaited and warranted safe and gentle. The girl springs upon a horse she has already broken, and away she gallops into the midst of the wild herd bearing her father's brand. She looks at them till she finds one that suits her fancy; then she lassoes it unerringly, brings it to the ground and breaks it in like a rough rider in the wild west show. It snorts insanely, struggles and bucks frantically; but it bucks against fate, for the young lady is its master. When it was a wild colt a big brother or girl or one of her sisters lassoed it, threw it and helped to brand it. Woman's weakness has been effectually developed out of her by the brave, free bringing up the Oregon sisters have had.

In addition to their other accomplishments, they are unerring rifle shots and carry gun and blanket with them when in the saddle. Woman's cowardice has here also been eliminated, and the woman is all the better for it. She will love her children just as devotedly when she has them and will be all the better able to take care of them.

At one of the state agricultural schools woman is proving that she is physically strong enough to take on herself the farmwork that it has been supposed hitherto only men could do. Girls at this school are being trained not only to manage farms, but actually to perform with their hands the labor. At any time in the season young lady students may be seen plowing, harrowing, planting, sowing and reaping and doing all scientifically under the eye of a professor. A woman may not perhaps as yet be able to throw a stone, but she undoubtedly has proved she can cut a straight furrow with the plow. What is more, when the young lady student has done her stint at plowing or harrowing she must unharness her horse, feed, water, halter, stall him and curry him. No detail is omitted that will accomplish her as a practical farmer, and every one of the girl students has proved she has the physical strength to stand up to her work; also that this strength increases with the exercise of it; also that it is wholly compatible with perfect womanly refinement and gentleness.

The young ladies who are graduated from this agricultural school will be prepared to take entire charge of a country place as farm superintendents. The course of instruction also includes dairying, live stock raising and horticulture.

In fruit culture and dairying there is certainly a promising field for women skilled in the practical knowledge of them. As a man no longer be said that a woman has not strength to do farmwork, especially the lighter kinds, when she is proving that she is equal even to the heavier part. On the abandoned little rocky farms of New England, which are near to a good market, thousands of dissatisfied, dependent women might today be earning a noble living at dairying, poultry rearing and fruit and flower culture.

NEW MOURNING GOWNS.

Costume For a Widow—Fashions of the Day.

I know more than one person who would be willing to be a widow provided she could be dressed in the new style of mourning which follows the modes of the day and is even more pronounced in some cases. The illustration shows a house gown for a widow. The skirt is made with fan shaped insets, only that they are not folded or plaited, but just set in flat, over the dress material, be it understood. These reach to the waist and taper to nothing at the top, spreading to ten inches wide at the bottom. There is but one kind of crape for this, the old English Courtauld, as none other is made of sufficient body for the purpose. The skirt is made of the jet black, frosty eudora, with the silk warp just being visible in some occult way, enough to give the soft luster required to set off the crape. The waist is slashed with insets of the crape, and there is a shaped bertha entirely of the crape, and this is wrought into a jabot in the front. The sleeves are of the eudora, with three ruffles of the crape at the wide shaped bottom. The dainty white hemstitched mull collar is a pretty adjunct to a black gown, as black is generally very trying to the complexion when against the neck. Anybody might envy the becoming little cap and floating white veil. The cap and veil are of crepe lisse, than which nothing is more becoming.

For more ordinary wear there are many different materials, such as soft armure, cashmere, silk warp henrietta, veilings, black pongee and many small figured stuffs; also plain black wool grenadine. Anything almost that is black will answer if there is a bit of crape somewhere as a sign.

Few young women, except widows, now wear black veils save for church in first mourning. Hats are made in all the most fashionable shapes with crape trimming for the first three months. After that taffeta ribbons and chiffon can be used to trim with. Black quills are seen oftener on hats for young people than anything else. Mingled with black lusterless ribbon they are quite proper for any girl under sixteen.

Just now few wraps are required, but for very recent mourning some sort of coat is almost de rigueur. A short box shape with the bottom flaring somewhat is shown in one place, and there is a pointed yoke of crape, finished at the edge with a roll of the same. Below this are deep lengthwise folds of the eudora, front and back. The collar is a standing one with folds of crape at the edge, and inside this is a narrow roll of white crepe lisse.

Black armure parasols and glace gloves are fashionable, and jewelry is of fine Whitby jet, in some cases surrounded by fine gold wire twisted. This we have seen before many years ago, but it is not so ostentatious as diamonds. And because a woman has lost her loved one is no reason why she should not wear something to lighten the somberness a little.

Handkerchiefs for mourning are often seen with borders more than an inch deep, and then again we will find others where the black line is quite narrow. Others are all white, but are hemstitched with black silk. These are very refined. Some are all white with a black monogram in one corner. So one can obey her own pleasure in the choice of such a conspicuous article. There are some very dainty little fancies in neckwear, quite appropriate all of them. One has the stock of white crepe lisse shirred closely to the foundation, and over that are laid four milliner's folds of black crape. The bow with its long ends is of black with tiny lines of white crepe lisse around them.

Boas made of black chiffon, with a roll of crape bound around the edges and down the long ends, are quite proper for outdoors, and even the dress in the illustration can be worn in the street with one of these boas and a small hat; but this must have a veil when for a widow, old or young.

For full mourning cotton or silk gloves are not to be worn, no matter what the weather. This remark is made because a lady was seen only yesterday in a grand and elegant costume—all but the cotton gloves.

EVENING GOWNS.

All Black and All White Gowns Considered Smart.

An all black or an all white gown is charming in the midst of an assemblage of gay colors. Some of the black dresses this year resemble coats of mail on account of the large number of steel and jet paillettes that are being used in tunic form over an underdress of close plaited black chiffon. A great many appliques and hand embroideries are utilized, and white renaissance embroideries appear on fine muslins and batistes.

There are some dainty pompadour designs in taffeta, the taffeta being of so soft a make that it looks like cellesene. It is, in fact, a sort of compromise between the two and has the merit of being fairly serviceable, which is more than can be said of the silk muslins which are so fashionable this year.

The pretty muslin gown in the illustration is made with a Romney fichu of white chiffon and wide sleeve ruffles of the same material. The waist has a transparent yoke of chiffon and lace, and the lace on the sleeves is cut out in order to show the arm underneath. The skirt is very full around the bottom and has a long train. It is trimmed with a full ruffle headed by a wide banding of the lace. The shepherdess hat is of white straw trimmed with pink roses.

The Useful Alpaca — Lace Blouse Worn With Silk Skirts.

Lace blouses trimmed with taffeta are being made to go with taffeta skirts. This is a convenient fashion if not always a becoming one.

Alpaca is a material which never disappears from fashion's list, and there are all sorts of pretty designs in the finer makes, such as narrow pin stripes, spots, etc. Brown, blue and black alpacas are always charming and are quite indispensable for dull days and for traveling purposes. Dust coats have grown more and more gorgeous. They are voluminous and in cut resemble the Japanese. Some of the best are of taffeta, though those in ecru sailcloth are very smart and practical. These garments are trimmed with gold and silver tassels and black velvet. Some of the empire coats in taffeta have collars of coarse Irish guipure and are further decorated with fanciful appliques.

Never were old fashions so beautifully revived as they are today by up to date costumers.

A pretty waist, hat and collar are here shown. The hat is of chiffon ruching trimmed with an aigret and an ostrich tip. The waist is of pale blue crepe de chine trimmed with bands of mechlin lace. The collar is of ring spotted net and is very becoming.

RECENT ATHLETIC PERFORMANCES RESULT IN BROKEN RECORDS

IT is regarded as highly significant of a greatly improved condition in American college athletics that the two greatest track and field events of the year—the twenty-seventh intercollegiate meet at Berkeley Oval, in the east, and the second annual conference athletic meet, of the west should be so productive of record fests. New marks galore were made at both of these meets and in some cases at both the Berkeley Oval and Marshall Field meets, the winners might have added to their distinct advantages had there been any incentive for more strenuous work.

Never before has an athlete covered 100 yards in 9:3-5, the established and recorded time of Arthur Duffy, the little sprinter of Georgetown university. To get into the finals, where he made this great record, Duffy had to beat Cadogan, the California sprinter. This, Duffy did easily in 9 4-5 seconds—the record for intercollegiate contests held by B. J. Wefers, who was a contestant in amateur events, wearing the colors of Georgetown. Shiek, of Harvard, was the main contestant for Duffy in the finals when he made his record, and according to the winner, he won from Shick by summoning all of his nerve and strength.

Getting a rather poor start, Duffy was surprised after going about 70 yards to see that his Harvard rival was running with a wide stride and rather easily. Time and again Duffy has made the distance in 9 4-5. He had become possessed of the idea that no timers would ever catch the time any less.

"All I want is the fifth less than even time," said Duffy to himself, and then began one of the most marvelous performances a man ever made. Duffy stepped higher than ever, dug his spikes into the cinderpath and, throwing all his weight on the ball of his foot at each step, made strides that were eight feet or more. His pace told; and he took the race.

According to E. L. Sarre, the old Mercury Foot athlete, there will not be any disposition on the part of critics of athletic events to discredit the time. Four of the best men who ever held a split watch on a field of sprinters caught the time. All agreed, with one exception—Charlie Hughes, the nestor of timers, had it :09 2-5.

Duffy is going to England and the continent in a few days. He will take part in a number of athletic meets, and on the strength of his world's record performance will be an object of considerable interest abroad. For many years the foreigners have been trying to develop men like Wefers and Duffy, but with little success.

East and west the pole vault was a matter of exciting competition, and records were broken at each place. But in the "Big Nine" meet the unexpected happened when first honors were not given either to Capt. Dvorak of Michigan, or Jerome Magee, of Chicago. The pole vault had been looked upon as a dual affair, in which case these men had everybody beaten. But when the bar had been moved to 11 feet 6¾ inches—just a half inch higher than the record height held by Dvorak, what was the surprise of thousands of spectators to see H. T. Chapman, the Drake student, clear it, and Dvorak and Magee weaned by the shrieks of the afternoon fail to clear it. True, the record was broken, but only a half inch. When Dvorak clears a bar he generally does it with inches to spare. Had the Michigan man been a little more fortunate, the desired 12 feet and say 10 inches might have been accomplished. As it was the little Wolverine captain took to chewing gum more vigorously than ever, and vaulted off the floor for second place with his rival, Magee winning the points and getting the same height as the Drake man got. In the east, D. S. Horton, the Princeton man, broke the record, clearing the bar at 11 feet 7 inches. Here the mark was only a half inch better than that made in the "Big Nine" meet. In practice, Horton, Dvorak and Magee all have done better than 11 feet 7 inches. Why then could not these athletes make it a little better in the competition? No trainer will undertake to tell, but it is thought that nervousness develops so rapidly when the bar gets over 11 feet that the men are bothered in the take off and do not get the full vault. Besides, the vaulters who have had poles break under them while vaulting, become timid when the bar gets so high they have to use all their force to get over. A break, and—well, the jagged point is quite likely to pierce the athlete, and make a fatal wound. Coach Knipe, of Iowa, who was one of the interested spectators of the conference meet, said he would advocate the sheathing of vaulters poles with a casing of aluminum, so that in case the tough wood splintered the pole would not have a ragged and jagged point.

Of all the men who captured record honors, the little University of Wisconsin student, George R. Keachie, who reduced the mile run record from 4:33 to 4:31 2-5, is the most unlike the proverbial miler the critics know about. Keachie won when the celebrated Capt. Hahn, of the Badger team, was unable to do better than fourth. Five minutes after he had traversed these four laps of hard cinders, Keachie was attired in his street clothes, darting in and out among the athletes taking snap shots with a kodak camera for his own personal photograph album. Not a trace of weariness appeared in his makeup. Why, a moment after he had finished in the lead of the bunch of weary athletes, this lad was standing in front of me, waving to his student friends in the crowd and exchanging greetings with the coaches and trainers. "I've made a record," he said with all the fervor of a college athlete. "Good for you, George," said the trainers and coaches, and then Keachie returned to his varsity at Madison, he was a hero. Wisconsin had missed points it had been depended upon to get and this helped Michigan to win premier honors.

Two days within a few days did John R. Dewitt, the idol of Princeton students, defeat Plaw, the young California hammer thrower. The last defeat given to the boy who is said to have thrown the weight 170 in practice was in the championship event at Berkeley Oval, where he hurled it 164 feet 10 inches. Plaw could do no better than 163 feet 8 inches. In the dual meet with Princeton and California as the contestants western critics were prone to conceal the hammer throw to Plaw. Was the youngster from the coast who turns around three times in the circle before releasing the handle not the marvel of the country? Yes, but Trainer Christie, who had a great deal to do with the development of Plaw knew a young man who turned six times in the circle before letting go of the weight, and yet he could not get the distance Plaw did. Dewitt is one of the seasoned high-class athletes of Nassau. It was predicted that when the young man who wears a kid glove when he essays the hammer throw went against such a Hercules as Dewitt, the horny-handed and seasoned athlete would beat his marvelous work.

So, in the dual meet, when this Princeton tackle—what a ground-gainer he was on the gridiron for the Tigers—set aside Plaw's intercollegiate record of 134 feet 4½ inches with a throw of 164 feet 4½ inches he won easily from the California rival and gave promise of a like performance when his varsity needs the points in the intercollegiate games. Dewitt has put the 16-pound shot 42 feet 10 inches and might have won a place in this event at Berkley Oval had not Beck of Yale set a record by putting the shot two feet further than his best mark.

N. A. Kellogg, of Michigan, is another of the record-breakers this year entitled to special mention for his prowess. This wolverine two-miler, at last year's conference meet stalled off the rush of the Badgers at the end and won the race in 10:09 3-5. He clipped off 2 3-5 seconds this year, duplicating his work of a year ago by taking victory from the distance men of the rival university.

DEMAND FOR WOMEN'S HAIR.

Agents Scour the Countries of the Old World to Buy Tresses for the Elite.

Never has the demand for women's hair in Europe been greater than it is now, and men are going from town to town in France, Germany, Switzerland and Russia buying all they can get. It has been said that one enterprising dealer has sent some agents to China for this purpose, says a London paper.

The finest hair in France is furnished by Brittany, for the Breton women have very luxuriant tresses, which never fail to fetch a high price in London. Most of these women are poor, and are quite willing to sacrifice their hair, especially as they wear bonnets which comfortably cover their heads, and thus effectually hide them when shorn.

France furnishes more brown and black hair than any other country, and fair and golden hair is furnished, as a rule, by the women of Germany and the north of Europe. Gray and white hair is always in demand, and if of good quality, fetches a high price.

A French woman's hair weighs generally five ounces and a half, an Italian woman's six ounces, and a German woman's nine ounces. It requires much pain to persuade some women to part with their hair, and it is therefore no wonder that a man who possesses this tact and who is a good judge of hair, can readily command a salary of from $4,000 to $6,000.

THE AMERICAN TYPE.

Chicago Professor Says a Distinct One Is Not Possible to Evolution.

Is such a thing as a distant physical type of American possible to evolution? According to an interesting series of experiments made by Prof. Philip J. Woodworth, of Lewis Institute, Chicago, and described in an article called the Physical American in Leslie's Monthly, it is not.

He waives all lines of the parallels, and instead of pointing to mean temperatures as the source of differentiation in statures and temperaments, he finds that moisture in the air is the great agency that is to stamp the Floridan with the color, stature and bulk of the Welshman, and the resident of Arizona with the lank proportions, high cheek bones and leathery complexion of the Arab. Three generations should accomplish the evolution of either type, and the atmospheric moisture or lack of moisture should be the agency.

From this out-of-doors study the professor has come to in-door temperatures, in which most men exist most of the time and almost all women live nearly all the time. In a series of experiments and observations extending through ten years, in the classroom and elsewhere, Prof. Woodworth has reached some interesting conclusions.

GATHERING OF GINSENG.

A Peculiar Product of Illinois and Indiana That Goes Mostly Abroad.

The ginseng crop, which is found in the rural districts along the Ohio river in Illinois, but principally in the state of Indiana, will soon be ripe, and already "sang" diggers are getting ready to harvest the crop, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat of recent date. Ginseng is one of the most peculiar crops of this country, having no local consumption, and going far from home before it finds a use.

Local agents buy the output and ship it to agents at San Francisco, who ship the root to China, where it has a value depending put to a variety of purposes. The larger roots are carved into idols and carried to keep off the evil spirits which constantly hover over the Chinese; by many it is used as a medicine which will cure any of the ills flesh is heir to, and others use it as a seasoning and flavor for foods.

In olden times the virgin forests of Illinois and Indiana overflowed with the root, and an experienced digger could make good wages. It is now difficult to find and it takes an eagle eye to discover the peculiarly formed leaves that indicate its presence. In the market to-day it is worth from $3.00 to $4 a pound.

SOUP FOR BREAKFAST.

A Novel Experiment to Be Tried on the Soldiers of the French Army.

Soup for breakfast may be the latest thing from France, but it was tried last year in the army when it was issued to the men in one or two units in the morning in place of coffee, and this alteration was so much liked by the soldier, and gave such satisfactory hygienic results, it has been determined to give it a more extended trial. Accordingly, an order has been issued by the minister of war that until August 31 next a soup ration shall be issued to all ranks in French garrisons instead of coffee, every day excepting Saturdays and Sundays.

Early in September reports are to be sent in by the commanding officers of all units and by the medical officers, as to the results of this substitution of soup for coffee, and the commanding officer of the Sixth army corps is to forward them with his own remarks thereon to the minister of war, with a view to the alteration of the ration, if it should seem advisable, some modification thereof being adopted throughout the army.

Casualties of War and Peace.

An English writer calls attention to the fact that more lives are sacrificed each year on the railway than the total casualty list of the eight biggest battles in the Boer war.

PURSUED BY A BEAR.

Youth Kidnaps Two Tiny Bruins and Is Compelled by Their Mother to Run for His Life.

From Watertown, N. Y., a correspondent writes that there has been a notable abundance of bears in the southern part of the county this spring, and besides the four full-grown bears that [illegible] shot in and near the town of [illegible] no less than seven [illegible] captured alive.

Two other [illegible] captured in Worth, where [illegible] was shot, are "Gaston" and "[illegible]Hooligan," the very lively mascots of the Thirty-ninth Separate company.

Only a few days ago a small boy of Worth came across a hollow log, and, with all of a boy's ignorance of fear, crawled into it to investigate. He found two black bear cubs about four weeks old, took one under each arm and started for home.

He had gone less than a quarter of a mile when he heard the mother bear smashing along through the underbrush behind him, and when she came in sight the boy dropped one of the cubs and ran with the other. The old bear stopped only long enough to put the cub away in a brush thicket and took up the boy's trail again. The little fellow sprinted for 300 or 400 yards, but the cub's weight handicapped him and he was forced to drop his prize. While the old bear was nosing over the cub and licking the man-scent from it the boy got so far away that the bear gave up the chase.

DICK LED IN PRAYER.

Ohio Parrot Set a Ministerial Conference to Laughing and Broke Up the Meeting.

"Dick," the Deal house parrot, of Bucyrus, O., that was sold to a New York man for $200, has a record for breaking up a ministerial conference which was held in the hotel parlors and has become a weekly affair.

Dick was an attentive listener for several weeks, and then decided to get into the game himself. A minister opened the meeting with prayer, and suddenly Dick broke in with "O Lord, vouchsafe to us Thy presence this afternoon."

The minister was disconcerted, and there was a snicker among the assembly. The minister began again, but Dick, warming to his work, piped in with "Give us seeing eyes, hearing ears and understanding hearts."

"NOW, WILL YOU BE GOOD?"

The snicker deepened into laughter, and the minister stopped, while Dick went calmly on with: "Shed upon us the light of Thy countenance and grant us Thy grace."

Somebody rose, and, taking the cage into the hall, set it down with a thump. Before the door closed they heard the bird apostrophizing himself mournfully: "Now, Dick, will you be good?" This was too much, and the meeting broke up amidst great hilarity.

A Country of Poor Beds.

Poor beds are the rule in the hotels of Mexico, and they are about as yielding as a mahogany table. The bedding is usually just the size of the bed, and when you pull it up to your neck your feet are bare, and when you try to cover your feet you are uncovered almost to the waist.

Hard on the Poor Horse.

A self-satisfied young man in Atchison called on his lady love to take her out driving. While he was waiting in the parlor for her to put the finishing touches to her costume some audacious wags painted the horse red, white and blue.

GENESIS OF A FORTUNE.

The Happy Chance Through Which a Poor New York Clerk Became a Multi-Millionaire.

One western millionaire came into the possession of his wealth through his own abilities, beyond a doubt, but it is also true that his opportunities were excellent. And they came to him in an unusual way.

It happened, says the New York Sun, that the wife of a very rich man had for many years gone to a certain shop in New York for her gowns, and had always been waited upon by the same woman. One morning she went to the store to order a gown. After the business of getting the new dress had been transacted, the saleswoman said to her:

"This will be the last time that I shall have the pleasure of waiting on you, Mrs. X——, for I am going to be married."

When the customer expressed an interest in her plans, the woman told her that she and the man to whom she had been engaged for several years had decided that they might as well get married as wait, especially as she had managed by prudence to save a little money. Said the customer:

"I'M GOING TO BE MARRIED."

"You bring your betrothed to my house to-night to see me. I would like to meet him and have my husband know him, too."

A time was set and that night the saleswoman and her betrothed visited the wealthy patron. The latter introduced them to her husband, who talked with the man and was favorably impressed with him. He learned that the man was able to make only a small income at his business.

Before the man left the house, a date for a subsequent visit had been set. The man, of course, came back, and the result was a place for him in one of the millionaire's mills near a western city.

That was his beginning. To-day he counts his millions on more fingers than his two hands possess. And his fortune came through his meeting with the millionaire and his good luck in making a favorable impression on him as well as on his ability to take advantage of the opportunities that came to him.

PHEASANT FIGHTS WELL.

Golden Fowl's Victories Result in Imprisonment of Bird and Thea of Farmer Parker.

Game Protector Barger, of Lockport, N. Y., has notified Henry Parker, a farmer, to appear before Police Justice Bradley on a charge of having a golden pheasant in his possession.

Parker says that during the terrible snow storms of February the pheasant came to his barnyard and shared the fowls' meals and shelter. When the warm days came the wild bird continued its visits. It fought every rooster on the farm and invariably was the victor. It then tackled the gobblers and defeated them. The domestic fowls were demoralized by the intrusion of the Mongolian.

One day it followed the rooster into the coop, and one of the Parkers shut up the troublesome bird. They had it in confinement 13 days, when Protector Barger discovered the technical infraction of the law which protects golden pheasants until 1903. The Niagara County Anglers' club has been stocking the county with birds and they have been multiplying.

Flagman Had a Surprise.

A negro flagman named George Lee was sent to flag a train some miles south of Jackson, Miss. He sat down to wait for the train, with his feet on the rails, and fell asleep. When he awoke he was much surprised to find that both of his feet had been cut off.

In the Public Eye Abroad

What the Nations of the World Are Most Greatly Interested in Just Now.

ENGLISH newspapers have for the past half dozen years been harping on the American commercial invasion of these "tight little isles," but the harping has never made any great impression upon the great mass of the English people. "Made in America" is not stamped upon every little household convenience that crosses the Atlantic from the States to find a purchaser in Britain or the real significance of this invasion might be more appreciated by the people.

But what the importation of manufactured products from the United States failed to do the initial exportation to the United States of the White Star line of steamers has done. It has aroused English pride and English ire. The sinking from British control, even though it never amounts to more than that, of this line of steamers is as though Uncle Sam had crossed the ocean and levied upon the English navy for the Royal Sovereign and a few others of the best of England's fighting craft. The White Star line has stood for England's unity; its steamers were the connecting link between the mother country and the world-wide colonies; they carried his majesty's mails; they represented commercial Britain in the markets of the west. England, and England's rule of the sea.

The two great trans-Atlantic steamers, the Oceanic and the Celtic, are among the queens of the sea, but they are but two in a fleet of 26 steamers that have been Morganized, as it is referred to in England. When the Oceanic was built she was the largest ship afloat, far surpassing the historic Great Eastern. The 17,274 tons, 705½ feet length, and 30,000 tons displacement of the former quite eclipsed anything previously attempted in the history of shipbuilding. That leviathan was permitted but a short supremacy, for 18 months later, in July of last year, the Celtic set forth on her maiden voyage, possessor of all the records, with her 20,904 tons weight, her 14,000 horsepower, her nine decks, and accommodations for 2,859 passengers and over 300 crew. These two monsters opened a new chapter in the story of shipbuilding, and their constructors, the famous Harland and Wolff, were justifiably proud of their work.

Among the other boats of the line may be mentioned the Teutonic. This vessel was immensely admired at the naval review of 1899, when the German emperor inspected her. That was her first year. She was one of the finest vessels at the Diamond jubilee review in 1897, when, carrying 16 guns, she took her place in the line. The Majestic, which was barely a year younger than the last-named vessel, played a very important part in the transport of English troops to South Africa. The Cymric, built four years ago, was the largest of the transports. The Britannic, which first left the stocks in 1874, and was the first to place the line ahead in the matter of speed, was the vessel to convey troops to Australia upon the inauguration by the prince of Wales of the Australian commonwealth. The Afric, the Suevic, the Medic, three of the company's Australian liners, as well as the Delphic, a boat engaged in New Zealand services, all had important shares in the transport of men and horses to the front.

Such is a brief glance at the great English fleet of merchant vessels that have been Morganized, and in England Morganized means Americanized.

Decline in Value of Turkish Rugs.

The manufacture and exportation of rugs form one of the most important features in the industry and commerce of the Ottoman empire. The annual exportation exceeds £1,400,000 and includes about 2,000,000 pieces.

Of late years, the demand in Europe for rugs of a purely Turkish origin has suffered a marked decline. (It is to be noted that a considerable fraction of the rugs sold by Turkish dealers come originally from Persia.)

This slackening demand has led to an investigation of its causes by those chiefly interested in the trade. The results of this inquiry are summarized in the Turkish journal Ikdam. It is found that the decline is chiefly due to the marked inferiority of the wool now employed in the rug weaving districts. The best grade of wool for this purpose comes from the pastoral regions along the southern half of the frontier between Turkey and Persia. Nearly all of the wool produced in this region is now exported into Persia, and but little finds its way westward into the industrial centers. It is hoped that with the construction of the Bagdad railway, the new transportation facilities will change the current of this important product and render it more accessible to the weavers of Anatolia.

From my own observations, I judge that this falling off in the demand for the rugs of Anatolia and Kurdistan is not due entirely to the quality of the wool employed. Two other factors favor the rug production of Persia in the markets of the west, England, and England's rule of the sea.

The first is the more extended use in Turkey of the brilliant but fugitive aniline dyes. In Persia, the less vivid but permanent vegetable coloring matters retain their ancient vogue. Again, the artistic sense seems more highly developed in Persia; at least, there is more conformity to occidental canons of beauty as far as designs and color combinations are concerned. There is no doubt that these three factors are seriously affecting the demand for the products of Turkish looms.

There is an interesting development in the rug industry at Harput, based upon American capital, directed by a native who has been trained in carpet factories in the United States. The labor supply comes from the orphanages founded and supported at this point by American benevolence.

I am glad to note that the dyes used are exclusively of vegetable origin. The establishment seeks to cater chiefly to American tastes, and has received various orders to execute special designs for individuals in the United States.

River Navigation in German East Africa.

The governor of German East Africa is giving considerable attention to the improvement of the waterways of that province and to the construction of steamers capable of passing over the slight rapids encountered in the streams emptying into the Indian ocean. Already a side-wheel steamer has temporarily been placed in operation on the Rufidji river, from its mouth to Kungullo, while the upper reaches of that stream, known as the Manga, are being surveyed by the military station of Mahenge. Systematic surveys will also be made of the Wami river, with a view to furnishing an outlet for the rich agricultural district of Kilossa and for the mining district of the Mugru mountains.

Swearing a Gift.

Thomas Nelson Page once told this story to illustrate the gift of after-dinner speaking, which gift he said he envied, but did not possess: "An English bishop was traveling in a third-class carriage with an individual who was swearing most tremendously, originality and picturesquely. Finally the bishop said to him: 'My dear sir, where in the world did you learn to swear in that extraordinary manner?' The latter replied: 'It can't be learned, it is a gift.'"

NO MORE ROWDYISM.

While the games in the City Baseball League have been pleasantly free from any suggestion of rowdiness and unsportsmanlike conduct on the part of any of the players, some of the enthusiasts who have witnessed the games have not been so careful. This decidedly displeasing feature was particularly aggravated in Saturday's games. No one blames any baseball enthusiast for becoming excited over the progress of a game or for hoping to see his favorite team win. When that enthusiast so far forgets himself, however, as to attempt to interfere with the play or any of the players, it is time that he was brought up with a round turn.

At a previous game some of the rooters for the Hope Y. M. A. team forgot themselves and brought down upon their heads the deserved rebuke of City Judge William N. Runyon, president of the Y. M. A. It so happened that the most flagrant offences in Saturday's game were aimed to discomfort Allen, the catcher of the Safe Works team in the game with the Hopes. City Judge Runyon has shown the proper spirit. He has the support of every true lover of good sport in the city of Plainfield. If these league games are to continue to be a success, they must be kept free from incidents of this nature. As president of the league and the Y. M. A. City Judge Runyon can do much to break it up and he should have the co-operation of every member of the four organizations represented in the league.

The league was formed to further the progress of clean sport. So far the games have been remarkably free from rowdyism. The standing of the players has remained unquestioned. There should not be any actions allowed on the part of overzealous rooters which will bring the league, its members and the game of baseball into disrepute. Any further cases of this kind should be summarily dealt with. The good of the sport demands it.

A little trip around our neighboring cities and towns will convince one that there is no city within 100 miles of New York that can compare with Plainfield in beauty and thrift. The character of Plainfield's streets, sidewalks and lights is in marked contrast with most cities and towns that make up the suburbs of New York. A spirit of enterprise and emulation seems to pervade all in maintaining well kept lawns and surroundings. Many towns will point to one show street, but with Plainfield every street shows a degree of thrift most marked. Added to these the schools, churches and stores tend to make Plainfield a most ideal home. With proper advertising of these merits the city should make a most rapid growth.

St. Swithin's Day came and went but the public thought little of it. Now attention is being called to the fact that it rained that day and that, according to an old saying, it will rain every day for the next forty days. There has been a sameness about the last month or two in account of the generous and frequent supply of rain which has come this direction that the summer guests have not relished and those who are planning for their vacations in the near future are not particularly anxious to see the conditions continued.

The fact that a reputable oculist of Chicago, in high standing in the profession, has become a large advertiser in the daily newspapers, has excited a good deal of comment, all of which benefits the advertiser, comments the Philadelphia Record. It is regarded as an evidence that in time every professional man will announce his business through the newspaper, to the convenience of the public and the profit of himself.

INTERFERED WITH CATCHER.

Spectator Threw His Hat in Face of Catcher Allen in Saturday's Game.

While Catcher Allen of the Safe Works team was running after a foul fly in Saturday's game, a hat was thrown full in his face by a spectator with the intent of making him miss it. The hat was hastily secured by Captain Martin, of the Hope team, and the identity of the owner was learned. The management of the Hopes deplores the occurrence. He was given to understand that such rowdyism would not be tolerated and was then ordered from the grounds. The young man afterward apologized to Catcher Allen for his conduct.

REPUBLICAN VIEW OF JERSEY'S CONGRESSMEN

Elizabeth Journal Predicts Election of Nine Out of Ten of Jersey's Representatives.

SITUATION REVIEWED.

PROSPECTS IN THE DIFFERENT CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS.

New Jersey's Representation in Congress Will be Increased by Two —Republicans Now Claim They Will Elect in Nine Districts.

Ten Congressmen will be voted for at the next election instead of eight as heretofore, two new districts having been formed by the law of 1901. While the district lines have been changed and some of the representatives brought in to the presence of a new constituency, there is little prospect of a Democratic gain, says the Elizabeth Journal. In fact, there is every indication that the Republicans will increase their strength in the delegation by the election of a successor to the seat of the late Joshua A. Salmon and the winning of two members in the Essex and Hudson county districts. It is safe to predict that nine out of the ten Republicans nominated will be elected.

Two Republican nominations have already been made, that of Representative Charles N. Fowler, of this district, the Fifth. He will have as his Democratic opponent DeWitt C. Flanagan, who has just been elected to fill a vacancy in Congress by the Democrats in the old Fourth district, which had such a Democratic majority that the Republicans let the district go by default. Mr. Flanagan is a millionaire stock breeder. The district comprises Union, Morris and Warren counties, the late Republican plurality being 1,530.

John J. Gardner was unanimously nominated for Congress by the Republicans for the sixth time at Cape May Wednesday. This time, however, his selection was made in the new Second district. The Second district is formed by the counties of Cape May, Cumberland, Atlantic and Burlington. Two years ago these four counties gave a Republican plurality of 9,643.

The expected nomination of Judge William M. Lanning of the new Fourth district, which comprises Mercer, Somerset and Hunterdon counties, has attracted particular attention this year because of the harmony that prevails on the candidacy of Judge Lanning.

The mention of his name for the place was hailed with delight by Republicans everywhere in the State. His character and ability have silenced all party differences, and have commanded the respect of thinking Democrats. While it is known that Judge Lanning make no little sacrifice in becoming a candidate, yet his ardor in the case is just as great as though he had made a vigorous fight to get his present standing in the party. The convention will be held August 5 at Flemington. The Republican plurality in the three counties two years ago was 5,965.

The Republican convention of the First district will be held on Wednesday, July 30, at Woodbury. Congressman Loudenslager and T. Alpheus VanSant have been conducting a pretty campaign for the honor. Many well-known Camden Republicans have been back of Mr. VanSant. The Central Labor Union of Washington, D. C., and many other organizations have adopted resolutions for Mr. Loudenslager's retention. He has been very watchful of the labor interests in his several terms in Congress.

It has been stated that United States Senator Kean had deserted his colleague's efforts, but the Senator's telegram to Postmaster Louis T. Derousse, last week, set that charge at rest.

This district is composed of Camden, Gloucester and Salem counties. In the election of 1900 these three counties gave a Republican plurality of 9,310

The counties of Middlesex, Monmouth and Ocean constitute the Third district. Benjamin F. Howell's renomination is assured. In the election of 1900 these three counties gave a Republican plurality of 6,006. Mr. Howell is a resident of New Brunswick and president of a local bank. Ex-Congressman Geissenhainer, of Freehold, who has a residence also in New York, is spoken of as his Democratic opponent. Ex-Senator VanCleef and Mayor George A. Viehmann, of New Brunswick, are also mentioned.

The Republican convention in the Sixth district will be held the last day of this month. The district comprises Bergen, Passaic and Sussex counties. James F. Stewart is the popular candidate in this district, and he is assured of the support of the undivided strength of the Republican vote, which shows a plurality of 4,054.

The Seventh and Eighth districts lie within the county of Essex. R. Wayne Parker seeks re-election in the Eighth district. Essex county, in 1900, gave a Republican plurality of 18,742.

The Ninth and Tenth districts are sub-divisions of Hudson county. In the election of 1900 Hudson county gave the Democratic candidate for congressman a plurality of 3,641. In the gubernatorial election last year the city of Bayonne, the towns of Kearny and Harrison, the borough of East Newark and the various wards in Jersey City, comprising the Ninth congressional district, gave a Republican plurality of 207, so that it is not unreasonable to expect the Republican ticket to win in that district next November.

Allan Langdon McDermott, Democrat, seeks renomination in the Tenth district, which has a normal Democratic plurality of 9,205. There can be little hope of defeating him, but as the strawn now grow drifting there is every indication that he will enjoy the distinction of being the only Democratic member of the delegation elected to Congress from this State next November. He was in the Ninth district when the redistricting was made, but got scared at his prospects for re-election and moved to the Tenth.

The Democrats claim that under the vote of 1898 they have a chance of carrying the Third, Ninth, Tenth and possibly the Fourth. The Republicans concede the Tenth to the Democrats. In 1898 the Republicans carried the new Fourth district by a small majority. At the last election the Republicans carried all the districts by large majorities, excepting the Tenth.

Last spring Chairman Gourley, of the Democrats, promised a meeting of the Democratic State committee early in July to look after the congressional ticket, but the meeting is still far away. It will be held at Atlantic City or Asbury Park.

SOCIAL LIFE AT BIG HOTEL

MANY ATTENDED THE SATURDAY EVENING HOP AT THE NETHERWOOD.

Large Attendance at Sacred Concert Last Night When Mrs. Dryden Again Rendered Her March.

Of growing popularity among the people of Plainfield are the social affairs at the Hotel Netherwood this season. Increased interest and extensive patronage on the part of the members of the upper circles give evidence that the resort is being highly appreciated. Especially was this shown at the Saturday evening hop and at the sacred concert last evening.

Another large and fashionable gathering made the affair on Saturday a memorably brilliant one. Hall room and piazzas alike were crowded with guests. When the thunder storm broke over the city, the more venturesome found a delightful view of the flashing fireworks in the heavens, while the devotees of the dance within sought forgetfulness of the warring elements.

Success of no uncertain degree greeted Mrs. Blanche Dryden at the concert last evening for her production, the "American Girl March." So well pleased were the guests with the composition last week that the composer was fairly flooded with requests to repeat it. She again rendered it in charming style, receiving tremendous applause. The mandolin solo work of Master Wood, of Brooklyn, also was highly praised.

It is worthy of remark that there were a large number of Plainfield people among the audience last evening. The generosity of the hotel management in extending hospitality to citizens, combined with the care exercised in keeping all the gatherings so select as to be beyond reproach, has not been lacking in effect in this respect.

CADDY FELL OFF WINDMILL

JOHN CAUFIELD HAD RIGHT LEG BADLY CUT IN THE FALL.

Accident Happened at Hillside Club —Lad Climbed Up Windmill Just for Fun.

John Caufield, aged thirteen years, a caddy at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, had a narrow escape yesterday afternoon from receiving serious if not fatal injuries.

He had been making several rounds of the course with players and was getting ready to return home. Although repeatedly warned not to do so, the boys have insisted on climbing up the frame work on the windmill. While up in the air a considerable distance he missed his footing and fell to the ground. On the descent his right leg struck an iron brace which projected out from a ladder. The flesh of the leg was lacerated four inches below the knee, and the lad lost a considerable amount of blood, besides suffering great pain.

Dr. VanHorn was telephoned for and went to the clubhouse in his carriage and brought the lad home. In the meantime those at the club cared for the boy the best they could until the arrival of the physician. Dr. VanHorn found it necessary to take thirteen stitches to close up the wound. A most fortunate part of the accident was that the bone was not broken at all, and the chances are the boy will experience a speedy recovery.

In the future severe measures will be adopted by the club to keep boys off the windmill.

TWO COUPLES WED TOGETHER

DOUBLE CEREMONY PERFORMED AT A PLAINFIELD HOME LAST EVENING.

Mrs. Leach Wedded to Hudson Kitchell and Miss Nettie Muir Became Wife of George R. Laird.

In a quiet but impressive ceremony, two couples were ushered into the joys of matrimony in a Plainfield home last evening. At the same time that Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Leach became the wife of Hudson Kitchell, Miss Nettie Muir was wedded to Geo. R. Laird, of the Hospital Corps of the regular army service. Neither couple was attended.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius J. Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, officiated at the service, which was performed at 8:45 o'clock in the parlor of Mrs. Leach's home on West Second street.

The rooms were tastefully decorated with daisies, sweet pea blossons and roses. On one side were the evidences of regard from the friends of the couples, many useful and handsome gifts being presented.

Mrs. Leach was gowned in a grey traveling suit while Miss Muir wore white organdie. The bridal party held a reception to their friends immediately following the ceremony, many visitors being present from Newark, Elizabeth, Scotch Plains and Plainfield with a detachment of soldiers from Fort Wadsworth, Staten Island, comrades of Mr. Laird. Elaborate refreshments were served during the evening and social enjoyment was heightened by music furnished by Professor O'Reilly.

After a short wedding journey, both couples will made their residence on West Second street, where they will begin their married lives together.

Hampton; treasurer, Thomas Caleen.

EVENTFUL CAREER OF FOUR SCORE YEARS

Charles W. Burton, of Watchung Ave., Passed Away at His Home Last Evening.

HAS SLOWLY FAILED.

WAS MANAGER OF DOMESTIC DEPARTMENT OF TIDEWATER OIL COMPANY.

Early Interested in Development of Pennsylvania Oil Fields—Represented State of Pennsylvania in N. Y. Hospitals in Civil War.

Charles W. Burton, a well-known resident of Watchung avenue, died last evening at his home, following a long illness due to old age and a complication of troubles. Although he has been able to attend to business to within a few months of his death, it was necessary for him to frequently leave business and seek rest. He went to Atlantic City last winter but was not greatly benefitted.

Mr. Burton was born at Charleston, Montgomery county, New York, September 28, 1822, and was married January 26, 1847, to Emma Derickson, daughter of Judge David Derickson, of Meadville, Pa. He moved to New York with his family in 1861. For many years he was a member of the firm of Bentley, Burton & Company, wholesale grocers. He became connected with the Tidewater Oil Company in 1887 and was manager of the domestic department. He held this position until his death. Mr. Burton's wife died November 16, 1891, in Philadelphia.

Mr. Burton was also interested in the early development of the Pennsylvania oil fields. He was one of the early members of the Union League Club of New York and a life member of the New England Society. He has lived in Plainfield seven years. During the Civil War he was a colonel on the staff of Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, and had charge of the Pennsylvania troops in the New York hospitals.

The deceased was a member of the Crescent Avenue church and he leaves three children, Mrs. Harriott Burton Ford, W. Gordon Burton, who live in Plainfield, and Charles H. Burton, of St. Louis, Mo., a newspaper man.

The funeral services will be held at his late residence Monday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock.

DEATH OF MRS. LELAND.

Mrs. Clara J. Leland, wife of Charles A. Leland, died at her home on West Fifth street, Monday, after a long illness. Death was due to lung trouble.

Mrs. Leland was fifty-five years old and came to this city from Massachusetts in 1888. She leaves six children, Clarence, William, Robert and Charles Leland, and Miss Alice Leland, of this city, and Arthur Leland, of Providence, R. I.

The funeral services were held from her late residence Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made at Hillside cemetery.

DIDN'T WAIT.

Kelley Went Back After His Hat and Claimed Friend Drove Away.

John Kelley, of the East End, appeared breathlessly at police headquarters, Sunday, and asked that the department's machinery be placed in motion to secure the return of his horse and wagon, which he declared had been taken by George Shea. They had been driving in the vicinity of Garwood, he explained, when Shea's hat blew off. Kelley descended to go after it and as he alighted, Shea whipped up and drove away from him. Chief Kiely telephoned a few and located the rig at a Westfield hotel where Shea had left it. Kelley was unwilling to make a complaint on recovering it.

RESULTS OF LEAGUE GAMES.

Y. M. C. A., 9; St. Marys, 8.
Safe Works, 11; Hope Y. M. A., 8.

Every League team changed its position in the race for the pennant through Saturday's games. For the first time since the series began, the Hopes dropped from first place. They lost to the Safe Works by a score of 11 to 8 in a game characterized by heavy slugging on one side and poor playing on the other. The Y. M. C. A. and the St. Mary's locked horns and fought to a finish in eleven innings, victory going to the association men by a score of 9 to 8. It was one of the best games of the season and the results sent the Y. M. C. A. to the top and let St. Mary down to the lowest rung of the ladder.

PLAYED 11 INNINGS.

It took eleven innings to decide the contest between Y. M. C. A.'s and St. Mary's on the latter's grounds, Saturday afternoon. Y. M. C. A. won out by the score of 9 to 8. It was a spectacular finish—a finish that made the fans drop off with heart disease. St. Mary's made three runs in the first half of the eleventh, putting them that number in the lead, and they looked like sure winners but Y. M. C. A. came to the bat and opened up a fusilade which, assisted by an error in the infield, netted them four runs with only one out.

By making one run in the first half of the ninth and then shutting out their opponents, St. Mary's tied the score, five each. Both were blanked in the tenth. Scott came to the bat in the eleventh and led off with a base hit; Doyle hit to the infield and was out; Crotty sent out a safe one, advancing Scott to second; Taylor followed with a two-bagger scoring both; Lederer sacrificed and Taylor scored on Dupee's wild pitch. Barry fanned, ending the outs.

Smith first up for Y. M. C. A., hit a slow one that Doyle fumbled and threw wild, allowing the runner to make second; Dupee's double brought Smith home; Hand was out on a pop foul to Keen; Moore's single advanced Dupee and both tallied on Bolsterle's two-bagger, evening the score. Barnes hit a safe one, bringing Bolsterle across the plate with the winning run.

With the exception of the last inning it was not a heavy batting game throughout. Two-baggers were somewhat frequent, but scattered, especially so with St. Mary's. Honors between the pitchers were about even. Y. M. C. A. played a much steadier game in the field. Percy Hand in the first inning made a beautiful throw from deep left, catching Taylor at home plate. Barry, for St. Mary's played a star game at right, and showed up well at the bat.

SAFE WORKS BATTED.

The batting streak, such as the team has never had before, assisted kindly by the opponents with poor playing, gave the Safe Works nine its game with the Hopes, Saturday. Hewitt was pounded out of the box in the middle of the third inning but even Montross's substitution could not stay the base chasing as the Iron Works soon got acquainted with him and added five runs to the six they had already made. In the field the Hopes played listlessly, the standbys making error that were alike unexcusable and costly. The total score was 11 to 8.

The fan started in the first inning when Hewitt gave Enright a free pass to first. He stole second as Siegfried fanned and went to third on a drive made by Cooney. The latter was rumbled, giving Cooney first and letting Enright home. Franklin reached first on a hit and both he and Cooney crossed the plate on successive singles rapped out by Symons and Allen before the side was retired.

The Hopes took the bat with a de*termination* to even matters but they secured only one run through a two-bagger made by Shortman and a poorly fielded grounder of Martin's. A double play was made in this inning through Montross sending a pop fly to Siegfried within the base line, thereby retiring Martin.

In the second the Safe people made another run through a couple of hits. In the third the batting started away again with a rush, a single, a double and a triple, the latter by Allen, following each other in succession and bringing in two runs before Montross was placed in the box. Allen was nailed at home and Fish and Jackson died at first.

The Hopes sent one man in the second, were shut out in the third and rallied enough toward the end of the game to get five runs but it was not enough. Montross stopped the batting for a while but in the sixth even he couldn't stay the leather slugging and the game ended with the Hopes three behind.

BEATEN BY DEAF MUTES

Scotch Plains, July 21—The Scotch Plains baseball team went down to defeat Saturday afternoon before the crack Xavier Deaf Mutes team, of New York, by a score to 5 to 8. The game at time was very exciting and should have been won by the home team had it not been that the infield, which has been such a terror to batters during the season, went to pieces at several critical stages of the game. This and stupid base running helped the visitors materially.

Hart, of the local team, pitched a superb game, striking out six of the heavy hitting Xaviers and not allowing a pass to base. Had he received the usual support the score would have been kept down. Fitzgerald, who was in the box for the visitors, gave six men free passes to first and did not strike out a man, his delivery proving to be very easy for the locals but the support given him kept the hits scattered and several two-baggers were taken care of by the outfield while the infield work was all that could be desired. The noiseless kicks put up at several stages of the game by the visitors proved to be very interesting to the large crowd present, especially when Umpire Quereau endeavored to explain to them. But altogether the visitors left a good impression with the ball loving public and when the two teams meet again which will be on Saturday afternoon, August 2, Manager Johnston's men promise to wipe out the defeat of Saturday.

Saturday's defeat was the second of the season for the team and it has been playing some of the best clubs through this section and around the Metropolitan district. Next Saturday afternoon the team will cross bats with the Riversides, Newark's crack team.

"I Never Knew Painkiller to Fail before, what can the matter be? Where is the bottle? There, I thought so; it is not Perry Davis' Painkiller at all, but something the druggist must have made himself and I did not notice it; I have used Painkiller for years for diarrhoea, cramps and stomach aches and it never failed."

Too Close for Comfort.

Uncomfortable nearness to serious injury was experienced at Fanwood one evening last week by Dr. M. B. Long, his wife and sister and another companion while out driving. The horse ran away and finally broke from the carriage, dragging the physician, who was driving, over the ground. Rumpled and torn clothing and a slight abrasion of the skin were the only material results of the accident. The women escaped unhurt.

VACATION WITH THE GOLFERS

But Good Weather and Low Scores Made Day an Exciting One at Local Clubs.

REGULAR COMPETITIONS

Honors at Park Golf Club Won by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, While Arthur Peterson, Walter Peterson and F. A. Clark Were the Winners at Hillside—Saturday's Play.

As the vacation season is on the attendance at the two local golf courses Saturday was rather small. It was a fine day for the game and some good scores were made. On the Park Golf Club course, Rev. C. L. Goodrich won first honors, while on the Hillside course Arthur Peterson won first honors for the Boys' cup and Walter Peterson and F. A. Clark divided first honors for the Golf Committee cup.

PARK GOLF CLUB.

Just an even dozen turned in their scores for the President's cup on the Park Golf Club course, Saturday afternoon. The winner of the first three points, Rev. Charles L. Goodrich had the low score of 73, while four other contestants had to divide the other three points as each made a score of 83. This was Mr. Goodrich's first tally for the cup, while the other winners of points are advanced three-quarters of a point each.

The scores for the day, under the one hundred mark, were as follows:

HILLSIDE CLUB.

There was a light attendance on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course Saturday, when the weekly competitions for the Boys' and Golf Committee cups were the only attractions. Arthur Peterson won first honors for the Boys' cup, while A. D. Beers and W. T. Glenney finished second and third. This result gives young Peterson an increased lead in the competition for this cup and he will probably win out. He has been playing a remarkable game for one of his size.

The scores for the Boys' cup are as follows:

Arthur Peterson, 94, 10—84; A. D. Beers, 99, 10—89; W. T. Glenney, 101, 10—91; E. M. Daniel, 3d, 113, 18—94.

JUST A DREAM.

No Truth in Story That John A. McPhee Was Signing Local Players for League Team.

The hallucinations of an overworked reporter resulted in a story appearing in a Sunday paper, Saturday evening, to the effect that John A. McPhee, of the Cincinnati baseball team, was in this city for the purpose of securing D. R. Martin and George Taylor for that organization. It is plainly evident that the story was imagination as McPhee, or "Biddy" as he is familiarly called, was summarily dismissed from the management of the Cincinnati team on July 11 and has since had nothing to do in a baseball way.

Inquiry at The Plainfield, where the former manager was reputed as staying revealed the fact that the hostelry had no such guest, although a man by that name, but not the initials, had dinner there one day and registered afterward. The local players, Martin and Taylor, assert that they have not been approached by anyone representing the professional teams.

Tax Rate the Same.

No change in the city tax rate, is the decision announced by all those in a position to predict the probable action of the city authorities. The prospect of the Council making a reduction in the rate as fixed by the County Board of Assessors is regarded now as certain. There is every reason to believe that the tax rate will be $2.50, or possibly lower.

ALMOST CAUSED ACCIDENT

PART OF COUPLING FOUND ON JERSEY CENTRAL'S TRACKS.

Discovered Near Somerville, Just Before the Lake Hopatcong Excursion Passed.

Somerville, July 22.—Sunday night, about five minutes before the Central Railroad's excursion of eleven carloads of people passed through Raritan on its return from a day's outing at Lake Hopatcong, Freight Agent Crouse, of Raritan, who happened to be walking along the tracks, west of *the depot there, discovered an ob*struction on one rail that would probably have caused a terrible wreck.

A broken coupling had been fastened to one rail in such a way that had the locomotive struck it the engine would surely have been hurled from the tracks. Crouse with difficulty got the coupling loose from the rail, and when the excursion train passed through at a speed of fifty miles an hour, he shuddered to think of what might have been. Death and ruin would surely have been the result.

Many are of the opinion that someone in sympathy with the strikers placed the broken coupling there. Only a piece of the link was gone, just enough for it to hook nicely over the rail. The Raritan officials, however, are of the opinion "that some children, who had been playing along the tracks sometime previous, had placed the obstruction there without any malicious intent.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, [illegible]

Testimonial — Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your invention, you [illegible] a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.
I spent five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse and worse. I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.
I noticed your treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success. I consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of Union City, Ind., but could only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the basic noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.
I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it nearly a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

REINHART LOST IN SEMI-FINALS

Local Golfer Was Defeated by Louis James, of Glenview, in National Golf Championship.

LUCK WAS AGAINST HIM.

On the Wet Course, Near Chicago, Frank O. Reinhart Was Beaten 2 Up and 1 to Play by the Chicago Lad, After Obtaining a Good Lead in the Morning's Play.

To the keen disappointment of many, Frank O. Reinhart met defeat Friday afternoon in the semi-final play for the national amateur golf championship, at the hands of Louis James, of Glenview, thus putting James and Byers, the winner of the other match, in the final play today.

In the morning when the first round of eighteen holes was played, Reinhart won, and this was a heart-breaking affair for the Glenview boy. Reinhart made an 87, while his opponent made an 88. The element of luck entered into the play and it was a surprise to all that Reinhart did not win easily. Nearly the whole course was covered with water.

James and Reinhart started play at 3:30 in the afternoon. Reinhart made it 3 up by winning the nineteenth hole in 5—6, James's approach being bad. James's drive for the twentieth reached the green; Reinhart's was almost equally as good, and the hole was halved, 4—4. Reinhart won the twenty-first by 5—4, holing a beautiful eight foot putt from the side of the hill. Reinhart was three yards from the hole on his third, but James holed a twelve foot put, and won, 4—3. Reinhart was then 3 up.

The match was squared at the thirtieth hole, Reinhart, to everybody's astonishment and his own chagrin, missing a ten inch putt for a half. James took the lead at the thirty-second, holing down a twenty foot putt for a 3.

The thirty-third hole was halved in 6, James saving himself by a seven foot putt. The thirty-fourth was halved in 4. Both got into the rough driving for the thirty-fifth, but were out beautifully. Reinhart went into the pond on his third and into the bushes on his fifth. He was over on his seventh, and gave up the hole. James was 2 up, 1 to play.

Reinhart, who almost invariably gets off low drives and brassies, sent three of them into bunkers. Had they stayed in the hole they would probably have been lost in each instance, but each time the ball jumped out into a good lie. Twice, however, he topped iron shots into the duck pond, the last time with fatal results, as it proved the deciding hole of the game. Reinhart's iron shots, as a rule, were perfect, while James's and Byers's putting won them many holes. James especially excelled in this, and he practically won in the afternoon by twice putting the ball in the hole from distances of about twenty feet.

BIG WINNINGS.

Horse Which Cost $150 Has Already Won Purses Amounting to $15,000.

One hundred and fifty dollars invested in a horse by A. S. Case, of Three Bridges, who sometimes makes his home in this city, has yielded him profits that are astounding. The animal was named "Meadow Belle" and was placed on the track in the 2:40 class. In a short time it began winning every race it entered, capturing big stakes. This season it has won already purses amounting to $15,000. The owner has refused an offer for the horse many times over what he paid for it.

W. E. Manning and family and Miss McKissic, of Plainfield, are summering in the vicinity of Somerville.

SPRING CHANGED ITS PLACE

ANOTHER REMARKABLE THING HAPPENS AT PEAPACK.

Disappeared During Last Winter's Flood to Reappear Twenty Yards Away.

The lovely valley of Peapack, which has been gaining notoriety during the last year by the discovery of a cave and subterranean river under the very centre of the town, has again come to the front with a mystery which rivals either of the above.

Everyone who has driven through Peapack has been impressed at its style. Directly along its main street one can seen handsome brick flats and modern houses alongside of a farm, with its post and rail fences outlining the principal street. The farm, one of the finest in the vicinity, is that of the Misses Apgar, who occupy it Directly opposite their dwelling-house lies a fine field of pasture, which was watered by a never-failing spring. It had been there in the memory of the oldest inhabitant—pure, ice-cold and beautifully clear.

During the heavy flood of last February, when all lower Peapack was inundated, this spring disappeared. Where once its cool depths sparkled was nothing but a sandy, gravelly bed. A few weeks later the Misses Apgar discovered, upon driving their five fine Holsteins to pasture, that the spring had reappeared some twenty yards below its former site.

There it was bubbling from the ground, pure and cold. At the end of a week it was found that the spring had increased in size. This it continued doing until it became over six feet in diameter, and instead of looking down through its clear water to the gravel bottom, it seemed to bubble from black depths. Then it was that some one decided to try and discover its depth.

What was their surprise to find that the longest pole or fence rail obtainable was unable to touch bottom. Since then repeated soundings have been made, but no rope or line has yet been found that will fathom its depths. It seems to be constantly in motion and bubbles up from some underground supply. The ground in which this spring has appeared is a mile from the cavern which was discovered last winter. It is thought by some persons who have made a study of the hills and dales of Peapack that the town is undermined with caverns.

LITERARY.

The recent discussion of the beef trust and the profits on cattle-raising will no doubt furnish a background of special interest for the paper by Ray Stannard Baker on "The Tragedy of the Range," the last of his series on "The Great Southwest," in The Century for August. Mr. Baker has made a thorough study of the subject of the cattle industry and of the sheep-and-cattle wars on the western range, and particularly of the reckless waste by man in dealing with the natural resources of the southwest. This paper will interest alike those who know all about the subject and those who know nothing about it. Like the other papers of this series, this one is illustrated by Maxfield Parrish, whose drawings of the west have been pronounced by westerners, in some respects, the most faithful renderings of that region ever made.

BAR EXAMINERS AT WORK.

Preparing for the Next Examinations to be Held in November.

State Board of Bar Examiners is already preparing for the next bar examinations for attorneys and counselors at the November term of the Supreme Court in Trenton.

The rules of court respecting examinations and admissions to the bar and copies of the circular issued in connection therewith may be obtained by writing to the Clerk of the Supreme Court at Trenton. The new preliminary examination is scheduled for October.

The Board of Examiners consists of Lawyers Charles H. Hartshorne, of Trenton; Frank H. Sommer, of Newark, and Howard M. Cooper, of Camden.

Juniors' Big Day.

Arrangements are rapidly being completed for the eleventh annual excursion of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., to Asbury Park on American Day, on Thursday, August 14. There will be twenty-one Councils from Essex county to run excursions to Asbury Park that day. It is planned to have a big reunion of the members of State officers and no doubt it will be one of the most successful affairs of the season.

New Junior.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., met Thursday and received one proposition. In the good of the order the members enjoyed a repast of ice cream, cake and cigars. There was a large attendance of members and plans for the coming excursion were discussed and furthered.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 27, "The Programme of Christianity"—Text, Matt. iv. 23; x. 7, 8.

We are followers of Christ. Our work has been clearly marked out for us. If the spirit of the Master dwells in and rules us, we shall ever find in Him our pattern and shall seek to form our lives on the model of His. He "went about all Galilee teaching in the synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people." What wonder that multitudes followed Him from near and far and that they brought their sick from great distance to be cured!

The apostles did similarly when sent out through the land to prepare the way for Him. Even the seventy disciples who went by twos through the villages on evangelistic tours found themselves able to effect marvelous cures and even to cast out evil spirits. In the times after Pentecost some at least of the apostles were able to perform wonderful deeds of healing.

The mission of the church of Jesus Christ is nothing more than to preach that men are sinners and can be saved through repentance from sin and faith in God through Jesus Christ. She is to teach sound doctrine and maintain the customs and ordinances of divine worship, but she is to do more than this. The church has a duty to the bodies as well as the minds and souls of men. Miraculous powers of healing may not be long continued, but the curative work is to go steadily forward. Men had come to regard the sick with aversion, and to think disease a sign of God's displeasure with the one afflicted. "Who did sin, this man or his parents, that he was born blind?" was a question perfectly natural in that time, but shows the current opinion that sickness was a punishment for sin. Jesus taught men to look upon suffering from a different viewpoint. He showed sympathy for those in pain and by relieving the afflicted gave a new conception of God in His relation to men. God is merciful and pitiful as well as just.

Medical science and all the arts of sanitation, nursing and merciful helpfulness of these recent times are directly in accord with the work of Jesus and His commission to His followers. The great development of hospital action, the opening of many kinds for the unfortunate, deaconess work and missions for reform of the fallen are modern adaptations of the mercy and help work which the church has carried on in some form and degree from the days of Peter and Paul were the foremost leaders.

The second department of the League is a most important one and should be so conducted as to interest and train the young people in regard for and visitation of the sick and relief of the poor under the guidance of the pastor and with proper safeguards and precautions. Shakespeare beautifully describes this virtue when he says:

"The quality of mercy is not strained."

The Joyful Spirit.

The child of God should always cultivate the spirit of joy. If one is a real Christian, he is entitled to a joyful life, for God, who made all, is his friend and has charge of His children, care not only in His kind providence, but in His infinite grace. Believer, you did not choose God first and persuade Him to come to your help, but He chose you just of His own accord and came down to deliver you. It is He that does the persuading to get you into His kingdom. Do you not have abundant reason to rejoice that you have such a Friend? Not only that, but you are of the rich ones predestined—this is grace and is being heirs with Christ. You are sure of having all that is good for you, if not all you want.—Christian Instructor.

Doing God's Will.

The soul needs lungs and atmosphere in order to live. Prayer is the lungs of the soul, and God is its atmosphere. To neglect prayer is to stop breathing life from God. Prayerless lives are strangled lives. Suffocation is as effective as starvation and more speedy. The soul needs food in order to grow. Stagnation is as dangerous to growth as starvation or suffocation. The Lord has purposed that our spiritual life should grow strong by exercise. Doing God's will is as essential to growth as feeding on God's word or seeking God's face in prayer.—Christian Intelligencer.

Profanity.

Profaneness is an unmanly and silly vice. It certainly is not a grace in conversation, and it adds no strength to it. There is no necessity for profanity in the narrative that is ingrained with oaths, and the blasphemy that bolsters up an opinion does not make it any more correct. Nay, the use of loose expletives argues a limited range of ideas and a conscientiousness of being on the wrong side. And if we can find in other phrases through which to vent our choking passion we had better express that passion.—Dr. Chapin.

Abiding Love.

Under heaviest clouded
With their gathered rain
Or in times of anguish
When I suffer pain.
I will trust my Father,
Who is me above,
And accept His dealings
As His thoughts of love.

For my Lord's perfection
Is not only shown
In the radiant sunbeams
From the heaven is thrown,
But in shadows likewise
And in tears that flow,
As a flashing angel
Blessings to bestow.
—Philadelphia Ledger

LABOR CONGRESS IS CALLED

STATE FEDERATION OF LABOR WILL HOLD ITS ANNUAL CONGRESS.

In Assembly Chamber at the State House, Trenton, Monday and Tuesday, August 18 and 19.

A call has been issued by the executive board of the State Federation of Labor for the annual congress of that organization, to be held in the Assembly chamber at the State house, Trenton, Monday and Tuesday, August 18 and 19. The call is signed by the president, John A. Moffitt, of Orange, and Secretary B. Frank Dunphy, of Camden. It is expected that from 250 to 300 delegates will attend the convention. Among the trades that heretofore have not been represented in congress, and that are expected to send delegates this year, are the South Jersey glass workers and silk workers.

Two delegates are allowed to each trades union of fifty members or less, three delegates for 100 members, and one additional delegate for each additional 100 members or fraction of that number. Each central trades council is entitled to one delegate in the congress. Of the condition of labor in the State, and the outlook, the executive board says in the call for the congress:

"From present indications the twenty-fourth annual convention of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor bids fair to be more generally attended and more widely represented than any previous convention of the federation. Many questions of importance await the calm, deliberate consideration of the delegates. Every local in the State organized on trades union principles, and which is affiliated with the national or international union of its craft, is urgently requested to be fully represented by its most active and best qualified members.

"Many advances have been made during the past year; organization has progressed steadily; wages have been increased; hours have been reduced; recognition has been secured; conditions formerly irksome have been modified; permanency of organization is established. To continue these beneficent results, and to meet the growing demands of labor, organized and unorganized; to more strongly assert our rights in legislative halls and the courts; to obtain still more general shorter work day to equalize the productive, distributive and consumptive effects of modern improved machinery, and to contend against the gradual transforming of human beings into mere chattels; all these needs show the necessity of the workers meeting in still closer affiliation."

OPERATION NECESSARY.

Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh Submitted to One and is Now Improving.

Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh Thursday submitted to a surgical operation at the home of her parents in Elizabeth. For some time past she has been under treatment for inflammatory rheumatism in her limbs and the trouble continued to grow worse. It was decided by the family to call into consultation a surgeon and the result was that an operation was deemed not only the best, but necessary. The operation was performed on one of the badly swollen limbs, below the knee, and there was found a large amount of pus and an abcess.

Mrs. VanEmburgh's condition was quite critical but it is now believed that with the care of a trained nurse and a continuation of the best treatment, she will get well, although it will be a number of weeks before she will be able to leave her room.

Making Way for New Building.

The old-fashioned house standing on the property on East Front street, recently purchased by Woodhull & Martin, will within a short time be moved to the rear of the property near the raceway. Workmen are now preparing to move the building. It is not known exactly to what purpose the house will be put.

Excellent Opportunity.

An excellent opportunity will be afforded to spend a pleasant day at the seaside today when the First Presbyterian, Congregational, and Park Avenue Baptist and Dunellen Sunday-schools go to Asbpry Park and Ocean Grove on the annual outing.

Cutting Down Deficit.

The chairman of the First Baptist church excursion committee states that the deficit will be about $150. There is enough money coming in to reduce it from $185 to that figure.

Floods in Warren County.

The floods last winter were very severe in Warren county. It is estimated that it will cost the county $30,100 for new bridges to replace those swept away or damaged.

Another Automobilist.

George J. Tobin, of Grant avenue, is the latest Plainfielder to join the ranks of the automobilists. A new Rambler gasolene machine, which he purchased recently, arrived yesterday.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning July 27—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—Missions. A meeting in the interest of medical missions. "Preach-heal."—Matt. x, 7, 8.

In this chapter we have the commission of Christ to the twelve apostles just before He sent them upon their first missionary journey. In this commission two things are uppermost: First, they are to preach; second, they are to heal. "And as ye go preach, saying the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, cast out devils, freely as ye have received freely give." In this commission we can see that Christ recognizes the importance of both the body and the soul, and we can also see that he recognizes the opportunity of reaching the soul through the body.

One of the superior characteristics of the church of Christ is that it pays proper attention to the entire man. It not only emphasizes the value and the importance of the soul, but also of the body and of the body. Stoicism emphasizes the mind and ignores the body and the soul. Epicureanism emphasizes the importance of the physical life, but ignores the mind and the soul. But Christianity attaches due importance to every part of man. It also recognizes the great advantages that come to spiritual workers through attention to and the care of the body.

The intimate relations that exist between the body, the mind and the soul are of great importance in the work of Christianity's position in this respect. It would be an impossibility to lead a man to Christ who is hungry. No less a distinguished evangelist than Mr. Moody has declared, "A man with cold feet cannot be converted." The body, the mind and the soul all bear the most intimate relations the one to the other. It is impossible to treat one without due and proper attention to all. Recognizing this principle, Christianity has paid proper attention to the mind and to the body, having of course in mind the reaching of the soul above everything else.

This attitude of Christianity toward the body has been specially applied to the work of foreign missions. This has been done for a number of reasons. (1) In most heathen countries medical science is very little advanced. Perhaps there is nothing cruder in heathen life than the methods of taking care of the body. Medical science is scarcely understood at all. The medicine men or physicians of heathendom are most crude and instead of benefiting the health are usually injurious to it. This condition made it absolutely necessary for Christian missionaries to pay attention to medical science. Even where medical missionaries were sent to the foreign fields the others had to give some attention to this subject. (2) Medical missionaries are not only necessary, but they are also a very powerful influence. It is possible through them to gain admission to many places where otherwise it would be impossible to go. The women of most oriental countries can be reached through the women doctors as in no other way. They live ordinarily most exclusive lives and under circumstances are absolutely inaccessible or were so until medical missions played such an important part in our foreign missionary work. (3) Through medical missions it is possible to gain the confidence of foreigners in no other way. They are naturally suspicious and prejudiced, but when they see the beneficent results of medical missions their loved ones healed or saved from disease, this prejudice largely passes away. They can realize that this attitude is at least beneficent, and they are naturally, therefore, the more readily convinced that the gospel truths will have the same effect upon their souls. The king of an oriental country was led to practically embrace Christianity and to support Christian missions as a result of the healing of a sick son. Such illustrations are very common. The hearts of the people are reached through the medical work, their confidence is obtained, and thus it is an easy matter to present the truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and the minds of the people instead of being prejudiced against it are open and free to receive it.

Lead, Kindly Light.

The light falls for the hesitating step, and a wavering allegiance leads to the confusion issuing in darkness. "Ours is not the reason why; ours is but to obey." And if necessary, assured that being obedient unto death is to enter into an abundant life. This cannot be too strongly insisted upon. Obedience is the law of service, and obedience to this moving Light is the means whereby it becomes clearer to us. The Light is moving on. The night darkens before the dawn, and then with the dawn the moving Light becomes transformed for us into the welcoming Presence, and we find the Light has led us home, to go out no more forever.—Episcopal Recorder.

Two Good Rules.

Remember that charity thinketh no evil, much less repeats it. There are two good rules which ought to be written on every heart—never believe anything bad about anybody unless you positively know it is true; never tell even that unless you feel that it is absolutely necessary and that God is listening while you tell it.—Henry Van Dyke.

In Sacrifice and Purity.

Love is best shown in sacrifice and blossoms sweetest in the white garments of purity.—Hohenzollern.

Resignation.

With adverse fate I will no longer cope;
Ambition and despair alike cease;
Where lately bloomed the wondrous flower, hope,
I plant and tend the humble herb of peace.
—Lippincott's Magazine

REALLY NOT JOKING MATTER

PHILADELPHIA LEDGER TAKES SENSIBLE VIEW OF MOSQUITO QUESTION.

These Insects Can be Gotten Rid Of If the Work Is Done Along Right Lines.

The Philadelphia Ledger takes a very proper view of all this mosquito extermination agitation and publishes the following editorial:

"A liberal amount of humor and some ridicule has been expended on Professor John B. Smith, the State entomologist of New Jersey, and others in connection with their efforts to exterminate the mosquito. Even members of the Assembly that authorized the State agricultural experiment station to expend $10,000 for the purpose of ascertaining means of getting rid of the pestiferous insect treated the matter with much levity. Doubtless the majority of those who take this view of the subject are unaware of the fact that experiments heretofore made elsewhere have yielded encouraging results that fully warrant continued investigations. These have at least indicated the possibility of abating the pest of mosquitoes within a given territory and, perhaps, of destroying it altogether.

"Professor L. O. Howard, the entomologist of the National Department of Agriculture, has demonstrated that the larvae of mosquitoes may be destroyed by covering the bodies of water and marshy places in which they develop with a thin layer of crude petroleum, and eminent scientific men in other lines have pointed out the larvae destroying power of certain fishes and birds. Experiments made with petroleum on marshy land and shallow pools in Staten Island last year caused a marked dimunition in the plague of mosquitoes in the vicinity; similar and other experiments are said to have been followed by beneficial results in Havana. In view of these findings, the appropriation of $10,000, made by the New Jersey Assembly, should be regarded not as an absurdity, but as a sensible and worthy movement in behalf of the comfort and health of the commonwealth.

"Mosquitoes breed in stagnant water, and it is not necessary for the development of the larvae that there be much of it. As Professor Smith recently pointed out in The Ledger, the smaller inclosures holding water, such as cisterns, manure pits, cesspools, and even old tin cans and pans thrown out on waste places, are prolific breeding places for this pestiferous insect. Wherever it is possible to fill all low places and to get rid of anything in which rain or other water can collect and remain, the problem of abating the mosquito nuisance is comparatively simple, but it is not possible to fill all the low and marshy ground in New Jersey; neither is it possible nor desirable to cover all the still water ponds in the State with a thin layer of petroleum. It is, therefore, wisdom to seek for other and supplementary means of extermination. As certain species of birds and fishes are declared to be fond of mosquitoes or their larvae as a food, Professor Smith is pursuing a proper and sensible course in requesting the aid and co-operation of the New Jersey Game and Fish Commission. By ascertaining the species of birds and fishes that attack either the insect or larvae or both, the most effectively, and by carefully breeding and protecting them, Professor Smith may yet be in a position to turn the tables on those who are treating his experiments and propositions with levity.

Tour Through West.

E. H. Clevely, of North avenue, and W. W. Warnock, of Craig place, are completing arrangements for an extended western tour which they are to take this fall, beginning September 14. They will visit various places of interest about the Great Lakes and will then ascend the St. Lawrence river to its mouth and gradually work down the coast to home.

Couple Well-Known Here.

Robert Laurie Eaton and Miss Isabel Davey Parrott, both well known in Plainfield, were married at the residence of the bride's parents in Elizabeth, Thursday evening. Miss Alice Burrows, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, while the groom was assisted by Dr. Alvin R. Eaton, Jr. After the marriage ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Eaton left for the Adirondacks on their wedding trip.

Vacation Days.

Vacation time is here and the children are fairly living out of doors. There could be no healthier place for them. You need only to guard against the accidents incidental to most open air sports. No remedy equals DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for quickly stopping pain or removing danger of serious consequences. For cuts, scalds and wounds. "I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for sores, cuts and bruises," says L. B. Johnson, Swift, Tex. "It is the best remedy on the market." Sure cure for piles and skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS IN THE BUILDING TRADES

Promise of Lots of Work for the Next Year and a Big Boom for Plainfield.

MUCH WORK STARTED.

SOME OF THE BIG JOBS NOW READY OR SOON TO BE COMMENCED.

With the Exception of Dover, Plainfield is the Busiest City of Its Size in the State—Wages are Good and May Go Up Higher.

Local mechanics in all lines of the building trades are having at present one of the most prosperous seasons they have ever enjoyed. In every part of the city structures large and small are being erected and there is a prospect of masons and carpenters having steady employment for a year to come. Wages are also slightly in excess of those paid last year and if the demand for help continues there is reason for the assertion that the day rate will be increased.

Among some of the larger buildings which are now in process of construction are the addition to the Scott factory, the additions to the Safe Works, extensions at the Pond Tool Works and several structures in the center of the city, including a three story brick on Somerset street. Frame structures are to be seen going up everywhere and especially in the West End where many residences are partially completed. The larger part of them are being built by mechanics who are taking advantage of building and loan associations to have homes of their own.

There are in contemplation many more contracts which will continue to make Plainfield a hive of industry. One builder was heard to remark yesterday, that barring Dover where numerous factories and houses are being put up, there is more building work being done at present in this city than any other of its size in the State. Among the new work to be done are the large factories for the Federick & Ayer Company at Clinton avenue and West Front street, for which ground has already been broken. The contractors have called for carpenters and masons and all who apply will be given steady work at the union rate of wages. The factory in itself will represent a small amount of the work to be done in that section as it means many new houses, mainly cottages, for the accommodation of the employes.

Another large contract which will shortly be given out is the restoration of the Babcock building to its condition before the fire. Estimates have been received for the work by the estate and architects who have been called in consultation have agreed to their being reasonable for the greater part.

It was thought at first that an outside firm would have to be called in to do the job but many of Plainfield's contractors are willing to assume the responsibility.

Then again there is a well defined rumor that another manufacturing concern which has had more or less to do with this city in past years, has under consideration the building of a plant in the eastern side of town. It will be no small shop and will be numbered among the city's largest industries.

Acting as President.

Rev. Dr. Whitney, president emeritus of the Centenary Institute at Hackettstown, has returned to his home in the city. For sometime past Dr. Whitney has been acting president prior to the new president, Dr. Noble, of Brooklyn, assuming the position. Dr. Whitney has been enjoying excellent health and says that he feels better than he has in a long time. He predicts a most successful year for the Institute, which now ranks second to none to none in the country of its kind.

Office in the Borough.

Surrogate A. Gibby Spencer, of Somerset county, has announced that hereafter he will conduct his official duties at North Plainfield every Thursday evening from 7 to 10 o'clock at 78 Somerset street. This if for the accommodation for citizens at this end of the county.

Going on Cruise.

A party of well known young Plainfield men will leave August 5 for a combined yachting and fishing cruise about Barnegat Bay. They will remain out in all three weeks.

Acts Immediately.

Colds are sometimes more troublesome in summer than in winter, it's so hard to keep from adding to them while cooling off after exercise. One Minute Cough Cure cures at once. Absolutely safe. Acts immediately. Sure cure for coughs, colds, croup, throat and lung troubles. L. W. Randolph.

WETUMPKAH TRIBE IN ROLE OF THE HOST

The Braves of That Tribe of Red Men Entertained Their Friends in Fine Fashion.

THOSE WHO TOOK PART.

PAST GREAT SACHEM NEWCORN WAS PRESENT AND MADE A SPEECH.

Dr. A. H. Dundon Was the Master of Ceremonies and Announced a Pleasant Programme—Refreshments Ended the Evening.

True hospitality was shown Thursday night when Wetumpkah Tribe, No. 220, Improved Order of Red Men, opened its doors and entertained its friends in genuine Indian style. The braves took all into camp and gave everyone a pleasant evening. Although the youngest tribe in the city the members are wide-awake and hustlers.

Dr. A. H. Dundon was the genial master of ceremonies and he announced the numbers on the programme, the first of which was a selection by an orchestra, consisting of violin, "Tony" Gaub; piano, Prof. Osborn; cornet, Whitfield Frazee. This was followed with buck dancing by William Wilson and coon songs and dancing by John Taylor. This was followed with the singing of "The Holy City" by Albert Stokey, of Westfield, accompanied on the piano by Miss Lydia Edgar, also of Westfield.

Another selection by the orchestra preceded rag-time selections on the piano by Marcus Hoyt. The feature of the evening was a pantomime scene showing the capture of a pale face by a scout and the rescue from death by a friendly Indian from another tribe. Those taking part in this scene were members of the tribe and the affair was both unique and cleverly given.

Following the programme, Past Great Sachem William Newcorn was called upon for a speech and he gave a short talk full of spice. He extended to all a hearty welcome and praised the principles of Redmanship to a high degree.

The next part of the evening was devoted to the serving of refreshments by Fowler, the caterer. These consisted of ice cream, cake and grape juice. While the guests were enjoying refreshments there were vocal and instrumental selections by the "Black Diamond" trio and piano solos by Miss Edgar.

The whole affair was one of the most pleasant yet given and much credit is due the committee, Michael Armstrong, W. A. Westphal and Robert Humphrey, for its earnest efforts.

LOCAL BIRDS.

Valuable Collection, Loaned by A. J. Gavett, Now on Exhibition at the Art Gallery.

The Public Library has just received the loan of about one hundred stuffed birds, such species as may be found in Plainfield and vicinity, a collection made some twenty-five years ago by A. J. Gavett.

As the interest in the study of birds has increased so much during the past few years, it was thought that the specimens would be serviceable at this time, if placed where they would be accessible to all.

The birds are all plainly labeled so that they may be studied without reference to an index.

There are other interesting cases of birds in the building, including some specimens from the tropics.

The case containing this interesting collection of local birds has been placed in the art gallery. The art gallery hours are from 2 until 5 o'clock Tuesdays and Saturdays.

MUST STAY AT HOME AND DIG THE CELLAR

Members of Warren Engine Company Have an Undertaking on Their Hands.

FOR NEW ENGINE HOUSE

AGREED TO DIG CELLAR IF BOROUGH WOULD BUILD THE HOUSE.

Now They Are to be Kept to Their Agreement—Copy of the Famous Agreement and Those of the Members Who Signed It.

Members of Warren Engine Company will get no vacation this summer. Instead of sitting by the sounding sea and watching the gulls in their flight, or musing high up in the mountains, far from the strife and din of men, they will remain prosaically at home, and all because they have to dig a cellar. For their toil they will have the consoling satisfaction of the warrior who fought for glory alone and received no lucre for his skill. The "shillin' a day, bloomin' good pay," song of the soldier to suit the firemen's case, will be made to read, "workin' all day, no sugar or pay."

The history of the story runneth thus. When the question of a new fire engine house for North Plainfield first arose a number of doughty Warrenites put their heads together and devolved a mighty scheme in order to consummate their very devout wishes. It was proposed to found an organization to be known as the Borough Cellar Gang, the members of which would promise to push the new-born scheme for all it was worth—harder than they will have to push wheelbarrows on hot nights, if they are going to fulfill their contract.

As the guild grew in numbers an agreement was drawn up and signed to the effect that if the borough fathers would grant the money for a new engine house, the shovel society would dig the cellar. Anxious signers now find that they overshot themselves. The prime movers in the matters are going to hold them to their agreement—they will have to dig the cellar, whether they like it or not.

The following is a copy of the original agreement, with the names of whose who signed it:

We, the undersigned, hereby agree to become charter members of the Borough Cellar Gang, and agree to live up to the rules and regulations of the gang, our trade mark to be pick, shovel and wheelbarrow. Signed, Thomas Dood, superintendent; John H. Carney, inspector; David Bodine, Julius J. Stahl, L. B. Bodine, Charles Stahl, John H. Schenck, Winfield Conover, W. B. Bennett, Albert DeCamp, W. F. Doud, T. E. Kesselring, W. B. Jennings, John Shroop, S. B. Joseph, Jacob M. Higgins, J. A. Daley, William Campbell, George Schlereth, R. Schenck, George H. Fairchild, J. A. Buchanan, P. H. Currin, C. O. Smith, A. F. B. Brokaw, Louis Feiring, T. J. McGann, R. V. Kinney, G. B. Stewart, James C. Walker, F. E. Woodruff, Francis Whiteley.

It is now humbly suggested that since the Cellar Gang is willing to spend the summer listening to the click of the pick, the Borough Council should hand over to the company the cost or part of the cost of the excavating if the contract was let out in the ordinary way.

THE PRISONERS YELLED.

They Had Heard the Story of the Prodigal Son So Often That It Got to Be Amusing.

Two or three years ago the chaplain at the Elmira reformatory went to Europe on a vacation of three months. Before he left he arranged that his place on Sundays should be filled by Elmira clergymen who were to address the inmates of the institution by turns.

The first clergyman, in thinking of a topic, naturally decided to talk on the prodigal son, and he told the story to the young men with much detail.

and then drew a lesson from the parable.

The next Sunday another minister came. He, too, decided that the prodigal son episode offered the best opportunity for a discourse, and he used the story as a basis of his talk. So did the other ten preachers, and for 12 successive Sundays the inmates of the reformatory heard with patient fortitude of the young man who left home, who ate husks with the swine, and returned to the paternal roof and caused the slaughter of the fatted calf.

Then the chaplain returned home. He had little time to prepare a sermon, so he fell back on the prodigal son, a theme with which he was familiar, and which was always appropriate. He did not know that his listeners had been treated to a dozen dissertations on the subject, but the roar of laughter that greeted him when he announced his text told him that something was wrong. He appealed to one of the prisoners for an explanation, and was told:

"Back up an' change cars, boss. We've had dat story 12 times while you're been gone. Tell us about Jonah and the whale, or give us a spiel on Daniel in the den of lions."

SO SWEETLY INNOCENT.

Papa Didn't Know How Many Sons He Had Until the Lady Principal Told Him.

He had been to the boarding school to pay a surprise visit to his daughter, his only child. He had parted from her, proud to be the parent of such a handsome maiden, pleased with the innocence of budding womanhood. The principal accompanied him to the door.

"Madam," he said, with deep feeling, "I owe you much for the manner in which you have reared my child since she has been under your care. When I notice the contrast between that innocent maiden and some of the girls of her age, who have not had the advantage of such strict supervision, I feel that I have indeed done wisely in placing her in your charge."

"And how proud you must be," said the principal, glowing with satisfaction, "to be the father of so large and devoted a family!"

"Large—devoted!" gasped the proud parent. "What do you mean?"

"Devoted to each other," said the principal. "No fewer than seven of Clara's brothers have been here during the past three weeks to take her out, and she is expecting another to-morrow."

Only Good Swimmers Wanted.

Only good swimmers are acceptable as recruits in the German army. The best swimmers in the service are able to cross a stream several hundred yards in width even when carrying their clothing, rifle and ammunition.

The Sign of the Cross.

In ancient days the addition of a cross to the signature did not always indicate that the signer could not write, but was added as an attestation of good faith.

GREAT CHANGES AT GRACE M. E. CHURCH

Will Redecorate Interior, Put Down New Carpet and Purchase a Pipe Organ.

TO BE DONE AT ONCE.

THEN A WEEK'S SERVICE IN HONOR OF THE REOPENING.

Committee Appointed by Official Board Believes There Will be no Trouble in Raising the Necessary Funds.

Extensive improvements are in contemplation for the interior of Grace M. E. church. For a long time a great many members of the church have felt the need of an entire renovation of the edifice and on their initiative work will be begun in the near future. At a meeting of the official board held recently the question was brought up and thoroughly discussed. It was proposed to decorate the building in keeping with its purposes, to put down a new carpet, and to purchase a new pipe organ.

In view of the fact that the church had given within the past year nearly $3,000 towards the lifting of the debt, it was deemed unwise to proceed with the execution of such a broad plan without first placing the proposition before a meeting of the whole congregation. A committee was appointed to ascertain the cost of the contemplated changes and improvements, and also to secure the views of the membership and friends of the church, and should the latter approve, to receive their subscriptions.

Several voluntary subscriptions have already been received, the majority of them being separate sums of $100 each. The members of the committee are convinced that the amount necessary to proceed to with the work and carry it to a satisfactory completion will be easily obtained. They propose to have the work done during the summer months and in the meantime the committee, when the work is completed, there will be a whole week's service in honor of the reopening.

This reopening service will in the history of Grace M. E. be an epoch-marking event. One of the distinguished bishops of the church will be secured to be present on the occasion and prominent speakers will be extended an invitation to take part in the proceedings. The committee in charge of the plans to bring the matter before the members of the congregation and their friends is as follows: Dr. H. K. Carroll, John Valiant, E. E. Winckler, Edward A. Vermeule, John Steiner, Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp.

THEATRICAL.

Clean, wholsome comedy, combined with a bill of straight vaudeville acts, each unquestionably the best of its class; this is what makes a Keith show so enjoyable. Mr. Keith has always stood as the most conspicuous exponent of refinement in vaudeville; and his original idea of presenting a high class continuous entertainment for a moderate price has been developed to such a degree that no one familiar with what was called vaudeville twenty years ago would recognize its namesake today. Heading a long and exceptionally attractive bill at this play house for the coming week are the James O. Barrows-Lancaster Company, in their dainty and charming one act comedy "Tactics." This little playlet, with Guy Lancaster and Agnes Carlton as the pair of young lovers, and that sterling comedian James O. Barrows furnishing the bulk of the comedy as the irascible old ex-Major has been marvelously successful. Other strong features upon the bill are Zeno, Carl & Zeno, acrobatic marvels; Fred Herbert's Performing Dogs; H. V. BUM, DOG POLICEMAN

He Goes Out Regularly on Patrol and Catches Burglars.

Is a Recognized Member of the Force of Precinct 28, New York City—Has Countless Friends and Admirers.

The policemen all like Bum, anyhow, and it is not recorded that he has any enemies in the precinct, except possibly some burglars who have felt his teeth.

He arrived at the police station in Eighty-eighth street, far over the East river, one bitterly cold night four winters ago, says the New York Sun. Capt. Freers was in command at that time, and he happened to be sitting beside Sergt. Tom Reilly behind the desk. The street door opened and a diminutive black-and-tan dog dodged in at the heels of Roundsman Fox.

"Here's a poor little bum almost frozen to death," said the roundsman. "Let's thaw him out."

"Sure," said the captain, "let him lie down by the stove."

But Bum didn't like the stove. He was so benumbed by the cold that he could hardly walk. He managed to drag himself around behind the desk, however, and curl up by Sergt. Reilly's chair.

That was the beginning of their friendship. Sergt. Reilly was his favorite from the first, and has continued so.

"He looked up at me in such an appealing way," said the sergeant, "I could not help but pity the little creature."

Bum was not the spick-and-span-looking dog then he is to-day. He was small, scraggly and half-starved. Sergt. Reilly sent out and bought him some meat and liver when he was thawed out. It was probably the first square meal Bum had ever had.

His next acquisition of fortune was an old blanket to lie on upstairs in the dormitory. The men on hand came to know him soon, and his fortune prospered correspondingly.

He made his home at the police station and began to go about the precinct with the men when they went on post. But he stuck to Sergt. Reilly more than to any of the rest, and ever since that time they have been accustomed to take long walks together.

The name "Bum" stuck to him from the remark made by Roundsman Hawkins the first night he came into the house. Before long the policemen in the house chipped in and bought him a handsome collar inscribed "Bum" and also bearing regulation brass figures "25," used to indicate the number of the precinct.

He is very fastidious about his meals now, but he has friends about the precinct who give him anything he wants. The night watchman at the Astoria ferryhouse has a plate of cooked meat or liver ready for him every night at 11 o'clock. And Bum is usually on hand. So between the policemen in the house and his friends on the outside he fares pretty well.

He always turns out with the midnight platoon and barks his approval as the men march out.

The conductors on the Eighty-sixth street crosstown horse cars all know him, and he rides free with them just like a policeman in uniform. He has learned the limits of the precinct from the men on post, and he has never been known to go below Seventy-ninth street or above Ninety-sixth street.

He has the record also of having fastened his teeth in the trousers of more than one burglar or thief running to escape arrest. Bum always managed to intercept them until a policeman could make the capture.

Altogether, the men of the Twenty-eighth precinct think they have a pretty intelligent dog.

Town of Early Marriages.

Rhosllanerchrugog, North Wales, probably holds the record for early marriages. The police in this thriving mining town of about 10,000 population. The majority of the marriages are contracted when the bridegroom is from 18 to 20 years of age, and the bride generally about two years younger. The marriages, as a rule, are happy ones, for the average miner of 18 or 20 is able to earn a splendid wage. After a few months of married life the young husband's whole ambition is to build himself a home. He himself does most of the building work.

Swearing on the Trinity.

Probably the most curious European oath is administered in Norway. The witness raises his thumb, his forefinger, and his middle finger. These signify the Trinity, while the larger of the uplifted fingers is supposed to represent the soul of the witness and the smaller to indicate his body.

NO TRACE OF PRIVATE BOWDEN

JOHN T. BOWDEN CAME BACK FROM THE PHILIPPINES.

Was Honorably Discharged From Service and Returned in Transport—No Word Since.

Relatives and friends of John T. Bowden, of this city, who for the past three years has been a soldier in the Philippines, are fearful that he has met with some mishap, or possibly be consigned to a watery grave.

He was a corporal in Company H, Sixth United States Cavalry, and his relatives received word in April last from him, that he had secured his discharge and would sail for home from Manila on May 11. The transport he was to take has long since arrived in San Francisco, but with yellow fever rampant among the soldiers. The officers reported a number of deaths during the voyage and as nothing has been heard from Bowden, it is thought he may possibly have been numbered among the victims.

His uncle, David Bowden, of West Fourth street, and Fred Bowden, his brother who recently returned after three years service in Cuba, have written to Adjutant General H. C. Corbin in hope of getting some trace of the missing man but so far they have met with no response.

Bowden was very well known in this city before he entered the army six years ago and was a magnificent specimen of the typical soldier. He was a member of Hope chapel and at one time formed a military organization among the young men of the place and drilled them for a long time. He made his home with his uncle on Grant avenue.

RICH HARVEST IN PROSPECT

HUNTERDON AND SOMERSET COUNTIES WILL DO WELL THIS YEAR.

Peach Crop in Particular Promises to Be Unusually Large and Healthy.

The farmers of Hunterdon and Somerset counties will reap a rich harvest this year. Not in many years has the outlook for all kinds of fruit been more encouraging. The crop of corn will be the largest in a decade. Hay will probably be light because of the continued dry weather during the early spring. However, what will be lost in the yield of hay will be gained in wheat and rye. The wheat and rye, from present observations, will not be affected with weasel and this will mean hundreds of thousands of dollars to the farmers in fertile Hunterdon. The conditions of the weather have favored the corn crop from the time it was planted and a poor field of corn in this county is a rare sight this season. Oats are growing fine and are well filled, so that this crop will surpass many former yields.

Almost the normal cherry crop was marketed and the price realized was almost double that of former years. The strawberry yield was also large this year. The truckmen report that the blackberry and raspberry crop will be greater this year than has been gathered for many years. A good crop of apples and pears will also be gathered.

The most jubilant of all the farmers are those who are fortunate enough to have large peach groves upon their tracts. The trees this year are healthy in appearance and are loaded with fruit. During the last three or four years, Hunterdon's peach crop has been almost a failure. When the peach growers have a big yield about $1,000,000 is brought into that section, the greater portion of which is spent among the merchants there, who join in the belief that this will be a banner year for everybody in Hunterdon and Somerset.

PROGRESS MADE BY NEW MILK COMPANY

Contracts Already Signed With Dealers Controlling 1,000 Quarts a Day.

MORE WILL FOLLOW.

THE COMPANY'S REPRESENTATIVE NOW WORKING WITH THE PRODUCERS.

M. J. Briggs, Representing the Promoters, Explains Aims and Plans of Proposed Plainfield Hygienic Dairy Company—His Interview.

Progress is being made in the attempt to consolidate the local milk dealers in one concern. Melancthon J. Briggs, who represents the American Pure Milk Company, promoters of the enterprise, is now in Plainfield and is quite sanguine in his belief of its success.

Contracts were sent to a number of milk dealers yesterday and they were offered good prices for their milk routes. Already contracts enough have been signed to give the new concern control of routes amounting to over a thousand quarts a day. It is expected that the new company will considerably enlarge that amount in a few days. Now Mr. Briggs is negotiating with the milk producers and does not anticipate much trouble in securing nearly all of them. He says that they will get good prices and offers to make contracts for five, ten or fifteen years.

Concerning the aim of the new company, which is to be known as the Plainfield Hygienic Dairy Company, Mr. Briggs was free to talk.

"Many well meaning citizens of Plainfield who are not fully advised of this method of the proposed hygienic milk company," he declared, "call the enterprise a 'trust' and are alarmed lest it ruin the present milk dealers and, after it has driven them out of business, fear that it may oppress the farmers and practice extortion upon its city customers. A simple statement of a few facts demonstrate how groundless are these apprehension.

"Instead of 'running the present dealers' the new company offers to buy the property of all who wish to sell and to pay them $4 per quart of their average daily sales for the good will of their business. The usual price paid is $1 dollar per quart and there are not a half dozen milk dealers in the city who would not jump at an offer of $3 per quart if offered by any one else.

"The new company will employ all the competent milkmen who can be induced to remain in the business and will pay them good salaries by which they can make more clear money than they do now.

"So far from 'opposing the farmers' the company will contract with all for five years or as much longer as any may desire, to pay ½ cent per quart more than the present high prices. This means a gain of $73 a year for each can made daily for that period. The company is simply adopting the Borden method of paying farmers to make clean milk.

"It will be impossible to practice extortion on city customers because the charter of the new company will forever prohibit it from charging customers at retail more than 8½ cents per quart more than it pays the famers.

"The people of Plainfield will get clean and healthful milk produced by cows properly fed, stabled and regularly inspected. This milk will be clarified, pasteurized and bottled in our up-to-date plant and will be guaranteed by a responsible company.

"There will be no more epidemics of scarlet fever, diphtheria or typhoid fever started by your milk supply as has been the case in recent years. Hundreds of cases of intestinal diseases and scores of deaths of babies and young children that now occur annually and which the medical profession have discovered to be simply 'milk poisoning' will be prevented by the general use of pure and healthful milk. I have yet to hear of the first doctor in Plainfield that does not cordially endorse our effort to give the people pure milk."

HOW KNIGHTS TEMPLAR PROGRESS IN JERSEY

Plainfield Has Two of the Grand Officers Numbered Among Its Citizens.

HISTORY OF GROWTH.

FIRST COMMANDERY WAS HUGH DE PAYNE, OF JERSEY CITY.

It Was Instituted in 1858—Grand Commandery Formed Two Years Later—Now Seventeen Commanderies and 2,000 Members.

Knights Templar of this State are enthusiastic over the recent session of the Grand Commandery of New Jersey, held in Trenton last May. The conclave was one of the most successful ever held by the Grand Commandery. Honors came to Trinity Commandery, of this city, in the form of the election of D. C. Adams to the office of deputy grand commander and Jacob Kirkner to the office of grand captain general.

That higher branch of the Masonic fraternity known as the Knights Templar numbers nearly 2,000 in New Jersey. Its membership in this grand jurisdiction is greater in proportion to the number of Masons in the State than the total in many of the nearly States, so that New Jersey is highly esteemed by Templars throughout the country. The first commandery in this State was Hugh de Payne, of Jersey City, instituted in 1858. St. Bernard followed at Hightstown, and the third was St. Helena at Burlington. These three commanderies, though small in numbers, met on St. Valentine's Day in 1860 in the asylum of the latter and formed the Grand Commandery. They had received their commandery charters from the Grand Encampment of the United States, and that body issued the charter to the new Grand Commandery.

From this humble though determined beginning the order in New Jersey has grown to number seventeen commanderies and almost 2,000 members. W. H. Doggett, of Jersey City, was grand commander; E. G. Taylor, Hightstown, deputy grand commander; John Hilton, Jersey City, grand captain general, and George Edwards, Jersey City, grand treasurer. Mr. Edwards is the only survivor of these officers. He is a past grand commander.

The uniform now in vogue was adopted by the grand encampment of the United States at its session of 1859.

Masons in the northern part of the State commenced to take an interest in the Templars, and several Newark members joined Hugh de Payne Commandery of Jersey City. The records show that in 1866 W. W. Snow, of Ramapo, Bergen county, presided over the deliberations of the grand commandery. He is the third surviving grand commander. Damascus Commandery of Newark was warranted at the annual session of 1866, at which Dr. Isaac A. Nichols was made grand captain general and Dr. Charles M. Zeh was installed as grand standard-bearer. De Molay Commandery of Washington was also warranted at this conclave, and started off with but nine members; now it numbers 127. Hugh de Payne numbered 176 at that time.

Sir Knight Isaac A. Nichols was grand commander in 1869. Cyrene Commandery of Camden was then the latest branch. It has had a splendid growth, and now numbers 257 sir knights. St. John's of Elizabeth was next formed. In 1874 S. S. Battey, of Newark, was the grand commander, he having filled the position of deputy the year previous.

Commandery No. 8 was instituted in New Brunswick, but its charter was surrendered, and now No. 18 occupies that field. The present commanderies are: Hugh de Payne No. 1, Jersey City, 178 members; Helena No. 3, Burlington, 89; Palestine No. 4, Trenton, 139; Damascus No. 5, Newark, 232; De Molay No. 6, Washington, 127; Cyrene No. 7, Camden, 297; St. John's No. 9, Elizabeth, 86; Olivet No. 10, Millville, 108; Ivanhoe No. 11, Bordentown, 52; Ode de St. Armand No. 13, Morristown, 89; Melita No. 15, Paterson, 114; St. Elmo No. 14, Lambertville, 53; Corson No. 15, Asbury Park, 99; Pilgrim No. 16, Hoboken, 97; Trinity No. 17, Plainfield, 84; Temple No. 18, New Brunswick, 67, and Hersey No. 19, East Orange, 62.

Daniel Demarest, the present grand commander, resides in Montclair. He is a past master of Passaic Lodge No. 67, Free and Accepted Masons, of Passaic; past high priest of Centennial Chapter No. 34, Royal Arch Masons; past commander of Melita Commandery No. 13, Knights Templar; past grand master and present grand chaplain of the grand council, Royal and Select Masons, of New Jersey. Mr. Demarest has belonged to the Masonic fraternity for forty-two years.

D. C. Adams, of Plainfield, the deputy grand commander, is a member of Jerusalem Lodge No. 26; Jerusalem Chapter No. 24, Royal Arch Masons, and Trinity Commandery No. 17, Knights Templar, and has presided over each. Besides holding his present office in the grand commandery, he is grand principal sojourner in the Grand Chapter of New Jersey, Royal Arch Masons.

Jacob Kirkner, the grand captain general, is a past master in Jerusalem Lodge No. 26; past high priest in Jerusalem Chapter No. 24; past commander of Trinity Commandery of Plainfield, and a member of Kane Council of Newark, Royal and Select Masons.

Mr. Burton was associated with the Tidewater Oil Company for fifteen years and the following representatives from that company attended the service: Josiah Lombard, Benjamin F. Warren, George A. Keeney, Frank W. Edwards, Charles W. Burtis, J. A. Pickett, Frank Rathbun, Philander R. Gray, Phillip R. Macintyre, Thos. L. Harris and Joseph E. Moore.

After the service the interment was made on the west slope of Hillside cemetery.

GRAND ARMY TO WASHINGTON

PLANNING TO ATTEND NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT IN OCTOBER.

Plans Made for Reception of the Veterans of the Civil War at the National Capital.

Some of the Grand Army men in this city are arranging to be in Washington, D. C., during the thirty-sixth annual national encampment, which will be held there in October. It promises to be a notable occasion for the veterans, and advices received from every section of the country give promise of an unusually large attendance of the comrades at the coming encampment.

Washington is especially attractive to most of the members of the order, for the reason that a large proportion of them participated in the numerous battles and skirmishes that were fought in its vicinity, and on the historic fields lying between the Potomac and the James. Moreover, Washington is the national capital, and most of the veterans marched down Pennsylvania avenue after the surrender of Appomattox, and were reviewed by the president. Relatively few of them have seen Washington since that memorable day, and consequently there is a strong desire to visit the capital at this time to mark the improvements that have taken place and to visit such of the battlefields as are within easy reach.

The committee are making arrangements for excursions to the battlefields, and on some of them interesting ceremonies will be held. In furtherance of this movement the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has issued a folder that will be especially interesting to the veterans and valuable to other visitors, because of the information contained of the battlefields lying along and approximate to the line of that road.

Like all previous contests for the position of commander-in-chief of the Grand Army, the election to be held in October will be hotly contested. There are thus far four candidates announced. General Thomas J. Stewart, of Pennsylvania, and adjutant general of the State, is one of these, and has very good prospects for success. Ex-Governor Frederick Roble, of Maine; General John C. Black, of Illinois, formerly commissioner of pensions and representative in congress from that State, and Colonel John McElroy, commander of the Department of the Potomac, and one of the most active and widely known men in the order, are also candidates. The roll of the encampment carries about 1,400 names. These include a number of aged men, who may not be able to attend the October meeting, so that the voting strength may not exceed 1,000 or 1,100. At Cleveland last year there were 706 votes cast, of which 476 were for General Torrance and 230 for General Thomas J. Stewart.

A HUMMING BIRD'S TREE.

Scores of the Tiny Creatures Visit a Rockland (Me.) Cherry Tree Each Spring.

An interesting sight now daily to be seen at the home of W. O. Fuller, Jr., of this city, is a large cherry tree that is steadily visited from early morning to sunset by a large flock of humming birds, says a Rockland (Me.) report. Fully 100 of these dainty little creatures are to be seen ceaselessly darting among the branches of the tree, or poising themselves on wing before the fruit into which they reach for honey. The constant flutter of so many pairs of wings creates a whirring noise like the distant hum of machinery.

According to Chapman, but one variety of the humming bird is found here in the east, the ruby-throated, which breeds from Labrador to Florida. Its upper parts are bright, shining green; wings and tail fuscous with purplish reflections; throat beautiful metallic ruby-red, whence the name. The ruby-throat has no song, its only note being a squeak, expressive of distrust or excitement. There is a belief among some that the humming bird never alights when absent from its nest, but this is easily disproved, the little colony of them here alluded to exhibiting many refutations of this erroneous impression. The humming bird is as fearless as beautiful. Each spring while this cherry tree remains in blossom this visit of the humming birds recurs.

AMERICANS IN CANADA.

Many Are Making Homes on the Fertile Lands of the Northwestern Dominion.

There is at this time a considerable American migration to the Canadian northwest. The fertile and comparatively cheap lands of Manitoba, Assiniboia and Saskatchewan are attracting many settlers, now that they can be reached with ease and facilities exist for shipping their produce to market. Last year, reports the Chicago Tribune, 63,000,000 bushels of wheat was raised in a region which was once looked on as a part of the frozen north, valuable only for the fur-bearing animals it produced. There are millions of acres of land not under cultivation which can be made as fruitful as those now being tilled.

A majority of the men who are now making homes for themselves in the Canadian northwest are Americans. This does not alarm the Dominion authorities. They have no fear that the newcomers will be a disturbing political element, or that they will at some future day agitate for the annexation to the United States of the provinces in which they may be in the majority. There is no occasion for apprehension on that score. Americans have emigrated in numbers to Canada before this and have manifested no inclination to Americanize their new country.

COREA AND ELECTRICITY.

The Deadly "Live Wire" Known in That Country as a "Thunder and Lightning String."

Near the center of the city of Seoul there is a beautiful marble pagoda that was brought from Peking about 1300 by one of the Mongol queens who came as a bride to Corea. Her people at that time were making the whole known world, and, under leaders like Genghis, Kublai and Tamerlane, were upsetting all the thrones of Asia, so that Corea still speaks of them with bated breath, and the smallest children know them by name, says a writer in Outlook. The marble pagoda still stands, a silent witness before the world of the great Mongol conquerors, but each year its ear whizzes an American electric car by at the rate of ten miles an hour, regardless of all the Mongol shades. Along this main street of Seoul, one of the oldest streets in the world, stretch western wires charged with something that defies the curiosity of the sages to pronounce upon. A few days ago a broken strand hung temptingly from one of the poles, and the far east determined to get hold of it to investigate, with the result—one live wire, one dead native, and two others were posted up: "If anyone is caught fooling with these thunder and lightning strings let him be padded."

Selling the Wind.

It seems incredible, but is nevertheless a fact, that as late as the year 1814 an old woman named Bessie Millie, of Pomona, in the Orkney Islands, sold favorable winds to seamen at the small price of six pence a vessel. For many years witches were supposed to sell the wind. The Finlanders and Lap*landers made quite a trade by selling* winds, which were supposed to be tied well paid by the credulous sailors, used to knit three magical knots; the buyer was told he would have a good gale when he untied the first knot, the second knot would bring a strong wind, and the third a perfect tempest. At one time winds were sold at Mont St. Michael, in Normandy, and arrows were sold at the same time to charm away bad storms.

A Distressed Community.

According to the official report of the Ottawa, Kan., druggists, for March, it took 82 gallons of whisky, 88 gallons of alcohol, 138 gallons of wine, 14 gallons of gin, 23 gallons of brandy, 4 gallons of beer, 3 gallons of ale and 4 gallons of malt to cure the ills of that distressed community. The liquor was wanted for a multitude of diseases, ranging from ingrowing toenails to appendicitis. One honest fellow signed up under the "mechanical" clause of the constitution. He said he needed four gallons mechanically—he was going to have a "barn raisin'."

PILGRIMING TO HOLYWELL.

The Blind, the Lame and Sick Seeking Relief at Miraculous Spring in Wales.

Anyone who thinks that superstition is no more in Great Britain ought to pay a visit to Holywell, in north Wales. The little Welsh town is overrun in the summer by an army *of sufferers from all sorts of dis*eases who come there to be made whole by the "miraculous" powers of the water in the spring of St. Winifred, says a London paper.

The "l..ly well," from which the place gets its name, has been famous throughout the entire country for centuries. The legend runs that St. Winifred lived near the spring and endowed it with the power of relieving all ailments, and ever since history began to be writ in Wales hosts of people, most of them Roman Catholics, have journeyed from all parts in the hope of being cured of their respective maladies.

The spring is surrounded by a small chapel which is supposed to have been built by Margaret, mother of King Henry. The candidate for cure enters and kneels on a stone ledge beside the water, and then, according to the cherished legend, whatever ailed him once thereafter ails him no more. Anyone who visits the little chapel at almost any time in the year, will find it full of the lame, the halt and the blind, most of them people of the poorer classes, and the villagers of Holywell tell of endless miraculous cures that have taken place before their astonished eyes.

SINGLE OFFICERS IN DEMAND.

They Are Preferred Because of the Crowded Condition of Uncle Sam's Military Posts.

The overcrowded condition of the residential quarters of the various military posts in this country, due to the return of regiments from the Philippines, is embarrassing the military authorities, reports the Washington Star. The trouble is not so much with respect to housing the officers themselves as with the members of their families. The situation has reached a point where bachelors are favored over benedicts in assignment to stations with limited living accommodations where such discrimination is possible. And it is even asserted that where there is no other choice between two young candidates for a commission it is bestowed on the single man in preference to one who is married. Even then it is recognized, however, that the bachelor appointed is not likely to continue long in single blessedness. The powers that be admit that their author*ity does not reach to the extent of* interfering with subsequent affairs of the heart. It is made plain that there is no official prejudice against matrimony—but just at the present the military posts would afford better accommodations for more officers if it were not for the family attachments of some of them. Congress provided liberally for the army in this respect during the session just closed, but it will be many months before the additional quarters authorized are ready for use.

TAXES WERE TOO ONEROUS.

An Old Pennsylvanian Who Thought the Government Was Pressing Him Too Hard.

From Pottsville comes a story of an old chap who is proud to describe himself as the original anti-tax fanatic, says the Philadelphia Times. Soon after the breaking out of hostilities with Spain and the passage of the war revenue act by congress he began to orate against the new taxes as an exhibition of fiscal tyranny. He would fairly froth at the mouth as he denounced the war tariff and would darkly hint at the possibility of a lat*ter day Patrick Henry and a new* awakening of the people to a sense of the iniquities of the old land hike low and his doctor, finding him asleep one day and thinking a little blistering would do him good, applied a fine large mustard plaster to the old fellow's back. The burning, stinging bite of the heated mustard awoke the crusty patient, who rolled over in agony for a minute or two, clapped one hand behind him, felt the plaster and frantically tearing it off roared:

"Has it come to this that an old man like me can't even die peacefully in his bed without having the government come along and clap a revenue stamp on him?"

Street Etiquette.

In meeting a lady in a public thoroughfare in America a gentleman al*ways waits for her bow of recogni*tion before he ventures to be doing ing her. In Europe, however, the contrary is the established rule, it being the gentleman's place to bow first, when, if the lady desires not to recognize him, she ignores his salutations, there the matter ends. It is not good form in any place for a lady to stop a gentleman in the street for the purpose of chatting with him, though she may with perfect propriety pause to speak if he take the initiative. Personal talks in the street are not, however, considered good form, even between persons of the same sex, the better plan being to walk on slowly until the conversation is concluded.

STRENGTHENING FOUNDATIONS

PLAN TO PREVENT SETTLING OF WALL OF BABCOCK BUILDING.

Girders Resting on Concrete Foundations Have Been Placed to Support Wall.

An ingenious piece of work of interest to mechanics is being done at the rear of the Babcock building to strengthen the walls of that structure, which have been settling on account of the loose quality of the soil at that point.

Trenches about twelve feet deep, have been dug along the sides of the building, both within and without, and these excavations have been filled in with concrete. A heavy iron girder is placed on the concrete foundation on the outside, a little below the level of the ground. Resting on this girder, and almost converging on a *substantial brick pier within the cel*lar, a series of girders about three feet a part are placed crosswise, carrying the weight of the wall. The same plan is followed beneath the second side wall, necessitating another brick pier in the cellar.

Facing on Madison avenue a deep trench was dug seven feet below the surface of the cellar, which is also filled in with concrete. On this foundation two iron girders have been placed on the inside parallel with the wall and another girder of a corresponding length is placed directly opposite on the outside. A series of iron keys will, likewise be inserted here, each one of which is capable of supporting a weight of seven tons.

From a test recently made by cementing one of the large cracks, it has been found that the plan works to perfection. The contractor in charge is Titus H. Laury and the architect, E. V. French.

"I Stood in a Draught

Soak the feet in hot water with a few teaspoonfuls of Perry Davis' Painkiller in it. Take a teaspoonful of Painkiller in hot sweetened water and bed time and be thankful for so simple and speedy a way to break up a cold. There is but one Painkiller, Perry Davis'.

To Aid the Home.

Much interest is being taken by the guests at the Hotel Netherwood in the euchre to be given on Thursday evening for the benefit of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home. Subscriptions are being received in most gratifying numbers, making the prospects excellent for a goodly sum being realized for the charitable movement under consideration.

Mother Always Keeps It Handy.

"My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains and general ill health due primarily to indigestion," says L. W. Spalding, Verona, Mo. "Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now, at the age of seventy-six, eats any thing she wants, remarking that she fears no bad effects as she has her bottle of Kodol handy." Don't waste time doctoring symptoms. Go after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol rests the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. L. W. Randolph.

KILLED HIS PET CANINE

DOG BELONGING TO N. W. RAPPLEYE ACTED STRANGELY.

Finally Run Up Drain Pipe Where It Was Shot by an Unknown Man.

There was great excitement, Sunday morning, when "Tony," a pet water spaniel dog belonging to N. W. Rappleye, of Westervelt avenue, in the borough, was seized with a barking spell which he kept up for two hours. The neighbors were all of the opinion that the dog was likely to go mad and that he should be put out of the way.

The animal finally made a dash out of the yard for the brook where he ran inside of a thirty-foot iron water pipe, leading from the street into the brook. Believing the animal to be mad Fred VanEmburgh, Mr. Rappleye's son-in-law, went to police headquarters, where he secured the services of Roundsman Mattox. The two then returned to the place where the dog was in hiding. A number of people were about the place and a man, who was not known to those directly interested, took Officer Mattox's revolver and after firing eight shots into the pipe the dog was finally killed. All this time while the animal was being put out of the way, his groans and cries could be heard a considerable distance. The man who killed the dog rolled his trousers up and waded into the brook to his knees where he could get a better aim at the animal.

Mr. Rappleye is loud in his denunciation of the killing of his pet dog. He believes that if left alone it would have been all right. The animal and the owner were great friends and almost inseparable.

DOUBLE FUNERAL.

Mrs. Pound and Six Weeks Old Great Grandson Buried Together.

A double funeral was held from the residence of Mrs. Phillip Voorhees, of Greenbrook road, Sunday afternoon. The service was over the remains of Mrs. Voorhees' mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Pound, and the latter's great grandson, Howard Pennoyer, the six-weeks-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pennoyer, of West Fourth street. Mrs. Pound was seventy-six years old. Rev. S. K. Doolittle was in charge and afterward both bodies, reposing in the one casket, were interred in the Methodist cemetery.

Sexton Resigned.

Lewis Peterson, who for nearly eight years was the faithful sexton of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, has resigned his position.

Poisoning the System.

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dullness and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. DeWitt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. L. W. Randolph.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXV. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JULY 31, 1902. NO. 31.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison

FLANAGAN IS THE NOMINEE

Democrats of Fifth District Named Him to Oppose Chas. N. Fowler for Congress.

WAS NO OPPOSOTION.

Convention Was Held at Washington, N. J., Tuesday, When C. DeWitt Flanagan Was Nominated Without a Dissenting Voice—Mr. Martine Among the Speakers.

Washington, July 30—Expectations were fulfilled at the Democratic Congressional convention at this place yesterday, as the name of DeWitt Clinton Flanagan, of Morristown, was the only one brought before the assemblage for the honor of nomination as opponent of Charles N. Fowler. Irving E. Salmon, son of the late Joshua Salmon, whose death led to Mr. Flanagan's receiving the unexpired term, made the nominating speech.

Delay on the part of the Union county delegates in reaching town kept the hour of opening the convention back until 12:30. No train over the Lackawanna could be found at Junction, and the delegates were finally forced to lease a milk train and complete the trip thereon. They then marched to the convention hall, led by a brass band, and by former Congressman John T. Dunn and Mayor Ryan, of Elizabeth. Union was out in force, full of enthusiasm and most hopeful as to the outlook in the county.

John L. Moody, of Westfield, Union county, was chosen chairman, and William Allinger, of Warren county, was selected as secretary of the convention.

Among the vcie presidents Union county was honored by the selection of Hon. John T. Dunn, Mayor P. J. Ryan and James C. Connolly, of Elizabeth.

The Union county representatives in the convention's organization were as follows:

Committee on resolutions—James C. Connolly, Elizabeth; S. H. Cox, Cranford; Howard Bowie, Rahway.

Committee on credentials—John J. Lane, Summit; John M. C. Marsh, Westfield; Owen P. Mahon, Elizabeth.

Committee on permanent organization—P. J. Ryan, Elizabeth; James E. Martine, Plainfield; Fred W. Park, Cranford.

Committee on rules—Charles H. Moore, Elizabeth; M. M. Scudder, Westfield, George A. Ford, Elizabeth.

After the nomination had been made, speeches were made by the candidate, Senator Cornish, John T. Dunn and James E. Martine. The platform adopted by the convention reaffirmed allegiance to the true principles of Democracy, assailed the Republican policy with regard to the tariff and the trusts and blamed the administration for various faulty conditions.

ANOTHER LAND BOOM.

S. D. Drake Begins Operations at Pennington—Plans Many Things.

Bound Brook, July 30—S. D. Drake has purchased forty acres of land at Pennington, for which he paid $9,000, and will have streets laid out. A fine driveway eighty feet wide opposite the station will be constructed and next spring a fine hotel built near the station. Numerous houses will be erected on the property this summer.

Mr. Drake addressed a large number of citizens of Pennington on the lawn of Enoch Knowles, opposite the station, and formed a land company, articles of incorporation of which were filed yesterday in the Secretary of State's office at Trenton.

DROWNED IN DELAWARE.

Somerville Man, An Inmate of State Asylum, Met Death by Accident.

Somerville, July 30—News reached this place yesterday of the drowning of John C. VanNess, of Somerville, an inmate of the State Insane Asylum at Trenton, in the Delaware river. In company of other patients VanNess was allowed to go out bathing on Monday. He got so far out that he was unable to cope with the current, which was stronger than usual, because of the recent heavy showers, and went down. He was a brother of Richard VanNess, an employe in the Somerville postoffice.

AFTER HORSE THIEVES.

Warren Township Offers Standing Reward of $300 for Arrest and Conviction of One.

Somerville, July 30—The farmers of Somerset county are up in arms because of the many horse thefts that have been committed during the past spring and winter. The Warren Township Committee has set the ball rolling by offering a standing reward of $300 for the arrest and conviction of any horse thief in its borders. This is a good example and it is believed other townships of the county will do likewise.

The farmers are determined to do away with horse thievry and the feeling is so instense about the matter at Martinsville that a horse stealer would be handled with "short justice" if caught there.

TOURING ON HORSEBACK

FOUR HUNDRED MILE RIDE FOR TWO PROMINENT ELIZABETH CITIZENS.

Former Governor F. M. Voorhees and Frank Bergen Start on Trip Tomorrow.

Two prominent citizens of Elizabeth, Former Governor Voorhees and Frank Bergen, will start today on a 400-mile horse-back ride through Sussex county, this State; Pike county, Pennsylvania, and up through the Catskills. They will be gone three weeks on their trip.

The ex-Governor said "Instead of going to the resorts and simpering and uttering idle nonsense to the women and appearing on dress parade half of the time, Frank and I propose to get some pure air and the exhilaration that comes from horse-back riding. We propose to depart from the beaten paths and get to the woods as soon as possible."

The former Governor is becoming quite a horseman. The clatter of his horse's hoofs can be heard on the asphalt pavement of North Broad street, Elizabeth, every morning long before the residents of that section of that city are awake.

Frank Bergen is president of the Union County Hunt Club, and an ex-Governor of the Union County Hounds.

James Morris, the colored horseman, will be their advance courier and started on his trip yesterday.

PLAINFIELD SECOND.

In All-Round Athletic Contest Recently Held at Y. M. C. A. Camp at Lake Wawayanda.

Interesting reports come from the Y. M. C. A. boy's camp at Lake Wawayanda. The afternoons by the lakeside have been given over principally to athletic contests.

A prize of a silver cup was recently offered to be held for one year by the association whose members would make the best showing in a given schedule of events. The Orange association has secured the trophy for the coming year, with the Plainfield boys a close second, and Trenton, Newark, Hudson City and Rahway following in the order named.

The time at the camp is spent in fishing, swimming, baseball, quoits, croquet, ping-pong, tether-ball and various diversions supplied by the leaders help to make the days pass happily, and in their pursuit the campus is a lively and at times, an uproarious place.

Off for Northfield.

A small party of Plainfielders will leave here next Monday to spend a vacation at the Northfield camp. Herbert S. Brokaw and Frederick A. Cranston have recently returned from that place and speak in glowing terms of the facilities offered for the spending of a pleasant and beneficial outing. Any who desire to join the party leaving here Monday may obtain further information relative to the trip by applying to J. H. Manning, secretary Y. M. C. A.

Prizes for Plainfield Horses.

Favorable recognition in this section has been obtained by E. W. Blaisdell, whose stables are now located at the Plainfield Driving Park. Within the past few weeks, his saddle mounts have taken three prizes at horse shows, a first and a second at Long Branch and a second at Atlantic City. Mr. Blaisdell is a Kentuckian and his horses are of the famous blue grass stock.

Fancy Dress Ball.

A fancy dress ball will be given August 9 at the Hotel Netherwood. Already preparations are being made for the event, and the affair will probably be the most gala function yet seen at the Netherwood.

WHAT IS BEING DONE AT FRESH AIR HOME

A Happy Family Living on the Hill Top, Netherwood.

A WELL-EQUIPPED HOME

WITH SPACIOUS GROUNDS, WHERE THE CHILDREN ROMP AND PLAY.

Miss Sara Curry, and Her Band of Assistants, Making Life Pleasant for Tots From the Metropolis—Many Interesting Children.

A noble work of sacrifice and devotion is that being conducted at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home by Miss Sara Curry, of the Little Missionary's Day Nursery, of New York, and her faithful band of mothers from New York. A representative from The Daily Press visited the Home recently and was accorded a most hearty reception by Miss Curry and her charges to the number of nearly one hundred children ranging in age from two years up. It is indeed a happy family that is living on the hilltop in a home well equipped and provided for just such use to which it is being put.

Large and spacious grounds surround the Home, where the children romp and play at will unmolested and without a care or thought. There are swings and hammocks about the grounds where the little ones can find pleasure and they are never lost for something to occupy their hours from early morning till time to go to bed at night.

While the children were playing about the grounds, Miss Curry kindly accompanied the reporter through the Home, where the little ones and the mothers actually live. The house is especially well adapted for this work. There is plenty of room from the kitchen to the garret, where on stormy days the children can play. And throughout the entire Home every room is as clean and inviting as it is possible to make it. On the first floor there is a large room, which is used for sleeping purposes. Here are a number of white enameled cribs, where thirty-five tots sleep every night. The room is bright, airy and cheerful.

This is a front room and right back of it is a dining room, where as many as possible are fed at meal-time. Back of the dining room is the kitchen, a large and well-appointed room, provided with a range and every convenience. Just off the kitchen is a good-sized bath-room, provided with two bath-tubs and plenty of water for keeping the children clean. Back of the kitchen is an extra room which is used for washing clothes. When the weather is favorable the ironing is done out-of-doors.

On the second floor of the Home are a number of rooms, all provided with cots, and beds for the older members of the large family. The older girls are taught every branch of housekeeping from beginning to end, and it is their duty to keep the Home clean and make the beds. The mothers also help a great deal in this work. The influence of this work cannot be estimated too highly. It reaches to the homes of the children and mothers in New York, where they put into practice that which is taught them by Miss Curry.

The children have been at the Home scarcely a month, but the changed physical condition of every one is noticeable. They seem to thrive greatly on fresh country air and the good wholesome food given them. The people of Plainfield have been very good to the Home in sending vegetables, money, and other necessaries there. Miss Curry and her workers thoroughly appreciate all that is being done to make life happy and bright. To get an idea of this work one should visit the Home and see for himself the multifarious duties to be performed every day and with what regularity they are carried out.

The benefit being derived by the children now will be the means in some of saving lives, for the visiting physician to the Home has said if some of the children had been compelled to stay in New York they would not have lived during the summer. When this is realized it is a source of comfort and pleasure to those interested in the work that they have been able to do so much. Miss Curry is always glad to see visitors and any assistance rendered is deeply appreciated.

There are many interesting children at the Home and to watch them in their daily life is well worth a trip to the scene of so much activity. Within a short time Miss Curry will select about forty children who will be taken back to New York. Then forty other children will be brought to the Home.

LAST WEEK SAW ANOTHER LARGE INCREASE IN NUMBER.

Hotel Netherwood Still Continues to be a Favorite Resort—Driving is Very Popular.

Last week saw another large increase in the number of guests at the Hotel Netherwood. This famous resort has never known a gayer or more prosperous season. The residents at the hotel may be seen daily on the beautiful drives in and around Plainfield. Driving is one of their most popular amusements. Golf and tennis continue to afford constant diversion.

Daily arrivals at the hostelry always add new life to the place, and, as was evinced by the general interest taken in the benefit encore for the fresh air camp last week, the guests are ever ready to seize upon a new project, spend money freely, and push it to a successful conclusion with pleasure and enthusiasm.

Among those who registered at the hotel last week were: Everett H. Thayer, L. H. Wilson, Jacob Thorn, New York; Mrs. E. G. Calhamay, Wyoming; Mrs. Jeffreys, Miss Jeffreys, Newark; F. G. PUT HIM OUT.

Neil Spillaine Had Serious Encounter With Live Wire Under a Trolley Car.

Bound Brook, July 30—Neil Spillaine, an employe at the car house of the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company at this place, received an electric shock Monday which put him out of business for awhile and nearly ended his career.

Spillaine was doing some work underneath a car, when his foot came in contact with a line wire and knocked him almost senseless. He managed to roll out and then had a spasm, in which he hit his head against a car and cut in.

Dr. Wild was telephoned for and came and applied restoratives, after which he took Spillaine home in his carriage. The injured man was once an employe of the Plainfield Street Railway.

PLAINFIELDER WILL PRESIDE.

Frederic H. Andrews to Conduct a Conference at Lake George.

Frederic H. Andrews, of this city, will preside at a conference at the Silver Bay Hotel, Lake George, to be held from August 5 to 15. Three different conferences have already been held at that place since the season opened with a total attendance of over 1,000. A number of Plainfielders will leave next week to spend their vacations at the hotel, which offers special inducements to members of the Y. M. C. A and their families.

In addition to the conferences, the modes of recreation by the lake side are various. Mountain tramping, bathing, boating, tennis on several courts, basket ball, baseball, and field sports are among the inducements. Several who have returned after spending a pleasant outing at the hotel report that the accommodation is first-class in every particular at a mere nominal price.

Franklin Council's Excursion.

When you go to the seashore you want to be sure and go in good company. This you will do if you are numbered among the members of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., who will run an excursion to Asbury Park, August 14, American Day. They do not leave the shore until 9 o'clock in the evening, thus giving everybody lots of time.

Where to Leave Them.

Any person or persons having articles of any kind for the Netherwood Fresh Air Home can leave them at the house of the treasurer, J. W. Johnson, 207 LaGrande avenue, and they will be taken from there to the Home.

HAPPENINGS OF WEEK AT THE TWIN CITIES

Most Eyes Were Turned to Neighboring Resorts on Account of Important Events.

CROWD STILL GROWS.

FISHING HAS BEEN EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD AND MANY GOOD CATCHES.

Asbury Park Folk Caught But a Fleeting Glimpse of President as He Went by in Train—Dances, Entertainments and Ping-Pong.

Asbury Park, July 30—The visitors at this resort have had their eyes turned out of town pretty much all of last week. Wednesday there was a sensation of no small proportions, occasioned by Judge Forts raid on the Long Branch clubhouses, even though it had been expected. In spite of Asbury Park's good reputation, there are not a few of her summer residents who know something of the inside of Long Branch's gilded palaces. Hence the interest.

Thursday many went out to Deal Lake to watch the Presidential party go through, en route for Sea Girt. Arrangements had been made to have the train slow down while crossing the Deal bridge and pulling through the Interlaken station. Mr. Roosevelt from the platform smiled and bowed to the crowds. There were smaller crowds at the North Asbury and Asbury Park stations, but the train had gotten up speed by the time it reached them, and the watchers got only a fleeting glimpse of the President. There were many visitors from here at Sea Girt while the President inspected the Guardsmen.

Thursday also saw the exodus of many summer guests to Long Branch to witness the opening of the Horse Show Equally large crowds witnessed the show Friday and Saturday.

K. Morris's Hotel at West Avon was completely destroyed by fire Monday. The loss above insurance was about $6,000. This was the first serious fire of the season along this section of the coast.

C. H. Koster, a guest at the Gramercy, who is connected with a New York decorating company, is having the Baby Parade headquarters decorated at his own expense. The decorations are in part the same that were used at the second inaugural ball of President McKinley at Washington.

The water was around seventy last week, and the bathing was the best, so far, of the season. Bathers have commented upon the fact that the water is cleaner than it has been in several years, very little refuse of any kind being noticeable.

The largest ostrich at the farm on Main street, known as Grover Cleveland, has developed a vicious temper, and is kept under restraint. Manager Bierach narrowly escaped a few days ago, when the bird turned on him.

Fishing was unusually good here last week, due principally to an unlooked-for run of weakfish, which have kept the anglers busy. Joseph Cawthorn, the actor and his wife, usually known as Queenie Vassar, have been among the most fortunate fishers.

The Carnival Association has secured the windows of the Waterman Pen Company, at Broadway and Courtlandt streets, New York city, in which to display the prizes for the baby parade. On the evening preceding the parade a reception will be held in honor of the queen of the fete at the Coleman House.

Daniel De B. Keim, a local fisherman, made the biggest catch of the season last week, when he hooked a twenty-two pound bass off the Deal Lake flume.

The Asbury Park Council has declined to back up Mayor Bradley's order compelling stands of all kinds to keep off the sidewalks. A crusade begun against slot machines precipitated the question, and an ordinance was introduced according to the Mayor's idea, but was rejected. The bootblacks will probably return to the sidewalks.

The social round continues as lively as ever and the regular weekly dances were all well attended. Ping-pong also rules at many hostelries, while cards are always in high favor. Looking into the future, the Coleman House has arranged a Japanese fete for Tuesday evening, August 12. The other hotels are also casting about for novel entertainments next month, when the largest crowds of the season are expected.

DATE CHANGED.

Members of Company K Will Go to Sea Girt for Rifle Practice, Monday, Aug. 4, Instead of Aug. 5.

The date set apart for rifle practice at Sea Girt has been changed from Tuesday, August 5 to Monday, August 4. All members of the militia are required to be on hand on that date. The following notice has been issued by Captain Browning:

Pursuant to general order, No. 18, dated Trenton, N. J., July 28, 1902, you are hereby ordered to report for practice at Sea Girt on Monday, August 4, 1902. Field uniform. By order of Colonel Collins.

W. K. Browning,
Captain, commanding company.
Official,
Charles A. Peterson, First Sergeant.

The first call at the armory will be at 7:50 o'clock, and assembly at 7:55.

POWER ASKED TO EXPLAIN

GOVERNOR KIMBALL, OF RHODE ISLAND, SAYS HE WAS FLEECED.

Complains That Plainfielder Was the Promoter of a Gigantic Paper Scheme to Whom He Paid $2,000.

Rhode Island's Governor, Charles B. Kimball, says he has been fleeced of $2,000 and he blames a Plainfielder of the alleged crime. The latter is Andrew F. Power, who came to this city in the fall of 1899 and has since been living at 518 Belvidere avenue. A summons was issued for him yesterday, but he has not been apprehended.

Governor Kimball states that Power was the declared promoter of a gigantic paper scheme, in which the Governors of all the States in the Union were to be interested. Willing to join the high class corporation, Rhode Island's chief executive says that he gave Power his check for $2,000, for some purpose not disclosed. Afterwards, he says that he became tired of waiting, and Tuesday he came to New York and made a complaint before Magistrate Deale in the Centre street Police Court.

Urgent appeal was made by the Governor's lawyer, who wanted a warrant for Power The magistrate refused to grant this, consenting only to issue a summons, returnable on August 6. His point was that a financial transaction often appeared wrong at first sight, but ultimately is shown legitimate.

BAGGED A BEAR.

Elmer Cutting, of Plainfield, is the Nimrod of the White Mountains, New Hampshire.

Honors as a hunter have come to Elmer Cutting, who is spending a vacation in the White Mountains in New Hampshire. Big game recently fell to the lot of the Plainfielder in the shape of a huge cinnamon bear, which was bagged during a mountain ramble one day last week. One sure shot did the business, and Mr. Cutting had made a reputation for himself in and around the little village of Lime Centre, where he has been sojourning.

Quick wit was responsible for bagging the bear and probably for preventing serious injury to the hunter. Wholly unprepared for any such large game, he was trudging through the brush with his musket over his shoulder, when the bear suddenly emerged from the bushes directly in his path. Before brain had a chance to attack him, Cutting had raised his gun and snapped the trigger. The animal dropped in his tracks, and later investigation revealed the fact that the shot had pierced the heart.

PAINTERS' CENTENNIAL.

Banquet Was Given in Honor of the Occasion Tuesday Evening.

Members of the local branch of the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators celebrated in honor of their centennial meeting Tuesday night. Fifty or more sat down to a course dinner in a bower arranged for the occasion in the rear of Blimm's Hotel on Somerset street. Frank Coriell made the opening speech, dwelling on the benefits of unionism. Short addresses were by R. A. Zimmerman, of Elizabeth, Chas. Conover and Newton Wyckoff. Paul Breem, who was master of ceremonies during the evening, entertained the board with a recitation. The grounds were brilliantly lighted with incandescent lights, fitted up especially for the event.

Arrested on State Warrant.

On a State warrant this time, Alphonse Bambano has been arrested, criminally charged by a young Italian girl of the East End. Justice came so slowly through the civil prosecution in the hands of the overseer of the poor that the girl took further steps and brought the heavier charges against him.

M'CARDELL IS OUT OF RACE

He Announced This Morning His Withdrawal From the Shrievalty Race.

OUT FOR JUDGE RUNYON

Has Decided to Retire From Race on Account of Business Reasons and So As Not to Conflict With the Candidacy of City Judge Runyon for State Senator.

After his announcement of last week, Andrew McCardell's withdrawal from the field for the candidacy of Sheriff of Union county will prove somewhat of a surprise to those who had accepted the statement as final that he was still desirous for the nomination. Careful thought on the matter has led to Mr. McCardell's changing his mind.

His present opinions are embodied in the following communication:

Plainfield, N. J., July 29, 1902.
To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

Dear Sir: In order that there may be no further doubt on the subject, I desire to make public announcement of the fact that I am not a candidate for sheriff of Union county, nor will I permit my name to be considered longer in that connection.

In the first place my acceptance of the office in question would, I fear, materially and permanently interfere with my private business interests, and that of itself is sufficient cause to compel me to withdraw as a candidate for the shrievalty.

In the second place, my loyalty to the best interests of the Republican party in Plainfield, as I conceive them to be, impels me to the conclusion that the field should be left entirely open to Judge Runyon in his candidacy for the State Senate. I believe that the party can unite upon him as upon no other man, and it shall henceforth be my pleasure to do all in my power to further his interests.

To all my friends, both in Plainfield and throughout Union county, who have so kindly desired me to stand as a candidate, I tender my sincere thanks, but desire them to know that my determination to withdraw is final and conclusive.

Yours truly,
Andrew McCardell.

TOO MUCH NOISE.

Residents of Millstone Didn't Like It, So the Constable Gathered in the Wilsons.

Somerville, July 30—Constable Totten went to Millstone yesterday and brought back with him a whole drove of colored folks, whom he lodged in the county jail. The band comprised the Wilson family—Rachael, Mary, Charles, William and Mrs. Beulah, also Charles Havey.

For several days these people had been on a drunk and their cries and scrapping had so disturbed the neighborhood that leading citizens of the place made complaint.

When arraigned before Justice Stephen the prisoners all declared they had "done nothin," but the 'Squire could not see it in that light. He sent the five Wilsons to jail for thirty days each and fined Havey $5. He paid and hied himself back to Millstone. The same lot has been in jail before on the charge of keeping a disorderly house.

RAISE THE TRACKS.

Talk of Abolishing Grade Crossings by Jersey Central at Westfield.

There is good reason to believe that within a reasonable time the grade crossings on the New Jersey Central at Westfield will be abolished. Last week General Manager W. G. Besler, of the railroad company, had a conference with J. A. Dennis, a member of the Westfield Town Committee, regarding the elevation, and it is believed that the company will plan to raise the tracks through that town. The advantage of such an improvement is recognized by Mr. Besler as well as the people of Westfield.

SPORTSMEN PHOTOGRAPHERS.

Quite a Number Who Have Relinquished the Gun and Taken Up the Camera.

In a recent book a hunter tell how he spent many weary months in the attempt to shoot an eagle, and at last succeeded. He successfully that he actually touched the bird with his fingers. Having got so far he was content and let the eagle go free. It may be a hunter's tale; but there are at present a very considerable number of sportsmen who are a great deal keener to see their game at close quarters than to kill it, says the London Globe. Instead of the old phrase: "Let us go and kill something," the hunter now says: "Let us go and focus something." The camera has supplanted the gun. There are now made all manner of devices, more ingenious and intricate even than the well-trapped hide, for getting the camera to bear on unsuspecting animals. A boat, resembling a little the duck snooting boats used on the Irish coast, has been devised, which is propelled without oars or sails, and has a beautiful photographic apparatus rigged up in the bows. There are other not less clever means for approaching and photographing deer in their native haunts and they have been met with altogether remarkable success. Humanitarians are already pointing out that this sport with the camera gives all the excitement of the chase without any of the cruelty; and at least this much may be conceded, that the difficulties of photographing, say, a weasel are considerably greater and therefore more attractive than those of shooting it.

THE FIRST AUTOMOBILE.

Civil War Soldier States That He Saw a Steam Carriage in Chicago in 1864.

A contributor to the Chicago Inter Ocean recently stated that the first automobile used in America was constructed by a chicago man in 1894. He writes:

Allow me to say a steam vehicle was constructed by somebody and used in Chicago 20 years earlier than this. The writer, while in camp at Camp Fry in 1864, which was located west of Clark street, about opposite where now the northern portion of Lincoln park, had the pleasure of seeing this machine in operation. It came from the city and stopped long enough at the camp to give interested ones opportunity to examine it. After the lapse of that time I cannot describe it minutely, but I remember this: It was a four-wheeled vehicle, the motive power was steam, the boiler was of the upright plan and fixed near the rear axle. The seat was in front, and the whole machine resembled the Inter Ocean's picture of Mr. Brown's second vehicle, with the exception the seat was reversed. The seat was occupied by two men. The vehicle was fired up fairly well, went at a ten-mile-an-hour gait and left about a score of soldiers discussing it. They did not call it automobile then, as that word was unknown to the public, but after mentioning several curious names, the majority agreed that it should be called a "son of a gun on wheels."

DIDN'T RECLAIM THE COIN.

Although She Had the Opportunity to Do So, Mrs. Stanford Did Not Repent.

Those who "pass the plate" in countrychurches are not often regaled with the glitter of gold among the contributions. It is related that about ten years ago Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stanford were traveling in the middle west incognito. They happened to be in Bloomington, Ind., one Sunday and pursuant to their usual custom went to church. They attended the Christian church, of Bloomington, largely in the hands of Anni Atwater, says the Chicago Chronicle.

When the plate was passed for the collection Mrs. Stanford dropped in a ten-dollar gold piece. Mr. Atwater was the deacon in charge of the collection-taking. It was noticed that the ushers held a hurried conference with him when the money was taken forward. At its conclusion Mr. Atwater said: "Ladies and gentlemen, there has evidently been a mistake. Some one has dropped a ten-dollar gold piece into the collection. If he will pass up after the services we will be glad to allow him to exchange it for the amount of its intrinsic worth." It is, of course, needless to say that Mrs. Stanford did not take advantage of the opportunity.

Death Valley Sand-Pillars.

Travelers in the celebrated Death Valley of California have described the wonderful manifestations of the sand-pillars that small whirlwinds sometimes send spinning across the hot plain. Even more remarkable are the "dust devils" seen by Mr. H. F. Witherby, the English explorer, in the valley of the White Nile. Sometimes two of these whirling columns, gyrating in opposite directions, meet, "and if they be well matched the collision stops them and a struggle ensues as to which way they shall twist. Gradually one gains the mastery and the two combined begin to gyrate alike and then rush on together." Some of these whirlwinds carry the clothes from an Arab's back, or twist a goat round and round like a top.

A City of Marble.

Modern Athens is a city of marble. Many of the dwellings and business houses and nearly all of the public edifices are of that material, and even the sidewalks on some of the streets are paved with it.

ORIGIN OF BICYCLE-DIVING.

Feat First Performed by a Roman Youth on the Banks of the River Tiber.

The idea of diving on a bicycle originated with a bright and clever Roman youth of 22, named Umberto Diamanti & feat which called for nerve and daring of a high order, together with the ability of a powerful and rapid swimmer. The idea was to ride along the top of the artificial embankments of the Tiber and plunge into the river beyond. The diver must retain control over the machine, not only after leaving terra firma and plunging dizzily into midair, but also during the awful and breath-snatching descent to the surface of the water. After sinking deep down with the machine, he must swim to land with it—a most awkward and even dangerous "rescue" to effect when he leaves it. Moreover, it may be seen that the contest was one which called for more than the average amount of physical endurance, as well as for a steady head and unshaken nerve, says Pearson's Magazine.

A very interesting contest was arranged between young Diamanti as a cyclist and his rival, Borghi, on foot. This weird and extremely novel race was easily won by the iron-nerved cyclist, both as regards time and clean jumping.

There was tremendous excitement just before the race came off, and dense crowds lined the high embankment that skirts the Tiber. The excitement was quite at fever heat when the order was given—"Go!" and both cyclist and foot runner started off at a terrific pace. It seemed hardly possible that any sane man could deliberately ride a bicycle over so appalling a precipice. But, what is much more remarkable, Sig. Diamanti not only did this, but actually retained his presence of mind throughout the entire descent through the air as well as on striking the water, and even beneath the surface, for he brought his machine safely home to land with little or no exertion, amid the frantic applause of the spectators.

EDIBLE PETROLEUM.

Salad Oil Butter and Cooking Oil Are Being Worked Upon at the Present Time.

Cottonseed oil, corn oil and linseed oil, there is reason to believe, will probably have a rival at a not distant day in edible petroleum oil. Recently the editor of the National Provisioner was asked this question: "What is the difference in edible oils?" The query suggests reasons for present experiments. "As a matter of fact," declares our contemporary, "petroleum has been successfully desulphurized and demineralized. Certain other solids and ingredients have been extracted from it by the introduction of a fairly good edible oil has already been produced The cost of this evolution, however, has as yet been so great as to remove the product from the field of competition and utility. Petroleum stock has, it is claimed in a well-informed quarter, already taken its place as a soap grease. Why not? It has always been a good hand and sore wash, and it is healthful. It may cause a second nausea to think of petroleum salad oil, petroleum butter and petroleum cooking oil, but such things are being worked upon right now. Their names will be changed for commerce. Science is vivisecting them."

A CHESS-PLAYING TOWN.

One of the Requirements of Every Inhabitant of a Village in Hungary.

There is in Hungary a village probably unique among the world's towns, in that it not only encourages chess as a pastime, but insists upon the king of games shall be played by every man, woman and child in the place.

It is just as necessary in this out-of-the-world spot for the inhabitants to be proficient chess players as it is for them to be able to read, write and cipher. Prizes are given to the school children for proficiency in chesse. Problems are given to the scholars that they are expected to take home and work out in their spare hours in addition to their other tasks.

Hungary has long been famous for her chess players. Indeed, this little village has, as can be well understood, turned out more than one player who has been deemed fit to rank with such giants as Lasker, Steinitz or Tchigorin.

Every Christmas a great tournament is held in the village, and the burgomaster gives a reception for the best juvenile and adult players.

The Risk of Ballooning.

Considering the risks aeronauts necessarily take every time they make an ascent, the safety or peril of the trade (for it partakes of all three) is extraordinarily free from fatal accidents, says the London Chronicle. Mr. Charles Green, who made over 600 trips, died at the age of 64 in 1870. Twenty years later Eugene Godard, who had made quite 2,000 ascents, died in his bed. On the other hand, among British balloonists, Capt. Dale was killed before he had completed 200, and Capt. Whelan also, in 1902, met his death in his three hundred and fifteenth ascent. Mr. Percival Spencer, our most noted living English aeronaut, has probably beaten all these records, and has in addition made parachute descents from all the continents and in most of the seas surrounding them.

WELL SALTED IN VAIR.

Story of the Failure of an Illinois Man's Scheme to Sell His Farms as Oil Land.

"Some years ago," says a New Orleans Times-Democrat contributor, "an oil boom hit Litchfield, Ill., and everybody for miles around was seen sniffing for oil and every stranger suspected of being an expert looking for a good thing. An old farmer named Loomis had a big place three miles out of town which would have been a fortune for him had he not been possessed of a mania for swapping, manifest in a perennial attempt to trade off his land for twice its value.

"When the boom was at the top notch Loomis received a visitor who took so much interest in the farm, so liked its appearance, location, etc., that the old farmer scented a petroleum man and saw visions of incalculable wealth. Being a shrewd man, Loomis did not care to take any unnecessary chances with Providence, and on the quiet he sent the hired man out the back way with orders to dump the kerosene can into the well. The visitor liked the entire place, inspected the barn, the chicken yard and then, as if by chance, asked for a drink of water.

"Loomis was waiting for that and hauled up a brimming bucket before the man's own eyes and poured him out a gourdful of liquid with a fine, opalescent scum upon it. The visitor smelled it, tasted it, made a wry face and asked if the water was always like that. 'Oh, yes,' said Loomis, 'but you soon get accustomed to the taste, and our doctors say this is the finest water on earth for the stomach.' 'Well, I am ding-danged if I'll ever get used to it,' was the unexpected response. 'I am looking for a farm, not an oil well, and if I have to haul my drinking water three miles from Litchfield I guess I'd rather buy nearer town.'

"It took Loomis six months to get the taste of oil out of his well, and by that time the boom was over, and nothing was left of the oil craze but rotting derricks and abandoned shafts."

Deadly Moccasin Lodged in Southern Woman's Bosom and Resisted Its Removal.

day. She and her husband were in the pasture on their farm in the Redmond ville neighborhood. A short distance from them was a wire fence, and they proposed to each other to run a race and see which could cross the fence first.

When they reached the fence Mrs. Arnold attempted to crawl under it. Just as she was in the act of getting down on the ground a moccasin crawled into her dress at her throat. Twenty years ago the ingenue fainted, who had made quite 2,000 ascents, died in his bed. On the other hand, among British balloonists, Capt. Dale was killed before he had completed 200, and Capt. ANIMALS OF THE DESERT.

The Addax Antelope and Loder's Gazelle Frequent the Lands of Thirst and Sand.

In the northern Sahara two animals are found which seem specially adapted for life in this forbidden land. They are the addax antelope and Loder's gazelle, says the London Spectator. The addax is an ugly, awkward-looking animal, with spiral horns and very widespread hoofs, which enable it to go at a great pace over the sand. Pliny knew of its existence, and was naturally interested in it, for as South Africa was as yet unvisited, this was one of the few animals of ancient times to the ancients. It was not rediscovered till Ruppell found it near Dongola. As it is rather a large antelope, it requires a considerable amount of food and the difficulty which suggested itself was to discover where it found its food. It is now nearly certain that the addax follows the rains which fall at certain seasons, and probably travels vast distances in the wake of the season's storms. The immense tracts of the desert in northern Africa makes this possible, though without special knowledge of the meteorology of that part of the continent it would be unsafe to assert that there is always rain going on in some part of the Sahara. How the addax supports itself in these absolutely dry intervals is not known. Gazelles are mainly desert animals, but Loder's gazelle seems to have rather more than the family leaning toward the land of thirst and sand.

HAYTIAN HONESTY.

Uncounted Couriers Carry Loads of Wealth Over Desolate Mountain Passes in Safety.

Hayti is the only country in the world "where black rules white." Although the present republic is not successful because so large a portion of the citizens are lazy and uneducated, yet the people have many good qualities which, according to Mr. Hesketh Pritchard, show themselves in unexpected and convincing ways.

"One of the things that strike one most is that Hayti is a country of extremes and contrasts. Logic is always at fault. A Haytian's honesty is like a Haytian's mind; it is apt to surprise you around all sides.

"For example, hundreds of thousands of Haytian dollars pass annually along the lonely track between Jacmel and Port au Prince. The men who bear them are low-class Haytians; ragged, uncouth, uneducated, wild and untutored. Yet only once have the dollars failed to arrive. I have heard it said that ten dollars might tempt the Haytian's cupidity, but $10,000 awes him into immaculate honesty.

"During the rainy season these uncounted couriers have made the desolate journey over the mountain passes, each with his load of wealth, and there is only this one instance known of the betrayal of trust. A fine record!"

HOW SOON BEHEADING KILLS.

A French Physician Says That Death May Not Ensue in the Space of Three Hours.

Considerable attention has lately been given in France to the old question as to whether death follows instantaneously upon decapitation. A French physician asserts that it does not. In his opinion the blood which flows after decapitation comes from the large vessels of the neck and there is hardly any call upon the circulation of the cranium, says the London News. The brain remains intact, nourishing itself with the blood retained by the pressure of the air. When the blood remaining in the skull at the moment of separation is exhausted there commences a state, not of death, but of inertia, which lasts up to the moment when the organ, no longer fed, ceases to exist. The contention of the physician in question is that the brain finds nourishment in the residuary blood for about an hour after decapitation. The period of inertia would last for about two hours, he thinks, and absolute death would not ensue till after the space of three hours altogether. Possibly this may be some consolation to those about to be guillotined.

Highest-Paid Mail Carrier.

The bigness of our country is emphasized every now and then by some obscure governmental vouchers. Any one in the Philippines we are delivering mail in canoelike boats, and, on the other hand, says Harper's Weekly, a contract was let for carrying the mail in Alaska by dog-sleds. The successful bidder was Orca Nash, and he covers lies between Eagle and Valdez, a distance of 414 miles. He makes two trips a month, and receives nearly $1,500 a trip, or $35,000 a year. Only 300 pounds are carried per trip, and this is usually made up of letters of new arrivals. Postoffice department officials say that the sum paid Fish is very reasonable when it is considered that he makes the trip by dog-sled, and that he has the most dangerous route of any mail carrier in the world.

Underground Mountains.

The conductors of the Trigonometrical survey in India have made a singular discovery. They have reason to believe that there is in the middle of India an underground, or buried, mountain range, a thousand miles in length, which lies parallel with the main chain. The conclusion is based on the peculiarities of the local attraction of gravitation, the plumb-line being deflected southward on the north side of the supposed underground chain, and northward on the south side. The inference is that a long, jagged mass of rock of excessive density underlies the two observing stations.

BASEBALL IN EARLY TIMES.

When the Players Were Chosen More for Their Vocal Powers Than Knowledge of the Game.

It was on those rural fields in the heyday of baseball that the sport, if less refined, was more picturesque. That the game was vocal goes with the saying. Not far away from the truth was the encountry captain who described his team as "men who can't bat much, or field much, but are first-rate talkers." To dispute the umpire on every close decision was orthodox duty—a fashion not yet outlived—and it made the rural ball game forensic as well as spectacular, says Outing.

The country umpire, who was usually selected by the home team, merits his specific picture. In the earlier days of the sport he was chosen for knowledge of the rules simply because the opposing bucolic sines had so little knowledge of baseball. Later, exhibition lore became somewhat secondary as a credential, and in the ideal rural umpire was sought a kind of Boanerges—a Son of Thunder, bellowing out his decisions until the welkin echoed, and, if possible, on close plays to placate the crowd by good temper or to daunt it with strong speech. That is to say, the umpire of the time and place had to own no middle terms of personal temperament, but be either extremely cringe or superlatively good natured and tactful.

LIBERAL WITH THE LANDS.

A Large Amount Has Been Granted to Public Uses by the State of Washington.

After nearly 13 years of work State Land Commissioner Calvert, of Washington, announces that of the 667,080 acres of land granted the state of Washington by the enabling act of 1889 all have been selected with the exception of 3,261 acres. These will be selected during the early summer and the entire grant thus filed, reports the San Francisco Chronicle.

The granted lands are distributed as follows: State penal reformatory, ciecmonyary and educational institutions, 200,000 acres; state capitol grant, 132,000; state normal school, 100,000; agricultural college, 100,000; scientific agricultural college, 100,000; scientific schools, 900; state university, 4,380. These lands are exclusive of sections 16 and 36, which are sections 36-16 in every township in the state. Some of these sections have been lost by inundation and other causes.

The government permits the state to select indemnity lands for these lost, and of this class the state has about 200,000 acres to select. Owing to the scarcity of remaining government lands it is doubtful if the state can recover a very large portion of the school lands thus lost.

SURPRISING MOTTOES.

An Educated Chinaman Translates Some Worn on a Young Society Lady's Belt.

One of the latest fads is the wearing of belts ornamented with Chinese characters. These belt ornaments are generally chosen at random, for, as few persons can read Chinese, the meaning of the hieroglyphics is regarded as of no importance. Nevertheless, in the case of one of the belted beauties, the fashion had an extremely droll result. Quite lately she met an educated Chinese gentleman, who expressed his admiration of the sentiments set forth in the lettering on her belt. "You are very kind," said I congratulate you on the excellence of your mottoes, which I think are unusual in your country." "Oh, the sentiments," replied the gratified owner of the adornment, "do tell me what the characters mean." "Why, they are but two wishes expressed," said the Chinaman, "but as they are repeated several times over I know they must be your true aspirations. One is "May all my enemies die by torture," and the other is, "May I have 50 sons."

The Universal Microbe.

Bacteriologists destroy one by one our fondest illusions, says Popular Science News. Hitherto the man in the street had imagined that were all the waters of every city and plain polluted he would still find immaculate springs in the Alps. But M. Bizard, who presides over a chemical laboratory at the Pasteur institute, having no such faith, obtained some ice from the glaciers of Mount Blanc itself and placed it under his pitiless microscope. His verdict shatters the illusions of mountaineers. It appears that even the summit, which so long remained untrodden by human feet, has lost its purity. If it ever had any. The ice in question, in fact, was found, where from, were found, on bacteriological analysis, to be "peopled with microbes."

Moral Effect of Diets.

An exclusively pork diet tends infallibly to pessimism. Beef, if preserved in for months, makes a man strong, energetic and audacious, says Pearson's Weekly. A mutton diet continued for a length of time tends to melancholia, while veal caters gradually lose energy and gayety. The free use of eggs and milk tend to make women healthy and vivacious. Butter used in excess renders its users phlegmatic and lazy. Apples are excellent for brain workers, and everybody who has much intellectual work to do should eat them freely. Potatoes, on the contrary, render one dull, invidious and lazy, when eaten constantly and in excess. To preserve the memory, even to an advanced age, nothing is better than mustard.

The War Against Consumption.

Within the last ten years more new methods have been devised for dealing with consumption than any other human ailment.

GREAT AMERICAN 'QUAKES.

Two Besides That at Charleston, S. C. —One of Them Swallowed a River.

Besides the Charleston earthquake of 1886, in which 41 lives were lost and about $5,000,000 worth of property was destroyed, there have been two other notable earthquakes in the United States within historic times—one near the head of the Mississippi delta in 1811-12, and one in the Inyo valley, california, in 1872.

The former, known as the New Madrid earthquake, was remarkable for the length of time with its phenomena covered. There were several shocks at short intervals for several months, and the whole series of shocks lasted two years.

The country was sparsely settled, and no scientific records of the disturbance were made, but it is related that the alluvial land of the river bottoms was traversed by visible waves which rocked the trees to and fro and unrooted many. Huge fissures were opened, and lakes were drained by the escape of their waters into them. The largest sunken area is said to have been 60 or 80 miles long and nearly half as broad.

The Inyo valley earthquake was caused by a renewed movement along the great fault plain at the eastern base of the Sierra Nevada. The chief shock lasted only a few minutes, but others of less violence continued for two or three months.

A tremendous fissure was formed along the base of the mountain range for about 40 miles. The land west of the fissure rose, and the land east of it fell several feet.

Owens river was temporarily swallowed up. In the village of Inyo all the houses were thrown down, and one-tenth of the inhabitants were killed.

ENGLAND'S DEATH RATE.

Remarkable Increase Shown, Against a Decrease in Marriages and Births.

The return of the registrar general of births, marriages and deaths for the year 1900, the first complete year since the war broke out, shows a decline in marriages and births and an increase in deaths, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The marriage rate was 16 per 1,000, which is with 16.4 in 1898-99. The births in 1900 numbered 927,062, or a rate of 28.7 per 1,000, the lowest record, and 1.3 per cent. below the mean rate for the last ten years. The illegitimate birth rate was 1.6 per 1,000, which is the lowest record. The deaths numbered 587,830, or 18.2 per 1,000, as against 17, 17.4 and 17.8 in the previous three years. Of the deaths, 3,683 were immediately due to alcoholism or delirium tremens. The death rate from alcoholism was 132 in 1900, and 95 in males per 1,000,000. Both these rates were the highest on record. The deaths from tubercular diseases were 10.14 percentum of the deaths from all causes, aggregating 61,302 The strength of the army at home and abroad was 383,037. The deaths were 10,554, giving a rate of 27.6 per 1,000, as compared with 10.12 and 10.3 in the preceding three years. The mortality in the army abroad was 26.1 per cent. per 1,000, as compared with an average of 14.5 in the preceding five years. The death rate at home was 8.2, as compared with an average of 4.3 in the preceding five years.

RIPENING OF CHEESE.

A Recent Discovery Which It Is Expected Will Revolutionize the Business.

A hitherto unknown element in milk, a new ferment, has been discovered, called galactose, which is proving of value in the ripening of cheese. The properties of this ferment are similar to the secretion of the pancreatic organ in the human body, says Scribner's. Old cheese is a predigested food, and the digestion is wrought by the galactose. It was found that the galactose would go on working at very low temperatures, temperatures at which bacteria were practically inert. Cheese was put into refrigerators and kept frozen for months. Other cheese was kept just above the freezing point. It was found that the finest cheese is cured at from 40 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit. Practical cheese manufacturers had maintained that 50 degrees was the lowest temperature at which cheese could be worked without becoming bitter and worthless. The new discovery will, it is believed, revolutionize the cheese industry along away with all curing-rooms, the cheese being sent directly to the refrigerator.

Free Doctors in Germany.

Under an insurance law enacted in Germany several years ago, 30,000,000 people receive in return for a nominal sum free medical attendance. The theory was that suffering humanity would receive a better and speedier relief from its bodily ills, but in practice there are many drawbacks. The doctors hired by the state hold that they are expected to do too much for the pay they get. In Munich they get only about $75 per annum. In the rural districts down expenses the doctors are inclined to impress upon the patients that nothing is the trouble with them.

Why Girls Can't Throw.

A London physician, having made a long and careful scientific investigation of a girl's inability to throw a stone as a boy does, says that it is due to the physical conformation of her shoulder. A boy throws with a free movement of the arm that is not possible with a girl, because her collarbone is larger and sets lower than the boy's. The girl may excel in sports where this action is not required, but she can never learn to throw like a boy.

STEALING AN IRONCLAD.

How a Chilian Man-of-War Was Dismantled and Carried Away Piecemeal.

The most audacious piecemeal robbery on record was that effected by some Peruvian irregulars during the war with Chili, in the summer of 1879.

For fear of the Huascar, which was cruising along the Chilian seaboard, and which took power and weight of metal was infinitely superior to anything the latter nation had then afloat, the Chilian man-of-war Pareja was temporarily hidden away in a creek some 50 miles south of Valparaiso; and, as fighting men were urgently needed elsewhere, her crew was taken off, and she was left in charge of a corporal's guard of marines.

These were overpowered one dark night, and the bodies tumbled overboard; after which the adventurers proceeded to carry away the whole of the internal fittings of the ship. And this apparently impossible task they actually accomplished, relates Stray Stories.

The Pareja's guns, her stores and ammunition, 1,000 stands of small arms, even her machinery and boilers, were lowered into a number of fruit boats which had been chartered for the purpose, and safely carried northward into Peruvian waters, where they were afterward used to outfit another vessel.

And when, some months later, the Huascar having been sunk by the Chilian fleet, the lawful owners of the Pareja came to look for her, and bring her out to sea again, they found only the empty shell of a ship, silent and deserted, and without so much portable property aboard as would have sufficed to fill a decent-sized portmanteau.

TREASURE ISLANDS.

When They Are Found the "Untold Riches" Are Never in Evidence.

One feature characteristic of all treasure islands is their lack of treasure. It is a dull seaport that is without at least one old salt with a story to tell about some fabulous amount of gold buried somewhere. Writers of fiction delight in tales of this sort, for they are easy to write and easy to sell, says the Tacoma Ledger. It is no uncommon thing for an individual to turn up with a map of the district where the treasure awaits a claimant. As a rule this map has for its basis a tale that was originally the substance of a dime novel. The usual explanation of the possessor of the map is that it came to him from the hands of a penitent and dying pirate who had never dared to expose the truth, for be it known this pirate had been one of the pirate crew that used to cache its loot in the sands of the fair-away isle. Usually he had been the last survivor, all his associates having killed each other or died before getting their nerve to the proper pitch to make the revelation. Listening to this, some person of adventurous turn believes it fits out a boat and away he sails. To find the island is not a difficult matter. There is never any profit in finding it. If there had ever been treasure there somebody else knew it first and came to the spot first. The pirate of the raging main, even while actively in business, did not have in mind the benefit of future generations.

MOUNT ETNA STILL SLUMBERS

The Great Sicilian Volcano Has Remained Quiescent Since the 1899 Eruption.

The height of Mount Etna, the famous volcano of Sicily, has long been fixed at 10,866 feet. Its height has recently been more accurately measured by trigonometrical processes and the exact elevation is found to be 10,775. The difference is not important, but the more exact determination will, of course, be given on the maps hereafter published. The main crater has a width of 1,726 feet and a depth of 826 feet. Mount Etna has periods of almost complete quiescence. Six years had elapsed after the eruption of 1892, when in the autumn of 1898 blue flames began to emerge from the mouth of the largest crater and a great deal of vapor was emitted from the lesser orifices. It was then announced that Etna seemed to be preparing for an effusion of lava, probably on the south or southwest slopes. The expected eruption, however, did not occur until the morning of July 19, 1899, when great volumes of smoke and lava began to issue from the main crater, but after several days the activity gradually subsided, and the volcano resumed its peaceful aspect and has since seemed to be in a slumberous condition.

If the Pope Lives a Year.

It is pointed out that if Leo XIII. is spared to see the year 1903, that year will be to him one of quite exceptional interest, a veritable "annus mirabilis," says the London Tablet. As everybody knows, it will be the silver jubilee of papacy (elected pope February 20, 1878); but more than that, it will also be his golden jubilee as cardinal (proclaimed by Pius IX. in the consistory of December 19, 1853), and his diamond jubilee of episcopacy (preconized archbishop of Damietta by Gregory XVI. on January 27, 1843, and consecrated February 19). such a triple jubilee, if his holiness lives to celebrate it, will probably be unique in history.

Serve Four Meals.

Washington hotels are said to be the only ones in this country that serve four regular meals every 24 hours—breakfast, luncheon, dinner and supper—the latter being served in some cases as late as midnight.

REVIVAL OF TAFFETA.

It Is Used For Dust Coats, Evening Wraps and Dressy Gowns.

Dust coats of glace silk are being much used. They have the advantage of being suitable for evening wear as well and will stand a shower of rain with no evil effects.

Smart dust cloaks in a poppy shade of red are cut Japanese fashion, but ornamented with a collar and turned back cuffs of lace. The addition of a lace collar may sound incongruous, but it is very becoming, and it tones down the vivid color near the face.

Truly taffeta has had a revival in its favor. Smart evening dress dust cloaks and evening wraps are made of it. They are mostly in plain colors, and very few of the old fashioned shots have appeared, though they are still procurable and certainly take wonderful lights and shades. In the matter of colorings fashion is very decided this year. She likes them bright and mixes them in a most indiscriminate way and not always in the best taste.

There is a great fancy for spots in lawns and foulard as well as in batistes.

A very useful dust cloak is here shown. It is made of taffeta silk, with an empire yoke, a scalloped turnover collar faced with lace and full sleeves gathered into a flare cuff. The garment is unlined.

DRESSY GOWNS.

Chiffon Picture Hats and Mull Costumes.

Chiffon picture hats in pale shades are as much worn as ever. They are invariably trimmed with lace, either plain or jeweled.

There is an attempt to revive mitts and openwork gloves of fine silk. A tulle boa decorated with petals of flowers to match those worn in the hat is another pretty and dainty mode of the hour.

Silk mull is one of the most popular fabrics for dressy gowns. It is extremely inexpensive and makes up like chiffon. Gowns of this description are made with many tucks. The waists are banded with tiny insertions, and the skirts have long trains made very full, with many ruffles.

Louis Quinze slippers of patent leather with oval gold buckles are considered the smart thing to wear with these thin summer gowns. The gown shown is of pale blue mull. It is cut decollete and has a triple ruffle of the goods, ending in a stole effect. The waist blouses a trifle all the way around. The skirt has a lace yoke. It is tucked perpendicularly and is finished around the bottom with three narrow ruffles edged with lace.

FASHIONABLE MATERIALS.

Mercerized Cottons, Organdies and China Silks Popular.

Nowadays the cotton gown is without reproach and figures at quite smart functions, for the mercerized effects make it look like silk unless closely scrutinized. Cotton canvas with embroidered spots in white or color has quite the appearance of wool veiling, and when mounted over a taffeta silk foundation and trimmed with lace it is quite suitable for a garden party or an equally dressy occasion.

Organdie muslin this season is as near perfect as it can be. The muslin is clear and silky, and dainty blossoms and figurings in pale tints form the patterns. Designs composed of sprays of green foliage on a white ground make up most admirably over a pale blue foundation when trimmed with square medallions of transparent lace showing glimpses of the silk underskirt.

China and tussore silks much tucked and incrusted with many lace appliques are fashionable in ecru. Pure white gowns of china silk are now all the rage—in fact, they are a trifle overdone.

A pretty chiffon blouse for semi-dressy wear is here shown. The material is black chiffon shirred over a glace silk foundation. The yoke is of cream lace. The satin ribbons on the sleeves and body fasten with bows and tiny rhinestone buckles.

CHANGES IN CUT.

Sleeves Are Larger—Godet Flounces Still In Favor.

There are few important changes in the cut of gowns. Godet flounces are still in favor for skirts, but mostly graduate from narrow fronts to a deeply trained back. All thin textures are much flounced, and the three tier skirt is much worn in silk and wool materials or in the very thin cloth and woolens of the summer season.

Lace is employed on nearly all summer gowns and is much threaded with ribbon, even lace gowns being decorated in this style. Irish crochet lace is very fashionable, although it is too heavy for muslin gowns.

Sleeves are undoubtedly growing larger, and this increase has encroached well above the elbow, but the newest sleeves have only a small top piece which fits the arm. The tight portion is trimmed or bordered in some fashion, and the lower part is arranged in quite a different style. The plain elbow sleeve is no longer quite the thing. It must have a puff at the elbow or a fall of lace in the shape of a graduated ruffle.

A smart foulard gown for a girl is here illustrated. The waist has a yoke of tucked mousseline de sole and a simulated bolero effect of tucking. Velvet ribbon is apparently passed behind the box plaits of the waist. The sleeves are tucked and have full wrist puffs. The skirt is plain, with the exception of three ruffles.

FOR A COUNTRY HOUSE.

An Attractive but Simple Summer Living Room.

The keynote of the summer room should be coolness and simplicity. The room in the accompanying illustration shows how artistic an effect can be obtained along simple lines.

The principal feature is the archway inclosing five windows. These have their upper halves of pale tinted glass, and the curtains of yellow net hang straight between them. Seats are built into both ends of the arch inclosure, and on the ends of the railings two pots of palms are placed. The ceiling is wainscoted, and the floors are hardwood. The rug is of the greenish shade prevalent in the room. The table and chairs are of stained green wood.

DECORATED IN GREEK.

They are in the art nouveau pattern. The walls are tinted and have a wide frieze, which is very effective. The fireplace, which is not shown in the cut, is of copper in the hooded Venetian style now being revived. The tiles are of different shades of green. This is an excellent design for the living room of a country house.

ECONOMY IN THE KITCHEN.

Some Ways In Which the Ordinary Waste Can Be Avoided.

It is a common saying that three French families can live on what one American family throws away, and certainly the French know the secret of combining delicious fare and a well kept house with the strictest economy.

How many cooks are there who throw away odd bits of bread? Not one scrap of bread should be wasted. All pieces of crust and toast trimmings should be baked, pounded and put into a tin ready for game or gratins. White pieces should be made into crumbs, stale slices cut into croutons and snippets and odd pieces used for puddings.

Potatoes come next on the list, and there are any number of ways in which these may be utilised.

Meat bones, scraps and tough pieces of meat as well as carcasses of chicken or turkey make excellent soup stock. Small portions of vegetable add much to the flavor. Left over spoonfuls of gravy or sauce may be used in seasoning cold dishes of meat or fish.

Fish bones are invaluable, especially for soup. Beef drippings well clarified make excellent short pastry and plain cakes, while fat of all kinds is the best possible medium for frying. Remove the grease from the water in which meat has been boiled, and save the grease after roasting or frying meats.

The remains of cold fish may be converted into tiny souffles steamed or baked and appropriately seasoned with grated cheese or chopped herbs.

Indeed if a cook's inventive faculty is aroused there is no end to the plans she will devise for using up the once despised scraps.

HELEN CLIFTON.

THE ATHLETIC GIRL

"NOT for me," said the bachelor. He was referring not to the cooling drink just placed at his elbow, but to the subject under discussion at the moment.

"Why not?" retorted the new woman indignantly. "You wouldn't have woman go back or stand still in the matter of development, would you?"

"I don't call that going forward; do you?" drawled the bachelor mischievously as he pointed through the open doorway to where a young woman was making her way up the piazza steps. She was a typical athletic girl, with a short, fussy skirt of wool goods, a loose coat that looked like her brother's and a little alpine hat of soft felt. Her hair was wind blown, and her cheeks were shining with perspiration powdered over with a light coating of dust. Her hands were clayey and pretty well marked up with scratches and blicks, and her nails were none too well manicured. Her feet in their stout, mannish shoes went "clump, clump," on the wooden floor of the piazza. Finally she reached a chair, kicked it around by a well directed lunge of her heavy soled toe and sank heavily into it. She crossed her legs, thrust her hands into her jacket pockets and gave a long whistle.

"Gee whiz, but I'm spent!" she remarked in a loud voice to a friend who rounded the corner of the piazza much in the same condition.

"When you compare that with the women of ancient Greece or with Tennyson's dream of fair woman or with any particular ideal you may happen to have!" the bachelor mused half to himself.

The new woman frowned. She might be a new woman, but she did not like to see any man look askance at one of her sex. "By and by she'll change those things and appear in something you'll like—lace and organdie and things," she said.

The bachelor laughed. "Yes, and tramp along in them just the same as she does in those togs. I've been wondering lately what made women so awkward. Now I know."

"But think how healthy she is," persisted the new woman.

The family physician, who came up at that moment, caught the drift of the conversation. "Healthy, did you say?" he repeated. "Do you call that healthy? Look at the tired rings under her eyes and the painful way in which her breath comes. No; that girl is more tired than any one has any right to be. This 'woman's athletic business' is getting overdone, let me tell you. People have an idea that because a girl can play golf or tennis all day she has improved in health in proportion as she has improved in muscle power. This fallacy has ruined more than one constitution. The truth is that you can't both eat your cake and have it. A healthy adult person is one whose digestive and assimilative functions produce so much nerve force daily. Part of this keeps the heart pumping blood through the vessels, conveying nutritive and reparative strength to brain, limb and organ. The remainder, and that much only, one is entitled to use as he wills. The man in training is a man out of health. His muscles are absorbing too much of his nerve and blood force. The reason why the girls of today are able to spend so much force on walking, cycling, tennis and golf is that they have withdrawn force from other and more valuable faculties and put it into their muscles. The fact that women are growing taller and muscularly stronger is no test at all of physical improvement. Half the time without knowing it they are laying the seeds of some future trouble."

And the doctor was right. Athletics in moderation are good, but athletics as practiced by some girls nowadays are ruinous alike to personal appearance and to health.

WASH DRESSES.

They Are Taking the Place of Shirt Waists This Year.

The shirt waist this year has given way to a number of charming wash dresses. These little gowns are made without lining and are trimmed with many tucks and figures of lace. The favorite materials are glace linen, dainty cotton canvas and pique.

Pique is a stiff material and requires to be softened, so the waist should be daintily bloused and trimmed with lace insertion from which the under material has been cut away. Pique and white glace linen dresses are sometimes made on the "frocks and frills" style, with a full box plaited coat not reaching to the waist line in the back, but drooping in two becoming points in front.

Cotton canvases or stamines are very handsome trimmed with coarse ecru lace and made up over white or contrasting shades of lining.

A simple summer gown is shown in the sketch. The material is white glace linen, and it is trimmed with bands of blue and white linen. The blouse opens over a front of tucked batiste. The wide collar is edged with the blue and white linen and fastens with a bow in front. The skirt is prettily trimmed with three gored ruffles headed by a strapping of the blue and white goods.

FOR COUNTRY WEAR.

Useful Coat and Skirt Suits Are Made of Delaine.

Never was there a better material than delaine for wash blouses and skirts for country wear, because it does not shrink, while nearly all flannels do a little. Delaine is an excellent substitute for flannel, especially in hot weather.

There are some smart little coats and skirts made in delaine, but they are not things to be attempted by the amateur. The coat must be made by a first class tailor or dressmaker. The short sack has taken the place of the bolero and will continue to look charming until cheap sales have made it too common.

Golf skirts are worn longer than ever and now barely escape the ground by an inch or so. As a consequence they are made of lighter materials, and the newest are laid in wide tucks stitched down until within a few inches of the bottom.

The cut shows a bathing suit which is made of deep red brilliantine and trimmed with cream white bands and black braid. The suit opens down the front with pearl buttons.

The jaunty little hat is of plaid silk [illegible]

COTTON UTILITY GOWNS.

Linen and Coarse Cotton Canvas Much Used.

Although there is nothing very new in cotton or linen goods this summer, yet the mercerized effect given to these fabrics quite transforms them, and cotton sateen with a foulard effect if made with nice lace and touches of silk or velvet introduced on the waist might easily be taken for a silk foulard.

Chine lawns are so woven that they look quite like delaines, and there are several varieties of linen all dyed in soft colorings and eminently suitable for summer gowns. The coarser makes of linen are quite soft, but firm, and require no lining at all, and the dyed holland is very inexpensive and durable.

Pale green and old rose are the two leading shades in the colored linens.

A bicycle costume of tan linen is here shown. The double breasted blouse is fastened with white pearl buttons, which also appear on the skirt, which fastens down the front.

The hat is of ecru straw, trimmed with two pale blue quills and a knot of brown velvet.

GOWNS FOR COOLER DAYS.

Effective Costumes of Foulard, Serge and Brilliantine.

We are promised many cool days this summer, and the wise girl takes this fact into consideration in getting together her wardrobe. Dresses of foulard, alpaca and serge are now being made in a number of attractive ways.

The foulard gowns are made shirt waist style, with prettily cut unlined skirts, and both waists and skirts are trimmed with rows of feather or cut stitching done in black silk.

The brilliantine or mohair dresses are made daintily in blouse fashion:

the skirts are box plaited or tucked. White dresses made of this material are the very latest crase. They are trimmed with touches of black, blue or red and are much used for seashore and mountain wear. If a jauntier gown is desired, the sleeves are made three-quarter length, and a little lace run through with black velvet banding is introduced. Blue and red brilliantines are also popular in a lesser degree. White hairy serge and wool canvas are made up in a similar manner.

The pretty seashore costume shown is of cream white brilliantine. The waist is made blouse fashion, with a yoke of lace. There are three irregular straps of striped silk on the shoulders, and a piping of the same silk appears around the edges of the blouse and down the front gores of the skirt. The sleeves are the very latest thing. Irregular strappings of the silk outline the hips and the bottom of the flaring skirt.

SILK COATS AND HATS.

Dust Coats Have Become Very Elegant and Elaborate.

Dust cloaks are now so elegant and elaborate that they form quite a smart toilet. To show the prevalence of gay colors a pink alpaca cloak seen at the races was trimmed with tinted lace and black satin and had large enamel buttons in black and pink touched with gold. A pale blue dust cloak seen on the same occasion had quaint trimmings of bronze silk edged with floral embroideries in blue and yellow.

Another smart dust cloak of biscuit colored mohair was decorated with Russian embroidery in shades of red and pink, and the tucked collar was edged with an appliqued embroidered poppies cut out in taffeta and shaded with crewel silk.

Many of the newer summer hats are trimmed with fruit and foliage. One shape seen recently had for sole trimming a big wreath of red and white currants which fell over the brim, while the foliage formed a wreath around the crown. Tiny pears nestle in folds of blue tulle, and their foliage is almost exact in nature.

The pretty little garden party dress shown is of tucked white silk mull trimmed with wide bands of black chantilly lace. The waist has a bolero of the lace, with three narrow velvet ribbons for shoulder straps. The front is of the white mull softly draped. The sleeve ruffles are also of the mull. The sleeves as well as the skirt are tucked perpendicularly. There is a full gathered ruffle around the bottom of the skirt.

The hat is of velvet leaves and black velvet.

FASHION NOTES.

Length of Skirts, Picture Hats, Long Veils.

Two items are indispensable to the up to date toilet, the cape ruffle and corsage bouquet.

Parasols are in delicate coloring or in white decorated with black or ecru lace. The chine sunshade has a Dresden china ball for a handle and gold wires. The fluffy type of parasol, or the other hand, is lined with puffed or drawn chiffon and rows of soft laces.

Skirts for country wear should be quite short. In Paris they are wearing their morning gowns to clear the ground. All the dressy gowns, however, are unusually long and trailing.

Picture hats are being worn to a large extent, particularly black ones trimmed with a single large ostrich feather.

Veils are being worn even longer than ever, the ends in some cases reaching to the waist line. Du Barry veils of black net trimmed with a wide lace edge are very popular.

A pretty child's gown for cool summer days is here shown. The material is white veiling made over taffeta and trimmed with narrow insertion. The belt ribbon is of pale blue louisine.

JUDGE RUNYON'S CANDIDACY.

Predictions are freely made by well informed local politicians that providing City Judge Runyon is named by the coming Republican convention as the party's candidate for the office of State Senator, the nominee will poll a vote here that will be an honor to that party and a deserved tribute to a public servant who has won the unreserved accolmims of his fellow citizens. As a municipal magistrate, City Judge Runyon has conducted his office in such manner as to win the praise of the pulpit and press. His administrations have been marked by impartiality and wisdom. Those who have witnessed his public and private career are aware that he has ability of a legislative nature as marked as is his judicial qualifications. His strong character and pronounced personality would surely attract attention in the Senatorial chamber in Trenton, and Union county would be well represented.

As the convention will not be held until October there is ample time for Judge Runyon's friends to boom his candidacy through the county. Whether he will be opposed by State Senator Cross, who now represents Union county, is not known. If he is, the Elizabeth legislator will find in him an aggressive and honorable opponent. Intellectually the Plainfield stalwart is admirably qualified for the place. As a graduate of Yale—that institution which prepares men "for the civil State"—and of Columbia Law School, he possesses the foundation, which coupled with his exceptional experience for one of his years, making him particularly desirable in the upper house of the Legislature.

THE JOURNAL'S POSITION.

It was only to be expected that the Elizabeth Journal would oppose the candidacy of City Judge William N. Runyon for the Senatorial nomination. It would have been unnatural if it had not. As an Elizabeth man, Senator Cross would naturally be the choice of an Elizabeth paper. Then the fact that Senator Cross is a particular friend of U. S. Senator Kean while the Elizabeth Journal lines up on the same side of the factional split would tend to influence that publications along the same line.

All the utterances of the Elizabeth Journal in opposing the Plainfielder have been most dignified and there has been no attempt to belittle his ability or popularity. Judge Runyon is a popular man in Elizabeth as well as Plainfield and the editor of the Journal recognizes his worth as well as do his friends in Plainfield. While Senator Cross and Judge Runyon both remain candidates for the Senatorial nomination, the Republican organ at the county seat may be looked to use every fair means to bring about the defeat of the Plainfielder. It will practically outline the stand of the Kean forces and will therefore be watched with no little interest by those Plainfielders who want to see how things are going in county political circles.

THEATRICAL.

Midsummer temperature has had no effect on the size of the audiences at Keith's Union Square Theatre, New York. A superb system of ventilation and refrigeration is in use and makes the auditorium of this theatre the coolest place in New York City. Upon the straight vaudeville bill which will be the offering for the coming week the Del Bosq Brothers, a team who succeed in mixing a considerable quantity of real comedy with their truly wonderful acrobatic feats, have first place. Next upon the list is Little Elsie, the celebrated mimic who is heralded as a pocket edition of Cissie Loftus. The two La Vines offer a mixture of comedy, acrobatic work and really excellent dancing. Craig and Ardelle present a musical sketch sure to please all lovers of harmony. Baker and Conn in a comedy skit that would make the inmates of an asylum for the deaf, dumb and blind laugh; Grant and Grant, the well known colored entertainers; Bicknell, the clay modeller, whose work has been the admiration and wonder of thousands; Eugene St. Cyr, the marvellous magician.

MOST IMPORTANT.

Rev. Mr. MacMurray Preached Last Sermon on Ten Commandments.

Most important and far reaching in its effects upon humanity, according to Rev. John MacMurray, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, of all the Ten Commandments, is the tenth, which formed the theme for the concluding discourse of the series Sunday evening. In his sermon, he showed that the sin of covetousness is responsible for the violation of all the other laws, since all sin can be traced back to some covetous desire.

REGULAR PLAY AT GOLF CLUBS

Vacations and Clouds Combined to Reduce the Attendance Saturday Afternoon.

SATURDAY'S WINNERS.

Honors at Hillside West to N. P. Rogers, Jr., Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards and M. J. Dumont—C. B. Morse Now Leads at Park for President's Cup—The Scores.

Threatening weather and the vacation season combined to materially reduce the attendance at both the local golf clubs Saturday afternoon. But while it was a decidedly off day at Hillside, the attendance at the Park Golf Club showed that much interest is taken in the game by the frequenters of that club.

There were the usual weekly competitions, the honors at Hillside going to N. P. Rogers, Jr., Rev. Dr. W. R. Richard's while Charles B. Morse was low man for the President's cup at the Park.

PARK GOLF CLUB.

Despite the threatening rain, there was a large attendance at the Park Golf Club Saturday afternoon for a mid-summer day when so many members were on their vacations. There was the usual weekly competition for the President's cup which resulted in a victory for Charles B. Morse, thereby putting him first again in the contest for that trophy. S. St. J. McCutchen, who has been at the front for the past month, is now a very close second. Dr. A. W. Anderson, who was second in the day's play, advanced to tie for fourth place.

The course was very slow and wet, which fact materially affected the scores. The best gross score was made by Roberts de S. Newhall and Gus W. Faber, neither of whom was at his best.

The scores, better than 100 net, were as follows:

	G	H	N

HILLSIDE CLUB.

The weekly competition for the Boys' and Golf Committee cups did not attract a very large field to the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course Saturday, and in consequence the attendance was about the smallest of the season.

In the morning there were just four to compete for the Boys' cup. N. P. Rogers, Jr., won first honors while Arthur Peterson and Gordon W. Abbott divided the honors for next place.

The scores were as follows:

N. P. Rogers, J., 80, 0—80; Arthur Peterson, 93, 10—83; Gordon W. Abbott, 96, 10—86; W. T. Glenney, 103, 10—93.

The standing for the Boys' cup is as follows:

There was more interest in the play for the Golf Committee cup. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards divided the honors for first position, while the remaining point was won by Robert Abbott. There were just nine contestants that posted their scores, while a number of others, whose scores were probably a trifle high, preferred not to record them.

Since the First . . .

ROCHESTER LAMP was made there have been many "new" lamps put on the market, but none of them have ever been "just as good" as the ROCHESTER. Why? Because the ROCHESTER is the original and the only lamp that has stood the test of time. Don't be misled by imitations. Insist on getting the ROCHESTER. We can do it. Ask us and you immediately on the subject.

THE NEW ROCHESTER

Is it so evidently all that is really worth having in a lamp, that we hesitate to say, except that it is the original and the only lamp that has stood the test of time.

We will tell you why, if you are interested, whether you want a new lamp or not. Write us, or call on the nearest dealer, and you will be convinced that the ROCHESTER is the only lamp worth having. Ask us and you immediately on the subject.

LAYING OF CORNER STONE FOR CHURCH

Start Made on the Permanent Home for the Swedish Pilgrim Church.

EXERCISES WERE HELD.

AT THE SITE OF THE NEW SANCTUARY SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

Addresses Made in English and Swedish—Alex. Miller Spoke for Congregational Church Which Has Assisted in New Church.

With exercises that were both impressive and interesting the cornerstone of the new Swedish Evangelical Pilgrim church was laid Sunday afternoon at the corner of New and Sixth streets, where the edifice will be located. The exercises were held at 3:30 o'clock. A large number of people were present. Rev. O. G. Norseen, pastor of the church, was in charge.

After the singing of an appropriate hymn by the congregation, accompanied by W. A. Conger on the organ, the Scripture lesson was read and prayer offered by Rev. Chares E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. This was followed with a soprano solo by Miss Youngquist, of New York. Mr. Norseen then introduced Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, who made a short address in English.

Dr. Snodgrass commenced his remarks by saying that the church is not built for God's sake, but for the sake of His people, as a place where they may congregate frequently and worship Him. He dwelt upon the significance of having a place of worship, where not only on Sundays, but on other occasions the people of God may come together to serve and worship God. He referred to the love and devotion among God's people in their earnest efforts to rear these places for services, and he believed that the new church about to be erected could be a place where the members would receive many blessings in the Christian life.

After another solo by Miss Youngquist, Rev. L. G. Ellstrom, of Brooklyn, was introduced and he spoke in Swedish. He commended the earnest efforts of the congregation in their undertaking to erect a house of worship and urged them to continue in the good work started under such auspicious circumstances. He gave the members some excellent advice founded on the Scriptures.

Following the remarks by Mr. Ellstrom, Alex. Miller was introduced as a representative of the Congregational church in the absence of the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich. Mr. Miller brought words of good cheer and congratulation to the members of the Swedish church and he bade them God-speed in their grand work. He made a touching reference to the fact that many of the members had left homes in their native land to seek success in a new country and he dwelt upon the importance of their having a church home, where the young women and young men can gather and meet their fellow-country men and women and strive to advance those principles which have a religious and moral benefit to all. He spoke warm words of praise for the pastor.

After a few words by the pastor, the corner-stone was laid. It bears the inscription "A. D. 1903," and it was put in position by William C. Smith, the mason, assisted by his son, E. P. T. Smith. After being placed in position, Mr. Norseen read appropriate Scripture and offered a fervent prayer, thus concluding the actual work of laying the stone.

While the offering was being received for the benefit of the church, another solo was sung by Miss Youngquist, and the benediction was pronounced by Mr. Norseen.

No More Burning Out.

The new switchboard has been placed in the new telegraph office at the North Avenue station and with it has been installed an arrangement which will in the future prevent the burning out of the board by lightning.

SOLDIER BOYS HOME AGAIN

Company K Returned From Camp Murphy Saturday Afternoon With a Fine Record.

WAS PRAISED BY ALL.

Easily Accorded First Place in Point of Discipline, Instruction and Military Manoeuvres—Boys Returned Saturday Afternoon After an Eventful Week.

Like old campaigners, the members of Company K returned home on Saturday evening from their week's stay in camp, bronzed and seasoned, but none the worse for their out of door life. If they carried themselves a bit jauntily and with more of a soldierly air than before, it was simply from a touch of pardonable pride in that they had acquitted themselves so well. From many quarters, they had won praise for their achievements, and they had reason to feel proud.

In numbers, Company K ranked second in the regiment; but in point of discipline, instruction and military manoeuvres, it was easily accorded first place. Some of the old officers, notably Colonel Collins, of the Third Regiment, and Major Langdon, of the Board of Examiners for the State, openly complimented the Plainfield boys on their good showing. Their own Colonel Collins also expressed himself as highly pleased with them. The officers admitted that Company K made the best appearance when passing in review every night. It was another commendable fact that it was always the first to be ready to go out for review when the call sounded.

Other honors are looked forward to by the local boys in the way of shooting. Of those who have qualified thus far, there are six sharp-shooters and twenty-eight marksmen, with some of the best shots yet to be accounted for. On Tuesday of next week, Captain Browning will take those of the remainder who can make the trip to the range at Sea Girt to try them. The men are so anxious to have the company rank first that some of them, who have not yet qualified and who may be unable to go on the date set, have offered to defray their own expenses to the local range in the week.

Camp was broken shortly after noon on Saturday, and the train started homeward at 2:30 o'clock. The battalion, comprising the two Elizabeth, the Plainfield and the Somerville companies, marched from the station at Elizabethport to the armory, where Plainfield and Somerville united in cheering their late comrades and the colonel. The two companies then returned to the railway station, taking passage on the 3:03 train.

On reaching Plainfield, the locals were marched to their armory and then dismissed. On the homeward journey, they were under command of Lieutenant Lewis. Captain Browning returned alone later in the evening. All the company came home in marching order except five members, who remained at the shore until Sunday night.

TWO COMMITTEES.

One Looks After Pulpit Supplies, and the Other Selects New Pastor.

At the morning service at the First Baptist church Sunday, H. E. Needham, one of the deacons, took the opportunity to state that there is a committee looking after the pulpit supplies of the church, while another special committee has the work in charge of selecting a successor to Rev. Dr. Yerkes. He said that he made the statement so that the members would not get confusing ideas in the matter. He asked the members to pray earnestly that the committee might be guided aright in the selection of a new pastor.

HOPES DEFEATED Y. M. C. A., NOW TIED FOR FIRST PLACE

St. Mary's Saved From Last Place by Beating the Safe Works in a Very Pretty Game.

TWO TIES IN THE CITY LEAGUE.

HOPES AND Y. M. C. A. BOTH SLUGGED THE BALL, ONLY HOPES WITH MORE SUCCESS.

Prettiest Game of the Day Was the St. Mary's—Safe Works Contest Which Was Finally Won 4 to 3, the Winning Run Being Made in the Last Inning—Hopes Won Their Game by a Score of 12 to 9—Results of Other Games—The Scores in Detail.

STANDING IN CITY LEAGUE.

Y. M. C. A.	5	3	.625
Hope Y. M. A.	5	3	.625
Safe Works	3	5	.375
St. Marys	3	5	.375

RESULTS OF LEAGUE GAMES.

Hope Y. M. A., 12; Y. M. C. A., 9.
St. Marys, 4; Safe Works, 3.

RESULTS OF OTHER GAMES.

Scotch Plains, 6; Plainfield, 0.
Westfield, 7; Everette College, 0.

Delightful uncertainty still prevails regarding the finish of the City Baseball League. The results of Saturday's games materially assisted to overthrow the calculations of the wise ones. After having twice defeated the Hope boys, the Y. M. C. A. nine fell victim to them Saturday afternoon in a game in which everybody batted freely. As a result the Y. M. C. A. contingent is compelled to share first honors again with the Hope crowd. The prettiest game of the day saw the St. Marys defeat the Safe Works by a single run made in the last inning and thereby save themselves from a solitary occupancy of the concluding position in the race for the pennant. Next Saturday will see St. Marys and Hopes in a hot game while the nines of the Y. M. C. A. and the Safe Works promise a contest of equal interest. It is still anybody's race.

ST. MARY'S GAME.

Brilliant work in the field gave St. Marys a victory over the Safe Works on the former's grounds Saturday afternoon. Doyle at second base literally robbed his opponents of the game. He dodged around and gathered in hot grounders that looked like sure base hits when they left the bat in a manner to make the oldest fans stare and gape. Once out of six difficult assists he made an error—a bad throw of a pick-up after a run of twenty yards.

Mack at short stop handled the sphere in expert style. Keefe's pitching was good, but his support won the game.

Safe Works' fielding was also of a crisp variety. Despite an occasional error they did not let a man cross home plate from the first to the ninth inning. Siegfried made an error in the fifth that had happy results. He fumbled a hot one from Winn and was too late to make a putout at first, but managed to get behind Mack who, forced from second, made third easily but ran over the bag and started home to save himself. After an exciting chase up and down the line Mack was finally captured. Out in centre Franklin performed some star stunts, making several phenomenal catches after long runs.

Doubles by Lederer, Barry and Keen and singles by Taylor and Winn netted St. Mary's three runs in the first. After that Burns settled down and only one man got further than second base till the ninth. With the score tied Keefe came up for last raps and was out on Siegfried's assist. Doyle followed with another hot one to short. Siegfried recovered but threw a shade high and Symons dropped the ball. Doyle advanced to second on Crotty's single and came home with the winning run on Taylor's base hit.

HOPES GREAT WIN.

Hard hitting and sensational plays, with a ninth inning rally which struck terror to the hearts of the Hope rooters for an uneasy five minutes, made Saturday's game between the chapel Y. M. A. and the Y. M. C. A. a memorable one in the annals of the league season. With a margin of six runs against them, the Y. M. C. A. boys made a driving finish, with the aid of costly errors by the Hopes, netting three runs and having two men on base when the last long fly was taken in by "Skeeter" Maxue in the most desperate chance of the game. The final tally was 12 to 9.

In spite of the sharp fielding and better stick work of the Y. M. C. A., Hope secured the victory through the ineffectiveness of Dupee in the box. It was one of his off days, and Hope had no trouble in connecting with his delivery at the time when hits were most needed. That tells the whole story of the game. In the five innings when Hope made the twelve tallies, the hits were well bunched. On the other hand, except in the first inning, Montross had himself well in hand, keeping the Y. M. C. A.'s hits scattered, while the fine fielding of Hope did the rest.

Matters looked dark enough for Hope at the beginning of the game, after Y. M. C. A. had taken the first turn at the leather and pounded out five runs. The Hope fans were in dismay, even when their own men had scored three in their half of the first. Not until the fifth, when the West Enders went ahead with a margin of one, did the prospect appear brighter. After that, Hope made two more in the sixth and three in the seventh, clinching the lead which the best efforts of the opposing batsmen could not overcome.

In the fifth, unusually warm work in the field robbed the Y. M. C. A. of what promised at least two runs. With only one out and two on base, Bolsterlie hit a hot one to Martin, who threw directly home, catching Barnes at the plate. Hartfelder returned the ball like a flash to Munro at third, just as Moore slid for the bag. The runner was caught a foot away and the side was out.

Two hits and a dead ball filled the bases for Y. M. C. A. in the ninth. With two out, Munro dropped a high fly back of third, letting in one run. Shortman contributed a muff of a long left field hit and two more men scampered home. When Bolsterlie sent another fly to deep centre, it looked like a safe one and Hope howled in agony. No one knew how Magee reached the spot, but he was there, and a wild leap into the air brought the ball into his hands and the game was over. The plucky centre fielder was carried on the shoulders of the Hope fans in their delirious joy.

One casualty marked the game. In the sixth, a ball struck Egan on the nose, breaking a cartilage. After a few minutes, he pluckily resumed play and finished the game.

'PLAINS WON GAME.

Scotch Plains, July 28—The local baseball team crossed bats Saturday afternoon with the reorganized Plainfield Athletics, and not with the Riversides, of Newark, as was arranged.

For some reason Manager Johnston was unable to receive any assurance from the manager of the Newark team that they would be at the 'Plains to fill their date. Several weeks ago the same club turned the Murray Hill team down and Manager Johnston did not intend to be made a victim of such unsportsmanlike conduct, so on Friday night he closed the game with Manager Taspcott, of the Plainfield team. It was fortunate that he did or the 'Plains fans would have been without a game.

The visitors had Wilhelm, the newly signed Safe Works pitcher, in the box and had he received the same support that Harvey, of the locals, received the score would have been very close as Scotch Plains earned only three runs, and the final score should have been 3 to 0, instead of 6 to 0. Harvey, of the locals, pitched his usual strong game and the support given him was of the best, several times the visitors made desperate attempts to score but quick work by the infield nailed them at the home plate.

Manager Johnston made a little change in the lineup of the team, putting Brogan, who has been covering third base, behind the bat and placing Ashcraft, who has been doing the catching all the season, on third. The change worked nicely and showed the fans that Scotch Plains has two of as good a backstops as could be desired.

Saturday afternoon the team will line up against the Xavier Deaf Mutes who defeated them two weeks ago. Following is the lineup and score by innings:

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Erwin Waters, of East Third street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Beulah May, to John Raleigh, of Westerly, R. I.

BEEN RAILROADING IN CUBA

GEORGE F. ROSE VISITED PLAINFIELD FIRST TIME IN SEVEN YEARS.

Was Then a School Boy, Now Holds Responsible Position With the Cuban Central Railroad.

There were few Plainfielders who recognized George F. Rose, the retiring general freight and passenger agent of the Jucaro and San Fernando Railway, of Cuba, who is to take charge October first of the freight traffic of the new Cuban Central Railroad, as the slim lad who completed his preparatory school studies at Leal's School in June 1895, and moved to New York City to enter the University of New York. Mr. Rose was the guest yesterday of Charles B. Morse, city edisor of The Daily Press.

After leaving Plainfield, he entered college where he played on the football eleven and was captain of the gymnastic team in his sophomore year. He caught the war fever and left college to enlist in the Fifteenth U. S. Infantry. His knowledge of Spanish made him a valuable man. After a year's service in the army, he went into the railroad business in Cuba where he has risen rapidly. He remained in Cuba until a month ago when he was given a three months leave of absence and sent north to recover his health, life in the tropics having undermined his constitution.

Mr. Rose lived in Plainfield for two years. His father conducted a hardware store on West Front street in the store now occupied by the Flynn Brothers and the family resided at the corner of Dorr street and Lincoln place. While Mr. Rose still shows the results of life in the tropics, he is much improved in health and expects to return to his duty October 1, ready for anything.

SMALL DEFICIT.

Although the Free List on the Union Excursion Was a Very Large One.

Regarding the excursion of the First Presbyterian, Park Avenue Baptist and Congregational churches, of this city, and the Dunellen Presbyterian church, to Asbury Park, last week, it should be stated that it was one of the most successful of the season. The total deficit was $74 and this amount was divided pro rata among the three Plainfield churches, as follows: First Presbyterian, $31; Park Avenue Baptist, $24; Congregational, $19. Every one of the three Sunday-schools was carried free except the home department of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

As an offset to the free list there were tickets sold outside of the Sunday-schools to the amount of $436, and this very materially helped to reduce the deficit. The railroad company received $615.75 for taking the excursionists to the shore and back. There was no deficit for the Dunellen people as they paid for the excursion the same as outsiders and were under no obligations, although they received 15 cents on tickets sold outside of those purchased by themselves.

New Jersey Night at Manhattan Beach.

New Jersey night will be celebrated with one of those brilliant displays of fireworks, which occasionally are made the special features on particular occasions in the Amphitheatre at Manhattan Beach, on the evening of Thursday, August 7. Notwithstanding the elaborate programme in preparation there will be no curtailment in the grand spectacle of "Ancient Rome" which will be seen in all its brilliancy and with all the exciting and interesting sights of the chariot races, grand ballets and choruses, imposing processions, acrobatic feats and exploits on the wire rope extended at considerable height across the full length of the lake in front of the great stage of the amphitheatre. The great number of people from our next door neighbor, the State of New Jersey, suggested to Mr. Pain the idea of making a special night for the people of Jersey. A fine picture of Governor Franklin Murphy will be one of the conspicuous set pictures fired on the occasion. To judge from the preparations being made, the "Jersey Night" programme will rank among the most interesting pyrotechnical exhibitions of the season.

To Secure Aid.

To promote interest and secure aid for the work of training the colored youth is the worthy object which has brought George M. Elliot, principal of the St. Augustine Industrial Institute, of Florida, to this city. He will be here for a few days, in the course of which he hopes to have opportunity o explain the workings of his school.

POLICE OFFICERS OF THREE COUNTIES THERE

Annual Meeting and Banquet of Superior Officers Police Protection Association.

HELD AT LORRAINE.

THE SAME OFFICERS OF ASSOCIATION WERE RE-ELECTED.

After Brief Business Session, the Banquet Was Served Under the Trees in Garden at Picturesque Old Road House—Short Talks.

From the three counties of Monmouth, Middlesex and Union, many prominent guests gathered Monday at Lorraine to partake of the hospitality of the Superior Officers' Police Protective Association. It was the occasion of the annual business meeting, followed, according to the usual custom by an elaborate banquet, served under the trees in the garden at the picturesque old road house which is the yearly scene of the celebration.

In a brief session, the business of the association was transacted. For the eighth successive year, the same officers were chosen. They are: President, Chief Tenney, of Elizabeth; vice president, Chief Burke, of Perth Amboy; secretary and treasurer, Captain Peters, of Elizabeth; sergeant-at-arms, Sergeant Elmiger, of Elizabeth.

At 5 o'clock the first course of the feast was served, and from that time for two hours the discussion of the good things to eat and drink occupied the best of everyone's attention.

Plainfield's delegation included the four superior officers, Chief Kiely, Sergeant Fredericksen and Roundsmen Flynn and Mattox; Assemblyman Newcorn, Freeholder Westphal and Councilmen Randolph and Coriell. In the course of the dinner, speeches were made by all the Plainfielders except Roundsmen Mattox and Flynn.

Among the others present who made addresses were Senator Cross and Colonel Collins, of Elizabeth, both of whom spoke in warm terms of the association and of the good work of the police throughout the county.

Injured While Bathing.

N. Tamioki, the young Japanese, who has spent some time in this city at the home of Rev. Dr. George H. Whitney, is now laid up at the Windemere, Asbury Park. He was out swimming in the surf when he struck his foot against one of the posts to which the life ropes are fastened and badly cut his foot.

Vacation Days.

Vacation time is here and the children are fairly living out of doors. There could be no healthier place for them. You need only to guard against the accidents incidental to most open air sports. No remedy equals DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for quickly stopping pain or removing danger of serious consequences. For cuts, scalds and wounds. "I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for sores, cuts and bruises," says L. B. Johnson, Swift, Tex. "It is the best remedy on the market." Sure cure for piles and skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits. CROSS IS A CANDIDATE

MAKES A STATEMENT TO THE ELIZABETH JOURNAL.

Says He Would Appreciate a Renomination for Another Term for Senator.

Whatever doubt may have existed as to the position of Senator Cross in the prospective political contest seems to have been dissolved by a statement just issued as authoritative by the Elizabeth Journal. That exponent of county politics credits Senator Cross with the following:

"In view of reports to the effect that I did not want and would not accept a renomination at the hands of the Republicans of Union county for the office of State Senator I desire to say that all such reports are unauthorized.

"I feel that I have had practically but one term and would appreciate another, and under the circumstances, do not think it presumptuous on my part to seek a renomination.

"If I have served the people of Union county faithfully—and I certainly have tried to—I desire their approval, and if a renomination is tendered me I would appreciate it and accept it."

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, MD.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 24, 1901.
Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.
About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.
I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.
I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

While Plainfield is not credited with having many lovers of forest and stream who love to roam with rod and gun, there are scores of persons who will be interested in the revised game laws which have just been issued. There are a number of important changes that all sportsmen should make a note of as penalties for infractions in this respect have a tendency to rise instead of being lowered. That all may become acquainted with the revised laws, The Daily Press prints herewith a chart showing the open and closed seasons. All who intend hunting or fishing in this state at any season of the year should keep it for reference. In addition the following facts should not be forgotten:

To take or to attempt to take any game except by the use of guns held at arm's length. Fine, $20.

To take or to attempt to take any fish in any manner excepting with hook and line, excepting taking minnows for bait with a seine not more than thirty feet long, excepting in ponds and lakes having an area of over one hundred acres where seines of fifty feet in length are permitted for bait-fishing; taking eels with baskets or weirs between the fifteenth of September and the first of November, and taking eels with wicker baskets anchored on the bottoms of streams and ponds. To permit hounds to run at large during the close season for rabbits. Fine, $20.

To remove quail, grouse, woodcock, squirrel, hare, English and ring neck pheasants from the State. Fine, $20.

To kill more than thirty rail, marsh hens or mud hens in one day. Fine, $20.

Farmers and fruitgrowers have the right to trap rabbits under certain restrictions.

Dealers have thirty days after the close of the season in which to dispose of game.

To the above may be added the following prohibitions, which while not the subject of legal enactment, are recognized as binding laws of behavior by all reputable lovers of the pursuit of game and fish:—

Never violate the letter or spirit of the game laws.

Never take more fish or game than you have convenient use for.

Never be insolent or impolite to a landowner who orders you off his premises; for although he may not own the game on his land or after he has the right to exclusive possession of his property.

Never fail to destroy a net or trap when you find one set.

Never shoot at a game bird except on the wing.

Never kill the last quail in a covey; leave some to breed next year.

Never forget that game laws are intended to improve and increase sport, and not to prevent or restrict it.

HOW ELIZABETH VIEWS RUNYON FOR SENATOR

Elizabeth Journal Says Nice Things, But Thinks Senator Cross Ought to be Returned.

GIVES REASONS WHY.

SAYS CANDIDATE OUGHT TO FIRST SERVE TERM IN ASSEMBLY.

Elizabeth Journal Inclined to Favor a Plainfield Candidacy for Sheriff —Thinks Runyon Too Young and Inexperienced for Senator.

It is not to be expected that Elizabeth Republicans will agree to the Senatorial candidacy of City Judge Runyon without a contest. With such a popular man as Senator Joseph Cross in the race, Elizabeth will very naturally do its best to defeat the Plainfielder. It is interesting to note what the Republican organ of the county seat has to say on the subject.

While the Elizabeth Journal has attempted to keep out of the factional war which has existed in the Republican ranks of Union county, it is generally considered to be a strong supporter of Senator Kean. Some-thing of the feeling of the Kean faction may therefor be expected to shine forth in its columns occasionally. Of course, there is nothing that the Elizabeth editor can truthfully say against the Plainfield candidate. The only argument it presents is that the Elizabeth man is better fitted for the place on account of greater age, more mature judgment and more experience.

The Journal devoted considerable space in its editorial column yesterday to City Judge Runyon's candidacy. It will be read with interest by Plainfielders as it practically outlines Elizabeth's position. It is as follows:

"As long ago as June 21, the date of the Belvidere congressional convention, Judge Runyon was spoken of as a possible candidate for senator, provided that Mr. Fiak declined a nomination. Judge Runyon, it will be remembered, made the nominating speech for Hon. Charles N. Fowler. At that time it was suggested by Plainfield delegates that Judge Runyon would make a good candidate for member of the assembly if Mr. Newcorn should, for any reason, withdraw from the field. Whether Mr. Newcorn will or will not withdraw has not yet been authoritatively stated.

"Judge Runyon is a rising young man, and he may be senatorial timber, but it has been the rule in Union county to first try a man in the assembly, and, if he is of the right calibre, to honor him still further by sending him to the senate. With the heartiest admiration for Judge Runyon's ability and popularity, it is hardly to be expected that such an experienced and high-minded statesman as Senator Cross would be exchanged by the Republicans of Union county for a young and inexperienced man of even such promise as Judge Runyon.

"It may be stated as a fact in the present Republican situation in this county, that whatever opposition there is to Senator Cross, or, rather, that whatever prominence is given to any other man as a candidate for senator originates from one of two sources. In the first place, those who oppose Senator Kean oppose Senator Cross. In the next place every candidate for sheriff—and his friends—would like to see the senatorial candidate come from Plainfield, since it is manifest that the senator, the surrogate and the sheriff will not be asked for nor given to Elizabeth. If Plainfield should name the senatorial candidate, then at least two men in Elizabeth would have their chances for the shrievalty nomination materially improved. On the other hand, if Plainfield came forward with a candidate for sheriff, neither the shrievalty candidates in Elizabeth nor those in Cranford, Summit or Westfield would have all the strength they so much desire.

"This seems to be the chief exciting cause of the naming of Plainfield man in the place of Senator Cross. Mr. Ackerman was among the first named, and declined to run as against Senator Cross. Mr. Fiak was also named, and he stated, from the first, that he would not run against Senator Cross. And now the situation is enlivened by the tuneful presence in the arena of Judge Runyon."

CERTIFICATES FOR ARCHITECTS.

Out of 500 Applications Received, 360 Have Passed Successfully.

The New Jersey State Board of Architects has received about 500 applications for certificates which will entitle them to pursue their calling in this State. The board has favorably considered 360 of the applications and directed that certificates be issued. The form of certificate to be granted those who were practising architecture in this State at the time of the passage of the act creating the board reads that the holder is entitled to practice architecture without examination.

The board is now engaged in preparing examination papers to be furnished those who do not come under this class. Those who take the examination and pass successfully will receive another form of certificate which states that they are in possession of such knowledge of the construction of buildings, of the strength of material, of the laws of sanitation as applied to building, and of such ability to make practical application of this knowledge to the ordinary professional work of an architect as to entitle them to practise architecture in the State of New Jersey.

SUIT FOR DAMAGES.

Westfield People Bring Action Against Trolley Co.

Through Attorney John P. Owens, of this city, Mary L. Allen and Charles P. Allen have entered suit against the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway for $10,000.

Mrs. Allen, it is alleged, was severely injured by the sudden starting of a car belonging to the company which she was about to board. She was under the care of a physician for some time, it is declared, and has not yet entirely recovered. The case will be heard before the Supreme court in October. Both the complainants reside in Westfield.

Park Avenue Repaired.

After being torn up all week from the sewage work, Park avenue was restored Saturday to its wonted level in front of the proposed annex to the Boehm building.

A Foreign Exchange Department.

The First National Bank has opened a foreign exchange department and is now prepared to issue drafts on London and Paris and letters of credit available in all parts of the world.

A large addition is contemplated for Apgar's Hall in the fall.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 3, "The Call to Separation"—Text, II Cor. vi, 14-18; I John ii, 15-17.

The call of Christ to discipleship is a call at the present time, as it was in His lifetime and has always been since, to become different in some respects from other people. This necessity for separateness has not always been clearly seen, nor has the requirement been always faithfully observed. In too many cases Christians seem to the worldly to be no better than themselves and scarcely different in any way.

Some have gone to the other extreme and have made the difference extend to many things which Jesus never included and which should never have been brought into the question.

"Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean, and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be My sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty," gives no sanction for unneighborly conduct and makes no demand for any exclusiveness which is not entirely kind and helpful to every one. It gives no basis for arrogance and the spirit of unkind criticism. It is not a command to banish all pleasant things and cultivate the unlovely in dress or manners.

It is a perfectly natural recognition of the fact that if one becomes fully devoted to the good and pure the impure and unclean must be banished from companionship. The two are incompatible and cannot live together. One or the other must be chosen. If we are to be disciples of Christ and children of the Most High, we can no longer cultivate the merely fleshly appetites and worldly tastes.

We are heirs of all the divine inheritance. We are princes of royal lineage. We must fit ourselves for our high position and call to rulership. We must first become able to rule our own spirits, to control our desires, which, if left untrained, would wander into harmful ways. We are to think of the good and beautiful until we grow to love only that which is pure and admirable. We are to speak the true until we become incapable of the false and untrue. We are to do the kind things until it becomes natural and easy and all unkind deeds are painful and impossible to us in practice.

What a contrast this makes to all merely worldly living! How such conscientious and working would make us actually different and separate from the world—not out of the world; still in it, actively, full of life and joy and zest, but blessedly conscious of peace and purity and love in place of the restlessness, unclean lusts and misery of the worldly!

Our pressing need is separateness unto God, leaving the earthly life to live here and now the Christly life—not moodishly and as a constant constraint, but in perfect soul freedom and contentment.

Living For the Future.

Would it not ennoble our daily existence if we could be continually inclined than we do customarily that our human life is not ultimate even in this sphere, not limited by its extent and duration, but has an immortal prolongation even in this world, even when pursued for personal ends? It is because no man liveth to himself or dieth to himself, for life and death, though personal experiences, have a more or less remote projection upon the race. The energy, forces and mental and moral power set free must have a certain continuance. God will not be put off or relegated to some other time and place. He is here at your elbow and at mine, telling us to use the day wisely, cheerfully, justly, to love, to live, to worship, to act now, for in this day foundations are laid for a better time to come; in this day influences are going abroad through all worlds of height and depth that will decide may be done to effect remote ages. All of beauty and truth lie within our reach if we take the healthy and sane view of life and cast from us all those diseased and anaemic thoughts that poison the spring of religious life and make it a mockery. The mawkish abnormality of our time seems sloughing off. Robust and glowing views of man's place in the universe and God's immanence seem about to blossom like the wondrous century tree that after long sterility puts forth a flower.—Christian Register.

God and Goodness.

The persistence of God and goodness through all the ages is often overlooked. Men are prone to give the devil more than his due of virtues. Especially is he credited with patience and persistence in accomplishing his nefarious designs. It is an easy and careless remark of the man that the devil never takes a vacation. As an example of industry and faithfulness to his deceitful purpose the conventional devil has held a pre-eminent position before the world, and many saintly hearts have been discouraged by the apparent success of the virtues of the evil one! It is curious and deplorable how men forget God and what God means in life. We glance over a little interval of time, and in it appears that all things are going wrong, that God has let go His hold and goodness lies a bleeding victim at the feet of sin.—Universalist Leader.

Good Resolutions.

You picture to yourself the beauty of bravery and steadfastness, and then some little, wretched, disagreeable duty comes, which is your martyrdom, the lamp for your oil, and if you do not do it your oil is spilled.—Phillips Brooks.

Without Religion.

Without religion you cannot make the will equal to its task.—Mrs Humphry Ward.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 3—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—The call to separation.—II Cor. vi, 14-18; I John ii, 15-17.

It has always been the desire and intention of God that His chosen people in this life should be separated from the people of the world. While in the world, it was never His intention that they should be of the world. This fact is fully testified to in the history of the chosen people of God. God developed the Jews into a distinct and a separate people. He led them from the land of Egypt to the land of Canaan, which was to be their distinct and separate possession. He there surrounded them with peculiar customs and laws, that they should be distinct and separate from the people round about them. The laws and the customs of the Jews made them as separate and distinct from the surrounding nations as it was possible for a nation to be. Even in the matter of dress God distinguished His people from the nations. It is His intention that this separation, in a different way, should exist today. The church of Christ is a distinct and separate institution from the world. The disciples of Christ are also to be separate and distinct in their lives. This is set forth in the New Testament. Paul says in the first reference: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers, for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness, and what concord hath Christ with Belial, or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." In the second reference John says: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him."

The necessity of emphasizing this truth of the Scriptures is very great today. It is evident to all that there is not the distinction between the church and the world and between the people of God and the people of the world that there should be. There have been days in the past when this separation was marked and distinct. In the early Christian centuries this was the case. By the difference in their lives it was possible for the Roman masters to distinguish their Christian and un-Christian slaves, and not only in these circles, but in every grade of church life, there was a distinct separation from the world. In the early part of the history of our own country there was the marked separation between the people of the kingdom of God and the people of the world. The Puritan fathers were particular to emphasize the duty of separation from the world. Today, however, there has been a great change in this respect. The church is in the world and the world is in the church to an extent that perhaps has never been equaled or surpassed in the past. The duty, therefore, to emphasize this truth of the participation in the things of God is evident, and we may well remember today God's call to His people to be separate and distinct from the world, a chosen people unto Himself and His peculiar possession.

The distinction between the people of God and the people of the world is not today to be manifested by any peculiar custom or the observance of different national laws, but purely in the manner of living. It is by the lives of God's people that they should be recognized as His people and as the followers of Jesus Christ. A clerical dress does not make a Christian minister, nor does a Christian Endeavorer badge upon the lapel of a young man's coat make him a Christian Endeavorer. Christianity is a life. It is the life of God in the heart and the lives of men, and it is possible for the people of God to follow so closely in the footsteps of their divine model, the Lord Jesus Christ, as to be noticeably distinct and separate from those who are not believers in God or worshipers of Him.

Early Piety.

The command of God is to seek Him early in life, and the promise is that He will receive and bless those who thus come to Him. Youth is favorable to grace. The mind is not yet filled with worldly things; habits are not yet confirmed; associations are not yet settled. The child is more in sympathy with the things of heaven. Christianity is a life. The Saving Power of Hope.

In our strong reaction from the popular view of forgiveness as the blotting out of the inevitable consequences of wrongdoing, in our eagerness to teach that character is salvation, we must not ignore the saving power of hope. Souls burdened by sin and shame need not be pointed to the law of consequences. What they need is something to inspire in them new hope.—Presbyterian Banner.

Only one thing exceeds the loss—the love. Their lives are, affording me such new experiences as make me understand the growth of a religion better than ever before.—George S. Merriam.

A NEW CHAMOIS FACTORY

IS TO BE BUILT AT LINCOLN IN A VERY SHORT TIME.

An Outgrowth of Company the Factory of Which Located at Bound Brook Was Burned.

Another new industry is planned for Lincoln. The Lincoln Chamois and Leather Company, which was incorporated at Trenton last week, has purchased a site with 500 feet frontage on the railroad and 500 feet on the boulevard, facing Lincoln avenue, the highest point in the town of Lincoln. Plans are out for a factory of moderate size which will be enlarged as the demands require it.

This industry is really an outgrowth of the old Franco-American Chamois Manufacturing Company, which had a factory at Bound Brook. The quarters there were not well adapted and were burned down two years ago. Since then the practical chamois workers have been looking for more capital. Charles P. Sebring, of Greenbrook, finally took an interest in the work which had been shown to be a success and, with the aid of William Brown, of Jersey City, whose summer home is located at Greenbrook, formed the new company.

Some of the skilled workmen who were formerly employed at the Chapot factory in this city, will go with the new firm which will begin the preparation of chamois at the earliest possible date.

HOW TO RECREATE.

Some of the Attractions Offered by the Jersey Central.

Recreation is in every sense American since the American people delight in amusement, and at this season when everyone is indulging in pleasure there is nothing more fascinating than a trip to the beach, and where can one find the equal of the New Jersey coast. A veritable play-ground it is for several reasons. Its accessibility is unquestionably unequaled and for those who delight in bathing the opportunities are without stint. Then to, its close proximity to the "only New York" makes it necessary for the region to be thoroughly up-to-date, and that it is goes without saying.

Fine hotels admirably kept are every where on the Jersey coast, and the features which are made prominent in their itinerary includes golf, ping-pong, yachting, driving, fishing, crabbing and bathing. The New Jersey Central is the great thoroughfare to the New Jersey coast resorts, and its trains are models of excellence and convenience, and connection is made from Plainfield on train leaving at 2:31 p. m., for Red Bank, Long Branch, Deal Beach, West End, Allenhurst, Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Avon, Belmar, Spring Lake and Point Pleasant, while good connections are also made for Beach Haven, Tuckerton, Atlantic City, Cape May and Ocean City.

The New Jersey Central, passenger department, No. 636, New York, sends free upon application a hotel and boarding list as well as a book on Atlantic City, both of which are replete with valuable information. Send for them.

Overland to California.

Overland to California, with side stops for rest and enjoyment, is the route planned by Governor Hiimm and "Ted" Flannery, who are going to attend the Supreme Lodge session of the Knights of Pythias on the Pacific slope. By starting early, the Plainfielders are said to have in view some detective work in the capture of the western outlaw, Tracy, who has been dodging arrest for several weeks past in Washington.

Poisoning the System.

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dullness and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. DeWitt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. L. W. Randolph.

ANDREW M'CARDELL IS STILL A CANDIDATE

Announcement of Judge Runyon's Senatorial Ambitions Has Not Affected His Stand.

WANTS TO BE SHERIFF.

ONE REPUBLICAN THINKS PLAINFIELD WILL LAND THEM BOTH.

Says That Plainfield Saved Union County for Republicans Last Fall and That This City Is Deserving of Special Favors This Year.

Deeper interest than has been shown for several years is attached to the political situation in Union county, since the announcement that City Judge Runyon is in the field for the prospective honors of the State Senatorial nomination. Plainfield feels that it is the centre of the problem and the other parts of the county are being brought to view the matter in the same light.

What makes conditions so uncertain, in the eyes of the timid, is the fact that Plainfield is out for the large end of the slate for the coming elections. Andrew MacCardell is still looked upon as the candidate for sheriff. When questioned on the subject yesterday, he repeated the assertion that he still desired and hoped for the nomination. Except for the three Assemblymen, the only other office to be filled this year is that of surrogate, which is generally conceded to the present incumbent, George Parrott, for another term.

Speaking of the possibility of the Plainfield claimants for office injuring one another, a prominent Republican said last evening that there was no reason for entertaining such a fear. "The outcome of last year's election," he said, "has shown Elizabeth that the Plainfield vote was the only thing which saved the county from the Democrats. Look at the majority the Democratic Mayor got in the county seat! It was the same with Rahway. Of all the little thousand majority in Union county, this city contributed 900.

"Will the county at large recognize this as basis for the claims of Plainfield? I think certainly. It is not asking much. We are offering the party two splendid men. MacCardell already has the promised support of nearly all the county and Runyon's popularity ought to carry him through without any trouble. It is a case of a debt, you know. The county owes it—has owed it for a long time—to give Plainfield one good year; and when it comes in such a way as at present, there is the best reason in the world for being hopeful."

Mr. MacCardell spoke warmly of Judge Runyon's ambition and his chances for the senatorship. He, too, thinks the rest of the county will acknowledge the justice of Plainfield's claims when the time for making the nominations comes. Meanwhile, politicians are watching the pot boiling and considering the always expected "probabilities."

CROP BULLETIN.

Issued by New Jersey State Experiment Station for Last Week.

The New Jersey State Experiment Station has issued the following weather and crop bulletin for the week, ending July 21:

During the week ending Monday, July 21, 1902, the weather conditions, higher temperature and frequent light showers, were most favorable to all growing and maturing crops. On the afternoon of the 18th a destructive thunderstorm, accompanied by high wind and hail, did considerable damage in portions of Cumberland county, prostrating corn and tomatoes, and blowing much fruit off the trees. The harvesting of wheat and rye is about completed and the cutting of oats has begun in the southern section, and will be general during the week; the heads are well filled, and the yield promises to be the largest for a number of years. The digging of an unusually large crop of early potatoes is progressing; the tubes are large and of fine quality. Tomato picking is also progressing rapidly, already over 100,000 bushels crates having been shipped from the vicinity of Swedesboro. During the week the temperature has averaged the daily normal. The sunshine was about the average, and the rainfall, slightly below.

Congratulated Council.

The convention committee from Benevolent Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., has received a letter from General Passenger Agent C. M. Burt, of the New Jersey Central, congratulating the Council upon its excursion and the very able way in which way it was conducted.

New McKinley Postal Cards.

The new McKinley postal cards have been issued and received at some of the postoffices in New Jersey.

PLAINFIELD'S NEWEST SOCIAL CLUB

Auspicious Beginning of the Career of the I. C. T. Club Which Was Recently Organized.

Among Plainfield's many clubs and organizations devoted exclusively to the promotion of innocent pastime, there is one, though looked upon as an infant by many of its predecessors, that has slowly but surely crept into prominence during the past six months. Admitting that it is in its infancy it must also be acknowledged that it is remarkably well developed for its age. This organization is known to the outside world as the I. C. T. Club, but beyond that very little of its standing is known in the community except to those who have shared its hospitality in the past spring social season. For that reason The Daily Press prints today an excellent cut of the club members, who comprise many of the city's representative and best known young men, and a sketch of its career.

I. C. T. CLUB MEMBERS.

With the closing of Music Hall, early last year, the young folk of the middle class were deprived of one of their principal places of amusement and its loss continued to be felt among them with the approach of winter. There was hardly anything for them to do beyond promenading the streets of an evening and the longing for sociability outside of the home, which is implanted in the breast of every young man or woman in civilized communities, continued to grow upon them.

Informal discussion of the matter resulted in a meeting on February 2 last, which was attended by V. W. Nash, Jr., Charles Suhr, Jr., and George L. Apgar. They then and there decided to form a social organization and a call was extended to all their acquaintances of the same age to meet one week later in Justice Nash's office to form a permanent affair. Ten young men responded and it was then that the foundation of the present I. C. T. Club was laid.

The sobriquet was selected after much deliberation and has proven a mystery to outsiders that remains unsolved. Inquiry reveals the fact that it may mean "I Can't Tell," "Ice Cream Trust," "I Could Tell," "Ice and Coal Trust" and many others but the true definition is given to those only who number themselves as an I. C. T. and they are all pledged not to repeat it.

On Washington's birthday the club found a permanent home on the spacious top floor of the Taylor building and since then its growth has been phenomenal. It now has an active membership of forty-one. There are also eight honorary members as follows: City Judge William N. Runyon, Counsellors Robert M. Clark and Francis J. Blatz, Nathan Titsworth, Thomas Muir, Archibald Hacquer, Charles B. Morse and Ralph Leighton Morrow.

On February 25 at a meeting held in the new rooms, where the only furniture was soap boxes borrowed from a nearby grocer, the following officers were elected: President, V. W. Nash, Jr., vice president, Hiram S. Hunces; secretary, Charles Suhr; treasurer, George L. Apgar, and sergeant at arms, Charles A. Peterson.

Under their leadership the club has pursued a policy that has won for it the esteem and commendation of hosts of admirers and given it a season of prosperity.

The treasury is now in a healthy condition and beside the organization rooms is graced with a handsome Waters piano, a comfortable couch, several hundred chairs and other necessaries. The windows are embellished with pretty curtains, rugs are scattered about the floor and in the club in its adopted colors, red, orange and blue.

As stated, the paramount purpose of the organization has been sociability and outsiders have been permitted to share in the enjoyment through a series of receptions held at regular intervals. At the first these were 108 friends present, at the second, 126, at the third 167 and at the fourth which was designated "A Summer Girl and Shirt Waist Man Dance" there were 150. Excellent music, vocal selections and refreshments have been a feature of all these gatherings. There have also been a number of stag affairs at which vaudeville artists of a high order of merit furnished the entertainment. For outside recreation the chief avenue of enjoyment has been trolley parties of which the club has conducted several.

Such is the I. C. T. club and at the present time it is no difficult matter to discern a member. On the street he is prominent by a very pretty hat with the club's monogram worked in front and by his general bearing of manly dignity. At home he is the youth who shows by his conduct that he is improved morally and physically by healthful recreation and mingling with desirable companions. It is such young men who are to be in charge of the nation's affairs in the future and an organization which tends to make them better prepared for their responsibilities is alike to be commended and fostered.

TWO NEW BUILDINGS.

New Butcher Shop and a Two-Story Building in the West End.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane has approved statements of specifications for two new operations in the West End. One is for a one story butcher shop, to be erected by E. F. Gavin on South Second street, opposite the Pond Tool Works, and the site of the one is owned by fire a short time ago. The other is to be a two story dwelling, on West Third street, near Muhlenberg place, for the Metropolitan Merchantile and Realty Company.

Citizens of New Jersey contemplating taking Civil Service examinations during the next fall will do well to remember that the Civil Service Commission has just announced examinations for numerous positions to be held in New Jersey as follows: At Trenton October 9 and 21 and at Newark October 10.

Mother Always Keeps It Handy.

"My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains and general ill health due primarily to indigestion," says L. W. Spalding, Verona, Mo. "Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now, at the age of seventy-six, eats any thing she wants, remarking that she fears no bad effects as she has her bottle of Kodol handy." Don't waste time doctoring symptoms. Go after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol rests the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. L. W. Randolph.

Quick Returns.

An inquest is quite an event, even in a city," said the man who had made a trip through the backwoods of Wisconsin, "but they don't take much interest in them in the lumber camps. I was at a camp when a saw log rolled off a flatcar and over a man and smashed him flat. It was just at noon, and nobody was disposed to lose any time.

"'See here, men,' called the foreman to a gang, 'we've got to get this thing over with before we go to dinner. Six of you stand around.'

"'Now, then, there's the log and that's Bill, and as Bill couldn't roll over the log we must take it that the log rolled over him. Verdict of the jury is that he came to his death by accident and will be buried after quitting time to-night, and now let's have dinner, and may Heaven rest his soul forever more.'"—Philadelphia Press.

An Object in View.

The groceryman on the corner relates that a couple of days ago a little girl entered his store and, timidly laying down a dime, asked for ten cents' worth of candy.

"It's for papa," she said. "I want to 'sprise him when he comes home."

The groceryman proceeded to dig out some of his stock, when the little girl interposed.

"Don't give me that kind. Give me caramels. I just love caramels."

"But I thought they were for papa," the groceryman remarked.

"I know," explained the little girl, "but when I give them to papa he'll just kiss me and say that 'cause I'm such a generous little girl he'll give them all back to me. So you'd better give me caramels."—Philadelphia Times.

Knows Too Much Geography.

An inspector was examining a certain school in geography, when, standing out in the middle of the floor, he asked the following question:

"We will suppose that this whole school is composed of water and I am an island, could any of you tell me what island I would represent?"

"The Isle of Man," was the quick reply.

Then calling the teacher to him and still remaining in the same position, he asked again: "Now suppose we both stood together, what islands would we represent?"

"Scilly Islands, sir," came the answer in a loud tone.—Stray Stories

For the tenth time that evening had they hung around each other's necks and kissed and kissed a fond farewell. COAL PILES AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD IS GROWING VERY SMALL.

Only 50,000 Tons of Hard Coal Left—Engines Burning a Mixture Now.

Less coal than at any time for many years is now stored at the yards of the Lehigh Valley Railroad in South Plainfield. The continued hold-up in the anthracite region is producing a visible effect on the vast piles which have been almost a fixture on the premises. Within the last two months the supply has been greatly depleted. A liberal estimate of the amount now on hand places the quantity at 50,000 tons of anthracite and 600,000 tons of bituminous coal. This is considered a very small storage to fall back upon. Eight weeks ago the Lehigh people were generally credited with having at South Plainfield the largest single coal heap in the world.

The straits to which the company is put for the want of hard coal may be surmised from the fact that the engine attached to the Black Diamond express, which has never before burned anything else but the anthracite article, is now compelled to fill her tenders with a consignment of soft and hard. All coal leaving the yards for immediate use is of a like mixture, being a composition of soft, rice and buckwheat, with a greater proportion of the former, except when the soft is used absolutely.

As a consequence of the fact that few shipments have been received at the yards of late, as many as half of the Hungarians, Polish and Slav laborers have been thrown out of employment. Some of the men have been kept busy recently re-piling the coal. It had been found that some of the larger mounds were rusting, causing a serious deterioration in quality. To avoid this men were put to work to make heap abot ten feet high, flattened at the top, instead of the former massive ones. No waste can be allowed as every ounce is valuable.

If the strike is not settled by the beginning of September the Lehigh will not have enough hard coal left to build a single fire beneath a single boiler.

LITERARY.

The Century has come into possession of four separate original contemporary documents relating to the West Indian disasters, which are in the nature of "finds," and which the editor claims are likely to make the August Century, in which they will appear, "for all time to come a mine of trustworthy evidence relating to these events." Three of the writers had narrow escapes and all three made most careful observations of the volcanic phenomena.

There are several really good fiction stories in the August Success, chief among them being "The Little Bear Who Grew," by Henry Wallace Phillips, the author of the popular "Red Saunders." It is a humorous tale with plenty of snap and plot. John Oxenham's "A Hero in Spite of Himself," is a stirring tale of missionary life in the South Sea Islands. Miss Zona Gale, the poetess, has made the homely girl a heroine. In "The Wallflower," she tells of the disappointments, meditations, and heartbreakings of a plain-featured but cultured girl, at a ball where she was obliged to sit and watch others dance. This is one of the cleverest stories of the year. Professor Max Nordau has been added to The Success list of contributors, and the August number contains the first installment of his new article, "The Stimulus of Ambition." The new industry for American young men, scientific forestry, is described in close detail by Frank Hix Fayant. There is a charming natural history sketch, entitled "The Struggles of a Whitefish," by that clever disciple of the woods, William Davenport Hulbert. Lyman J. Gage, the ex-secretary of the United States treasury, writes interestly of his own boyhood—a tale of struggle and perseverance. The editorials in this number are by Baron Eiichi Shibusawa, Edwin Markham and Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis.

NO DIVIDEND YET.

President Baer, of Reading System, Refuses to Talk on the Subject.

Regarding the subject of the next semi-annual dividend on Reading preferred stock, President George F. Baer, of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, declines to say anything for publication. It has been expected that the directors would meet on the third Wednesday in July and declare either 1½ or 2 per cent. dividend. No meeting of the board has even been called for the month of August, and there is much doubt about the board declaring the regular 2 per cent. semi-annual. Such a declaration would result in the dissolution of the voting trust which is composed of J. Pierpont Morgan and Frederic P. Olcott, of New York, and C. S. W. Packard, of Philadelphia.

HOW THUGS HIDE WEAPONS.

Carry Them Everywhere Except in the Place Where They Are Supposed to Be.

"There seems to be one lesson that men in the service never learn," said a veteran policeman in discussing the murder of Detective Patrick Duffy, according to the Chicago Inter Ocean, "and that is that the gun-fighting crook, who is ready to shoot to avert arrest, never hides his weapon in his hip pocket. Still the average policeman, in attempting to capture a known desperate criminal, is generally content with a frisk of what is known as the 'pistol pocket.'

"Nearly every officer who has met unexpected death, injury, or danger while attempting arrests has been taken unawares by the production of weapons from unexpected places. 'Billy' Halloran, one of the bravest men the Chicago police department ever knew, had thoroughly searched Mike Lynch, whom he had arrested on a serious charge. At least he thought so. They had gone several blocks on the way to the station when Lynch drew a revolver and shot Halloran dead. It is believed by some that he had the weapon in his hat.

"Gun-fighting crooks carry their implements everywhere except in the receptacles provided by the tailors. Up their sleeves, under their trousers' belts, under their arm-pits and even in their shoes and other places where a careless search will not reveal them. But since the shooting of Duffy the detectives, in dealing with desperate men, are more vigilant in searching for weapons."

INDIANS OF WELSH ORIGIN.

Customs and Language of Aborigines Indicate Descent from Europeans.

Of late there has been considerable interest manifested in Great Britain relative to the Welsh settlers in the United States. The matter, however, lacks the great interest caused in the eighteenth century by the statement that a tribe of Welsh Indians had been discovered, states the Chicago Chronicle. In the seventeenth century John Josselyn, in his "Voyages to New England," mentioned that the customs of the inhabitants resembled those of ancient Britons, and Sir Thomas Herbert, another traveler of the same date, in his travels, gave Welsh words in use among these Indians.

A century later reports from several traders and others were received of an Indian tribe that possessed manuscript, spoke Welsh and retained ceremonies of Christian worship. Among other information then published was the report of Capt. Abraham Chaplain, of Kentucky, that his garrison near the Missouri had been visited by Indians who conversed in Welsh with some "Welsh," and which the editor claims are likely to make the August Century, in which they will appear, "for all time to come a mine of trustworthy evidence relating to these events." PRAISE FOR CONGRESSMAN

NEWARK NEWS COMMENDS FOWLER IN STRONG EDITORIAL.

What He Has Done in Improving Currency System—The People Will Appreciate It.

There is nothing like true praise and so Congressman Fowler must feel that his labors have not been in vain, after all, when the largest and most important newspaper in the State bestows upon him well deserved praise. When the Newark News commends any public man, one can be fully assured that that newspaper means it. It has made its policy of independence so well known that any words of praise for any public man are recognized as being the sincere belief of that journal and not published through any partizan reasons.

The Newark News recently published the following editorial, commendatory of Congressman Fowler:

"Mr. Fowler, who honors New Jersey in being probably the man of strongest financial genius in Congress, will not remit his campaign in favor of a more scientific banking and currency system. More power to his elbow in this important duty. It is the man who works in season and out of season that finally achieves, and the question, one of the most complex and obscure which the statesman has to consider, exacts that the public themselves must be educated before much weight of public opinion can force legislative action. That the Washington Solons will wake still they are kicked into it is the present outlook. They are very much in the moral plight of those college youths, who take the easiest electives in the curriculum on which they can obtain the coveted sheepskin.

"Mr. Fowler is thoroughly a believer in the intelligence of the people, of the plain people, and of their capacity and desire to grasp the essential points of a great question, when they are lucidly set forth. It is said that when he explained the full bearing of his bill to a caucus gathering of his party, they yawned and confessed they could not fully grasp it, refraining from saying that they did not wish to accept it and preferred to let well enough alone. Many speakers at the various bankers' conventions which have been recently held showed that, though presumptively trained by habit to think on such subjects and to test them by the course of practice, they did not perceive the exact relation of the Fowler theories and their application to conditions, mattesp which the author of the bill had elucidated with great force and clearness.

"A large majority of the writers on the sound money newspapers have shown in their discussion that they recognized succulently the force and value of Mr. Fowler's argument. These have, no doubt, contributed in considerable measure to clearing up some of the darkness which clings to minds fettered by the habit of making a fetish of the present system, around which war memories cast a halo, and which has proved to be like Ezekiel's image, gold and brass tottering on feet of clay. The campaign of education must go on to get this idol dethroned, and Mr. Fowler is wise in distributing his great speech with those important additions, which he did not deliver on the floor of debate, directly into the hands of the people. Several hundreds of thousands of Congressional Records containing it will be scattered broadcast, and the matter will also be issued in convenient pamphlet form. This will be done entirely at Mr. Fowler's private expense.

"The object is worthy the effort, and the author is certain that the experiment will register corresponding profit in its effect on the minds of intelligent Americans."

SAYS HE WAS ROBBED.

Jewelry Disappeared From Pockets of Nathan Feinburg While Asleep.

Gold and jewels occupied the pocket of Nathan Feinburg when he lay down to rest at 518 West Third street Saturday night. Sunday morning, he says, the valuables had disappeared. Now the police have been asked to interfere. Nathan tells of a diamond studded gold watch, a jeweled locket and a few other trifles which he carried loosely about his clothes and he fears the sight of his wealth may have aroused the cupidity of some boulevardier, who committed the theft.

PLENTY OF BOOTY THERE

BUT THE BURGLARS MADE BUT A VERY SMALL HAUL.

Visited Sycamore Avenue Residence of C. E. Ball, But Were Frightened Away While Working.

Burglars paid an unwelcome visit to the residence of Charles E. Ball, superintendent of the Prudential Insurance Company, on Sycamore avenue, late Saturday night or early Sunday morning. After vainly attempting to pick the lock of the back door an entrance was effected through a rear window. The burglars were evidently experts in the business for the window was unlocked and the screen taken out without doing the least damage, not even scratching the new paint on the side of the house.

The hallway was the first part of the house to receive particular attention. The pockets of several coats hanging on the rack were rifled and a small amount of change taken. From a pocketbook belonging to Mrs. Ball a little over $2 was procured. The burglars then paid a visit to the dining room and turned dopey tury everything in a number of drawers.

At this point they must have been disturbed in their work, for just one drawer—that in which some valuable plated ware was stored—was overlooked, and the burglars contented themselves with appropriating a silver soup ladle that lay on the table and a pair of gold-rimmed eye glasses, belonging to Mr. Ball's brother.

Had the thieves gone to the second story they would have secured a rich harvest, because it happened that Mr. Ball had a large sum of money in the house that night. Mrs. Ball's diamond ring, and other valuable jewelry was lying on the dressing case. It is probable that a noise from the outside caused the burglars to make a hasty exit.

Novel Paper Weights.

J. Herbert Case, secretary and treasurer of the Plainfield Trust Company, has just received from the Federal Sugar and Refining Company, for which the trust company is the transfer agent, two glass jars filled with raw and granulated sugar. It was produced on July 1 and is the first produced by the sugar company. The jars are sealed, labelled and tied with fancy ribbon. Mr. Case will use them for paper weights.

Another Excursion Deficit.

The total deficit for the annual excursion of the First Presbyterian, Congregational, Park Avenue Baptist churches, of Plainfield and the Dunellen Presbyterian church, was $90, or $24 for each church. The amount for each church is so small that there will be little difficulty in raising it.

Enjoyable Trip.

You will find yourself in good company if you go with Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., on its annual excursion to Asbury Park on American Day, August 14, and there is not the slightest doubt but what you will enjoy the trip. There are twenty-one Councils from Essex county that will run excursions to the shore that day.

LIFE AT THE NETHERWOOD

GUESTS TOOK PART IN SACRED CONCERT LAST SUNDAY

Soprano Solos by Mrs. Joseph Lux, of Hoboken, and Piano Solos by Mrs. Bertram Sears.

Usual success attended the regular weekly hop at the Hotel Netherwood Saturday evening. The delightfully cool atmosphere made the occasion specially conductive to the enjoyment of the waltz and the two-step.

In addition to the hotel guests a very large number of Plainfield people were present. At the intermission the whole company enjoyed the hospitality of the management.

Great interest was manifested in the sacred concert given last evening. Besides a particularly bright card executed by the orchestra two of the hotel guests were down on the programme for four numbers. A soprano solo, Millard's "Ave Maria," was most delightfully rendered by Mrs. Joseph Lux, of Hoboken. The rendition of this piece brought all the gathering was an audience of no small magnitude. An encore of the solo was demanded and Mrs. Lux graciously responded.

The sixth number on the programme, "Poeme D'amour" was a polyphonic composition, of the emotional order, and intensely expressive. The composer, Mrs. Bertram Sears, of New York, who played the accompaniment, was warmly congratulated by many of musical ability. Mrs. Sears also accompanied in another trio, "Jager's Abschied," Weidemann, with Mr. Landelt, clarionet, and Mr. dePool, cello. A second soprano solo, which completely captivated the house, "Angel's Serenade," Braga, was sung by Mrs. Lux, obligato, Mr. Hollinger.

In South Carolina.

Edward B. Ryder, of Central avenue, returned Saturday from Holly Hill, S. C., where he went in the interest of the Santee Land and Improvement Company, which owns 40,000 acres of land at Holly Hill. Mr. Ryder brought home with him a number of photographs of timber belts, plantations, cotton gins, etc., all of which are very interesting. The trip covered a period of eight days.

GREENWICH VILLAGE

Vestiges of the Old Dutch Town Still in Existence.

A Part of New York City Which Reminds the Visitor of the Happy Days of Van Twiller and His Chums.

[Special New York Letter.]

CERTAIN localities, like certain types of people, have an individuality that time, conditions and environments cannot efface. Greenwich village, in the very center of busiest New York, as an example, is still strong in many of the same characteristics that attracted the attention of that particular Van Twiller who landed from the Southberg in 1633.

Some of the old Dutch houses that were standing then are still intact. The sky-towering buildings rise about them on every side, but their quaint outlines make them appear like the part of another age. One by one these ancient landmarks are being torn down, giving way to the modern structures, but despite the rapid encroachment made upon the once famous village it will be many years before all vestiges of it will be removed. But when the last building of the old Dutch town is razed one peculiarity will remain and that will be the intricacy of the streets.

No village was ever laid out like Greenwich. The streets were made as they became necessary to the convenience or perhaps the happiness of the men who constructed them. They were never planned. At times it would appear to the casual observer that some attempt was made to have the thoroughfares parallel, but before many blocks are traveled this idea will be dissipated, for there is a tendency to spread apart and take unreasonable and unwarranted turns. If a building be encountered the street seems to have been forgotten; but another one is commenced on the other side under a different name. To the stranger it may be rather confusing when he learns that Fourth street crosses Tenth, Eleventh is at right angles with Twelfth, and meets with a few other topographical inconsistencies equally perplexing, but to the Hollanders who contrived the maze it seemed sensible enough.

Greenwich village—aside from the Battery—is the oldest habitation of white men on the island of Manhattan. Reference is made to it in the Dutch records as the Indian village of Sappokanees, and for more than a century it was known by this name and also as the Bossen Bouerie—meaning "farm in the woods." In the time of the English occupancy it was called Greenwich village, by which name the locality comprising the old boundaries is known to-day. The love of New Yorkers to nickname localities as well as people has preserved it theoretically from a historic standpoint.

But there is something about the old village that the press of business cannot entirely wipe away. The old Dutch settings to the picture have faded these 200 years, but enough of the houses remain to preserve certain features of the original place to bring it out in strong contrast to its metropolitan surroundings. To one not used to it the effect is rather startling to suddenly pass from a tall structure, full of the life and bustle of modern commercialism, and stand face to face with a low brick building that was the home of some well-to-do Dutch merchant. There are the solid stone steps with the iron railing, the little window panes and the low eave from the gable just as they were when Mein Herr and his good frau came out of a summer evening to get a breath of air from the waters of the canal that rested placidly in the bed now covered by Canal street.

Even the customs of those days still hover over the place. After the Dutch evacuated the island Greenwich village became the fashionable residence district of the new city and remained so until a comparatively few years ago. In fact some of the oldest families of New York still live within the classic borders of the town. That the wealth of the city was concentrated there is evidenced by the rich carving on the doors, the heavy brass knockers and the massive pillars on the sides. There is still a class of eminent citizens who tenaciously cling to the belief that there is no New York outside of these precincts.

If one will wander along Downing street he will see a fair example of the old houses. There is one I have in mind with a broad piazza overgrown with ivy. There is a dormer window over the roof of the porch, and an old chimney built on the outside of the brick wall. Then in another thoroughfare there is a long flight of stone stairs leading to a front door of solid oak with quaint carvings. One need but close one's eyes to imagine at the top a pretty English girl in Gainsborough hat and light summer dress coming down to meet a young beau of the time attired in a long frock coat and bell-shaped beaver hat.

But these houses are only a few of the many that still remain. And with them has been retained an individual society that in many respects smacks of that old school of gentlemen and ladies that marked the original village as the home of the upper-tendom. You will find there to-day a society that is as marked and as different from any other to be found in New York as it was when Gov. Van Twiller, in true aldermanic style, annexed to his own personal use the greater part of the old Ninth ward.

Greenwich was a flourishing country seat when two settlements of a much humbler sort were formed on the North river. One was called Lower Greenwich, at the foot of Brannan street, now Spring, and the other, Upper Greenwich, at the foot of what is now Christopher street. It was then known as Skinner road, and fully a block of the original wooden houses that were built on it remained until a few years ago. They were known to have been erected as far back as 1796, and are probably the houses indicated on the Ratzen map.

When the state prison was built it brought to the upper village what would be called in the present time a boom. This building stood at the foot of Amos, now Tenth street, and cost $200,000, regarded as an enormous sum in those days. The last of the prisoners was transferred from there to Sing Sing in 1829. In the past few years the residents of Sing Sing objected to their city being called by the name by which the prison was known, and, after considerable political work, succeeded in having the residential portion of the town changed to Ossinging. But there was a different feeling in Greenwich. The people there took pride in their penal institution, and regarded it as one of the principal attractions of their village.

Gradually Greenwich was incorporated into the greater town. By degrees the boundary lines became lost. The city spread onward to the north. Lower Greenwich was absorbed. Upper Greenwich was lost. Manhattanville became a part of the overgrown metropolis that swept away out of all bounds of all anticipations, and skirted onto the borders of Westchester. And so the city grew, and Greenwich became but an item in the mighty whole.

To-day it has only imaginary boundaries. It is Greenwich village only in name.

FREDERICK BOYD STEVENSON.

And Sol Ran.

The late Sol Smith Russell had three young nieces living in the west, of whom he was very fond. On one occasion, so the story goes, he took the youngest of them for a walk and bought her some candy on the agreement that it was not to be eaten until they reached her home. The started, but before they had gone far, the little girl exposed the uncle's wun!" Her uncle declined, and there was long pleading, all to no purpose. Finally, the little girl stopped, knelt down on the pavement, and offered up the petition: "Dod, please make Uncle Sol wun." "It was simply a question of my losing my dignity, or her losing faith in God," said Mr. Russell, in relating the incident, "so we ran as fast as we could for home."—Argonaut.

WERE WEDDED AT MILLVILLE

MISS GRACE B. PIERSON, OF DUER STREET, MARRIED TO H. L. MARTIN.

Wedding Was a Quiet One and a Surprise to the Friends and Relative of the Young Couple.

Much to the surprise of the many friends of the couple, announcement was made Monday that Miss Grace B. Pierson, of Duer street, and Herbert L. Martin, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Jersey City, were married by Rev. H. W. Barras, of the North Baptist church, at Millville, on Monday, July 21. The affair was a quiet one and there were no attendants.

The bride and groom are both well-known in this city, where they have lived for some time. Mrs. Martin formerly lived in south Jersey, but for a few years past has been a resident of the borough. Of late she has been filling the position of typewriter and stenographer in the law office of W. S. Anglemant. She is a member of the First Baptist church, and very active in the Christian Endeavor Society and Sunday-school work.

The groom is now on the reportorial staff of the Jersey City Journal. He was to have reported the State Christian Endeavor convention for that paper, when he was taken ill and was obliged to give up his plans. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Martin, of the borough.

Prior to accepting his present position he was engaged in the shoe business in this city as a clerk for Dosne & Edsall. Both he and his wife are popular in a large circle of friends. The marriage is a great surprise to all, including the couple's relatives. They were to have been married in September, but a change in their plans resulted in an earlier date being set for the affair. Mr. and Mrs. Martin will live in Jersey City.

WHEELS SAVED.

Police Captured Them Just Before the Thief Had Chance to Take Them to New York.

Prompt police work probably prevented two Plainfield bicycles from being stolen Saturday night, U. B. Crane reported to headquarters that his son Robert had had a wheel stolen, and search was at once instituted. Officer McCarthy found the wheel at the North Avenue station a short time later, with another belonging to E. B. Hedden.

Harry Carey, the night baggageman, told how a man had come to the station and asked to have a wheel checked to New York. The would-be passenger, however, refused to bring the bicycle to the baggage room, but wished Carey to take it from its position against the wall. While the matter was being argued, McCarthy arrived and the man slunk away. Young Crane immediately identified his bicycle. No trace of the thief was regained.

DRAGGED FROM THE WATER

HEROIC RESCUE RECENTLY PERFORMED AT ASBURY PARK.

H. R. Reiter, the Famous Princeton Halfback, Saved a Man's Life While Swimming in Ocean.

H. R. Reiter, the famous Princeton football player, who completes his course of study in the Theological Seminary at Princeton next June, and who has been visiting Plainfield friends this summer, performed a heroic deed at Asbury Park early in the season which won for him great praise. Mr. Reiter is very fond of swimming, especially in the ocean. While at the Park he rescued a man from drowning under circumstances that were exceedingly difficult.

The man who narrowly escaped death in the briny deep, was a novice and was at the shore for the day. Mr. Reiter happened to be in swimming at the same time and was not far from the drowning man. The latter gave an unearthly shriek as he went down the first time. This attracted Mr. Reiter's attention and he started for the drowning man. In the meantime the stranger went down the second time and landed on a sand-bar.

When Mr. Reiter reached the spot he made a dive under the water and discovered the man in a doubled-up position and with not sufficient strength to help himself. He seemed to be imbedded in the sand and Mr. Reiter was obliged to make two attempts to release his grasp. The second time he was successful and he brought him to the top in a completely exhausted condition. It happened that there was a boat nearby and the man was placed therein and brought to shore, when Mr. Reiter, after much difficulty, succeeded in resuscitating the man. His condition was so serious that a penknife had to be used to pry open his jaws.

Those who witnessed the affair were loud in their praise of Mr. Reiter's performance. It was claimed that the life-saving men were so far away at the time that they could not have possibly saved the man.

SHORE TROLLEY.

New Jersey Central Traction Company Has Filed Map Showing the Line It is About to Build.

The New Jersey Central Traction Company has filed a map in the secretary of State's office at Trenton, showing the route of seventeen miles of track it is about to lay between Keyport and Red Bank.

Starting at Keyport, the trolley line will cross Chingarora Creek, following the south side of the Atlantic Highlands branch of the Central Railroad of New Jersey in an easterly direction to Kenasbury. From there it will run southeast over a private right of way to a point near New Monmouth.

At this point the road branches, one line skirting Sandy Hook Bay, touching Atlantic Highlands and other points, and thence southerly to Red Bank. The other branch will run direct from New Monmouth to Red Bank, the two forming an irregular triangle, connecting with the single line from Keyport.

Mrs. Robert Lourie has entirely recovered from a recent illness.

POLICE BEAT THE FIREMEN

Remarkable Game Played on St. Mary's Grounds Between Two City Departments.

SCORE WAS 18 TO 6.

Firemen Couldn't Hit Special Winn's Delivery, While Police Infield Was Like a Stone Wall—Guardians of Peace Were Heroes at the Bat—How the Game Was Played.

Three hundred enthusiastic spectators witnessed the local firemen's baseball team play its initial game and receive a severe drubbing at the hands of the municipal police nine Tuesday afternoon. It was clearly seen from the outset that the fire fighters were playing out of their class as the blue coats walked right away from them. To quote one of the members of the discomfitted team "the pressure was too low for the proposition they were up against." The final score was 18 to 6 and of the latter, the firemen made four in the last inning. It was played on the St. Mary grounds.

Both sides were provided with good pitchers, Winn for the cops and Townley for the firemen. The latter was in fine fettle and if he had received the support to which he was entitled, the result might have been different. Sixteen of the peace preservers batsmen swatted the air in their efforts to reach his deceptive out curve and when they did connect with the leather the outfielders were always in the wrong place. The coppers landed on him, however, for twenty hits one of which was a beautiful three bagger made by the jocose Jack Conroy. It should have been a home run as Jack was hampered in his base running by his immense avoirdupois. Fred Winn secured four hits and Captain Overbaugh, "Carrie" Higgins, Arthur McGinley and Moss Quass each picked off three.

The coppers' fielding was better than ever before and Short Stop McCarthy and Right Fielder Higgins outdid themselves. Winn held the opposing team down to six hits and struck out fourteen men.

"Whitey" Daley surprised everybody by his clever work on first, catching everything that came his way and some that didn't. Dan Force caught many of the patrolmen trying to steal second and Dory Larew nabbed a fly in left field that surprised himself as well as the grandstand.

Manager John Cose, of the Hope team, was prominent in center garden and showed several members of his aggregation who were spectators just how the position had ought to be played. He made a number of frantic leaps in the air after high flies which amused the small boys highly even if they didn't suit the team he was with.

On taking the bat the firemen were distinctly not at home as they couldn't seem to get the ball out of bounds. They went out in one, two, three order until the last inning when they got a "second alarm" as one of them put it and made a little spurt which netted them four runs. It was of no use, however, as it did not come quick enough to make it a ten inning game.

NEW BRIDGES.

Are Being Built by Lehigh Valley R. R. Along Its Eastern Division.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad is having new bridges constructed over its entire eastern division, reaching from Jersey City to Wilkes Barre. They are to be much larger and stronger than the present structures in order to withstand the strain from the new engines which the company recently placed in service east of Wilkes-Barre. The construction work is being done by the Phoenix and Pencoyd Bridge Company.

TO LEASE EPWORTH HOUSE

MONROE AVENUE CHURCH WILL HELP OUT THE SCHOOL BOARD.

Decided at Meeting Sunday to Rent Epworth House for Additional School Rooms.

More school room will be at the disposal of the children in the West End next term, according to the decision just reached by the Official Board of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church. At a meeting held Sunday, it was agreed that the suggestion of the Board of Education to lease the Epworth House connected with the church be followed and that the contract be drawn at once.

Some opposition to this plan existed at first among the church people, who were averse to the idea of converting their property into a public school room. After deliberation, however, the general opinion grew to be that it would be extremely ungenerous to stand in the way of a public service by refusing to accommodate the school board. As matters stand now, the Irving School is likely to be far overtaxed in the coming fall, and this will mean that many of the children belonging to the Monroe Avenue church would suffer with the other young West Enders.

Consideration of these aspects of the case led the board, at the meeting Sunday morning, to vote an unanimous approval of the plan to lease the Epworth House to the city. The details have not yet been arranged, but they will be shortly, as soon as a conference can be held between the church officials and the school board.

TARANTULA LOOSE.

Made Things Exciting at Home of William Wyman Monday.

Fear of the poisonous attack of a tarantula made life uncomfortable for Mr. and Mrs. William Wyman, of West Front street, all day Monday. Search in all possible hiding places was made for several hours without success and the anxious suspense of the young couple was not ended until late in the evening, when the insect was discovered by accident and put to death.

Providential was the escape of Mrs. Wyman from being bitten by the bug. Taking a banana from a bag, she was horrified to see the thing clinging to the end of the fruit. With admirable presence of mind, she tossed it from her, the spider seeming to land in the kitchen sink. After that, it disappeared from view until it was finally seen by Mrs. Wyman's little brother, far up on the wall of the room.

REFERRED TO SPECIAL MASTER.

Continuation of Chancery Case of the Watchung Knitting Mills.

There was a further airing of the troubles of the Watchung Knitting Mills before Vice Chancellor Stevens, Tuesday. The third appeal for a receiver on the part of Henry B. Drosn was denied but the defendant, Leo J. Studie, agreed to file an answer in a week. The Vice Chancellor referred the matter to Special Master Nelson Runyon to take account of the partnership S. S. Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer, appeared for the complainant and Winfield S. Angleman for the defendant Settled in Full.

The insurance companies have adjusted the loss on Mrs. Sebring's property on West Front street which was destroyed the time of the fire in the Babcock building. The companies settled in full, as the loss was a total one. It is the intention of Mrs. Sebring to have a suitable building erected in place of the one destroyed and it will be arranged for stores and flats.

Barn Near Finderne Burned.

Somerville, August 6—During the heavy storm, Sunday night, the large barn on the farm of Mrs. A. A. Boyle at Finderne was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. All the contents, including summer crops that had just been gathered, were burned. The live stock was saved. The loss will aggregate $5,000; partially insured.

TELEGRAPH IN BETTER QUARTERS AT STATION

Model Telegraph Office Along Line of Jersey Central Now Located in This City.

OFFICE IS UP-TO-DATE.

LOCAL MANAGER CHAS. H. SCHERMERHORN NOW WELL EQUIPPED.

Has Been in That Position for Thirty-Two Years and in the Old Quarters Since 1876—Description of His New Quarters.

To have his new quarters made the model telegraph office along the line of the Central Railroad in point of equipment is the laudable ambition which promises to be realized for Local Manager Charles Schermerhorn. So great is the improvement in the location and furnishings of the room into which the paraphernalia of the local master of the sounder and key have been removed that the place will easily rank among the first class offices of the railway system.

All the fixings of the office are strictly new and up-to-date. Desk room, instruments, resonators and the other accoutrement of the craft are all that could be desired. The new switch-board, with its seven wires, is especially a modern fixture, being equipped with an attachment of fuses, designed to act as arrestors, to prevent lightning from running down to the board and burning out the wires.

Clearer view of the tracks, to add to the efficiency of the telegraph service, has been gained by cutting down the bushes in the park at the east end of the station and by removing a tree which stood in the way of an open vision along the west. The old new stand also will be taken away from the western end and the high hedge at the extreme east of the upper park will be trimmed to the level of the fence. The new bow window, where the two railroad instruments are placed, also is designed to give the operator a better sight along the line. The three Western Union instruments are at the upper window.

More room is enjoyed by the operators in the new office. Another advantage not possessed in the old quarters is the absence of the afternoon sun, thus adding much to comfort and coolness. A new convenience is in the shape of a stationary wash stand, which is now being installed. Additional means of entrance and exit also will be furnished by the reopening of a door on North avenue, as soon as the steps can be placed in position.

Thirty-two years ago, in 1870, Mr. Schermerhorn entered upon the position which he still holds. At that time also he was in the eastern end of the depot, where the telegraph office remained until 1876, when the new building was competed. Then quarters were take up in the place from which the office was removed on Monday.

As assistant to the chief operator at present is Wesley Randolph, whose father was one of the first messenger boys under Mr. Schermerhorn in 1870. The present staff includes Edward Golden, the night operator, and five messenger boys.

TEN DOLLARS TOO MUCH.

Bound Brook Domestic Arrested for Increasing Amount of Check.

Bound Brook, August 6—Martha Morgan, a colored girl employed by J. A. Bailey, was arrested yesterday by Officer Sebring for raising a $6 check given her by Mrs. Nina G. Bailey to $16. Justice Brampton committed her to the jail at Somerville to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The complaint was made by H. G. Herbert, cashier of the Bound Brook Bank. The bank paid out the money before noticing that the check had been raised, as the girl was in the habit of presenting a check for $16 every month.

Up in a Balloon.

John Dorber and William Schorb, of this city, have formed the Central Balloon Company of America, for the purpose of managing accensions in various parts of the country. They have already contracted for eight accensions to take place this season at Boynton Beach Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Pleasant Day at Lake.

A large number of Plainfielders took in the New Jersey Central excursion to Lake Hopatcong Sunday and had a very pleasant day. There was scarcely any rain at the Lake.

WORKING ON NEW TROLLEY

LINE WHICH WILL CONNECT NEW BRUNSWICK AND TRENTON.

Claimed That Entire Line Will be Open by September 1, and Cars Run Every Half Hour.

Work upon the Trenton and New Brunswick Railroad Company's branch from the main line, at Trenton, east of Greenwood cemetery, to the intersection with the Trenton Street Railway Company's tracks at the entrance to the Interstate fair grounds is progressing nicely. Several hundred feet of the grading has been completed and ties have been distributed over the entire route.

This branch will be about 4,000 feet long and will not be the real Trenton terminus of the line, but rather the fair ground terminus.

The entire line is nearing completion, and will be ready for running by the first of September, it is expected.

Double poles have been used throughout for the stringing of the trolley wire and this will give a wide clearance on each side of the track and do away with all danger of coming in contact with a nearby trolley pole or fence.

No wire has been strung yet on the Trenton end of the road, but it will not be more than a month's work to do that counting in what has already been accomplished on the other end.

It is evidently the intention of the company to strike in towards the center of Trenton a little later as the track is now completed for more than 1,000 feet past the intersection with the branch line.

It was not intended, at first, to run the line to the fair grounds, but it was considered desirable afterward because of the travel during fair time, not only this year but in the future as well.

The company claims that it will be able to run the entire distance between the fair grounds and Milltown, about twenty-four miles, in an hour, because of the levelness and straightness of the track. Cars forty-five feet in length are to be used, and they will probably run about forty miles an hour or faster.

It was stated by one of the representatives of the company that cars will be run a half-hour apart, but it is more probable that they will be operated every hour during the fall and winter unless some unexpected traffic develops.

Without striking but one village in twenty-three miles, and that being Dayton, it is difficult to see where there will be enough traffic to warrant the half-hour schedule.

BARNS BURNED.

Total Loss for Frank Nelson in a Fire at His Barns at Piscataway, Tuesday Evening.

New Market, August 6—Fire of a mysterious origin burned down all the barns and outbuildings on Frank O. Nelson's farm in Piscataway last evening about 8:30 o'clock. All the buildings and part of the contents, together with all the crops which had been gathered in, were destroyed. All the live stock was saved except a few chickens.

The fire was under good headway when discovered, and all appearances point to the work of incendiaries. A large crowd assembled and formed a bucket brigade, but could do little against the flames. Mr. Nelson's loss will be $5,000.

About the same time, fire broke out in the barns and hay barracks of A. D. Vermeule, near the landing bridge at the Raritan. Here, too, a total loss of buildings and crops was the result. Both parties were protected by insurance. It is believed that both fires were the work of incendiaries.

Sixteen Endeavorers Went.

Sixteen Plainfielders took the trip to Westfield last Tuesday with the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, which had charge of the religious services at the Fresh Air Camp. Edgar Sheppard was the leader, speaking upon the need and work of faith. The meeting was interesting and profitable to the visitors and to the twenty-seven mothers who were present. This week's total of children at the camp is 110.

Was Just Adjourned.

In the McVey-Cab Company case in the Court of Chancery at Newark, yesterday, the injunction asked for was not issued as the case did not come up for a hearing, but was adjourned for two weeks when the question of an injunction will be considered. There was no hearing yesterday.

Souvenirs will be given to the scholars for attendance during the month of August.

THROWN OUT BY TROLLEY

HENRY TAYLOR SERIOUSLY INJURED IN COLLISION YESTERDAY.

Horse Said to Have Backed Wagon Into Path of Car—Chas. Graves Was Slightly Injured.

An incoming trolley car on the through line, in charge of Motorman William Brown, of East Third street, struck a wagon belonging to Charles Graves, the slater, at Richmond and East Third streets, yesterday. Graves and a colored employe, Henry Taylor, of Arlington avenue, were hurled to the roadway and rendered partly insensible.

The latter was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital where it was found in addition to a number of severe abrasions, he had suffered a fracture of the left leg. He will be detained at the institution for at least a month. Graves escaped with a few bruises.

The cause of the accident is assigned to Graves' horse backing suddenly as the car was about to pass. The vehicle was struck near the front wheels and was badly damaged. The fender just cleared the animal and it was not hurt.

HORSE FELL ON HIM.

But E. M. Laing Was Not Seriously Injured—Mr. Laing Was Trying to Stop a Runaway.

E. M. Laing, the Park avenue haberdasher, had a miraculous escape from serious injury, early Tuesday night, while endeavoring to hold a plunging horse belonging to a Mrs. Snyder, which had been left in front of his store.

The animal became frightened at a steam automobile belonging to E. T. VanBuren and made frantic efforts to run away. It was seized by Mr. Laing, who had just secured a firm hold on the bridle when the equine reared. He was thrown down and the animal fell on him but although directly underneath, he escaped with a few bruises and contusions.

On getting to its feet again, the horse ran on the sidewalk where it was captured and finally quieted by Louis M. Dunavan.

WANT NEW MANAGER.

The Eastern Bottling Co. is Having Some Trouble Over Management.

The Eastern Bottling Company is preparing to put a new manager in charge of its establishment on West Second street. Frank Linke, the present manager, claims that it is an attempt to freeze him out and says that he has the upper hand in that the license issued to him and the accounts are in his name. The counsel of the company says that Linke was running behind and that they wanted a manager who could make it pay. Linke is a stock holder in the company but he and the other stock holders cannot agree on a price for his shares.

I. C. T. Club's Outing.

Plans for an outing were discussed at the meeting of the I. C. T. Club, last evening, the objective point to be Riverside Park. A committee was appointed to have the matter in charge and to make arrangements for trolley transportation, should the scheme prove feasible. With regard to securing a special car for the members to accompany Franklin Council on the excursion to Asbury Park next week, another committee was named to superintend.

Sunday's Preacher.

Rev. Dr. Stillwell, of Minneapolis, will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church Sunday morning and evening. Dr. Stillwell preached at this church last summer while in the east on his vacation and he made a favorable impression.

Herman Schwed, of Westervelt avenue, is enjoying an outing at Porter's Lake, Pa.

Frank Schneurlin, of Somerset street, is visiting friends at Paterson for the week.

Herbert Smith, of West Fifth street, has accepted a position with a New York firm.

NO CANDIDATE BUT LANNING

The Delegates Did Not Name Favorite Sons at Fourth Congressional Convention.

HARMONY PREVAILED.

But Former Chancery Clerk L. A. Thompson's Name Was Not Mentioned—Change in Somerset's Representation on the Congressional Committee—Hegeman Named.

Flemington, August 6—Harmony prevailed at the afternoon session of the Fourth District Congressional convention here yesterday. No opposition of any kind developed to the Mercer county choice, Judge Lanning, and he was named unanimously. Contrary to expectation, there was no complimentary vote given any other nominee, but both Somerset and Hunterdon cast the full delegation vote for the Trenton man.

Somerset county made a change in its representative upon the Congressional committee. The county caucus was held yesterday morning before the convention assembled, with Mayor N. B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, as chairman. On motion of Thomas Doud, former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of North Plainfield, was unanimously elected to membership on the Congressional committee, supplanting Charles Place, also a former mayor of the same borough.

Partly as a result of the Somerset caucus, the expected selection of former Senator Thompson for chairman of the convention was not even mentioned. The gathering was called to order by Former Senator Large, of this place, and Charles Place, of North Plainfield, was chosen chairman. The secretary was J. A. Metz, of Somerville.

Upon the committees, North Plainfield received recognition as follows: On resolutions, N. B. Smalley and Frank Rowley; on rules, Thomas Doud. After Judge Lanning's name had been put forward by Mercer, N. B. Smalley, for Somerset, moved the nomination be made unanimous, which was done, as no other name was mentioned.

After the nomination, Senator John Kean, who was one of the visitors, made a speech, and the candidate and Senator Stokes, of Cumberland, also made addresses. The members of the convention then marched about the town behind a band, displaying much enthusiasm over the harmonious workings of the day.

FAMILY HOODOO.

Third Son Killed by Accident on the Railroad—Funeral Tuesday.

Somerville, August 6—The funeral of Frank Winner, thirty years of age, was held in the Methodist church here yesterday. Rev. Dr. R. S. Jamison, of Raritan, officiated. Winner was a brakeman on a Pennsylvania Railroad drill engine and was killed at Waverly Saturday. A car mounted a frog and he was thrown under the wheels and horribly mangled.

Two of his brothers were killed while in the employ of the New Jersey Central and his father, Stephen Winner, of Newark, while he lived here, was so badly injured by the cars that he was laid up for a year. The railroads have been the family's hoodoo.

WANT TRAINS STOPPED.

Guests at Hotel Netherwood Petition for Better Evening Service.

Guests at the Hotel Netherwood have directed a communication to C. M. Burt, general passenger agent of the New Jersey Central, expressing their appreciation of the excellent morning express train service with which they are favored between Netherwood and New York. The guests would like a corresponding service in the evening and to this end petition that the trains leaving New York at 4:40 and 5:10, preferably the 5:10, be allowed to stop at the Netherwood station.

Drawing Postponed.

The drawing for the parlor lamp by Protective Conclave, No. 505, Improved Order Heptasophs, has been postponed until September 2.

Irving Clark and his sister, Mrs. John Swan, of Crescent avenue, have gone to Walters' Park, Pa., for a few weeks.

The Languages and the Religions of Africa

There Are Many Varieties of Both in the Great Dark Continent.

We are but just beginning to have detailed information of an authoritative kind concerning the various peculiarities of physique, religion and language of the many tribes of people who inhabit Africa. So numerous are the branches of the African race that a map of the country must be divided and subdivided many times before all the sections can be shown; and they never can be correctly presented for the reason that the boundary lines between the tribes have in many instances been swept away by intermarriage, wars, or other intermingling and by the formation of half-breed races, so that while the tribes and races of Africa differ radically from each other they are oftentimes so gradually blended that to establish an arbitrary line between them is impossible.

The colored peoples of Africa may first be divided into three classes, each of which has a distinct origin. These are: The Northern and Northwestern race, the Western, and the Eastern. Some authorities insist there is still a fourth, separate and distinct race to times placed the pygmie tribes of central and Southern Africa.

Of the Northern race the Berbers are an excellent example. Their features are small and regular, their lips thin, their hair long and their foreheads indicate intelligence beyond the ordinary African. They are supposed to have sprung from the Caucasian race.

The Western race in the flat-nosed, thick-lipped negro with which the world is best familiar. The Eastern race are Malays from Madagascar. Under the fourth division are sometimes placed the pigmy tribes of central Africa and the Bushmen of the south.

The Caucasian race may properly be divided into two sections; The Hamitic and the Semitic, the former being the most important. The Hamitic division may be taken to include the inhabitants of Somali Land, Gallas, and some of the inhabitants of Abyssinia; while the Semitic race may be taken to include the inhabitants of Algeria, Tripoli, Tunis, certain portions of the Nile valley, the Soudan, the Sahara, and portions of Abyssinia.

The Mongolian race in Africa shows no especial divisions, being chiefly composed, as we have said, of Malays from Madagascar who are tainted with negro blood.

The next negro race is the interesting one and must be many times subdivided into tribes and clans. The first great general divisions are: The Bantu, the Guinea negroes, the negroes of the equatorial regions and the negroes of the Nile. The attempt to separate each of these four divisions into the various tribes which belong to it would be a task far greater than that of classifying all of the many tribes of American Indians. However, it may be well at this point to add that the Hottentot, the Kaffir, the Zulu, the Matabili—all especially well known to us—belong properly to the fourth division of the negro. They live in South Africa and are at home in the wilds where the Bushman dwells.

There are in Africa probably not fewer than 300 separate and distinct tribes of negroes and each of these has its own language. So varied have these tongues seemed that few attempts to classify them have been made; nevertheless it is thought they may be traced to five distinct heads or groups. Of these five, the first two are the Hamitic and Semitic tongues, while the remaining three are purely African. Of the latter the first group comprises the various Nigritian languages, spoken by the inhabitants of that territory known as the Equatorial Belt, the second includes the great Bantu and Kaffir divisions and the third includes the tongue of the Hottentots and Bushmen.

The real African religion is essentially the religion of the heathen. It is the outgrowth of fear and reverence for Nature as it appears to the child of the woods. Innumerable rites, oftimes of an abominable nature form the basis of this religion. Some of the rites and ceremonies are directly traceable to the ceremonial religions of the east which have somehow filtered to the heart of Africa, mixing themselves with the crude religious conceptions of the ignorant blacks and producing a system of rites that are sometimes grotesque, but more often revolting to the civilized sense. The philosophy of Shamanism, which recognizes a supreme deity who is assisted by a great many lesser gods, good and bad, is found to be a prevalent doctrine in some portions. But so crude does it become, in some sections especially, that it is nothing more nor less than fetichism—that which in its worst forms there is no more horrible system of so-called religious ceremonies. The fetich worship requires an almost infinite number of idols, each of which is worshiped under the supposition that it contains the spirit of the particular diety it represents, and whose aid or mercy the suppliant desires to invoke. The most hideous sacrifices of human beings have taken place as incidental to this sort of idol worship. No one will ever know how many lives have been taken to appease the wrath of these so-called gods.

In religion, however, Africa is coming to reflect the doctrines of the outside world. The religions of the east and the religions of the west vie with each other there. As a result Africa is becoming more Christian and a good deal Mohammedan. The Mohammedan religion with its early foothold in the northeast has gradually spread until its influence is strongly felt in the great upper half of the dark continent. Christianity has made some inroads on the coast in the west and south; and the great interior remains in its primal condition—devoted to Nature worship mixed with a thousand crude conceptions of the heathen.

The religious concepts of the various negro tribes in those portions of central and southern Africa where neither Mohammedism nor Christianity has penetrated, is governed largely by their degrees of intelligence. The tribes highest in the scale undoubtedly worship a supreme being, whom they see a great way off, through the lesser deities which are at hand and whose images they can see and handle. Sometimes these deities are represented by rivers and trees, and the latter, then known as fetiches, are supposed to contain the spirit of the God appealed to. The ability to distinguish between this unseen spirit and the material image in which it is supposed to dwell, varies in different tribes according to the position of the tribe in the scale of intelligence. The Bushmen and other low types have no nice distinctions to make. The Bushman regards his little fetich image as itself mysteriously powerful, looking to it for good fortune in much the same way that persons in more civilized countries have regarded the left hind leg of a graveyard rabbit, though of course with all the honest intensity of which he is capable.

It has been declared by some travelers that there are tribes in Africa which have no religion whatever; but this is hardly probable. More reliable authorities aver that there is no tribe which has not its superstitions, concerning mysterious power even though they know not how to define this power; and these superstitions concerning the common mysteries of life and of Nature invariably find some expression in rites of worship however crude.

Story of Western Farm Life.

Eleanor Gates is a young western woman who has done some good work in literature within recent years. She likes especially to weave her early ideas, gathered on a Dakota farm, where she lived during her childhood, into her stories, and does it with wonderful success. She has but recently completed a story entitled "The Biography of a Prairie Girl," which is said to be far superior to anything ever attempted by her before. The time of the story is about 25 years ago, and into it is woven every phase of western farm life of that time, attended as it was by all the hardships and pleasures of the frontier. The story is to be run as a serial in the Century Magazine, beginning with the August number.

Rat Plague in Jamaica.

The rats of the island of Jamaica have so increased in number that the residents have combined to destroy them. The animals have thus been forced to change their manner of life. They have taken to tree-climbing, passing the day in the tree tops, chiefly among the wild pines, then coming forth and prowling undisturbed at night, when their enemy, the mongoose, is asleep in the thickets.

OLD SETTLER TALKS.

Has Been a Resident of Washington for 67 Years.

National Capital, Now Noted the World Over for Its Beauty, Then Was a Measly Country Village.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"THIS is the most pleasant summer I have ever seen in the national capital, and I have been here 67 summers."

The speaker does not look like one so far advanced in years. He has been selling postage stamps for our city post office for a very long time, as every patron of the office knows, but nobody would suppose that he had seen so many cycles of time. He added:

"I was born in 1827 and am in my seventy-sixth year. I was here when Jackson was president, and in my youth and young manhood I knew Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun and all those worthies of whom you have read so much. Even until this day I am almost as proud as I was in my youth to be able to boast that I have sat on the knee of Daniel Webster."

William T. Turpin is the name of the vigorous old gentleman who has seen this city grow from an obscure marshy village into the beautiful capital of the republic. There was a lull in the business of the evening, and the narrator stood by the window and received a lot of very interesting information, in answer to quite number of pertinent questions.

"There was no city here in those days beyond a block or two north of Pennsylvania avenue, except the capitol and the white house. All of South Washington was a morass the greater part of the year, except the high ground beyond the canal, and that was called the island. Very few people lived down there except those who handled freight from the numerous sailing vessels that used to dot the Potomac. The popular ports were Alexandria, Va., five miles down the river, and Georgetown, which is now a part of this city.

"The reminiscence most interesting to me," said Mr. Turpin, "is the public meeting where I first saw Miss Ramsay, of Georgetown. It took almost a year for me to find some mutual acquaintance who could introduce me to her. When I was at last formally introduced and asked permission to call, which was granted, I was the happiest young man in these parts. I lived on East Capitol street and although it was four miles to her home in Georgetown, I walked there to call on her twice a week for two years, and then we were married. That was 51 years ago and both of us are still living and in good health.

"There were no sidewalks nor curbstones in those days. All east of the capitol was a woody country. We had some graveled paths, but no sidewalks. West of the capitol as far as the white house we had some sidewalks, but almost every highway was set a great way off, through the lesser deities which are at hand and whose graveled. After passing the white house I trudged along gravel paths until I came to the old wooden bridge over Rock creek, and after that the paths were dirt paths, hardened by much walking. Of course I walked over there and back at night. We had no electric lights, no gas lamps, no gasoline, nor even candle lights along the way. The moon and stars furnished the light. I would not meet or pass a single person on my walks back and forth more than once a week. But I was never lonely because I had my mind occupied with my love.

"When we were married I bought some ground on Massachusetts avenue at 10 cents a square foot. I have lived there for 50 years, had the use of the property all of the time, and it has grown in value so that it is now worth more than six dollars a square foot. There is a nice little fortune in that bit of property alone.

"Yes, I was here during the Mexican war, but that struggle made little difference with us. The soldiers went over turnpike roads towards Wheeling and Pittsburg, thence down the Ohio river, so that we who dwelt here knew practically nothing concerning that war. But when the civil war began, and while it lasted, we knew that there was a war going on. There were soldiers on the streets all of the time, day and night. The city was one big camp, surrounded by them, but it was filled and crowded with them. Quite a number of them were lawless, too, and gave no end of trouble to our civil officers, as well as to their own military commanders of companies and regiments.

"I was a clerk in the city post office and had an experience such as few of our people have known anything about. You see McClellan had gathered here more than 100,000 soldiers, nearly all of them young men from the public schools. All of them could write letters, and they did so. They wanted to tell the folks at home what they were doing in camp, and they wanted to know what was going on at home. The result was that they filled our post office with tons and tons of letters. Our force was inadequate, and we simply corded up the letters in great bales. It was impossible for us to forward them. Finally Postmaster Edmunds took me with him to the postmaster general to discuss the situation.

"I told the official that in my opinion we should be relieved of the system of sending letters to their addressees direct; that we should send all of Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky letters to Pittsburg; all mail for states west of Ohio to Chicago, and let the large forces of our clerks there distribute them to their proper trains. This idea was adopted, and that was the origin of the D. P. O., as it was called, meaning the distributing post offices. In a short time we cleared our office of accumulated mail, and then congress increased our forces.

"At those days, while the army was camped on the Virginia hills, across the Potomac, the army wagons came in here loaded with immense stacks of mails, and as soon as we were able to handle the returning missives we sent those wagons back to the army loaded with a like amount of mail matter. It was a great work to handle the army mail alone. Besides that, we were required to handle a greatly increased amount of mail for the war department, the navy department and the state department, the latter office having been incited to great activity by diplomatic correspondence. The eyes of the people were centered on the army, but nobody knew what we officials in civilian positions were doing in order to keep the army and all of the other branches of the service in motion.

"You have no idea what a scare we had after the first battle of Bull Run, when our army came streaming back with all sorts of stories of the black horse cavalry and Stonewall Jackson's tremendous reenforcements. We expected the rebs to capture us all at once. Again, after the second battle of Bull Run, the following year, there was an awful scare. But in 1864 a great army of confederates came right up to the north defenses of the city and gave us the greatest scare.

"As to the city's growth there is little to tell. It didn't grow at all until the civil war. After that war it grew rapidly, but irregularly. It was in 1872 that President Grant determined to have a capital city here to be proud of, and he ordered Alexander Shepherd to zip it to pieces and put it together right, according to the original plans. Well, the way he did tear down and build up was a caution. Everybody that owned property was howling mad, but the president stood by Shepherd and he went ahead.

"For example, on the big square where the new Carnegie library is being erected there was what was called the Northern Liberty market. It consisted of hundreds of little shacks which completely covered the square. That block of ground was intended for a public square, and Shepherd ordered everybody to get out of the way, for they were trespassers. They paid no attention to his orders, and gave notice of riotous resistance. So one night he gathered a small army of laborers and set them to work at midnight. When the hucksters came at sunrise there was nothing left of the market. It had all been torn down and carted away. Well, Shepherd went ahead in that arbitrary manner and by 1874 he had the city started right. In the succeeding years there has been strict adherence to the original plans of the city, and it has grown beautifully and rapidly. But up to the time of the Shepherd regime this was not a creditable city, and its growth was sluggish.

"Forty years ago the horse cars came, and we thought that we were growing into a metropolis. That was 11 years after I was married. Then came improvements in roadways, followed by cable cars, then overhead trolleys, and at last the beautiful underground electric system of the present. A young man living on East Capitol street nowadays can ride over to see his girl in Georgetown inside of 20 minutes. It used to take me more than a hour of trudging, and more than another hour of trudging back home about midnight. But I guess the young couples of the present are no happier than we were *then and are now. I've never regret*ted my choice nor the trouble I took to win her, and she seems to have been contented, too, with her long-walking suitor for a husband.

"Yes, this is the mildest summer I've seen here in 67 years."

MAIL WAS DELAYED.

That Is Why a Kansas Lover Lost a Bride Whom He Values at $10,000.

James Wilson of Wichita, Kas., is in line for a ribbon. Unlike most lovers, his grievances are subject to redress if he can only convince the courts that Uncle Sam cheated him out of a wife, who, he estimates, would have been worth $10,000 to him—rather a startling figure when the records of the divorce courts are taken into account. Wilson's sweetheart was Miss Ada N. Smith of Oklahoma City O. T. They were to have been married, but he claims that the ceremony was prevented by the negligence of the Kansas City mail service.

He was to have met his sweetheart at Cherokee Kas., and they were to have been married at the home of a relative there. He secured the marriage license in Winfield—that is, he paid the clerk there to issue it and send it on to Cherokee to him. In the meantime he went to Cherokee to meet his bride to be.

The date of the wedding arrived, but the license did not. He wired the clerk of the probate court at Winfield, who said that the license had been forwarded all O. K. He then went to the postoffice at Cherokee and asked for his mail. There was none given him. The girl was in a rage at him, and threatened to desert him at once. He begged her to wait another day. She did, and still another but the necessary paper did not arrive.

They could have got one there at Cherokee, but she was furious at his alleged negligence, and said that if the one from Winfield did not arrive she would never marry him. After waiting four days it did not come and she went home. Two days later the necessary envelope was handed to him, having been delayed in transmission.

HE WANTED REALISM.

And When He Got It from the Maiden with the Stony Heart he Returned Thanks.

She could not see his face as he knelt and asked her to be his.

She was glad of that, for she did not wish to know how much suffering her refusal caused him.

She told him as gently as she could that their lives could not be linked together; that, although she admired him and esteemed him, she felt that it would be risking his future as well as her own to consent to a union when she was sure no affinity existed.

It was a touching speech, and she threw so much heart into it that she did not observe he was taking notes in shorthand.

When she had concluded he arose and put his notebook in his pocket. Extending his hand he remarked, gravely:

"I never and ever so much obliged to you."

"S-i-r-r!"

"You did it ever so nicely and I'm under a thousand obligations. I'm writing a novel, and I have a scene in which a girl refuses to marry a man. I was anxious to avoid the stereotyped style of depicting such incidents and to make it realistic. You're the seventh girl I have proposed to, and every one of the others accepted me. If you had said 'Yes,' I think I'd have been completely discouraged."

Food is very cheap in the Russian empire. The reason is assigned to the fact that ninety per cent of the 129,090,000 inhabitants are farmers, and of course are producers of food.

The Harvest Excursions Into Western Canada

Men of All Classes and Conditions Help to Gather the Grain from Western Prairies.

THE harvesters are coming."

Such was the headline in a Winnipeg paper that caught my attention while in that city last summer.

The time was the closing days of July, just as the golden fields of grain were ready for cutting. Without waiting to read the article, I asked a newspaper friend what the headline meant.

"It takes 20,000 men to gather the crops of Manitoba and western Canada," he said. "They must come from the eastern provinces and from the United States. That headline means that the first train load left Toronto for Winnipeg last night. They will continue to pour into this city, and from here be distributed throughout all the western country for the next week or ten days. For from one to two months there will be an abundance of work for them on the wheat farms of Manitoba, Minnesota, the Dakotas and the western territories of Canada. After that they will scatter; some going back to the places from which they came; others pushing on west into the mountains; others going north into the Klondike and Alaska gold fields, and still others settling down on the 160 acres of land the government is willing to give."

"From what class of society do they come?" I asked.

"From all classes except the very wealthy, and in fact I have seen men worth well into the thousands working in the wheat fields beside the professional tramp, to whom the enthusiasm of the harvest season carries reformation for a few days. The man of thousands *was in the fields as a mat*ter of healthful exercise. But on these trains that are coming will be car were a dozen and more college boys, sturdy under-grads, who talked of football and cricket, smoked briar pipes and kept the whole car in good humor by singing rollicking songs and making jokes at the expense of each other.

"Say, Jack," said one, "your ma won't know you when Farmer Jones gets through with you."

"Did you bring your dress suit along, Billie?" queried another. "They tell me the farmers of Manitoba are socially inclined when work is over at nine o'clock in the evening."

Every one of those 11 cars was occupied exclusively by men, save one. In the last car of the train I found two rosy-cheeked girls. Farmers' daughters going west to join a brother, who was making a home in Alberta territory. The orderliness of that car was a distinct tribute to womanhood. In every other car bottles of liquor were much in evidence, pipes, cigars and cigarettes kept the air blue with smoke, card games were numerous, and profanity seemed the order of the day. In the last car not a bottle was in sight, not a pipe, cigar or cigarette were lighted, not a card game was in progress, not a word of profanity was to be heard.

They were pretty girls of the farm type, and were attracting the attention of a score of admirers. One of them confided to me the fact that she had received five offers of marriage since leaving Toronto. "But," she added, "we are both engaged."

The lack of success had not prevented the admirers from spending their money for the comfort of the young ladies. Practically the whole stock of the train boy had been laid at their feet, and the best that could be bought found farmers, tradesmen, ministers of the Gospel, lawyers, doctors and the jacks-of-all-trades who live by turning their hand to whatever they find to do."

Altogether the prospect of meeting an interesting collection of men was alluring, and I wished to see them, not individually, but collectively; to see how such a medley of humanity would appear when shut up in a railroad train together. To do this I journeyed eastward to Rat Portage, on the Lake of the Woods, that I might ride back to Winnipeg on a harvest excursion train.

There were 11 coaches—immigrant cars—on the train I caught at Rat Portage. Into that train was crowded more than 1,000 men with lunch baskets, bags of baggage and not a few bottles. A walk through the train was accomplished with considerable difficulty, but it repaid the effort. Books and papers were in demand. In one seat, into which five men were crowded, I noticed one Bible, one wild west story, one weekly newspaper from a small town in Ontario, and one of the popular novels of the year. The three books and the newspaper told, in a way, the character of the four men reading them. The man with the Bible was a Church of England minister, clerically garbed. I asked him if he expected to go into the fields of the west, and he replied that he did.

"My salary is small," he said. "Too small to permit of a vacation without work, only £20 per annum." He had been in Canada less than six months, coming originally from England, and had not yet gotten into the way of dollars and cents. "I get a vacation, but I cannot afford to play when play is expensive. I need the open air exercise; my muscles are good, and why should I not find a place in the wheat fields?"

In another car I found another minister of much the same type, and going west under the same circumstances and for the same purpose. He had gathered about him a number of the better element that the car contained, and was drawing for them a Biblical lesson from the story of Joseph and his translation of Pharoah's dream. In the other end of the same car a game of draw poker was holding the attention of not only the players, but a number of on-lookers as well.

The most noticeable crowd in another at the hotels and eating houses along the line were offered to tempt their unfailing appetites.

In every car were to be found a goodly sprinkling of farmers of all ages. Many of them were taking this way of seeing the western country with the object of settling there, if desirable locations could be found. With them the conversations turned naturally to methods of agriculture. But they knew little or nothing of the agricultural methods of the west. Steam gang plows and steam harvesters were novelties to them, as were farms of 5,000 acres on which to sow but a few crops. Many of them talked as though they expected to instill needed reforms into western agricultural methods, but the first sight of the broad Manitoba fields convinced them there was farming of which they knew but little.

Winnipeg is the first destination of all the army of harvesters. There the government runs a great employment agency, under the direction of Mr. Smith, the Immigration commissioner. At this agency the farmers of all the western country list their needs for help; they state the number of hands wanted, about the number of days of employment they can offer, the wages paid, and add any little inducements that might prove attractive, such as "good board, good beds in the house, free washing," etc. With the arrival of each harvest excursion train an army of clerks are prepared to give desired information and direct the harvesters to the different localities where work may be had. Each excursion train takes into the city a certain percentage of men who make the trip because of the low rate of fare, and who are not really looking for employment, but the percentage is small, and inside of two hours after the arrival of a train the great majority of the passengers are being distributed among the agricultural centers stretching from the eastern boundary of Manitoba to the Rocky mountains, and from the farms of northern Minnesota and the Dakotas north to Prince Albert and Edmonton. At each little town on the western prairies the arrival of the season's harvesters is an event of considerable importance in the year's history, and the entire neighborhood turns out to give them a royal welcome.

The Woman's Exposition At Paris

IF Frenchmen had been wise, long since would they have given to Frenchwomen all possible rights and privileges, for this would have only increased feminine admiration for the men themselves. Then Frenchwomen would never have manifested that sourness toward the masculine sex which so often ferments in the minds of women of other nations in contemplating the wrongs of their half of the race. Frenchwomen admire and like men so much that they can scarcely conceive of happiness apart from the beloved masculine sex.

At least this was true until within the past ten years. Men did not accord justice to the Frenchwomen, so these women, gifted beyond most of their sex, have begun to hold conventions, form leagues and petition the chamber of deputies to give them enlarged privilege and opportunity. The yeast of women's rights is at last working in the breasts of Frenchwomen.

One of the evidences of this is the International Exhibition of Women's Arts and Industries in Paris the present summer. It is expected to remain open till Oct. 1. At the close of the 1900 exposition a few of the show buildings were left permanently because of their architectural beauty or uniqueness. Two of these were the famous large and small glass palaces in the beautiful "Cours-la-Reine," near the Seine. The larger of the two, especially designed by a noted French artist in stained glass, is a temple of dreamlike beauty, and in these glass houses the exhibition is held.

This industrial congress of women is perhaps the most important feature of the show. Its sessions are from Aug. 4 to 9. Here those multitudinous papers so familiar at women's meetings in America will be read and talked over, but we may be sure if Frenchwomen read the majority of them they will not be so heavy as the dreary "club papers" of American women. One of the most important topics to be considered is the legal status of married women in France, which is melancholy enough, because French jurisprudence in this matter is still held back by the strangling old Code Napoleon.

Another leading subject is woman's work industrially both in the home and outside. An exquisitely delicate humorous touch is to be noted in the announcement of the programme that at these meetings the chairwomen will not attempt to follow that ordinary parliamentary procedure "which gives practiced speakers too great an advantage over the thinkers."

One of the two glass palaces is devoted to the exhibits of Frenchwomen themselves, while the other contains feminine work from foreign countries. Of course, except perhaps in the matter of laces and embroideries, the exhibit itself is nothing great, but connected with the enterprise is a theater where daily and nightly performances, musical and otherwise, give visitors pleasure and recreation.

WHAT TO WEAR IN BELTS.

The Shaped Kind Are Most Becoming to the Average Person.

High belts are still popular, but experience teaches that they must be made with care if they are to be worn with the straight front corset. The prettiest belts are made high at the back. The material is cut on the cross and is mounted on the bodice. The belt slopes gradually toward the front. Often the belt does not meet in front by a couple of inches, the intervening space being hidden by a tie of lace or a portion of the vest. For wearing with shirt waists a useful belt is made of crescent place or soft satin matching the color of the skirt. It is folded and stitched to a bone about four inches long at the back, and thence on either side the material slopes away to a point. The belt may be tied in a knot and the ends pinned up to the blouse, or it may be fixed with a buckle.

The shaped belt is far more becoming to the figure than the ordinary straight kind. The object of employing crosscut material rather than ribbons is that the former when pulled tight fits so much closer to the figure.

The three-quarter driving cloak shown is of pongee, with a double caped collar and rounded revers of red silk outlined with ecru applique. The cuffs are of the crimson silk, also outlined with the applique.

THE CRAZE FOR WHITE.

Even Heavy Gowns Are Made of It. Some Novel Ideas.

The fondness for white this season extends even to tennis and outing suits. The white mohair ones are extremely smart and are accompanied by white shoes and white straw or taffeta hats. White storm serge is a favorite material with yachtswomen and trims up well with gold or silver braid and marine buttons. Anchors embroidered on the cuffs or collars add a bit to the jauntiness.

Touches of black velvet to set off a hat or gown are becoming almost indispensable. A bow tied loosely and set on the side of a hat of the palest blue or pink, with the ends hanging slightly over the brim, is extremely effective. Another pretty and novel idea is to wear one of these velvet knots at the nape of the neck on the slightly low neck dresses used for day wear.

A smart costume of white glace linen which is shown in the picture is made with an Eton jacket and a plain skirt trimmed with bands of pale blue linen. This is worn with a white muslin and insertion blouse and an outing hat of white linen stitched and trimmed with a bow and band of blue ribbon.

THE PRETTY PALETOT.

A Popular Garment Which Is More Ornamental Than Useful.

A pretty and summery garment is called the paletot, and, though it is not constructed with a view to affording much warmth, it is very dressy and therefore by a certain reflex action may tend to keep the heart in a certain glow of satisfaction. There are many of these paletots, and all are of extremely thin material, designed almost entirely with an eye to decorative effect. They generally have for solidity something in the shape of a yoke, to which the rest is attached, and this hangs as long as the wearer wishes her paletot to be. Some reach but little below the waist, while others fall quite to the knees or even beyond. Lace, chiffon, silk mull and other thin and fine stuffs are seen, but the Russian net with an application of some other black lace set on in motifs looks best. There is a fish net which lends itself well to this kind of trimming, and the open weave leaves the waist in plain view, which is a great consideration. All paletots hang open, and therefore the pretty waists are not hidden from view. I have seen a few without sleeves, but others have long, loose and large sleeves.

The yoke may be of velvet, silk, applique or indeed almost anything that suits the wearer. This is to be trimmed with lace and chiffon accordion ruffles. Pretty ribbon bows with long ends can be set in front at each side of the shoulders. The paletot illustrated has the yoke of black taffeta, while the body is of silk mull, with overlays of black lace around the bottom. There are no sleeves, the plaited ruffle of the silk mull filling their places.

This paletot is worn over a faint pink mistral dress, which indicates that we have not by any means abandoned the plan of the tucked skirt. The employment of narrow tucks at the upper part of the skirt and letting them fall free to form the necessary fullness around the bottom is as well liked and as often seen as ever. The skirt in question is laid in narrow tucks down to about eighteen inches from the bottom. There is a row of lace insertion which ends the plaits. Two other rows of the lace are sewed around, the pointed belt is covered with lace, and a pointed yoke is simulated with it. The whole dress, while very dainty and pretty, is easy to accomplish. It looks well in any kind of thin material.

Just at the present moment the summer styles are all "out" and the fall things are still in embryo, but every week some clever invention will be shown to keep up interest. The prettiest things just now are the paletots and the silk shirt waist dresses. Foulard is used to make many of these, blue and white or black and white and some few other colors always mingled with black.

The taffeta dresses show a greater variety of color, and they are really dainty and crisply fresh and summery. Lace, chiffon and narrow velvet and ribbons are employed to trim them. Many of these are tucked and have lace insertion. White and black India silks are also among the newest of the summer dresses to be made up with shirt waists. The black ones are trimmed lavishly with white lace, and vice versa. India silk is good value in that it can be laundered like muslin. While dresses seem to soil so quickly that it is a real boon to find a silk that will wash and look all right when it is done. You cannot tell that these India silks have been washed, for they always look new.

For runabout skirts quite a fad has developed for mohair and sicilienne in place of wash goods. These are nice, as they shed dust so well, and they, though inexpensive, always look dressy. They are offered in many colors just now, navy blue being the first choice, with black and gray next. The skirts are made up with a shaped flounce, and some have several rows of velvet or satin ribbon sewed around the bottom. The skirts are not lined.

There are sicilienes quite as pretty as silk and in some respects more desirable for everyday skirts. I saw some in which the woof is silk and the rest mohair. They were in cream, brown stripes, with several shades of gray, royal and navy blue and black. The red and garnet are quite new in this fabric, but the cream is the handsomest of all. The sicilienes run fifty inches wide and sell for from 50 to 75 cents per yard. They make well and when worn with a trim and pretty shirt waist are all that one can desire.

SUMMER NOVELTIES.

Dainty Petticoats—Novel Tulle Evening Gowns.

A pretty novelty in petticoats has white muslin flounces trimmed with insertion or frillings of lace set on a foundation of silk. The flounces may be procured ready made at some stores and are intended to be tacked on to the silk slips, from which they can be removed from time to time for washing.

A white tulle dancing frock recently seen at a summer resort was lavishly trimmed with tiny coral velvet ribbons. The skirt was made with a long yoke of cluny lace describing vandyke points. On this the tulle was plaited at intervals, so that its flare was quite extensive. The lower part of the skirt was trimmed with narrow coral velvet ribbon wrought into a scalloped border.

Another pretty tulle gown was made of simple black and white, with tiny chenille dots powdered all over it.

A very smart evening gown is here shown. It is made of ecru lace and pink chiffon. The lace is cut in a vandyke bolero over a full underbloused of the accordion plaited chiffon. This chiffon is banded with narrow black lace. The sleeves, which reach exactly to the elbow, are mainly of the chiffon banded with the lace and partly covered with two diamonds of lace joined to form an upper sleeve.

The skirt is plain, with the exception of a front and a wide flounce of chiffon. A spray of artificial roses decorates the left shoulder.

EVENING HAIR DECORATIONS

Empire Half Wreaths and Coronets of Flowers.

For evening wear as a hair decoration a full wreath or an empire half wreath of tiny pink roses, with a few leaves in either the delicate green of the rose foliage or the darker green of the ivy, is very becoming to a young wearer.

There are also coronets of larger roses or of lilies of the valley combined with maidenhair ferns. Frequently worn with such a hair ornament there will be a similar spray of flowers on the waist or skirt.

sies can appear on a girlish looking gown of airy chiffon or tulle. A princess gown of white lace was seen recently decorated with three lilies near the left bosom, and from this to the bottom of the gown extended a spray of the lilies intermingled with black velvet ribbon.

A smart foulard is the subject of the illustration. The waist is made with a yoke of white mousseline de sole, and the sleeves have undersleeves of the same. The skirt has a wide gored ruffle trimmed with three bands of lace. With this is worn a big black hat with a feather and a pale rosette.

HOTELS FOR WOMEN.

They Are an Outcome of the Great Need For Them.

When women and girls first entered the regular wage earning field away from home, their most difficult as well as most doleful undertaking was the finding of a place in which to live. The small pay they received put the better class of hotels and boarding houses beyond them. Worst of all, handed down from the times when men hanged a woman if she stole a loaf of bread for her starving child and belonging with them in cruelty and wickedness was that mediaeval prejudice among hotel lodging house people against receiving women boarders.

The industrial new woman had a hard time of it for many years. But the new woman in any walk of life is not to be put down. If established hotels refused to receive them, then these fine, strong workers would establish hotels of their own, which they have done.

A dozen years ago Mrs. Eliza Greatorex, the artist, began a movement to erect and equip a noble hotel for women in New York city. On the one hand she strove to interest women; on the other, capitalists. At length her patient, unselfish work brought results. There will shortly be ready for occupancy in New York a large hotel for women that will be a beautiful home provided with all the best equipments of modern civilization—heat, electric lights and tiled bathrooms, plenty of them. The prices for food and lodging will be moderate.

Connected with Columbia university, New York, is a dormitory for women students which is so palatial as to cause the men students to declare grudgingly that the girls have larger and better lodging house space than the boys, also better dining room and restaurant accommodations, which latter fact the masculine sex would naturally feel and resent.

There, too, is Boston. With an eye to business as well as to philanthropy, which is always the correct eye, certain prominent people have purchased the old New England Conservatory of Music building and are remodeling it into the Boston Hotel For Self Supporting Women. The Everyday church congregation, Rev. Dr. Perin at their head, were the leaders in the scheme. This hotel will be equipped according to the best modern ideas, including the peculiarly Boston one of an educational department where in evening classes the boarders obtain the higher culture. It will also have a resident physician and nurse, the advisability of which is not so clear. Whatever tends to make girls look on themselves as sickly creatures should be discouraged. A sickly woman has no proper place in the industrial world. It is the battle of the strong, and almost any woman can make herself strong if she has the will to do so.

In most of the large cities hotels for women which are a credit to twentieth century republican civilization are already either in operation or under construction. In these handsome hostelries the ancient tabby cat "rules and regulations" of the old time Jane Smith Home For Females are done away. A lone working woman is a free, independent, responsible being, ruling her own time and actions. A general standing order in all the hotels for women is that occupants must not receive men friends in their private rooms, which no girl would do in her own home. Also there is in every case a refined, motherly, intelligent woman who acts as matron and knows how to sympathize with girls as well as to advise and comfort them.

Philadelphia takes the lead in that class of woman's hotel known as the co-operative club home. This combines home and club life, and the system is admirable. There are now in operation in Philadelphia several of the co-operative club homes with long waiting lists of candidates for membership. The perfect business management of these clubs is the secret of their success. One person does the buying and does it economically, yet generously. Another is the housekeeper and superintends the internal arrangements. A third, the secretary, attends to correspondence, while the treasurer collects the money and pays the bills. The young women are of the class of clerks, stenographers, etc. They are very happy in their club homes, where they can enjoy even luxury for from $3 to $4.50 a week.

FASHIONABLE GOWNS.

Many Are Made of Filet Lace—Bolero Still Popular.

Filet lace is much used for summer gowns. It is frequently trimmed with bands of pongee or silk. The foundation of this lace is a square meshed lace on which a pattern is worked in darned fashion. It has rather the effect of an old sampler. Gold or silver tinsel on black or brown is exquisite with a touch of color.

The bolero, like the blouse, has apparently come to stay. Chiffon and mousseline are appliqued with heavy textures or bits of silk, and the bolero in this fashion is fitted loosely and is fastened with bows of colored velvet set on in the front.

So far there is little change in the fashion of skirts, but short ones are in the minority and are rarely seen except for athletic sports.

A costume of gray veiling is shown in the cut. Both waist and skirt are laid in wide bias tucks. The skirt has three tucked ruffles. The waist is collarless and is trimmed with a yoke and undersleeves of white chiffon. Bands of white silk applique also aid in trimming the waist and skirt.

FANCY COLLARS AND TIES.

Silk Null Fichus, Wash Collars and Stocks.

Bertha collars of embroidered batiste appear on very many of the new gowns. Another fashionable mode for linen dresses shows a short, oddly shaped bolero with stole ends of lace and edged around the sides with narrow bands of stitched linen. The bolero is worn over a tucked blouse of embroidered batiste.

Pretty little silk mull fichus are edged with flower passementerie.

OF OLD ROSE LINEN.

Thin white wash goods and net make equally effective fichus. A flower bordered fichu is as dainty a piece of apparel as one could wish for.

In the wash ties and neckbands fashion still clings to the pique stocks of white, with narrow colored ties. The knot seems to be superseding the bow, and many of the new stocks have the ties simply crossed over and fastened with a fancy pin.

Many collars are made of insertion and featherstitching. They fasten in the back and taper down into points in the front.

The picture shows a gown of old rose linen. The blouse waist has a tucked collar cut in points and edged with square lace applique. The skirt is also tucked and has a wide gored ruffle.

Thomas B. Reed on Fame.

Here is a definition of fame given by ex-Speaker Reed at the Bowdoin college commencement dinner: "Fame is largely a matter of accident. Being in the right place at the right time and doing the right thing, or, better still, making people think you are doing the right thing, is about all there is to fame." This definition gains much in effectiveness when "fame" is pronounced with the ex-speaker's well known drawl.

The NEW WOMAN

I REALLY cannot let this matter pass any longer. I have been debating it with myself ever since last winter and especially since another occurrence a few weeks ago has driven it in on my mind with a spike and sledge hammer. One should never go off in his mind prematurely, so I have been for months considering whether I ought to call the attention of the women of this republic to the dangerous and scandalous goings on in the United States senate. Now I have decided that as a duty incumbent on me and one which cannot be shirked I must speak out a solemn warning against trusting the masculine sex with the ballot and the lawmaking power.

To the United States senate are chosen men presumably of the ripest intellects and most seasoned passions, yet last winter in a solemn session of that body one elderly member leaped over the seats like a kangaroo and grabbed a brother senator from his own state by the hair, and this one "he pitched into him and him pitched into he," and the two had a gorgeous dogfight in the eyes of all the world, so to speak. Of the more recent occurrence the scare head lines of the newspapers said: "Senator —— Grabs Senator —— by the Throat on Floor of the Chamber!" "Why I Did It—I Was Mad and Lost My Head!"

"Now I ask the women of the land whether creatures like these, swayed wholly by their emotions, driven hither and thither by the excitement of the moment, like the animals in a mule corral during a stampede, are fit to be trusted with political responsibility. Do not these repeated outbreaks in the gravest and highest legislative body in the republic show a hopeless lack of that cool judgment and solid brain power which alone can keep the human head level in critical moments? Yes, verily, plainly man is a creature too emotional to be trusted with the governing power.

Mrs. Alice Moore McComas last year dropped the quill and ink horn of the journalist to tour her daughters on the musical stage. Both are very young, but so admirably trained and taught by their mother now are they in song that they could take care of themselves anywhere. Miss Alice, the elder, is the pianiste of a traveling entertainment company. The younger is "Carroll the Singer," now only seventeen. Mrs. McComas herself is Carroll's business manager, making all her engagements and traveling with her always. The year for both sisters has been uncommonly successful. Mrs. McComas has proved herself an excellent manager.

Did it ever occur to you that absentmindedness and forgetfulness in small matters are a sin? Either may easily be overcome, but if allowed to grow on one develops into real addlepatedness and brain disease.

Many women waste enough time leaning upon their elbows and gazing out of windows to become adepts in any branch of knowledge, art or industry that they might take up. In the day of judgment when each is asked, "What did you do to your earth life to save your soul and earn continued existence for it?" will she say: "I was a sill presser. I leaned on my elbows and looked out the window?"

That brave lady, Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake, and her aids of the New York City Legislative league have undertaken to procure the appointment of women physicians for the female wards of the state insane asylums. It will be necessary to have the legislature enact a law to that effect before it can be done. Dr. Phoebe Watt, a New York physician, was the first to recommend that the proposition be approached by way of the state legislature, since the politicians who appoint the medical staff of such hospitals would not voluntarily put a woman, however useful and necessary she might be, into a place which a voter could fill.

NEEDS ATTENTION.

The attention of the Mayor and the officials of the street department is called to the condition in which the local trolley company has left certain portions of Watchung avenue. It is the old trouble. The roadway is torn up to allow the trolley company to make certain repairs to its tracks and then there is little or no attempt made to put the street back as it should be. Like cases have happened often before. Here is another instance which the city officials can see for themselves by walking through Watchung avenue where the trolley runs.

According to the franchise of the trolley company, it must put the road back into just as good condition as it was before the repairs were made. That was a provision which was expressly stipulated by the members of the Common Council who made the agreement with the trolley company. It was designed to prevent just such instances. As long as it exists in black and white in the contract with the trolley company, it should be inforced.

This is another instance of the disadvantages of a large system of which the Plainfield lines become only a "small drop in the bucket." The trolley officials do not know the provisions of the local ordinances and do not care as long as the municipal officials make no objection. If the subject was brought to their attention in an emphatic way, there is no doubt that they would act. Until they hear from the city authorities it is probable that they will take their time about making such repairs to the roadway.

Probably one of the most aggravated cases was that of the switch on East Fifth street. The road was left in horrible condition for weeks and no one is not what it should be. The trolley company need not be expected to act unless the city shows an inclination to hold the company to its promises. It is therefore time that either Mayor Jenkins or the ones in authority in the city street department brought this subject home to the street railway company. If the local representatives of the company fail to act, Col. Hine can always be reached and is always ready to hear any complaint and to give it investigation.

MR. CORIELL'S CANDIDACY.

Since the withdrawal of Andrew McCardell in the race for the shrievalty nomination of the Union county Republicans, there has come another change which has given a new appearance to the political situation. With the close of last week, a story emanating from Elizabeth mentioned E. Frank Coriell, of this city, as a possible shrievalty candidate. This story has since gained ground and becomes so persistent that one is inclined to give it credence.

Mr. Coriell has been interviewed on the subject. He has refused to talk for publication intimating, however, that he is considering the subject. Mr. Coriell is now deputy county clerk and the position of sheriff is a good thing that no man is likely to throw aside. So is only to be suspected that Mr. Coriell will carefully consider the subject before formally announcing his position in the case.

There is no doubt that Mr. Coriell's candidacy would affect City Judge Runyon's chances for the senatorial nomination. That certain party leaders have favored the Coriell boom for that same reason is a fact that cannot be gainsaid. They realize that in order to secure the senatorial nomination for Mr. Cross he must have a strong running mate for sheriff and that the candidate will be of most service if picked from Plainfield in order to divide Judge Runyon's support there if possible. Mr. Coriell is popular in Plainfield and through the county as well. His courteous treatment of many in the county clerk's office has made for him many friends. So the Cross advocates believe that he will be particularly strong to place beside Senator Cross on the ticket.

Mr. Coriell's decision will be awaited with much interest. He has the subject under consideration now. If he accepts it and the fight which he must realize it means, the county primaries in Plainfield promise to offer no end of excitement. If he rejects it, the situation returns to the same position it was before the advent of the Coriell boom.

BIG SENSATION SIDE TRACKED

Councilman Lee Was Ready to Spring Something at Last Monday's Council Meeting.

BUT IT WAS HELD UP.

Under Act of Legislature City Can Compell Water Company to Put a Price on Its Plant and a Resolution to That Effect Was to Have Been Introduced Last Monday.

What promised to be one of the most sensational moves yet made by the Common Council in municipal affairs was for some unknown reason checked at the regular meeting of that body last Monday. The plans were well laid and there were several interested persons in the lobby expecting to see something drop. Councilman Lee had the matter in tow and when he let the secret out during the recess held by the members, it was evidently sidetracked for the time being at least.

The plan was to introduce a resolution forcing the Plainfield Water Supply Company to sell its plant to the city if the latter wanted to purchase it. Mr. Lee has been looking into the subject and he discovered that under an act of the Legislature the city can condemn the holdings of the water company and force the company to put a price on the plant. If the price does not suit the people of the city, who, according to the act are given the privilege of voting on the question of purchasing or not, they can apply to the courts and have commissioners appointed who shall put a price on the plant. In case this price does not suit either the city or the company either party has the right to appeal from that court to a higher tribunal. But in any event the company is forced to sell to the city if the city desires to purchase.

This movement, as characterized by Mr. Lee, would have been one of the greatest sensations of the year, and just why it did not go through is a mystery. It has been hinted that some of the members are unwilling to lend themselves to such a scheme to force the water company into selling, while it is said that others feel that the present condition of things are all right. The question would have to be put to a vote of the people first for them to determine whether it is their wish that the city own its water plant. Then the other legal proceedings would follow. Something more may be heard of the matter later.

FAVOR IT.

Favorable Hearing of Mayor Smalley's Request That Somerset Street in City be Widened.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, appeared before the members of the Common Council, Monday, while they were holding a recess, for the purpose of urging that body to take up the work of widening Somerset street between Front street and the brook. The Council listened very attentively to the Mayor and evidenced much interest in the scheme.

It was the opinion of nearly all that the improvement would be an excellent one and while the members did not promise to widen the street, Mr. Smalley has reason to believe that the improvement will be made within a reasonable length of time.

DINED BY WRITERS.

Pad and Pencil Club Gave a Dinner to City Judge Runyon.

News writers laid aside the impediments of their craft for a time last Monday to gather at a dinner tendered by the Pad and Pencil Club, of this city, to City Judge Runyon, in the nature of a public endorsement of that official's candidacy for the State senatorship from Union county. Timbo's dining rooms were the scene of the gathering, which was one of unusual enjoyment. There were present eleven of the local scribes, all of which contributed in a measure to the success of the occasion by speech, story or song. The Pad and Pencil Octette did excellent work with the latest topical music.

GREAT TIMES FOR PYTHIANS

CALIFORNIAN KNIGHTS HAVE MADE MOST ELABORATE PLANS.

One of Remarkable Features Will be Showing Made by Nevada County—Other Plans.

During the recent session of the California Grand Lodge of Pythians, the delegates from each county announced that appropriations had been made for the purpose of installing and maintaining an exhibit at San Francisco during the national gathering, August 11 to 20. The amounts vary from $400 to $2,000 each, though there are many more who have appropriated $2,000 than $400, while some counties have voted appropriations, without placing a limit upon the cost or upon the expenses of the committee that is to look after it. Samples of the choicest fruits, for which sections of California are famous, will be sent for free distribution. Some places have voted to send a car load each day during the convention.

A feature of the street fair to be held will be Nevada county's exhibit. Nevada county is one of the oldest mining counties of California, and a proud bit of its display will be a gold brick worth a half million dollars. A special guard of police will watch over the treasure. Besides this, in the exhibit, will be a collection of old-time nuggets from the hills and canyons of the county, carrying $30,000 of the virgin gold; a pyramid made of glistening, gold-bearing precious quartz, valued at a fabulous amount; an interesting collection of mining implements, from the most primitive used by the argonaut prospector to the most improved of the present day; a complete miniature hoisting plant and quartz mill operated by electricity, showing how mining is carried on in the gold-yielding mother lode district.

Alongside of these will be samples of the mammoth grapes, peaches, pears, apples, plums and oranges, all of which grow to perfection in the county, and are noted for fine appearance, flavor and keeping qualities. Specimens of the famous mountain timber will also be on exhibition. At the end of the conclave the citizens of Nevada will be ready to escort the visitors on a special excursion, which will be laid on or about August 20, to the gold fields, and give them a picnic and barbecue in a most picturesque mountain retreat, between Nevada City and Grass Valley.

Some of the exhibits from the mining and agricultural regions will be a revelation to those who have never been in California, and an object lesson to the young that they will never forget.

THE WAY TO GO.

Picturesque Trip Up the Hudson Offered by the People's Line.

Among the picturesque trips which are offered to the summer tourist, there is none more delightful than the ride up the Hudson river in one of the palatial steamers of the People's Line. Every night in the week, except Sunday, either the steamer Dean Richmond or the Adirondack leaves its pier at the foot of Canal street, New York, bound for Albany. The start is made at 6 o'clock and the passengers are treated to the prettiest part of the Hudson valley with the Palisades and then the Highlands in the twilight. While pretty at any time, this great river with its rocky borders is at its best when the sun sink behind the horizon. With a moon to add to the effect, the trip is an ideal one.

While the trip is worth making for itself alone, it also offers a delightful incident for a journey to the summer resorts in New York State. Direct connection is made at Albany for Saratoga, Lake Champlain and the various parts of the Adirondacks. The steamers themselves offer every comfort and convenience and are known as the largest river steamers in the world.

MONCTON AT A HOSPITAL

RECEIVING FROM SUNSTROKE RECEIVED WHILE IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Has Been in Presidio, Cal., Hospital Since June 22—He Was in the Army.

Reassuring word comes to the relatives in this city of George A. Moncton, of the Twenty-second Regiment, who has been lying at the Presidio, California, Hospital, since June 22. In a letter received here on Saturday, it was stated that the patient was doing well, although it was impossible to tell how soon he would be in condition to be discharged from the institution. He has been suffering from a sun stroke, experienced in the Philippines some time in April.

Moncton will be remembered by many acquaintances in Plainfield. He enlisted at the beginning of the war with Spain, taking service with a Texan cavalry troop, with whom he saw active service in Cuba. At the close of hostilities, he entered the regular infantry at New York, and sailed with the Twenty-second for Manila. He was twice wounded in action, but his excellent physique enabled him to recover. He is of an athletic build and of a strong constitution. It is thus thought that his chances of surviving his present trouble are most promising.

Information as to Moncton's condition was secured through R. D. Nichols, the secretary of the Army and Navy Department of the California State committee of the Y. M. C. A., to whom inquiry was made by friends of the soldier here. A letter from the young man himself corroborates the expressed hope that he will soon be well enough to leave the hospital.

PLACES FOR PLEASURE.

Admirable Outing Places on the Sea Shore Reached by Jersey Central.

There is no section where recreation is more popularly enjoyed than at the sea shore. Thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands, will choose the sea shore to any other region for a day's outing or a prolonged stay, and it is not difficult to trace the cause. The broad expanse of water, the glittering sands, the exhilarating sniff of salt water, the bounding and one sports, the delights of a plunge into the surf, the palatable shore dinner and the general atmosphere of the shore are the attractions.

No where can one find more admirable outing places than those on the New Jersey coast reached by the New Jersey Central. Every point of renown including Monmouth, Normandie, Atlantic Highlands, Seabright, Long Branch, Ocean Grove, Asbury Park, Allenhurst, Spring Lake, Belmar, Narnegat, Beach Haven, Atlantic City, Ventnor City, Cape May and a score of others are reached through the superb train service of the New Jersey Central, and each resort abounds with fine hotels and boarding houses.

A hotel list is published by the general passenger department of the New Jersey Central, Central Building, New York, and it's yours for the asking. Send a postal for it.

A Burst of Magnificence.

That glorious and renowned region in which Mauch Chunk is located is as far famed as the country itself. In the heart of a beautiful mountain range, the Switchback railway leads to the summit of one of the highest peaks, where marvelous views are in every direction. The air is cool and delightful and one cannot but become intoxicated with the wondrous outlooks. This celebrated locality is located on the lines of the New Jersey Central, and on Sunday, August 10, there will be a popular $1.50 excursion to Mauch Chunk. Special train leaves Plainfield at 9:20 a. m., arriving at Mauch Chunk at about noon, and if you want a day of genuine enjoyment don't let this excursion pass. Switchback tickets are 50 cents extra.

Men Will be Boys.

GOOD TIMES FOR THE FRESH AIR CHILDREN

Endeavorers of Park Avenue Baptist Church Visited Both Camps on Saturday.

PLEASED LITTLE ONES.

VISITED THE NETHERWOOD FRESH AIR HOME IN THE AFTERNOON.

Games, Music and Refreshments Were the Features—Then Went to Westfield in the Evening—

The Programme There.

Enjoyment in large measure came to the fresh air children in this city and Westfield Saturday through the generous efforts of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Some twenty-five made the trip in the afternoon to the Fresh Air Home at Netherwood, where they entertained the little folks with games and general jollity. Music also was a feature, there being a duet sung by Mrs. T. A. Cuming and Miss Adelaide Runyon, with choruses and cornet accompaniment by B. T. Allen, of Cranford.

After the visitors had done their share, a number of the children also recited and sang. They had been trained for the occasion by the matron, Miss Curry. Then the hearts of the little ones were gladdened further with ice cream and cake, the former given by Superintendent George Hall, of the Sunday-school, and the latter by the Christian Endeavor Society.

In the evening, Westfield was the objective point of another journey which drew a good sized crowd. Under the direction of Miss Jennie Giles, a clever play was enacted by some of the members of the Junior Society, as follows: Margaret Ostrom, Grace Weeks, Arline Brown, Lillian Cuming, Gertrude Delaney and Grace Pierson. Miss Arline Brown recited in her usual charming manner. The fresh air youngsters also contributed toward the programme, speaking and singing, under direction of the matron, Mrs. Diehl.

THEATRICAL.

Heading the best bill that has been offered at Keith's Theatre, New York, this season is Valerie Bergere, who with a strong supporting company is presenting a new one-act play called "Billy's First Love," the work of Miss Grace Griswold, herself an actress of some note. This will be the first time that this play has been seen in the east, but the Pacific coast critics have grown enthusiastic over it, and its cordial reception by the public seems to warrant the belief that Miss Bergere will repeat with it the great success she had with the little Japanese tragedy Madame Butterfly, which caused the greatest sensation vaudeville has known in recent years. Next on the bill is the Melani Troup, the Parisian Musical Greteques, an act imported from Europe, and said to be one of the funniest acts ever seen. Zazel and Vernon have a comedy bar act that is great, and Bryce and Inman, the celebrated Irish comedians, are as laugh-provoking as ever with their act, which has added so much to the gaiety of nations. Paul Stephens, the novelty acrobat, in an act which has not been seen before on this side of the Atlantic; Beeson, Ferguson and Beeson, with an eccentric comedy sketch; Craig and Ardelle, musical comedians; Morton and Elliott, paper manipulators and nineteen other acts, which include new slides for the stereopticon and new films for the biograph, are all on this excellent programme.

Wedded at Westfield.

Rev. J. W. Mitchell, of this city, officiated at the wedding of William J. Rowlett and Miss Mary C. Burke, Thursday evening. The ceremony was performed at the home of W. M. Wright at Westfield and was witnessed by a number of friends.

OFF DAY FOR THE GOLFERS

Weather and Slow Course Combined to Keep the Scores Away From Low Marks.

THE REGULAR EVENTS.

Honors at Hillside West to W. T. Glenney and C. W. Abbott—Jos. O. McKelvey Was Low Man at Park Golf Club—Not a Good Day for the Local Golfers.

Excessive humidity and a slow course combined to keep many of the golfiacs off the local courses, Saturday afternoon. The only events at the two clubs were the regular wekely competitions and none of those brought out more than fair fields. The number of entries at the Hillside Club was particularly small but the Parks made a better showing.

At the Hillside Club, the day's honors went to W. T. Glenney and C. W. Abbott. Jos. O. McKelvey was low man at the Park Club.

HILLSIDE CLUB.

In the weekly competition for the Boys' cup on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Saturday morning, Arthur Peterson, who still leads with eighteen points, added a half point to his total while W. T. Glenney, who won first honors, is now tie with Gordon Abbott with ten and one-half points, and N. P. Rogers, who finished second, now has a total of ten-points. A. D. PARK GOLF CLUB.

Although a score started in the weekly competition for the President's cup at the Park Golf Club, Saturday afternoon, the number turning in scores was comparatively small. The excessive humidity affected many of the players. Then the frequent showers gave the grass a start on the greenkeeper which could not be overcome in a week.

Jos. O. McKelvey and W. de la R. Anderson both played in good form. Everybody else was away off in their game. By getting third, Dr. A. W. Anderson advanced to third place in the race while McKelvey and the other Andersons are now in the bunch tied for fifth place.

Saturday's scores, better than 100 net, were:

BRIDGE CONTRACT SIGNED

NEW NEWARK BAY BRIDGE ONLY NEEDS APPROVAL OF OFFICIALS.

Will be a Steel Bridge Built on Stone Foundations to Cost Nearly a Million.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has just prefected plans for the construction of a new and substantial steel bridge across Newark bay, the cost of which will run close into a million.

The new structure will be more than a mile in its total length, and will provide draws over the channel in conformity with the recent regulations of the United States Navy Department. The plans provide a clearance of 100 feet each side of the central pedestal.

The foundations of the new bridge will be built of masonry, sunk below the surface of Newark bay to bed rock, and the architectural design is impressive for its solidity, the object of the engineers being to construct the new bridge in so substantial a manner that express trains of the heaviest weight —especially those used in making up the New York and Philadelphia limited—may pass over at speed without vibration.

The new bridge will be the chief artery for all express passenger trains on the main line to Philadelphia and of the Bound Brook route.

The present structure is constructed throughout of wood and rests on a causeway built entirely of wooden piles.

Contracts for the new bridge have already been signed, and work on the structure will begin as soon as General Manager Besler and other officers of the Central Railroad approve them. One of the specifications in the contracts provides that the new bridge must be constructed so as not to interfere with traffic.

WANTS RECEIVER.

Elizabeth Evening Times Wants One Appointed So It Can Straighten Out Its Financial Affairs.

Before Vice Chancellor Stevens in the Court of Chancery at Newark, Monday, William W. St. John and Peter Egenoff, complainants, made application for the appointment of a receiver for the Times Publishing Company, publishers of the Elizabeth Evening Times.

The application was made on the basis of an affidavit sworn to by Mr. St. John, manager and editor of the Evening Times, which shows the company is without the necessary capital to properly conduct the business and that, under present conditions, it seems impossible to negotiate the additional capital necessary to put the company's business on the basis which will conserve the interests of the stockholders. At present the assets of the company are named at about $5,800 and the liabilities $5,883.

The Vice Chancellor granted an order to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed and made it returnable August 18.

MORE SEWERS FOR WEST END

Common Council Asked for Bids for Several Miles More of Sanitary Sewers.

SOME OTHER BUSINESS.

Complaint Filed Against Fireman L. M. Dunavan and Day Set for Hearing—Contract for Arlington Avenue Sewer to C.M.Meeker—Cannot Tax the Trust Company.

The extension of Plainfield's system of sewers in the West End of the city, as advised and recommended by the Board of Health several weeks ago, was one of the most important matters considered by the Common Council at its regular session last Monday. The initial steps towards installing sewers in the West End of the city were taken, such as the filing of maps, specifications, etc., and setting Tuesday evening, September 2, at 8 o'clock, as the time when bids will be received for the performance of this work. Advertisements will be placed in the local papers and Engineering Journal.

The streets included in the specifications for the extension are as follows: Albert street, Compton avenue, Mariners avenue, Pond place, Stebbins place, Muhlenberg place, John street, Prescott place, between South Second street and West Fourth street, Dunellen avenue, between Clinton and Compton avenues, Essex street, between Spooner avenue and Prescott place, West Fifth street, between Grant avenue and Prescott place, West Fourth street, between Plainfield avenue and Prescott place, Lee place, between South Second and West Sixth streets, North avenue, from Leland avenue 2,000 feet east, South Second street, between Plainfield avenue and a point 350 feet west of Morris avenue, West Sixth street, from Grant avenue 1,000 feet west, South avenue between Central street and Woodland avenue, Spooner avenue, between South Second and West Seventh streets, West Third street, between Grant avenue and Pond place.

The next matters of importance was that of receiving bids for the work of constructing a storm sewer in Arlington avenue, between West Fifth street and Cedar brook. Acting President vanHerwerden, who filled the position of Mr. Coriell, who was out of town, suspended the regular order of business to receive these birds, three in number, C. M. Meeker, of Plainfield; Patrick J. Plunkitt, of Jersey City; and Jamees Maybury & Son, of Passaic. Mr. Meeker's bid, $2,827, was the lowest and he was awarded the contract for the work which is to be started not later than August 20. Mr. Plunkitt's bid was $3,709 and that of the Passaic firm $3,969. In accordance with the law an opportunity was given anyone so desiring to speak for or against the sewer, but no one spoke.

Among the communications was one from Mrs. Catherine Hamilton McClure protesting against the payment of certain taxes on property owned by her and located at 108 Crescent avenue and 726 Watchung avenue. She complained that she had been informed by the collector that her taxes were paid after which she received bills for certain taxes in 1899, which were already paid. She claimed to have receipts for taxes paid and asked the Council to remit to her the taxes paid twice. The matter was referred.

J. C. Pope, of West Front street, and Mrs. Mary Emma VanArsdale, of East Front street, who live just within the fire limits, petitioned the Council for permission to make additions to the residence property. The petition were referred to the proper committee, as was also the petition from residents of Pemberton avenue, asking for an electric light on that avenue near Central avenue.

A communication was received from Chief Doane, of the fire department, stating that Griffin H. Freeman preferred a charge against Louis M. Dunavan complaining that the latter was guilty of violating section 45 of the rules and regulations of the department. Both men are regular firemen. The charge preferred includes the use of improper language on July 8. A resolution was then offered by Mr. Lee, chairman of the fire committee, setting Tuesday evening, August 19, at 8 o'clock, as the time when a hearing in the matter will be given by the Council. Mr. Mellick also offered a resolution fixing August 19 as the time for the Council to meet to pass upon the books of the Board of Assessors, and when the meeting was concluded last evening an adjournment was taken to that date.

Building Inspector Doane reported that twenty-one building permits were granted during July and Street Commissioner Gavett reported that nine teen sewer permits were granted during May June and July.

Mr. Mellick stated that a report had been received from Acting Corporation Counsel Nelson Runyon stating that the capital stock of the Plainfield Trust Company could not be taxed this year as it was not paid in on or before the date prescribed by law. This settles the question which perplexed the minds of the Board of Assessors.

Mr. Mellick also offered a resolution which provided for the borrowing of $1,500 on account of the sewer improvements being made in South avenue.

Mr. Randolph recommended that one electric light be placed on Jackson avenue, another one on Dunellen avenue and a third one on Dunellen avenue near Mariners avenue, as requested by residents. The same were granted.

Mr. Mellick moved that Moraller & Son, the Park avenue jewelers, be appointed custodians of the city clock for the coming year at an expense not to exceed $30. The Council decided to that effect.

The resignation of George E. Rogers as constable in the Fourth ward, was received and Councilman Murphy presented the name of William F. Walters as a successor to Mr. Rogers and he was elected by the Council.

Mr. Tolles called up the ordinances providing for the macadamizing of Prospect avenue, between Hillside and Woodland avenues, and that providing for the repair of sidewalks, and both ordinances were passed on a third reading.

Mr. Mellick said that he had been asked to speak about the careless manner in which persons run up to the railroad station in automobiles, allowing the machines to make a great noise thereby frightening horses. He said that he had been requested to bring the matter to the attention of the police department.

Mr. Buckle in reply stated that the police board had in mind certain things concerning the running of automobiles and as soon as Corporation Counsel Marsh returns from his vacation steps will be taken to govern their operation.

At this time the Council took a recess and when the session was resumed, the meeting adjourned after the auditing committee reported.

HOW JULY DIFFERED FROM OTHER MONTHS

The Most Remarkable Thing About Month Was Absence of Really Clear Days.

ONLY SEVEN RECORDED.

RAINFALL WAS REALLY BELOW THE NORMAL FIGURES.

And Most of What Fell Came in Storms of Two Days—Nothing Remarkable in the Temperature —Average Was 73.1 Degrees.

Poor conversationalists have found such a fertility of matter in the discussion of the weather of late that even those who are not compelled to resort to this ordinarily threadbare topic have agreed that atmospheric conditions for the past month have been quite worthy of comment. Consideration of the records for July, as taken from Sergeant Neagle's official compilation, show that the claim has been fully justified.

Nothing remarkable has been shown in the way of temperature, although the extreme humidity made the days oppressive. The thermometer marked its highest with 94 degress on the 9th. The lowest was 51. degrees, on the 17th. The mean maximum was 83.1 and the mean minimum 63.1, making the average 73.1. In daily fluctuation of temperature, the greatest range for twenty-four hours was 36 degrees.

Contrary to general opinion, the rainfall for the month was far below the average, amounting to only 4.71, inches which is 1.27 below normal. During the past ten years, the amount has ranged from 13.92 in 1897 to 1.41 in 1894. Nearly half the total amount for July fell on the 24th and 25th, when two showers within twenty-four hours precipitated 2.04 inches.

As to the supposed preponderance of rainy days, it is shown that there were eighteen of the thirty-one, which is four above the average. On twelve of these there were thunder storms. Rain was threatened, however, during the greater part of the month, as only seven days were recorded as actually clear. Ten were cloudy and fourteen partly so, making the times of the sun's unobscured appearance worthy of note by their infrequency.

To the latter cause may be ascribed the fact that the crop report is not of the best. Sergeant Neagle states that the hay crop was only one-third of what it should be, while wheat and rye ranged from 50 to 75 per cent. with a full quota of oats. Corn and tomatoes are rated good, apples scarce and peaches, fair.

Freight Cars Wrecked.

Bound Brook, August 6—A mixed freight train on the Port Reading Railroad parted just east of this place, yesterday morning, and came together again near the bridge spanning the Green brook. One large coal car went off the bridge into the brook, three others rolled down the embankment and a freight car was telescoped. One car was loaded with fire brick and the others were empty. No one was injured.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

Then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

OLD BOUND BROOK MAN GONE

CORNELIUS W. LATOURETTE CAME FROM OLD COLONIAL STOCK.

Died in Historic Old Mansion, Near Bound Brook—Funeral Held Tuesday Afternoon.

Bound Brook, Aug. 6—The funeral of Cornelius W. LaTourette, aged eighty-eight, was held from his late residence yesterday afternoon and was largely attended. Rev. T. E. Davis, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiated, assisted by Rev. J. B. Cleaver. The remains were interred in the Bound Brook cemetery. The deceased is mourned by his aged wife, to whom he was married in 1845, and by his only son, Eugene DuBois, who is in charge of the Home Insurance Company, New York.

The deceased was a son of Judge John LaTourette, and was born in Bound Brook, where he has spent all his life, with the exception of a few years in California during the gold excitement of 1849. Upon his return from California he became secretary of the Somerset Steam Saw Mill Company, which furnished the timber for the first bridge built by the Central Railroad over Newark Bay and also for many piers in New York.

Mr. LaTourette has lived a retired life for many years in the old homestead, which was built by Mrs. LaTourette's grandfather, Abraham Staats, a noted patriot during the Revolution, and one of the four men to whom Lord Howe refused to grant amnesty. General Steuben occupied this house during the time the American Army was encamped in this vicinity, and General Washington and other distinguished men were frequent visitors.

Mr. LaTourette retained his faculties to the last and just before he died called his family to his bedside, bade them all farewell and said he hoped to meet them in the Promised Land.

In politics Mr. LaTourette was an ardent Democrat. He never held office, although often urged by his friends to do so. He was one of the oldest members of the Presbyterian church.

THEIR LATEST MARK.

Burglars Are Finding Somerville a Good Field for Their Labors.

Somerville, Aug. 6—Petty burglars seem to be making this town a mark for their fine work nowadays. Yesterday morning the home of Jacob Klawe was broken into and thoroughly ransacked. The robbers effected an entrance by prying up a window. After eating a square meal they took the contents of two children's pocketbooks, containing about 75 cents, and a gold watch belonging to James Collier, who boards with the Klawe family. The occupants of the house knew nothing of thieves' visit until they saw the disordered rooms the next morning.

This is only one of the many houses that have been broken into here the past month or so.

WATER CO. ENLARGES CAPACITY OF PUMPS

Will Enlarge Pumping Station to Meet the Increased Demands of Last Few Years.

HUGE PUMP EXPECTED.

WILL BE EQUAL TO TWO PUMPS NOW IN USE THERE.

Foundation Ready and Waits Arrival of New One—Suction Pipes From Wells to Pump Are Being Lowered—What Will Result.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company has been busy for several months in making extensive changes and improvements in its pumping station at Netherwood and it is not expected that the work will be finished before the beginning of next year. The pumping station was originally designed for the city of Plainfield only, not even including the borough, and was partly constructed by the Water Works Company when it was purchased by the present company and completed subsequently according to the original design. Subsequently the company's system of mains was extended throughout the borough and still later the Union Water Company laid a main from Netherwood to Elizabeth with lateral systems in all the intervening towns and obtained water from the Netherwood pumping station for its customers. In this way the pumping station came to be out of proportion to the systems of mains—nearly eighty miles in all—supplied by it, and the extensions of the mains made since the works were built, more than ten years ago, have increased the disproportion.

Last winter the company decided to enlarge its pumping plant, so as to be able to cope with all demands likely to be made upon it for several years to come. The first step was to order a new pump, to be made by Worthington, having a capacity to pump 5,000,000 gallons a day. The order was given in January and the pump is still in course of construction in Brooklyn. It is to be a duplex triple expansion pumping engine with all the modern and approved devices for efficiency and economy in operation. It will be placed in the main part of the building where the pumps now in use originally stood, but the top of its foundation will be twenty-one feet below the surface of the ground. That is as low as it is possible to draw the water down by means of the two pumps now in use, one having a capacity of 3,000,000 and the other of 2,000,000 gallons a day.

The new pump will be vertical, that is, the water cylinders will be down in the bottom of the pumping pit, actually below the normal level of the water in the wells and the steam cylinders, six in number, three on each side of the pump, will rise to a point about fifteen feet above the surface of the ground, the height of the pumps being about thirty-six feet in all. By this arrangement the company will not be required to lift water by suction—except possibly for a few feet while pumping rapidly—it being considered better practice to force water up rather than lift it by suction any further than is absolutely necessary.

The pit in which the new pump will stand is a perfect circle, having an inside diameter of eighteen feet. It was excavated inside of the stone building and within six feet of the brick chimney, without causing a single crack in the walls. To prevent the walls and chimney from falling the excavation was made inside of an iron tank without a bottom. The tank was riveted together inside of the building. It consists of three rings each seven feet wide and each being twenty feet in diameter. As soon as the first ring was riveted together the earth inside was excavated and the ring jarred down as fast as the earth was taken out. When the excavation had reached a depth of seven feet the second ring was riveted on top of the first and the excavation continued for seven feet more. Then the third ring was put on and the excavation continued to a depth of twenty-one feet. A pulsometer was kept in operation to remove the water as the work progressed. The iron rings were thoroughly coated inside and out with asphaltum before being sunk and afterwards they were lined with several courses of tar paper, then a brick wall was laid up in cement against the iron inside and the inside of the brick wall plastered with cement.

The foundation for the new pump was laid in hydraulic cement its bottom being five feet below the bottom of the iron casing. The floor of the pit not covered by the foundation of the pump was filled in with layers of concrete, tar paper and asphalt eighteen inches thick. The inside of the brick wall is to be painted white. Amos Andrews, engineer of the company, designed and supervised the construction of the pit and has been highly complimented on the success of his clever achievement.

By locating the water end of the pump so far beneath the surface of the ground it was necessary to place the suction pipes connecting the wells with the pump twenty feet below the surface. This work is now being done. There are twenty-five wells in all, ranging from fifty to 400 feet in depth. The pipes connecting five of the wells have already been lowered, and it will require several weeks, perhaps months to lower the others. The work can only progress slowly because of the necessity of keeping the pumps constantly in operation.

When the entire improvement as planned shall be completed the company will be able to pump 10,000,000 gallons of water a day. The cost of the work, it is said, will exceed $25,000 and work and material costing nearly as much will have been discarded.

There are several curious devices in use at the pumping station. One is an arrangement of pipes and tanks, invented and patented by Mr. Andrews, whereby cylinder oil is recovered after passing through the pumps and is used again and again. As a large quantity of oil is used this arrangement effects a considerable economy in operation.

Another interesting apparatus, recently installed, registers the elevation of the water in the tank on the mountain so that it can be emptied and filled every day without the trouble of looking into the tank to see whether it is full or empty. The device consists of two machines, similar to clock-works, one located at the tank and the other at the pumping station connected with a wire and operated by electricity.

But perhaps the most mysterious thing about the place is the Venturi meter, which measures the water delivered by the Plainfield Company to the Union Company at Netherwood by the pressure and velocity of water in the main. This very ingenious device cannot be explained without a model or in the presence of an actual machine in operation. The company has tried in many ways to catch the meter in error, but it has never failed to measure the water with almost absolute accuracy.

When the improvements now being made are completed a visit to the pumping station will be a pleasant and very interesting trip. The engineer in charge is always glad to receive visitors and show them around.

J. A. METS' NEW BOOK.

County Superintendent of Schools Is Author of Historical Volume.

"Naval Heroes of Holland," is the title of a book recently issued from the Abbey Press, of New York, which ought to interest readers of Dutch ancestry. Superintendent of Schools J. A. Mets, of Somerset county, is the author of the volume, and the touches of ancestral enthusiasm and pride which pervade its chapters add to the vivid descriptions of Dutch heroism.

The building of the navy of the Dutch Republic from its first beginnings is described in the opening chapters, and the author forges what he terms a "missing link" in the chain of the world's events, on a chapter entitled "The Beggars of the Sea." He considers these men as no mere piratical plunderers. "The rights and liberties enjoyed by us here now, are the outcome of the heroic deeds of these 'Beggars of the Sea,'" writes Mr. Mets. It was found impossible to deal with all the Dutch naval heroes, but the four most prominent were chosen and their exploits described with a vividness which will delight every boy who peruses the volume. The events brought out are healthful and inspiring, as well as instructive, and comprise some of the most thrilling exploits during an epoch of heroes.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning August 10, "A Possession In Addition." Text, II Pet. i, 4-9.

What we are is shown by what we would like to have. Not what one has, but what he wants, is the best test of his nature. But we are not very often able to get all the things we wish. Many seek to be rich; only a few succeed. Many want to be happy; multitudes only succeed in being miserable. There are many things which most folks can never have.

But the most desirable things in all the world are freely and fully open to every one who truly wishes for them. Peter says that "all things that pertain to life and godliness" are given to us. This means more than existing, more than getting health and wealth and the things of the world. Jesus asked, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Our goal is the gaining the true self, the attaining unto likeness to the divine nature, the participation in the power and perfections of God, and so sharing in His glory and blessedness. This chance to get the highest and best which is possible does not come to us from our common nature, but is a gift of God. It is a special privilege offered us by His glory and power. It comes through a peculiar knowing of God which is entirely different from the ordinary knowledge of God. This is in addition to all the ordinary mercies and benefits which are given to men in the common course of life.

The divine power and glory have given to us the fulfillment of what was promised to the fathers and only dimly understood by them. The promise of a personal Saviour has been kept. His was the first promise made to the sinful race and carries with it all possibilities of goodness. This Son of God has been given us as our Redeemer. With Him was also promised the Holy Spirit to be our guide and helper. But the prophecy of His coming brightened all the Old Testament ages. Jesus repeated the assurance which the Baptist had with great energy given that the spirit of power and purity should be given the seekers after God. This promise has been fulfilled, and we have received the gift more precious than all others which human nature can have.

Life takes on new meaning and worth is added to it beyond all calculation as the Saviour and Holy Spirit by power and beauty to the soul to become like the divine Father, escaping from the lust and corruption which are in the world.

The end is not here. The power and glory are wholly a gift of God, but our acceptance is not acceptation into a mere passive, but full of action and self exercise. The beginning is in our faith in God. The final end is in love. Between these lie all the active virtues of Christian being and doing. These qualities of our nature add each other and hand in hand make a glorious company of helpers and defenders of the soul life.

God gives the Saviour and Holy Spirit. We are to contribute diligence. In our faith we are to add virtue, which is the old idea of fortitude, firmness, manliness—not effeminacy nor ease, but vigor and strenuousness of life. In this vigorous life we are to add knowledge or discretion, a sobriety and discernment of right. Then we secure self control and hold appetites to their proper place. This leads to patience, a temper of soul which does not fret nor hurry, but bides its time. All this leads to a godliekness and oneness with God which produce care for fellow men and are crowned with genuine love.

The Value of Sentiment.

Sentiment is more potent among men than is logic or morals, and it is well that this is so, for sentiment really gives practical power to both logic and morals in the realm of man's highest and profoundest personality. What is anything worth living for but a sentiment? Love of one's self, that is one so many ready to die for it, is but a sentiment. Honoring the memory of a dead dear one—of one's child or wife or mother—is only a sentiment. Going to church on Sunday or Friday or Friday or Easter is a sentiment. Doing what is demanded by hard logic or cold duty is comparatively a lifeless act unless the life and warmth of sentiment accompany it. Logic and duty are the ministers of their power, but practical efficiency on sentiment. That fact should be borne in mind by whoever would lead or inspire his fellows in the right way.—Sunday School Times.

Character Ripening.

Not all Christian people bear loss, sorrow and sickness in a victorious way. Too often do we see men yielding to trouble, not growing more beautiful in soul, but losing their spiritual beauty in life's trials. This is not the way it should be, however. Our character should ripen in life's weather, whatever the weather may be. "Tribulation worketh patience." The object of life is to learn to live. We are at school here. We shall always be at school until we are dismissed from earth's classes to be promoted into heaven. It is a pity if we do not learn our lessons. It is a pity if we grow no gentler, no kindlier, no more thoughtful, no more unselfish, no more unworldly as the years pass over us.—Christian Intelligencer.

Love.

Love is a day.
With no thought of morrow.
Love is a joy,
With no thought of sorrow.
Love is to give,
With no thought of receiving
Love is to trust,
Without quite believing.

MIDDLESEX MAY GIVE UP FREEHOLDER BOARD

And Substitute a Commission of Five Under Law Passed Last Winter at Trenton.

MUST BE VOTED UPON.

PETITION BEING CIRCULATED ASKING THAT QUESTION BE PUT TO VOTE.

New Brunswick Home News Tells of Progress of Movement and Some of the Arguments For and Against It.

Steps are already being taken, says The New Brunswick Home News, to submit to the voters at the coming election the act introduced by Senator Theodore Strong and passed by the last Legislature providing for a commission of five to take the place of the Board of Freeholders.

It is first required that a petition asking that the act be submitted to the people be presented, signed by 5 per cent. of the total number of voters in a county. This petition is now being circulated and already bears a great many signatures. The prospects are it will be signed by the required number, and that the act will be voted on at the fall election.

The five commissioners to be elected by the people cannot be voted for at the fall election. The law requires that the act first be submitted to the people, and that the election of these commissioners take place with the regular ticket at the following election, provided, of course, that the people vote in favor of the act.

Persons opposing the new law are trying to give the impression that, if it goes into effect, the candidate will be picked from New Brunswick, and that the rest of Middlesex county will not get a fair representation on the board. The law allows that these commissioners may be taken from any part of the county, but the politicians on either side would not dare attempt such a suicidal stroke as to show any preference. It would mean defeat in the county if all city men were nominated and if a voter in the city if the men were all taken from the county. The political leaders are in duty bound to give the whole county a fair representation in the commission. They can nominate all their assemblymen from New Brunswick if they like, but they know too well that the county would not tolerate such treatment. The case is the same with the commission law. It is safe to say, however, that if the new act goes into effect the whole county will be fairly represented.

It has also been argued that five commissioners are not sufficient to covers the county. This has been shown to be untrue, as, for instance, in Pennsylvania many counties are governed by a commission of three.

The first prize was a handsome tray of lacquered ware and the second a silver thimble case; while the men's trophies consisted of a silver match box and a letter holder.

Those of the guests at the table who took part in the evening play were Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Stothoff, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Squires, Mr. and Mrs. Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey, Mr. and Mrs. Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Bailey, Mrs. Perkins, Miss Perkins, Mrs. Dodd, Mrs. McManus, Miss Leila Howard, Mr. Smith, Dr French, Mr. Jackson.

H. F. Coriell for Sheriff?

Latest among the political stories emanating from Elizabeth is one which places in the field for the nomination for sheriff another Plainfielder, Councilman B. Frank Coriell. It is claimed that this is merely a movement on the part of the Cross supporters to weaken the chances of City Judge Runyon for the senatorship by having two candidates from this city.

Sewer Bed Tests.

Leon E. Thurlow, health officer, has commenced a series of exhaustive tests of the sewage beds and thus far they have been very satisfactory. When Mr. Thurlow returns from his vacation he will continue the tests.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 10—Commenced by Rev. S. H. Doyle. Topic.—A suggestion in addition.—II Pet. i, 5-9.

The reference here is to the familiar passage in the epistle of Peter in which he sets forth the necessity and importance of developing many of the Christian graces. The Christian life consists of no one virtue, but of many, and these are intimately associated together, and the development of one oftentimes leads to the development of another, and the neglect of one will also often hinder the growth and development of others. Therefore, the apostle says to his readers, "Giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue and to virtue knowledge and to knowledge temperance and to temperance patience and to patience godliness and to godliness brotherly kindness and to brotherly kindness charity." This is the sum in addition to which the topic refers.

The lesson before us in addition consists of eight parts. (1) Faith. Faith is the foundation. It is not taken for granted. Without faith it is impossible to please God. Without Him, a life might contain many noble virtues, but unless based upon and inspired by faith in God through Christ it is not acceptable unto him. (2) Virtue. This is not charity, but valor. It refers to bravery or to Christian courage. It is the courage that inspires a man with no fear of doing right, but makes him afraid to do that which is wrong in the sight of God. (3) Knowledge. The knowledge here referred to is not the knowledge which comes through the study of books, but practical knowledge. It is a knowledge that makes us know the right and the wrong and includes the power of doing the right and shunning the wrong. (4) Temperance. The word temperance here means self control, with special application to sobriety or temperance in drink. It includes temperance in all things—control of the tongue, the temper and the appetites and the passions. (5) Patience. There is no more important virtue than that of Christian patience. God Himself is our greatest example of patience. How patiently He bears with us in all our shortcomings and in our transgressions against His law! In this respect we should follow His example. (6) Godliness. Godliness refers to reverence for God or to piety. It should include reverence for everything that pertains to God and should manifest itself in a pious and godly life. (7) Brotherly kindness. All men are brothers in Christ and should love. It follows therefore that brotherly kindness includes all men. It refers not to those who are bound to us by the natural ties of life, but those who are bound to us by the common tie of relationship in Christ. (8) Charity. Our love toward all these should be that of kindness. Kind words and kind deeds should characterize our relationship to all men. (8) Charity. Charity means love. It includes love to God and also love to our fellowmen.

The importance of all these virtues, both singly and in combination, is evident and apparent to us all. The beauty of a life founded upon faith and developed by the addition of such virtues as are mentioned is self-contented until it reaches its climax in love to God and love to men is self evident and is at once seen to be worthy the ambition and the desire of all Christians.

It is worth noting also that these virtues are intimately associated the one with the other. If one figure in a problem in addition is wrong, it necessarily makes the entire problem wrong. It would be impossible to get the correct result if one of the parts of the problem is defective. It is also true in our moral lives that one defective virtue may destroy the beauty and the glory of many others. How many people there are in the world who would be looked upon almost as models if it were not for one defect in their lives. A false note in music will destroy the entire harmony; so a false note in one's life will destroy its harmony. These graces must be developed in the development of each one of them. Therefore it well becomes us to give time and thought to the solution of this problem suggested here by the apostle. We should strive to be proficient in adding one virtue to the other until we shall possess the entire list and are able to demonstrate in our lives that this example has been correctly solved.

The Spirit and the Method.

Never has the spirit of the Master been more richly shed abroad in the hearts of His disciples. On the other hand, never was the Christian church so tempted by wild and impossible schemes, so open to all kinds of delirious talk, so trustful to unknown and irresponsible adventurers, so considerate to faddists and cranks of eccentrics, so impatient of common sense and moderate counsels. Never was our religion so zealous or so impulsive, never so devoted or so excited, never so ready to hear or so careless whether the truth be simple or a charlatan. Never has there been made of Jesus' spirit or less of Jesus' method.—Ian Maclaren's "Life of the Master."

Contentment.

No grace is more essential to happiness and usefulness than contentment. —"Windows For Sermons."

Her Angelus.

Among the leaves she hears the old sweet song;
That nature loves to tell in twilight hours;
Along the western sky she sees the glory
Of sunset splendor caught from heaven-ly bowers.
She stands transfigured in the tall dark grasses;
The mystic scene and spell her heart re-joice;
She feels God's presence as the daylight passes
And in the stillness, praying, hears His voice.
—Philadelphia Ledger.

LITERARY.

The fiction number of Scribner's Magazine is a remarkable issue in the eminence of its authors, the absorbing interest of their contributions and the richness of the illustrations. To have Rudyard Kipling, J. M. Barrie, F. Hopkinson Smith, Richard Harding Davis, Edith Wharton and Quiller-Couch contributors to a single issue of a magazine is unprecedented. In addition some of the cleverest among the younger writers are represented—Miss Josephine Dodge Daskam, Mrs. Andrews, Sewell Ford and Arthur Rahl.

Rudyard Kipling shows his keen appreciation of the latest thing in science as material for romance. "Wireless" is the title of his story, and it is suggested by the "Marconi business." It starts in a Marconi station back of a drug store on the coast of England, and develops into one of the weirdest and most imaginative tales that Mr. Kipling ever wrote. No other man living could have written it, and it stands alone as a work of strong imagination and the highest literary skill.

The beginning of a new serial by J. M. Barrie is an event in the world of letters. "The Little White Bird" is a most delightfully fanciful tale of an old club bachelor, a young married couple and a charming little boy. All of the pathos and tender fancy which characterizes Barrie at his best will be found in this story, which will be completed in the fall numbers. What the "Child's Garden of Verses" is to lovers of Stevenson, "The Little White Bird" will become to the lovers of Barrie.

F. Hopkinson Smith's masterpiece, "Oliver Horn," is concluded with such skill that no reader will have any doubt that Mr. Smith has created something which will last.

CITY'S MILK SUPPLY IS NOW IMPROVING

Furnished by Forty-Two Retail and One Wholesale Dealer to People of Plainfield.

TAKING MORE CARE.

HEALTH OFFICER THURLOW IS NOW IN CHARGE OF THAT DEPARTMENT.

His Efforts Have Resulted in An Improvement on the Part of the Dealers—Will be Ready to Enforce New Health Code Soon.

It is a question of considerable interest to residents of Plainfield and North Plainfield as to the milk supply in this section. On a few occasions poor milk and the too careless handling of it has resulted in the outbreak of disease and it is a fact that dealers cannot be too careful as to where and how they get the milk they sell and how they handle it before it gets to the consumer. Since the Plainfield Board of Health has placed Health Office Leon R. Thurlow in charge of a certain department of the board's work, there has been less trouble with the milk supply, although in some cases it has been a difficult task to bring the careless dealers up to the mark.

It will surprise the people of Plainfield to know that only a very small percentage of the dealers, three in all, have taken out certificates at the Board of Health. There are forty-two retail milk dealers and one wholesale dealer selling milk in Plainfield. This milk comes from ninety dairies, some good, some indifferent. These dairies are located at Mt. Pleasant, New Market, Stirling, Greenbrook road, Finderne, Raritan and Budd's Lake, any where from a half mile to forty miles from the city.

Mr. Thurlow now keeps a detailed record of the milk supplied by each dealer as well as the condition under which it is produced. Prior to this year no such reports was kept and therefore this year's result cannot be judged by that of preceding years, but taking into consideration the supply is believed to be ahead of last year's as regards purity and sanitary conditions.

Mr. Thurlow has been kept in his office a great deal during the past two months and has not been able to make as frequent inspections as he would like. As soon as he returns from his vacation he will take up this part of his work with renewed vigor and when the new health code is adopted in its complete form, he will enforce every provision of it, which he will have authority to do.

It is estimated that between 4,000 and 5,000 quarts of milk are sold in Plainfield every day. A large majority of the dealers keep their own cows, while there are a few who depend on farmers for the supply of milk for their customers. There is a tendency to better the conditions of producing milk.

According to the best health rules there are two very important things that will give the best results. The first thing is absolute cleanliness in producing the milk, that is about the cow barns, cows, and with the milkers. In the second place the milk must be properly cooled and the best authority says that the milk should be kept at 50 degrees, no higher, until it reaches the hands of the consumer. By doing this very little trouble is likely to happen in the way of sour milk. It has been learned that many dealers are gradually adopting the plan of aresting milk. This is considered a safe and sure way of handling it.

Last week Mr. Thurlow received a sample of milk which was produced on July 10. It was perfectly sweet and no trouble was experienced in keeping it. Of course, it was iced and had been produced under the best of condition. But it only shows what can be done in the way of selling pure milk. However, Plainfield is considered fortunate as regards her milk supply. In larger cities the risk is much greater for the outbreak of disease through milk, but it is the purpose of the health officer to raise the standard until it is the best possible and there is not a dealer who should not assist him in his commendable effort.

TROUBLE OVER SCHORB'S BARN

Schorb Says He Will Build Despite Refusal of the Council to Grant Permission.

TALK OF A LAW SUIT.

Was Most Exciting Feature of an Otherwise Quiet Meeting—Mayor Wants Somerset Street Widened From Jackson Ave. to Mountain and From City Line to Front.

For a midsummer night's session last Friday's meeting of the Borough Council was well attended. When the mayor rapped for order every member of the body was in his place. Little beyond routine business was transacted. A short discussion in regard to the building ordinance introduced at the last meeting and a resolution in regard to the widening of the upper end of Somerset street were the only matters of any importance before the board.

Mayor Smalley called attention to the fact that Somerset street, from Jackson avenue to Johnston's drive, in a bad condition at any time was deplorably so during a rain storm. He thought that thoroughfare should be balanced and widened as far as Johnston's drive, and that a storm sewer should be provided for. During the recent rain storms the street between these points was in an almost impassable condition. Even under normal circumstances the narrowness of the highway, with the trolley road in the centre, made it very inconvenient for driving purposes. Much business that would otherwise come to the borough is thus diverted to adjacent towns. The mayor signified his intention of appearing before the Plainfield Council Monday evening and asking that body to have that portion of Somerset street within the city limits widened so as to correspond with the already broadened section of the thoroughfare within the borough. Councilman Nichols acted on the mayor's suggestion and offered a resolution which was unanimously adopted authorizing the street committee to look into the matter and report at the next meeting of the council.

John Schorb appeared before the board and asked permission to erect a frame extension to his present building on Manning avenue and Somerset street to be used for livery stable purposes. On the ground that a structure under the conditions provided for would be a menace to life and health, on motion of Councilman Northrop the permission was denied.

There was a question in Councilman Lee's mind as to whether such action by the council was legal, considering that the building ordinance, prohibiting the erection of other than brick or stone buildings on Somerset street, did not go into effect till last night, and that he understood that Mr. Schorb had already begun operations. He thought Councilman Northrop's resolution should be referred to the corporation counsel, in order to avoid any possibility of a suit against the borough. Councilman Lee was the only one to vote against the denying of the permission, on the grounds named, though he believed in the spirit of the resolution.

When Mr. Schorb began work a few days ago he received notice from Councilman Arnold to desist. Speaking to a reporter after the meeting Mr. Schorb claimed that there was no law for him to violate when he began, and signified his intention of going ahead with the work, and, if necessary, of legal action to uphold his stand. Members of the council, on other hand, say that the ordinance was introduced with a specific purpose in view and that no one had a right to begin building while the law was awaiting merely its second reading.

On motion of Councilman Arnold the building ordinance was amended so as to prohibit the erection of frame structures on Somerset street to the southerly line of Summit avenue, and also prohibiting the erection of like buildings on any grounds with 300 feet east or west of Somerset street. The ordinance as amended passed its second and third reading and went into effect immediately.

Nominated by the mayor, John H. Adelman and Lawrence Fahn, who have been acting as special marshals in the borough, were, on motion of Councilman Lee, authorized to serve as regular marshals. Councilman Lee's police report for the month past, showed six arrests, one for assault, four drunk and disorderly and one plain drunk. Three dollars were collected in fines.

The report of George F. Brown, collector and treasurer, showed taxes and interest, $156.13; Board of Health, $1.70; special school, $65.42; recorder, fines, $93; Frank Rowley, clerk, license, $10; bills payable, note, $1,000; balance on hand, July 1, $455.08; total receipts, $1,730.33; disbursements, $1,533.51; cash on hand, $196.82.

Chairman Arnold, of the street committee, reported expenditures as follows: Labor, cleaning streets, $74.55; macadamizing, $134.40; sprinkling, $90.60; stone for macadamizing, $259.23; total, $558.78.

Chairman Clark, of the fire, water and lamps committee, reported expenditures for the month of $12.50. On motion of Councilman Nichols the mayor and council were authorized and directed to borrow $1,000 payable on demand to meet current expenses.

OFFICER FOR DUTY AT RAILWAY STATION

Police Board Decided to Add Another Regular Man to Force for Duty There.

NOW NUMBER SIXTEEN.

NEW MAN WILL LOOK AFTER NORTH AVENUE STATION AND VICINITY.

Trouble With Hackmen and Increasing Business Made Change Necessary—Board Took Action at a Meeting Last Friday.

Metropolitan principles have been brought into operation with regard to the police regulations of Plainfield, as far as the detail of a regular officer at the railway station is concerned. At a meeting of the Police Board Friday night, this decision was reached. The plan will be inaugurated at once.

For some time, it has been apparent that a man has been needed at North avenue, because of the frequent trouble among the hackmen, as well as because of the increasing traffic in that vicinity. It had been considered a wise plan to have an officer there, but the size of the force would not admit detailing a man upon that work alone, because of the needs of the other parts of the city.

Now, however, the provisions of the Police Board make it possible to bring about the desired improvement in the service. Last Friday's meeting arranged for the needed addition to the force, with the understanding that the extra man would allow for one to be used at the railway station and at the trolley terminus on Watchung avenue. It is generally conceded that there is work enough for a regular man between those two places. So, the beginning of a reserve squad will be made.

With the increase thus provided for, here will be sixteen regular men upon the local police force. For some time, the department has been slightly handicapped, owing to illness among the men, and especially by the absence of Patrolman Flanagan, who has been ill for months. Now, with a new man, matters will be in better shape for efficient service than ever before.

WATER PLANT ALL READY

ELIZABETH'S NEW PLANT HAS MET ALL THE REQUIREMENTS.

Fifteen Days Test Showed That the Daily Capacity Exceeded 5,000,000 Gallons.

After a test, lasting fifteen days, ending last week, the new plant of the Elizabethtown Water Company at Springfield was declared to be satisfactory. The required capacity of 5,000,000 gallons every twenty-four hours was exceeded by nearly a million gallons in the aggregate.

The test was begun on Friday, July 11, by Arthur J. Connolly, the contractor, who sank the wells. A double force of men were employed, including gangers to read the water meters, and the machinery, consisting of four small compressors and four boilers, composing the contractor's plant, and two boilers and one large high and low pressure compressor, composing the plant of the company, was driven under forced draft. Everything passed off without a hitch.

After the test was concluded the works were closed down and will remain so for a week, while repairs are being made. When this is completed the formal turning over of the plant to the company by the contractor will take place.

John Whalen, the secretary of the company, was present when the test ended. It was anticipated that probably more water would have been obtained than there was, and a bonus was awaiting the contractor. It is said that there was an abundance of water but the power to force it out was not adequate. The plant was begun two years ago. The company has two other plants, one at Union of 4,000,000 gallons capacity, and a third in Elizabeth.

Mrs. Cadmus, of Craig place, has returned from Ocean Grove, where she has been spending six weeks.

TELEPHONE INCIDENT.

Eavesdropper on a Party Line Is Taught a Lesson Which She Will Never Forget.

Telephone party lines have their amusements as well as their discomforts. When the telephone rings for a neighbor across the way it is the greatest temptation in the world for some women quietly to take down the receiver and hear what is going on. One woman who has been quite annoying to the other people on her party line got a lesson the other day she will doubtless remember. The telephone, says the Kansas City Journal, rang and, as usual, she went to it and quietly took the receiver down so that the two who were trying to talk could hear each other only indistinctly.

"YES, MRS. M—, YOU KNOW."

"Hello, hello, Mrs. Brown. Oh, dear, somebody's got down their receiver. Can you hear me? Oh, I wish they'd stop that!" The woman who was listening heard her distinctly.

"No, I can just barely hear you," came the answer indistinctly. "It's so provoking, isn't it. Now, I want you to come—"

The rest of the sentence was lost.

"Hello, Mrs. Brown—hello! Can you hear me now?"

"Yes, a little—that woman across the street has got her receiver down —that's Mrs. M. you know. I guess she rushes to the telephone to hear what I've got to say every time my 'phone rings."

"Indeed, and I don't do any such a thing," came the third voice, and the two women who were trying to talk heard the receiver go up with a soft click.

"I guess she got excited and forgot herself," said Mrs. Brown.

"Yes, I rather think she did," came the answer.

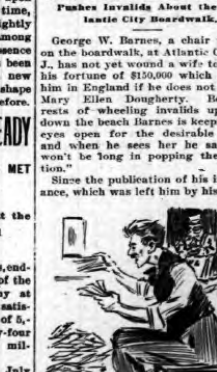
The party line of that neighborhood works better since the incident.

LOOKING FOR A BRIDE.

While Doing It George W. Barnes Pushes Invalids About the Atlantic City Boardwalk.

George W. Barnes, a chair pusher on the boardwalk, at Atlantic City, N. J., has not yet wound a wife to share his fortune of $150,000 which awaits him in England if he does not marry Mary Ellen Dougherty. Between rests of wheeling invalids up and down the beach Barnes is keeping his eyes open for the desirable "one" and when he sees her he says: "I won't be long in popping the question."

Since the publication of his inheritance, which was left him by his uncle,



FLOODED WITH LOVE LETTERS.

William P. Barnes, under the one condition, Barnes has been flooded with letters from women who are "just dying to meet him."

"They're all too willing," says Barnes. "Uncle William always had an aversion to Miss Dougherty and I suppose that's why he left me the money on the condition that I would not marry her. My lawyer informs me that as soon as I marry anyone but her I can legally claim the money."

A Hint for Bon Vivants.

A great deal of the so-called champagne drunk in this country is really made in France of American apples. The apples are here cored, sliced and dried, sent to France, and there converted into cider. Carbonic acid gas is added, with yeast and a little flavoring powder, and some of the connoisseurs smack their lips over it, under the delusion that it is real champagne.

A SITE HAS BEEN SELECTED

BUT LOCATION OF STATE CONSUMPTIVES' HOME NOT MADE PUBLIC.

The Commission's Committee Has Finished Its Work, But Withholds Nature of Report.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Hoboken, August 2—Colonel E. A. Stevens and the other members of the commission's committee appointed to discover and report for a site for the proposed New Jersey sanitarium for tuberculous diseases, have finished their work, but the nature of the report which they have to make has not been disclosed. It seems, however, that they found it anything but an easy task to select a site suitable in every way for the more or less unusual purpose for which it is required. There are so many considerations, by no means the least being indispensable economy, that the task is anything but an easy one.

Colonel Stevens, who has taken a very active interest in this matter from the start, in discussing the subject, said:

"It must be remembered that medicine is not an important item in the treatment of consumptives. Good, substantial food and plenty of fresh air are the agencies depended upon for the amelioration of the consumptive's condition. Now we take it that there are about 1,000 consumptives in the State. We have heard from 500, and that we estimate to be about one-half of the actual number.

"Suppose we open a home with about 200 inmates. These 200 would require food and clothing and attendance. These facts would, of course, bring us face to face with the problem of railroad facilities for both freight and passengers. It would be an important matter to locate where we can secure the lowest railroad rates, which would mean much in the economy of management at the end of each year. Then attendants would be required, and their transportation would be another matter to be considered.

"If you go to the pine woods in South Jersey," Colonel Stevens continued, "you find that there are two frightfully hot months in the summer, and you also find that the mosquitoes are a pest, but the winter is not severe, annd good water and drainage can be had. In the northern section of the State the winters are much harsher, the summer is cooler and there are no mosquitoes.

"In considering the question of a central location it must be remembered that Essex and Hudson counties show by far the heaviest returns of indigent consumptives."

The report of the committee will, it is said, be forwarded to the board of managers in a short time, and future action in connection with the report will be taken probably at the next meeting of that board.

ONLY THE FAMILY KNEW

MISS ANNA SCHLICK AND EDWARD P. TOWNLEY WERE WEDDED.

Ceremony Took Place at St. Mary's Rectory Wednesday July 30—Those Who Attended.

Without any word of warning except to their immediate relatives, Miss Anna Schlick, of West Third street, and Edward P. Townley were quietly married at St. Mary's rectory Wednesday, July 30. No announcement of the wedding was made until late Thursday, after the couple had left town upon their honeymoon trip. They have gone to New York, whence they will return this week to begin housekeeping for themselves in a house in the West End.

At the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Father Farley at 7 o'clock, the bride was attended by Miss Lena Emery, while James Daly acted as best man. The only others present at the services were Mr. and Mrs. William Townley, Miss Margaret Townley and Mrs. Henry Ackerman, the latter a sister of the bride. Afterwards a wedding supper was served at the home of Mrs. Ackerman, prior to the departure of the couple upon their bridal tour.

Both bride and groom are well known and popular in the West End. Mrs. Townley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Schlick. The groom is a machinist by trade and also a call man at the fire department. The couple began their married life with the best wishes of a host of friends.

Prize Choristers.

The prize choristers of Grace P. E. church for July were Edwin Scheller, John Voss, Clarence Steiner, the Misses Carrie Fuller and Florence Lawson.

Mrs. J. S. Harden, of South Branch, is visiting her son in Plainfield for a time.

Miss Hattie Matticou, of the Board of Health office, has returned from her summer outing.

DOG SAVED THE PAIL

But the Bear and the Grocery man Made Their Escape.

How a Tin Bucket Came Back to Its Owner After It Had Been Worn by Bruin as a Sort of Rakish Helmet.

"I lost an eight-quart tin pail on the Pocono huckleberry barrens one summer in a manner that was certainly extraordinary," said John Gilbert, the traveling groceryman, to a Chicago Inter Ocean man, "and it came back again in a way that was quite as extraordinary.

"I was up there seeking rest, and, with strange inconsistency, got it into my head one day that I would go out huckleberrying. To make this trip of mine I borrowed an eight-quart tin pail at the farm where I was living, and, accompanied by the farmer's very intelligent shepherd dog Sandy, sallied forth.

"The berry barren was a mile or so away, and along toward noon I had my pail pretty near filled with nice, big berries. I had enough and was thinking about starting back home, when I heard Sandy barking in a peculiar manner off in the brush, and I went to see why he was doing it.

"I carried my pail of berries along with me, as the course toward the spot was homeward. When I opened the bushes and stepped into the opening beyond them I saw at once that it was a great pity I wasn't a bear hunter, for then I would perhaps have swelled with joy.

"As it was the sight gave me no pleasure at all. It was a bear that seemed to me to tower up at least eight feet as he stood erect on his haunches.

"I was so scared that I couldn't move, but when the came near enough I mechanically raised my pail of berries and brought it down on his head like a trip hammer. The blow had no effect on the bear, but it made a very sick-looking utensil out of the pail. And it spilled all my berries.

SANDY RETURNED THE PAIL.

"The bear came right on, and in my desperation I jammed the battered pail down over his head. The pail handle dropped down and caught under his lower jaw. This took him by surprise. The pail was well down over his ears, and the handle held it securely in position.

"The bear dropped on all fours and made frantic efforts to scrape the pail off, first with one paw and then with the other. Sandy assumed that his strategic move had worked to the proper result, and he retired from between my legs and attacked the enemy in the rear.

"The bear at once abandoned the attempt to get the cumbering pail off of his head, and turned on the dog. The dog at once renewed his strategic tactics and took his position between my legs again.

"I hadn't moved an inch from my original stand. When the bear, with the undoubted purpose that he had had shown in the white feather again, saw him in his old place between my legs, he advanced to the charge again, the pail still perched on his head, and cocked to one side in a rakish way, giving him a most comical appearance in spite of his rage—something as a helmeted soldier might look with a jag on.

"The bear came on and Sandy retreated. A good-sized stone lay near me. I picked it up and threw it at the bear. I hit him alongside the head and he bawled like a mad bull.

"Then Sandy came back and pitched in again, and I took advantage of the engagement to streak it for home. I turned once and looked back.

"The bear, still with his rakish helmet on, was doing his best to get his clutch on the dog, and the dog was dodging him and nipping him every now and then in the rear. If Sandy wanted to stay there and fight it out with the bear, I thought that was his own business. It was me for home, and I wasn't long in getting there.

"Maybe it was an hour after I got in the road I was standing in the road and saw Sandy come trotting along, looking a little tired, but with never a hitch nor a halt. And in his mouth he had the eight-quart tin pail.

"The pail would have been battered worse if a wagon had run over it, but it was the pail, and Sandy had it. He never noticed me, but went on to the house and put the pail on the back stoop.

"How he got the pail away from the bear, of course we never knew, but Sandy was never chummy with me after that, and I always thought he had it on his mind that if I hadn't run away from him that day we might have got the bear, too."

THEATRICAL.

Among the first of New York's theatres to open its doors to begin its regular fall season, will be the Academy of Music, which opens Thursday evening, August 7, for a limited engagement of the latest New England drama "Quincy Adams Sawyer," a dramatization by Justin Adams from the book of the same name. This will be its first appearance before a New York audience, and, if half the promises are lived up to, it will be fit to rank with either the "Old Homestead," or "Way Down East." It is hoped that such will be the case.

The uniqueness of this country story is responsible, no doubt, for its great success. It tells of a young city-bred lawyer, refined and wealthy, who goes into the country for his health. With but one exception all the characters are country people. All the scenes are laid in a quiet New England village, and what seem more strange, and will be welcomed by the audience, is the fact that a clean refreshing story is told without the aid of a villain, a betrayed girl, the old well, a church choir, or any lost mortgage.

Unusual preparations are being made for this production, in fact, it was specially built for the Academy's great stage, and Manager Gilmore feels sure that another "Old Homestead," will be the result.

POLICEMEN WERE BEATEN

PICKED TEAM OF LEAGUE PLAYERS DID THE ACT.

The Game Was Played on the St. Mary's Field Friday Afternoon—Score 17 to 6.

The policemen's baseball nine were up against the real thing on St. Mary's field Friday afternoon. They faced a team composed of some of the best players in the city league, and although the guardians of the peace played with their good clothes on, they managed to make things very interesting at times for their opponents. At the end of the seventh inning the score stood 17 to 6 in favor of the picked team.

John Cose, the Hope magnate, and a member of the firemen's aggregation played out in right garden for the cops. It was Cose's debut on the ball field this year. His work was a little rocky but he showed up well at the bat. C. E. A. Heywood who got the nine together also donned the cops, also played out in centre field. It was also Mr. Heywood's first appearance on a local diamond this season and he outshone Manager Cose at every point. The other men on the two teams have frequently been seen on the ball field this summer.

The line-up was as follows:

TROLLEY MEN'S CLUB.

Motormen and Conductors Have Organized and Secured Rooms at Elizabeth.

Motormen and conductors on the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway have formed a club to maintain a room in Elizabeth for amusements for themselves, where checkers, dominoes and pool will furnish a pastime for their leisure time. They will have a reading room also, for those of literary taste. The club was prompted by the desire to employ the time in some way, while waiting for the turns on the cars, and will be the means of keeping the extra men on hand so they can be called on quickly when they are needed to take cars out.

Superintendent Ackarman, learning that such a club was forming, proposed to the company to pay the rent of the building on condition that the club allow the company's telephone to be put in there. It will be a convenience to the company as well as to the employes, because the men will be there when wanted.

RESIDENTIAL CHANGES.

Rentals Made in Town Through the Mulford Agency.

D. G. Roesch, of Central avenue, has rented Mr. Harrison's house on West Sixth street, near Lee place, and will take possession next month. W. E. Hyatt, of Bedford Park, has rented E. J. Low's house on Fairview avenue, and takes possession September 1. Mr. Low will remove to Philadelphia, where he is now engaged in a position with the New Jersey Central. These rentals were made through the agency of Mulford, of North avenue.

Miss Mary Hoagland, of Linden avenue, is entertaining two cousins from Belvidere.

LINEMAN WAS ALMOST KILLED

Daniel Guinee Thrown From Trolley Pole by Heavy Current of Electricity.

OCCURED AT WESTFIELD.

Accident Happened at 11 o'Clock Friday Morning — He Accidentally Touched Feed Wire While Working on Trolley Pole—Internal Injuries and Ankle Fractured.

Jarred by an electric current 1,000 volts strong, Daniel Guinee, a local telephone lineman, is lying at his home on West Third street in a serious condition. He was thrown from a trolley pole in Westfield Friday, at 11 o'clock, sustaining injuries, which, combined with the shock, fell only a little short of proving fatal. A broken ankle bone, with possible internal barks, besides the effect of the electricity, are the results of the accident.

Contact with the trolley feed wire was responsible for the trouble. Guinee was working upon a ladder at the top of a pole, along the line of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railway, when he accidentally touched the wire. At that particular point, the power was of unusual strength, and the full force of it was felt by the lineman as it grazed his body. Without any warning or chance to call for help, he dropped to the ground.

When his fellow workmen hurried to him, it was found that Guinee was experiencing convulsions, induced by the electric current. He had several spasms before the arrival of Dr. Sinclair, who was immediately summoned to the scene. The physician succeeded in quieting the unfortunate man and in making a superficial examination, he found one of the small bones in the ankle joint fractured, but it was impossible to tell the existence or extent of internal injuries.

According to the advice of the physician, the injured man was brought directly to his home in this city, where he was placed in bed under careful nursing. He is still suffering extremely from the effects of the electric current upon his system and is altogether in a precarious state.

MORE ROOM.

Requirements of Rahway Reformatory Make an Addition Necessary at Once.

Already plans and needs for the new wing at the Rahway reformatory are being earnestly discussed. In the part now built there are 256 cells. There are but ninety-eight of these now unfilled.

The institution will have been opened a year Tuesday. At its opening it was thought by the commission and others in authority that all possible arrivals could be well taken care of for five years at least. Now the question is "What is to be done when we get another even hundred?" Doubling up prisoners, putting two into one cell, is bad for discipline, for health and various other reasons. A few, perhaps a dozen, may have earned their right to a parole by the time the year rolls around, but there are already nearly that number now in waiting, who have been sentenced from the various courts of the State, and will be here inside of a month.

Supposing the new wing were to be started at once, it would be nearly a year before it was completed, and, judging the future by the past, inside of that time there will be 350 inmates, with less than 300 rooms for them.

To My Friends.

It is with joy I tell you what Kodol did for me. I was troubled with my stomach for several months. Upon being advised to use Kodol, I did so, and words cannot tell the good it has done me. A neighbor had dyspepsia so that he had tried most everything. I told him to use Kodol. Words of gratitude have come to me from him, because I recommended it.—Geo. W. Fry, Viola, Iowa. Health and strength, of mind and body, depend on the stomach, and normal activity of the digestive organs. Kodol, the great reconstructive tonic, cures all stomach and bowel troubles, indigestion, dyspepsia. Kodol digests any good food you eat. Take a dose after meals. L. W. Randolph.

It Needs a Tonic.

There are times when your liver needs a tonic. Don't give purgatives that gripe and weaken. DeWitt's Little Early Risers expel all poison from the system and act as tonic to the liver. W. Scott, 531 Highland avenue, Milton, Pa., says: "I have carried DeWitt's Little Early Risers with me for several years and would not be without them." Small and easy to take. Purely vegetable. They never gripe or distress. L. W. Randolph.

Leadership in the City Baseball League is still an unsettled question. Saturday's games failed to put any new phase on the situation. Y. M. C. A. had its game with the Safe Works well in hand when a disputed decision of the umpire's resulted in the withdrawal of the Safe Works team and the subsequent awarding of the game to Y. M. C. A. 9 to 0. This decision has been protested and it remains for the executive committee of the league to decide whether it was Y. M. C. A.'s game or whether it will have to be played over. This is the first incident of this kind that has broken the successful career of the league.

Hope Y. M. A. and St. Marys had the third contest to stretch out over the allotted nine innings. It was not until the twelfth inning that a misplay on the St. Mary's side gave Hope the needed tally to win 3 to 2. It was a good game and the personalities, which have been noticeable at previous games, were happily absent.

PITCHERS' BATTLE.

"Smiling Jimmy" Montross made another leap in popularity on Saturday afternoon by the superb work which was the real cause of the victory of the Hope Y. M. A. over St. Mary's. The game was a pitchers' battle from start to finish, and with proper support the score would have been 1 to 0 in Hope's favor. For twelve innings, Montross kept the opposing batsmen guessing, giving them only six hits, with a total of seven bases.

Costly errors were responsible for the nerve-wracking nature of the game. Honors seemed to belong to either sides, while the advantage seesawed back and forth from one to another, raising false hopes only to shatter them by some unlooked for rally. St. Mary's won the game in the eighth, through the generosity of the Hope fielders, and then lost it by misplays in the ninth, when victory was fairly within sight.

Then followed the harrowing extra innings, in which the fans suffered all the premonitory symptoms of heart failure and nervous prostration. At last, in the fateful twelfth, the driving pace proved too much for St. Mary's, and the wildest error of the game sent the winning Hope run across the plate.

For nine innings, Keefe pitched gilt edged ball for St. Mary's, with the best of support. In the ninth, after Lederer had made the first error, two hits followed, scoring the tying run, and Doyle was called into the box. At the same time, Magnie, who had been on the bench, was put in to bat for Munro and then placed in left field, Shortman going to short and Martin to third. The change had no appreciable effect upon the result.

Hope made the first run, and the only earned one, in the third, off Munro's single and Gordon's two bagger. In the ninth, Lederer dropped a long fly from Martin, who scored on Montross' hit to centre. The winning run was made by Gordon, who drew a pass to first and stole second. Shortman hit an easy grounder to Crotty, who allowed Gordon to pass within reaching distance in getting to third. When the crowd howled, Crotty lost his head and threw the ball high over first base, letting in the run.

St. Mary's scored the first run in the fourth on a fluke. With Lederer on third, Hartfelder tried to catch Barry on second by throwing to Montross, who passed the ball on to Martin. Like a flash, Lederer took the opening and came home. The second run also was a gift. Taylor reached first on a dead ball, second on Hewitt's muff, stole third and scored on Lederer's hit.

SAFE WORKS QUIT.

In the eighth inning, with one man out, and the score 6 to 3 in favor of the association nine, the Y. M. C. A.-Safe Works game on St. Mary's field Saturday afternoon ended in a fiasco. Symons batted and was out from Moore to Barnes. It was here the dispute began. Safe Works maintained not only that the ball was foul, but also contended that the umpire called "foul" and refused to abide by his decision that the ball was fair.

Umpire Young said that he did not call "foul" and he certainly ought to know. But there can be no doubt that Symons partially stopped after hitting the ball and would otherwise have been safe at first. That, however, was his own mistake. Neither can there by any doubt that if the umpire erred, his error was an error of judgment merely and does not constitute an illegal decision. Only on an illegal decision—that is, one conflicting with the rules—can an appeal for a revoke be made. The rules distinctly state that there can be no appeal from any decision rendered by the umpire in which any error of judgment is involved. Precluding the contention that the umpire called "foul" when the ball was struck—a contention which none can prove—there can be absolutely no grounds on which to base a protest.

Up to this juncture the game had been a clean and close exhibition. Wilhelm, the new twirler for the Safe Works, was an object of interest in the early part of the game. The kaiser showed that he was capable of pitching good ball. Four safe hits, hardly worthy of the name, were made off his delivery in the second, netting with a base on balls, three runs for Y. M. C. A. George Schoenmaker hit a ball between short and third, which no one touched, but which, nevertheless, should have been fielded. Smith sent a short rap over second baseman's head, and Pond bunted another ball which should also have been fielded, filling the bases. A free pass to Hand forced in a run and a safe hit by Ralph Schoenmaker brought in two more. The emperor was a little off in the fifth and after allowing three men to walk, Burns took his place in the box. Y. M. C. A. tallied two more in the seventh.

Burt was also generous with free passes. Two in the second and a base hit gave Safe Works a run. Franklin's double scored Enwright and Siegfried in the seventh.

DEFEATED DEAF MUTES.

The Scotch Plains baseball team administered a severe drubbing to the strong Xavier's Deaf Mute team, of New York, Saturday afternoon. The Plains boys had felt sore over their defeat by the mutes two weeks ago and every player was anxious to redeem himself and succeeded in winning from the visitors by a score of 10 to 2.

Fitzgerald, who was in the box for the visitors, proved to be an easy proposition to nearly all the home team, only one man being struck out. Harvey pitched an unusually strong game and with but several exceptions, one of which was in the Mutes' half of the first inning, received excellent support. Several little hits assisted by an error of Flannery dropping a fly in the outfield gave the visitors their first run. In their half of the seventh, they were able to bring another man across to plate, making their tally two.

The home players were shut out for the first two innings but after that they were enabled to score every inning but the seventh. Harvey, of the home team, distinguished himself by two two base hits at the proper time. Crusius, who has been playing short, was unable to play and Manager Johnston brought Albers in from the outfield to cover the position, playing Substitute Fitzgerald in right garden.

MATINEE RACES.

First of the Season Were Held by Members of Plainfield Driving Association.

For the first time this season, the members of the Plainfield Driving Association had a public meeting on Saturday afternoon, full of interest to many friends. Two first rate races were on the card, giving the spectators as pretty an exhibition as has been seen in a long time.

One particular feature was in the first heat of the event in which John Osborne's Fairmount Maid, Mayor Smalley's Alicia, D. C. Smalley's Ned Davis and George Jennner's New Market Belle were entered. Jenner's horse had led all the way to the three quarter pole, after which Ned Davis and Alicia drew up and made a driving finish, with all three abreast in a dead heat. In the second heat, Ned Davis won by a length.

Another interesting race was between Thomas Brantingham's Cigarette and A. C. Vail's Rover R., won by the former in 2.22. No races are scheduled for the coming Saturday, but another matinee is being planned for next week.

In the heart of the Pyrenees there is a microscopic state known as the Andorra republic, which maintains its independence among the formidable giants of Europe who surround it on all sides. Its nominal suzerain is a bishop, and it has an army of 600 stalwart mountaineers, ready at any moment to die for their national dignity and independence. There is something quite pathetic in the spectacle of the handful of armed men drilling and strutting in their mountain fastnesses, while on one side is Spain, which can produce 1,000 soldiers against one of the republic, and on the other side the army of France, which outnumbers them by nearly 6,000 to one.

A still more diminutive army is that which nominally protects the dominion of the prince of Monaco. As the principality is little more than a dozen times the size of Hyde park, London, it is not surprising that the soldiers who guard it only number 126, or that their duties are chiefly confined to making a brave show in their uniform and having a good time in generally.

Another army whose importance is by no means to be gaged by mere numbers is that of Luxemburg, which, when every available man is summoned to arms, numbers a round 500 warriors, all in gorgeous uniforms and full of military zeal. There are, in fact, no keener soldiers anywhere than these few hundreds of Luxem*burgers, who are responsible for the* safety of a population roughly equal to that of Leicester, and there is not a man among them who is not perfect in drill and soldierly accomplishments.

There is no more interesting state in Europe than San Marino, which from its rocky eminence has seen unmoved for centuries the convulsions of Europe, and has watched the birth and growth of new nations, compared with which it is the veriest pigmy. Perched on a high rock, it is better guarded by nature than even by its own valor; although, with the courage of a child, it has always been ready to wage battle with any giant who was daring enough to provoke it.

Much more ornamental is the army which forms the bodyguard of the pope, and which outnumbers fewer than the rival army of Italy counts thousands. But if its numbers are small it is the most aristocratic and cosmopolitan army in the world, for its members are recruited from all nation of Europe, and many of them are of noble blood. This, of course, is an army which is not meant to fight, although there is not one of its soldiers who, if occasion demanded, would not die for his sovereign pontiff.

The army of the prince of Montenegro is a much more businesslike body, for it consists of 35,000 hardy *and fierce mountaineers, who are cer*tainly among the bravest soldiers in Europe. The army is remarkable when one considers that the prince's subjects are scarcely more numerous than the inhabitants of Salford; so that at least one in every two males capable of bearing arms is a trained soldier.

The Honduras republic, with a population less than that of Birmingham, has a standing army of only 500 men to protect a country almost as large as England, although in time of war it could easily multiply its force by 20; and the Nicaraguan republic stakes its existence on the valor of the 2,000 men who form its army of defense.

Will Do No More Sliding.

A sliding pole in the engine house facilitates the descent of the firemen when they are in a hurry to reach the ground floor." Four ladies visited an engine-house in Yonkers, N. Y., and one of them, Miss Sallie Elsler, who weighs 306 pounds, thought it would be a grand thing to slide down the pole, as she had seen the firemen descend. When half-way down she released her clutch, and she dropped with such force that her leg was broken.

American Leather the Best.

American kid leathers are growing in favor abroad, especially in Australia. Recently one of the largest morocco manufacturers in Lynn, Mass., made a shipment to that country of 3,500 dozen skins, which shipment is said to be the largest ever made from there for foreign parts. It is not so very long ago when the best kid shoes were made from shoes imported from France. Now France is buying large quantities of kid from this country.

CORIELL'S CANDIDACY.

He Has Refused to State Whether He is a Candiate.

The story of the candidacy of President B. Frank Coriell, of the Common Council, for the shrievalty has been fast gaining ground throughout the county. Mr. Coriell has been interviewed a number of times but has refused to talk for publication. The general impression seems to be that he is a bonafide candidate and is backed by the Kean faction to run with Senator Cross in opposition to City Judge Runyon's boom. By booming Coriell, they hope to spoil City Judge Runyon's chances of a solid delegation from Plainfield.

None of the others were hurt.

GRACE PLANS FOR CHANGES

THE NEW ORGAN HAS BEEN ORDERED FROM A NEW YORK FIRM.

Architect is Completing Plans for Decorations and Other Repairs That Are Planned.

Plans for the extensive repairs to be made to Grace M. E. church during the summer were brought nearer fulfillment at a meeting of the Official Board of the church Sunday. The contract for the organ was awarded and other matters, connected with the decoration of the building, were discussed. The contracts will be given out this week.

Hook & Hastings, of New York, will furnish the organ, which will be the exact similar to the one recently installed in All Souls' church. The work of placing it in position will occupy considerable time, and the date for the completion of the task has been set for October 15.

As to the decoration and other repairs, the architect is drawing up the plans and specifications, which are almost ready. The work will be done during the present month. It is likely that the church will be closed for a part of the month, probably for two weeks, in order to facilitate the operations Their completion will be fitly celebrated by the church people.

WINDOW ESCAPED.

Because John Kenney Reached the Horse's Head Just in Time.

Made frantic by biting flies a horse, attached to A. A. Stryker's carpenter-ing wagon, became entangled in the lines while standing at Park avenue and Front street, Monday afternoon, and backed itself and the front wheels on the sidewalk. It was in imminent danger of going through a plate glass in the Corey building when John Kenney sprang through his side window and caught it. His prompt action prevented the damage which would undoubtedly have resulted.

His Sight Threatened.

"While picnicking last month my 11-year-old boy was poisoned by some weed or plant," says W. H. Dibble, of Sioux City, Ia. "He rubbed the poison off his hands into his eyes and for a while we were afraid he would lose his sight. Finally a neighbor recommended DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The first application helped him and in a few days he was as well as ever." For skin diseases, cuts, burns, scalds, wounds, insect bites, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is sure cure. BOROUGH FOR ENGINE HOUSE Overwhelming Vote in Favor of Proposed Fire Headquarters at Special Election.

A VERY LIGHT VOTE.

Out of 279 Ballots Cast in Both Districts of the Borough, There Were 243 in Favor and Twenty-Five Against and Eleven Rejected —Voting Heaviest at Night Fall.

Election day in the borough, to ascertain whether or not the council should issue bonds to cover the expense of erecting a new fire engine house, passed off quietly. The polling was very slight, barely one-fifth of the normal vote having been cast. But the total shows an overwhelming preponderance of opinion in favor of the project. Two hundred and seventy-nine ballots in all were placed in the boxes in both districts. Two hundred and forty-three voted for and twenty-five against. Eleven ballots were rejected.

In the first district, where the normal vote is 636, only 130 people voted. The first ballot taken from the box was marked against, but that man had registered his opinion in writing, and he was made a beginning for the rejected bunch. The second ballot was also marked against but from that on everything went the other way. At this booth 109 voted for, fifteen against, and six were rejected.

The normal vote in the second district is about 590. When the ballots were counted, 134 were found to be for, and only ten against. Five ballots were rejected, because neither the word "for" or "against" was erased.

The heaviest polling was late in the afternoon, between 6 and 7 o'clock, but even in that hour the officers in the booths were not overworked. The first voter in the first district was John H. Carney. Herbert Schillinger placed the first slip in the box in the second district. On account of the satisfactory result of the election there was jubilance in the borough fire circles last evening.

STEPPED ON HIS FOOT.

That Was the Primary Cause of Arraignment of Three in City Court.

Harry Watson, Chester Pope, Joseph Green and Lewis Sutterlein were arraigned in the city court, yesterday, charged with quarrelling and fighting at the Watchung avenue trolley terminus, Sunday afternoon. The two former were found guilty and were fined $3 each.

Testimony revealed the fact that in the hurry of Pope and Sutterlein to follow Green off a car, the former stepped on Watson's feet. Words followed and soon gave exchange to blows, Watson getting off the car to argue the matter out. Watson was represented by Counsellor Francis J. Blatz.

Sent Home Prairie Dog.

Morgan Tarton, of East Front street, received word in a novel way Tuesday, from J. E. Flannery, who is on his way to California. It came in the way of a tiny prairie dog shipped by "Ted" from Emporium, Kansas. The little animal was none the worse for its long trip and is already the pet of the children in the neighborhood.

Quite a delegation of Plainfielders made the trip to Westfield last Tuesday in company with the members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church, who had charge of the services at the Fresh Air Camp. Clarence Brokaw, of West Front street, and James K. Arnold, Jr., of Manning avenue, have returned home from an outing at Lake Hopatcong.

Lee, George Feiring and Overseer of the Poor Alex. Ayers. The vehicle also carried bait and tackle enough to last a week but the anglers claim they are only out for the day. They will cast their lines in a small lake this side of Flanders.

TWO WERE KILLED IN WRECK

THE LOCOMOTIVE AND EIGHT CARS PLUNGED THROUGH OPEN DRAW.

Serious Accident That Occurred at Elizabethport Early Tuesday Morning.

Elizabeth, August 13—A locomotive, tender and eight box cars plunged through an open drawbridge on the Long Branch division of the Jersey Central Railroad shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday morning. Two men were killed and one seriously injured. The drawbridge is over the Elizabeth river in Elizabethport.

The killed were:

MANSFIELD, Patrick, of 237 East Fifth street, Plainfield, brakeman.

WEBSTER, Daniel, of Bayonne, fireman.

Engineer Robert Beany, of Bayonne, jumped into the river and saved his life.

The danger signals were set when the draw was opened but it is said that the engineer was unable to bring his train to a standstill in time. The engine and tender were buried out of sight in the water and the cars heaped on top. One was filled with dynamite but did not explode. Mansfield struck on his head and fractured his skull. He was found floating in the water.

There was some delay in getting the wrecking cars to the scene and the line was not opened until late in the afternoon.

NOT SELLING TICKETS.

Somerville Commissioners Register Another Kick Against the Trolley Company.

Somerville, August 13—A multitude of matters of local interest came up for disposal Monday night at the regular monthly meeting of the Town Commissioners.

Hon. Alvah A. Clark appeared in behalf of the police of Somerville. He said Plainfield, New Brunswick and other cities gave its policemen vacations and was of the opinion that the town officers should have a like time for recreation. Referred.

The chairman of the trolley committee reported that a letter had been received from Manager Walch of the traction company, in reply to one about the complaints of violating franchises and of discontinuing the sale of seven tickets for a quarter dollar between Somerville and Raritan. He said he had quit the sale of these tickets because the Raritan Board of Commissioners had not returned the bond of the company, which was given as a guarantee of the construction of the road. "As to the violation of the franchise he was not aware of anything of that nature. It was decided to have the committee visit Manager Walch in the near future.

Scotch Plains Finds Much to Talk About in Margherita Arlina Hamm's Marriage.

IS MRS. M'MAHON NOW.

LIVES WITH HER HUSBAND IN A VERY MODEST LITTLE COTTAGE.

Prominent Writer and Club Woman, of Brooklyn, Secured a Divorce to be Married Two Days Later at Plains to Newspaper Man.

Scotch Plains, August 13—Scotch Plains has a sensation. There were some of the neighbors who suspected it from the first time the new occupants took possession of the George Ogden house on the little lane back of the Springfield road. Generally it was not known until the New York newspapers began to investigate if it was really Margherita Arlina Hamm, but recently divorced from William E. S. Fales, lawyer and magazine writer, who had wedded John R. McMahon, a New York newspaperman who has taken up his abode in this village.

Although Mr. McMahon is silent on the subject, there is no doubt that his bride of ten days is the well-known writer and club woman. According to the marriage certificate made out by Justice Clark on the evening of August 1, his wife's name was Margaret Falls, aged thirty two, born in Canada and now a resident of Scotch Plains. The Judge does not pretend that the spelling of the names is absolutely accurate but the other details fit in the story properly and only serve to confirm it.

John R. McMahon made his first formal appearance in Scotch Plains on April 1. He brought with him the woman whom he has since made his wife. They applied to Lynus R. Walpool, the hotel man, and were taken to see the George Ogden house. It is not a very commodious residence. It would lower its dignity to call it a shack but a modest cottage might better describe it. There is one floor and a part of another. Inside it is possible there may be three rooms. Mr. Mahon and his companion were evidently pleased with it. From the way she talked, Mr. Walpool gained the idea that they were husband and wife. He was not undeceived until McMahon told him a week ago of their marriage.

This sequested little nook, "far from the madding crowd," was rented and a lease drawn up, the rent being paid in advance. McMahon afterwards wrote to Walpool, sending $9 and asking him to have the garden planted and the bugs kept off it until he should appear. This latter event happened May 15 and since that time, McMahon has spent the greater part of his time there.

Several times, McMahon's original companion came out to spend the day but always returned at night. Then there were two brothers who appeared at intervals and spent more or less time at McMahon's modest home. From the point of view of the neighbors, they were an associable set but they appeared to be happy enough by themselves.

Margherita Arlina Hamm, as the wife of William E. S. Fales, lived on Pineapple street, along with a coterie of literary folk. They had been married in 1893 at Jersey City and apparently lived happily together, writing magazine stories, going to women's club dinners, making speeches, writing poetry, reading papers and thoroughly enjoying an aesthetic existence until sometime this year when Mrs. Fales discovered that her husband had given way to the attractions of an actress known as May Gillespie. The divorce followed.

It was on July 29, the divorce was granted. The next day, the erstwhile husband and wife kissed either good bye as he started for the depths of his dying mother. The day following, Mrs. Fales shipped all her furniture to Scotch Plains, care of John R. McMahon.

It was that same night that a hack drove up to Ivamy's hotel and there was a call for Justice Clark who happened to be there at the time. The man and woman in the hack told the Justice that they desired to wed without delay and as quietly as possible. They were taken to the Justice's house where the ceremony was performed with the hack driver as a witness. That the woman was Margherita Arlina Hamm, there is no doubt.

John R. McMahon was interviewed on the subject by a Press reporter but he evaded all questions by declaring his name was Bryan. He finally produced his brother, C. W. McMahon, also a newspaperman, who promptly denied that he was the hero of the story and refused to throw any light on the subject.

DEATH CAUSED BY EXPOSURE

Woman Died in South Plainfield Who Used to Walk to Her Work in This City.

HADN'T PROPER FOOD.

Particularly Sad Were the Features Connected With the Death of Mary Hoffman, of South Plainfield, who succumbed to a long illness early Tuesday morning. In most destitute circumstances, the woman had spent the greater part of last winter and spring in working at a local factory, making the trip back and forth every day, often on foot and exposed to the most inclement weather. In this way, she contracted the sickness which caused her death yesterday.

Within the past two weeks some Plainfielders learned of the pitiable condition of the woman, who, with her aged mother, was living in abject poverty, with no means of income. Help was promptly given by charitably disposed church people, but the ravages of disease, aided by lack of nourishing food, had done their work, and it was too late to do anything more than ease the last hours of the woman's life.

What adds to the tragic elements of the case is the fact that the two women have well to do connections, from whom they had been estranged by family difficulties for some years. The funeral services of the unfortunate woman will be held tomorrow afternoon, after which the remains will be taken to Lebanon, the former home of the family, for interment.

LAD NEARLY BORNED ALIVE

EXCITING INCIDENT WHEN BALLOON DEPARTED SKYWARD.

Perth Amboy Young Man Upset a Pail of Gasolene on Himself and It Caught Fire.

Disregard of the orders of William Schorb, manager of the Central Balloon Company of America, came near resulting in the death of a young man from Perth Amboy following the ascension at Boynton Beach, yesterday.

The large crowd kept pushing about the swaying balloon until the workmen were hampered in completing the inflation. Schorb warned them to keep back but with no effect. As the aeronaut sprang in the air, his feet just grazed the head of the young man, who jumped back and in doing so over turned a pail of gasolene, part of which fell on him. The flames from the pit ignited it and in a second he was blazing from head to foot. With rare presence of mind he fell to the ground and rolled over and over, thus extinguishing the flames.

He was quite badly burned but will recover. He was taken to his home but refused to give his name.

DEMOCRATS TALK OF MEN FOR CONGRESS

Somerset Will Have Three Possibilities for Nomination in the Fourth District.

COUNTY NOMINATIONS.

JAMES J. BERGEN, S. S. CHILDS AND A. A. CLARK MENTIONED FOR CONGRESS.

Major Nelson Y. Dungan Likely to be Democratic Nominee for the Senate—The Democrats Have Hopes of Carrying County.

Somerville, August 13—The Democratic forces of Somerset county believe that they should be allowed to name a candidate for the Congress in the new Fourth district, which is now constituted of Mercer, Somerset and Hunterdon and already a number of available men have come to the front.

Among the most frequently mentioned of these in connection with the nomination are James J. Bergen, of Somerville, former speaker of the House, and Samuel S. Childs, of Bernards, who has a large following. It is urged by the Democrats that Mr. Bergen, who has filled the gap when almost certain defeat stared the party in the face, should have another chance, and his prospects are believed to be very bright should the other counties of the district decide to let Somerset name the man.

Samuel S. Childs, like Mr. Bergen, has several times met defeat but he made such a fine showing during last fall's elections in running against an assemblyman whose party was almost obliged to return to Trenton, that his friends believe that should he be the favored one, he will easily carry the district throughout which he is very popular.

Alvah A. Clark, Nelson Y. Dungan and several other prominent Democrats have been mentioned in connection with the nomination.

Bound Brook, August 13—Politics in Somerset is beginning to warm up and candidates are laying their plans to capture the nomination. The Democrats have great hopes of carrying the county this fall and candidates are correspondingly thick. For Congress the names of Hon. Alvah A. Clark, Hon. James J. Bergen and Samuel S. Childs are mentioned. None of these men are seeking the office, but it is thought none of them would refuse it if it was tendered them. Either one of them would make a good representative. Conservative Democrats think, however, that if Mercer or Hunterdon county can unite on a good man it would be better to have the nominee come from one of those counties as Somerset is full of factional strife.

For Senator the name of ex-Prosecutor Nelson Y. Dungan is the only one mentioned so far. Mr. Dungan is popular with both parties and would stand a good show of being a winner.

For Assembly, E. C. Wise, cashier of the Colonial Insurance Co., of Jersey City, and also a grocer of Somerville, is laying his plans for the nomination. Mr. Wise is a popular young man and would make a good run.

For surrogate the names of A. G. Spencer, the present Surrogate, Former Judge J. D. Bartine and Wm. Demond, a dealer in gents' furnishings at Somerville are mentioned. All three have many friends and would run well. The contest over this office will probably be the warmest of the lot.

HORSE SMASHED HIS JAW

JOHN DAVIDSON SERIOUSLY INJURED AT WATCHUNG SUNDAY.

Frisky Animal Kicked Him in the Face—He is Now Confined to the Hospital.

Too close proximity to the heels of a horse resulted most disastrously for John Davidson, of Newark, while visiting at the home of William Titus, of Watchung, on Sunday afternoon. As relics of the encounter, he is nursing a shattered jaw and mourning the loss of several teeth, besides suffering from the general shaking up which he received.

While leading a pair of horses, Davidson chanced to get behind one of the animals, just as its heels flew up in a sportive kick. The full force of the foot struck the man on the side of the face, knocking him to the ground. He was picked up and Dr. Adams was called, but the physician saw that the case was too serious for superficial attention and ordered the patient's removal to the hospital. Here Drs. Zeglio and Buchanan also assisted and the damage was in some measure repaired.

Davidson is still at Muhlenberg, but he is reported today to be doing well, with prospects of being dismissed from the institution in a short time. His injuries consist principally of a fractured jaw bone and several bad cuts on the upper part of the face, where the sharp edge of the horse's hoof struck.

NEARLY KILLED BY BURGLARS

Aged Daniel B. Ross Attacked by Robbers at Bound Brook, and Left for Dead.

HE LIVED IN OLD BARN.

Attack Was Made Tuesday; as He Went After Some Wood—Thieves Thought He Had a Fortune, But Secured Less Than a Dollar in Money and a Watch.

Bound Brook, Aug. 13—Attracted by the stories of his reputed wealth, burglars visited and attacked Daniel B. Ross, an aged hermit living on the outskirts of this place, last night, leaving him for dead upon the ground outside his dwelling place. As far as can be learned, their plunder amounted to less than a dollar in money, with the watch which they took from the pockets of their victim.

Ross had gone outside to get some wood, about 10 o'clock, when he was attacked. Two men sprang from their hiding-place behind a corn-crib and set upon him. When he attempted a feeble resistance, one of the visitors struck him over the head with some blunt instrument, felling him to the ground unconscious. It is supposed that they then rifled his pockets and ransacked the premises in search of further spoil.

For over an hour, the wounded man lay on the ground in a stupor. When he finally revived, he managed to crawl to the residence of L. Kreyling, about forty rods away, where he was taken in and cared for. Word was sent to Dr. Fisher, who ordered the removal of the man to the Somerset Hospital at Somerville. Ross is now lying at that institution, suffering greatly from the effects of the blow. His story of the assault fails to furnish any clue to the identity of the robbers.

What rendered probable the hope of getting a large sum of money from the hermit was the fact that he is said to have been one of the fortunate ones in the California gold rush in '49. Since his return home, with an alleged fortune, he has been living apart from the rest of the world in an old barn. The predictions of local residents were verified last night in accordance with the expectations of years.

Banquet for Heptasophs.

Heptasophs in this section enjoyed themselves last Tuesday at a banquet given by Somerville Conclave, at Cawley's, in honor of the appointment of Dr. S. Wasson Jones, of Newark, as supreme medical examiner. Covers were laid for fifty, and the affair was a success in every respect. Among the guests were District Deputy Supreme Archon J. V. E. Vanderhoef, Medical Examiner J. H. Buchanan and Secretary V. W. Nash, of Protective Conclave, of this city.

THE SUMMER GIRL

THE chaperon shook her head sadly. "There is no use—the summer girl works overtime," she remarked.

The married man looked his astonishment. "Why, I thought she was a butterfly creature who did nothing more serious than eat bonbons and flirt," he said.

"You've never more mistaken," retorted the chaperon dryly. "I don't know who started the story about the summer girl and her many engagements, but I do know from experience that it's pretty hard for the summer girl to get engaged once, let alone many times, nowadays. Look at that!" she went on, pointing to a group in the distance. "Look at that solitary specimen of manhood and all those girls. Look how he is sitting on the railing with his hat on. Sitting! And those girls are standing around him—nearly falling over one another—in the effort to make an impression on him. That's what I call spoiling a man."

"Who was it?" interrupted the married man, "who called love a chase"—"In which man was the pursuer and woman the pursued?" finished the chaperon.

"Very pretty, but you'll notice it's the other way around at summer resorts. Just let me tell you from my experience what are the chief requisites of the summer girl. To be successful she must have the wisdom of the serpent with the innocence of the dove joined to the diplomacy of an oriental, the stoical courage of a red Indian and the eye of a stockbroker to the main chance. But even these qualifications are hardly sufficient unless she is backed by a chaperon who can command, on occasion at least, an icy face, an impenetrable manner, a brazen eye, and a voice like a two edged sword."

"Then the chaperon isn't going out of style so far as the summer girl is concerned?"

"She is the most necessary part of her equipment, if you will allow me to put it that way," returned the chaperon, with her cynical little smile. "Without her the summer girl is indeed at the mercy of the powers that prey—in other words, the gossips. When the summer girl dances more than once with the same man or forgets herself so far as to linger in the moonlight, who is it that meets the innuendoes of the gossips with a stony stare? The chaperon. Who is it that sits for hours with aching head in an overcrowded hotel ballroom in order that the summer girl may have some one to talk to when she is left to play wallflower during a dance? The chaperon again. Why, if it were not for her the summer girl's very breathing would be constructed into subject for gossip."

SPOILING A MAN.

"But the girl who is forced to go away without a chaperon?"

"Heaven help her, for her own sex won't! She has to take her choice between charming the men and making friends of the women, for she can't do both. If she has a good time, she is called a flirt and shocking; if she goes with the girls and turns her head away when a man comes around, she is called artful and designing. So what is the poor girl to do?"

"But if she succeeds in getting engaged in spite of everything?"

"Ah, then for the time being she becomes immune. In fact, many summer girls adopt this plan in order to have a good time in peace. But woe to the foolish virgin who breaks her engagement during the winter time and then returns to the same place next summer!"

The chaperon's silence was expressive.

The married man stroked his beard thoughtfully. "Now that you put it to me," he remarked, "it does seem as if the path of the summer girl were not one of roses!"

They looked at each other significantly and without a word walked away in opposite directions.

The Latest Two Color Tea Gowns. Pearl Side Combs.

In tea gowns two colors are quite the vogue. One shade constitutes the underdress, while the upper one is made of some more sober tint. For instance, a gown of willow green will have an underdress of shrimp pink crape accordion plaited.

The prettiest side combs have a row of pearls on top, and these are charming in dark hair. Strings of pearls are also twisted among the coils, and a single rose is perched above the ear or a little one side of the twist if the hair is done high.

There is a tendency to trim the hips of skirts and yet at the same time preserve the plain lines.

The stout woman should avoid muslins, at least those of startling nature.

A dainty bolero for an evening dress is here shown. It is of silk mousseline de soie and white lace. The wide collar is of the mousseline de soie and lace. The undersleeves are also of this. The sleeves are laid in horizontal tucks and the body in vertical ones. Both are banded with lace insertions. The bottom of the bolero is edged with a wide lace frill.

Foulards Are Elaborately Trimmed. Useful Holland Dresses.

Foulards and china silks have large, sprawly figures and are elaborately trimmed. The bottoms of the skirts are finished with innumerable chiffon ruffles, and they have very long trains.

Some ox blood mercerized chambray suits are trimmed with rows of white hanton braid, the same appearing on sailor collar and bodice. Plain shirt waist suits are made with tiny tucks back and front. The sleeves are tucked below the elbow.

season. It is extraordinary how very smart a costume of this can look when cut and fitted by a first class tailor or dressmaker.

An approved hat for country wear is made of fine white or cream chip, with a wide band and a flat crown which is encircled by a wreath of flowers and leaves.

A pretty seashore gown is made of white cheviot, as shown in the illustration. The waist has its body made of all over Irish lace, with a front and bolero effect of the goods. The sleeves are slashed to allow a glimpse of the lace undersleeve. The skirt has a gathered flounce set in under a wide band of insertion, and there are three narrow bands of the cheviot down the front. The hat is a model of elegant simplicity.

Taffeta Bands For Muslin Gowns. Lace the Ideal Ornamentation.

A new idea in trimming muslins and batiste gowns is the use of taffeta bands. They are straight or curved at the edges and scattered with embroidered polka dots. The taffeta may be white or some delicate color. One band is placed at the hem and another between waist and hem, curving up in the back. The bodice usually is outlined at the yoke with an applique pattern of this.

Lace forms, of course, the ideal summer trimming. Jaunty little coats made of lace are quite cut away in front to show the waist and fasten with a band of chine ribbon, which passes under the arms and is caught with art nouveau enameled clasps. The sleeves reach to a little below the elbow and are slit to above the bend of the arm.

Some of the neatest street parasols are made of white silk, hemstitched around the edge. The silk is often embroidered in polka dots or small figures, and the handles are of wood.

A pretty blue muslin is the subject of the sketch. The waist is made with a very original arrangement in the shape of a frilled bolero and a wide satin collar. The sleeves are finished with frills. The skirt is laid in fine perpendicular tucks and has a graduated flounce finished with three narrow frills.

Many of the handsomest boas are made of lace.

A very dainty cape ruffle is the subject of our sketch. It is made of wide lace gathered very full in two rows, and it is ornamented with a spray of natural looking pink roses. The hat which goes with this is of pink chiffon trimmed with small pink roses and black velvet.

CAN NOT KEEP COOL.

Dwellers in New York Are Uncomfortable Just Now.

Journey to Coney Island or Take Trolley Rides Along Lovely Country Roads, But All Without Effect.

[Special New York Letter.]

"IS it hot enough for you?" From the day that Noah made this remark as he drew his head in from the ark, and Shem's wife replied she thought it looked like rain man has been querying his neighbor along the same lines, at the imminent risk of becoming a bore.

Despite the oft-repeated assertion by certain New Yorkers that Gotham is the only perfect summer resort this side the ocean, we have been having some of the hottest weather ever experienced by the oldest inhabitant. And the fact that our local weather man, E. H. Emery, has recently had his rank raised to that of national weather forecaster, has not appeared to help matters much.

"It is a hard thing," said Mr. Emery to me the other day, "for a meteorologist to forecast the weather during the months of July and August. The atmosphere is so undisturbed that there is nothing to work on. All we can do is to study our reports from all parts of the country. We cannot tell very well when it is going to be hot. We speak of heat waves, but that is simply an expression. As a matter of fact, there are no heat waves. Now there are cold waves, and we know which way they are moving. But we are progressing every day in our meteorological experiments, and some day we hope to have advanced far enough to be able to prognosticate for a season ahead."

For some reason or other, we all look upon the weather man as we do upon the mother-in-law—as a joke. But really both propositions are quite serious. As a matter of fact, we have made remarkable strides in weather forecasting. When the first of the 13 colonies was founded at Jamestown, Va., in 1607, practically nothing was known of the properties of the air or of the methods for measuring its phenomena. To-day there are over 200 stations in the United States electrically recording the slightest change in atmospheric conditions.

In 1643—23 years after the landing of the Pilgrims—Torricelli discovered the principle of the barometer, and rendered it possible to measure the weight of superincumbent air at any spot where the wonderful, yet simple little instrument might be placed. Torricelli's great teacher, Galileo, died without knowing why nature, under certain conditions, abhors a vacuum; but, nevertheless, he had discovered the principle of the thermometer. The data from the readings of these two instruments form the foundation of all meteorological science. Their inventors as little appreciated the value of the discoveries as they dreamed of the great western republic which was first to use their instruments to measure the inception and development of storms.

But the man who is mopping his face with his handkerchief and doing his best to keep from roasting to death does not care about the why or the wherefor of the weather shark. If he thinks about the matter at all, he probably wonders as he sees the thermometer up toward the hundred mark how a little thing like that can make it so hot.

New York does not bother much about science. Its main thought is how to keep cool during the heated term, and get the most out of life. Probably no city in the world has as many different ways for the enjoyment of the people in the summer time as Gotham. And no class of citizens strive harder to keep cool, and get hotter in their efforts to do it, than New Yorkers.

Of course, as soon as the summer season fairly opens the many seaside resorts about the city begin to do business. There is no place in the world where there are so many advantages in this respect. Hundreds of boats and thousands of trolley cars run out from Manhattan to the seashore. Twenty-five cents for the round trip is the usual price charged on the boats, and the result is that hundreds of thousands of passengers are carried every Saturday and Sunday to the bathing spots. It does not matter that they encounter more of the very thing they are trying to avoid—the heat—than they would if they remained at home.

Coney Island still remains the most popular of the resorts, despite the fact that many of its, to some, most alluring features have been prohibited by the police. The old associations, however, still cling to it, and it by no means has yet reached the soberness and dignity of a camp meeting grounds. There are still many giddy and gay places of amusement on the island for those who crave excitement. It has often been a matter of wonderment to me why the people who go there will crowd into the stuffy little beer halls to listen to the cracked voices of broken-down vaudeville singers; nearly break their backs trying to lift weights; strain their muscles by punching the medicine bags; jig themselves almost into insensibility in the dancing halls, and do other acts of violent physical exertion, when their ostensible reason for taking an outing is to escape the city heat.

There are many cool spots where one may enjoy oneself on Coney Island There are two or three immense recreation piers reaching out into the sea and they are swept by delightful ocean breezes, but the chairs there are nearly always comparatively vacant. The beaches, of course, are thronged at certain times of the day In the water one may be cool, but those who stroll on the sand in the midday sun are much more uncomfortable than if they had remained at home in their Harlem flat.

Another favorite method for the good people of this tight little island to keep cool, or think they are keeping cool, which amounts to the same thing, is to take long trolley rides. In this respect no better opportunities are offered than here in New York. There are numerous lines leading up through the Bronx, Yonkers, Westchester county, and, in fact, to all parts of New York state and even into Connecticut and Massachusetts. These rides would be a most delightful way to "cool off" were it not that they are so popular. Their very popularity makes them uncomfortable and in some instances a positive mode of suffering and danger. I have been on some of the cars when they were so crowded that one's life was actually menaced. Now, when a man goes out to take a spin through the country so as to escape the heat of the city, he does not get much enjoyment out of his ride by standing up on the side step in the blazing sun or being wedged in between two persons who are fit candidates for the fat stock show, with a dozen others of varying sizes sandwiched fore and aft.

But for this disagreeable feature some of these trolley rides would be delightful. For five cents you can go from New York to Hastings-on-the-Hudson and pass through some of the grandest scenery to be witnessed anywhere in the world. However, it is like everything else in New York that is cheap—so well patronized that the pleasure is all taken out of it in the fight for your life, and if you are among the survivors the hard battle you have had causes you to forget the beauties of the trip. Indeed, you have had the time and opportunity to observe them.

One of the most popular methods to "keep cool" along upper Broadway is to visit a cafe in the afternoon and a roof garden at night. Seated at a table, through the center of which protrudes an imitation palm tree, and watching a thermometer attached to the trunk a patron will for hours work overtime wielding his handkerchief over his dripping face and order iced beverages. The thermometer is a great relief to him. He will consult it frequently and think how much hotter it is outside. Or he may, after perusing it, realize how awfully hot it is, and order another drink. In either case it serves the purpose of the proprietor.

But such is the perversity of humankind. We must imagine we are keeping cool if we have to sweat for it.

Alternate bands of silk and lace insertion compose many handsome gowns. Dresses of all over white and beige embroidery are finished with rows of tiny satin ribbon ruffles. Generally all the summer dresses are made with elbow sleeves beautifully finished with lace ruffles and ribbon bows. Gowns of transparent material are appliqued with lace medallions placed here and there on the body of the gown. Black velvet ribbon is often used as a finish. Figured lawns, swisses and dimities are very pretty and are made elaborate.

Negligees Are Growing More and More Elaborate.

Negligee attire is growing more and more elaborate. Indeed fastidiousness is essential to almost every up to date garment. At present it is possible fortunately to copy the most costly models at a comparatively small outlay, so highly wrought robes and jackets are the rule. A potent aid in much of this copying is the abundance of cotton fabrics made in imitation of silk. All the light mercerized goods have been made available for house gowns, negligees and the like, and while not a few of these are worthy of really fine trimmings there is no end of inexpensive things which will set them off nicely.

Many white fine materials are utilized for tea gowns. Most of these are made according to empire designs and trimmed with dainty laces. White tea gowns are stylish in dainty lawns and muslins trimmed with valenciennes lace and insertion. Some are made with Spanish flounces tucked or trimmed with lace. Others have plain gathered ruffles headed with embroidered beadings having pale colored ribbons run through.

The illustration shows a very pretty dressing jacket. It is made of checked lawn ornamented with a fine design. The fullness is gathered into a square yoke. The fronts and bottom are banded with plain silk. The sleeves are cut Chinese fashion and also banded with the silk.

Valuable Manuscripts.

The two greatest manuscripts in America, according to the Bookman, are the manuscript of the Declaration of Independence, which is in the government archives and which has become illegible, and the life of Benjamin Franklin, written by himself, the only manuscript entirely in his own handwriting, which changed hands and was added to a private collection in New York city. The Franklin manuscript was discovered in France some years ago in the possession of the descendants of M. de Vaillard, to whom it had been given by William Temple Franklin, Franklin's grandson.

The New Woman

THERE passed to the other plane of life not long ago a lady beloved above any in her circle of acquaintance, which was not large. Beyond the limits of one small rural neighborhood and a city 200 miles away, where her relatives dwell, few ever heard of her. She was poor. Until the wasting illness that finally took her out of this life she earned her own living. Then her daughter took care of her. Her health was always delicate, so that she was not able to go often from home. But that home was the center of a social life brilliant and joyous, brilliant because its mistress was a very intellectual woman and drew her own kind about her, joyous because she was joy itself. Her motto was Robert Louis Stevenson's, "Courageous and gay; courageous and gay." Thus she met every difficulty and downfall in her path, and these were not few. Outwardly looked at, her life from girlhood to its close was one of suffering, bad luck and poverty, yet her indomitable will and gladness of spirit rose triumphant over all.

One of the schemes to give pleasure to herself and friends was her book of clippings. She had a merry sense of humor, a keen appreciation of wit. When she saw in her reading a particularly good joke or humorous anecdote, she scissored it out and pasted it in her scrapbook. She called this her jokebook. If she heard a specially amusing story, she wrote it down. When friends called, she often entertained those who had the developed sense of humor by giving them this book to read or by reading from it to them. After she was gone her daughter found the book in a box of clippings she had prepared to add to it. The book and its clippings are now among the choicest memories of herself that she left to her friends. It is like a benediction to them—a benediction from one who never slumped or whined or blamed others, but faced the world in the steadfast spirit of courage, sweet temper and high endeavor.

During the years when the china painting fad was on among American women Mrs. Poillon began dabbling in clays and colors for her own amusement, but after a time settled down to the potter's work as an industrial occupation. She was obliged to learn nearly all the processes by personal experimentation, for professional potters will *not reveal to an outside person the se*crets of clay mixing. After getting the few instructions she could obtain Mrs. Poillon experimented till she learned how to mix and fire her wares, and it is recorded that she had almost as many failures as Bernard de Palissy before the elusive bird success perched upon the dome of her pottery. Now her plant is thoroughly successful commercially, and she considers the potter's trade a very good one for women.

One drawback to a woman in an occupation involving mechanical work is her lack of knowledge of the use of tools. For this reason she is often put to great expense in the hire of a carpenter to do repairing and other work she could easily achieve if she had even a slight familiarity with tools. The use of a hammer, saw, hatchet, plane and carpenter's rule ought to be as much a part of a girl's education as a knowledge of housekeeping.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

CONGRESS IS CLOSE.

Very Rarely Makes Appropriations for War Claims.

Just and Unjust Suffer Alike—Famous King Case, Although Approved by Court of Claims, Still Hangs Fire.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"ALMOST 2,000 bills have been introduced and referred to my committee," says Congressman Thad Mahon, of Chambersburg, Pa. Mr. Mahon is chairman of the committee on war claims, which is regarded as one of the most important committees of the national house of representatives.

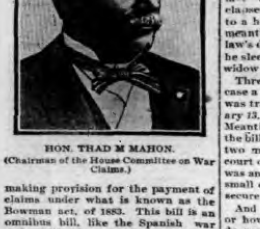
"You see there are claimants from every state in this republic," continued the congressman. "Each claimant has a bill prepared covering his case and providing for an appropriation from the federal treasury. There was a time when these bills received more prompt consideration than they do now. The bills are introduced by the various congressman, not because they expect to secure their passage; but in order to satisfy the claimants. If the congressmen were to refuse to introduce such bills, the claimants and all of their friends would be down on that man, and be busy pushing forward some one else for congress. But, although a representative thus introduces a bill, he takes no further interest in it. In the first place nearly all of these war claims originated before some congressmen were born, or while others were in their cradles. The congressmen are interested in matters more modern.

"It may surprise you, but it is a fact, that several hundred bills making claims against the government have originated in the south and out of the war with Spain. Small and brief as that war was it gave opportunity to quite a number of people to entertain grievances of some sort against the government, and it will be the duty of this committee to examine into the merits and demerits of all of those claims. The older claims do not require so much attention. We are familiar with them. Reports have been prepared and reprinted year after year for so many years that the older members know them all by heart."

"Some years ago, before I became chairman of this committee, a claimant received $63,000 for ice water. It was made to appear to the committee and to the house that the claimant had furnished quite a large consignment of ice to the quartermaster at Jefferson barracks, at St. Louis, Mo.; that the quartermaster did not take the ice from the barges until it had almost melted. This was in July, 1865. The claimant made out what seemed to be a good case, and the bill was passed; but it has always been called the ice water bill.

"One bill, covering a thousand or more claims, introduced by Mr. Gibson, has been favorably reported. It is entitled: 'A bill for the allowance of certain claims for property taken for military purposes within the United States during the war with Spain.' That bill will undoubtedly receive consideration. It embodies the most meritorious of all of the bills introduced covering that small war period, and is divided into claims by states. For example, is this one bill there are seven claims from Alabama, and their aggregate is only $5,108. There is one claim from Delaware amounting to $935. Georgia comes forward with 36 claims, aggregating $11,397. Pennsylvanians claim a great deal there being 87 claims in this one bill, the aggregate being $22,620."

George Fry, clerk of the committee, called attention to the bill No. 8587,



HON. THAD M MAHON.
(Chairman of the House Committee on War Claims.)

making provision for the payment of claims under what is known as the Bowman act, of 1883. This bill is an omnibus bill, like the Spanish war claims bill. The proposed beneficiaries of this bill are all residents of the southern states, and their claims against the government are for damages alleged to have been committed by federal soldiers during the civil war. Some of these claims were brought to the attention of the congress immediately after the close of that war, but a majority of them were filed within the past 25 years.

Opposed to this Bowman act claims bill is the bill making provision for reimbursement to the people of Chambersburg, Gettysburg and contiguous places, for damages sustained when Lee with his army of confederates invaded Pennsylvania in June and July, 1863. The southern congressmen for years have opposed this bill for the benefit of the Pennsylvanians, claiming that their southern claimants are as much entitled to consideration as the northern claimants. It thus happens that the money undoubtedly due to many of the claimants of the south, and to all of the Pennsylvania claimants, remains unappropriated, year after year, because of their antagonisms. As a matter of fact, however, the southern men have no right to make their fight against the Pennsylvania claimants, because all of the Pennsylvania congressmen are ready to allow the southern claims to be paid; but there are numerous other congressmen from northern states who oppose the payments of the claims of the southern people. Thus, while the Pennsylvanians are willing to be fair, the southern men are unfairly attacking them. In order to force consideration of the claims under the Bowman act. It would take upwards of $2,000,000 to pay all of the claims set forth in these two bills, for the Pennsylvanians and the southerners, and all of the just claims ought to be paid. They have been favorably reported from the court of claims. But it seems most likely that they will never be paid. If the government were an ordinary debtor, honest indebtedness could be collected in the courts. But no one claimant is big enough to prosecute the government.

MRS. FRANCES KING.
(A Victim of the Parsimoniousness of Congress.)

As an example of a favorable report on an individual bill of this character the committee clerk handed the writer a report on bill No. 2944, which says: "The committee on war claims to whom was referred this bill 'for the relief of Frances King,' beg leave to submit the following report and recommend that the said bill do pass."

The report then goes on to show that the committee on war claims, of a former congress, not being fully and clearly advised of the facts in said claim, referred the same to the courts of claims for a finding of facts. The claim has been returned to this committee with the following finding of fact:

"(Court of Claims. Congressional No. 7229. Frances King, v. U. S.)

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, one court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that the said Henry King, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies and stores, or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the government of the United States throughout said war."

"(Court of Claims. Congressional No. 7229. Frances King, widow of Henry King, deceased, v. the United States.)

"Statement of Case.

"The claim in the above-entitled case, for supplies or for stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court, by the committee on war claims of the house of representatives on the 24th day of January, 1888.

"The court, on March 27, 1882, found that the person from whom supplies were taken, was loyal throughout the war. The case was submitted for a hearing on its merits, on the 6th day of May, 1887. George A. King appeared for the claimant, and Horace Gray, assistant attorney general, for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States."

Note first, that three years elapsed after the claim was referred to the court of claims, before it was found that the claimant had been loyal throughout the war. Loyalty must always be established first in such claims. Three years elapsed, the claimant being aged and growing older and feebler. Loyalty having been at last established, four years more elapsed before "the case was brought to a hearing on its merits." In the meantime the claimant died. The law's delays were too much for him, so he sleeps with his fathers, and his aged widow is still prosecuting the claim.

Three years after the court gave the case a hearing on its merits the report was transmitted to congress, on January 13, 1900, that the claim is a just one. Meantime ten years had elapsed since the bill was first introduced. And now, two more years have gone, since the court of claims reported that the claim was an honest one, but the widow has small chance of living long enough to secure the money due her.

And how many millions of dollars, or how many hundreds of thousands do you suppose that this claimant is struggling for; the great government resisting her at every step? You will undoubtedly be surprised to learn that it is only $395 that the government is unjustly withholding. Here are the official findings of fact, by the court of claims:

"There were taken from the claimant's decedent in McNairy and Hardin counties, state of Tennessee, during the war of the rebellion by the military forces of the United States for the use of the army corps, forage and supplies as described, which, at the time and place of taking, were reasonably worth the sum of three hundred and ninety-five dollars ($395). It does not appear that any payment has been made for any part thereof."

Your Uncle Sam has owed that money for 40 years, has not paid, and will not pay it. How would you like to have such a debtor?

LO AS A HOUSE SERVANT.

Indian Boys and Girls Have of Late Been Taught to Housework in the West.

Indian schools all over the southwest have recently adjourned for the summer, and the students are being employed very rapidly by those who keep servants. The Indian boys make excellent cooks, while an Indian girl, once trained, is a fine maid of all work, a modish hairdresser and endowed with an inborn taste which becomes enhanced when combined with a few civilized touches. The system of training now bestowed upon the red children at school teaches them to become servile to their superior—the paleface, and the present generation in training have become so accustomed to serving their paleface teachers that they are more than willing to enter the household as servants Herein may lie the solution of the servant-girl question—for a time, at least, says a western exchange.

Indian youths are strong, agile, and if brought up by the right kind of methods, are perfectly willing to work. They are healthy and quick of limb. This makes an excellent combination for a servant. Statistics of the Indian taken recently show that of the 25,000 workers among the various tribes, 3,000 of them are employed as helpers in the houses of palefaces. You never see the Indian servant at his or her best unless you visit the home of an old Indian agent on one of the reservations.

QUESTION OF CONSCIENCE.

The View Taken of It by a Clerk to Whom an Honest Customer Returned Two Cents.

"Some folks," said a store clerk, according to the New York Sun, "are too honest. Now I've had somebody come in to me when the boss was standing by, somebody that had bought something of me the day before, and hand over two cents and say:

"'You gave me two cents too much change yesterday, and I've brought it back.'

"He couldn't rest, you see, that man, until he'd got that two cents off his conscience and returned it. But in getting rid of that load himself he simply shifted it onto me. Here's the boss standing by when that two cents is returned; and the boss says to himself, with his eye on me:

"'Him! If you make a mistake of two cents, you'd make one of two dollars,' and so, you see, that superhonest man's return of that two cents may do me a lot of harm.

"The meaning of which is, if I can make myself clear, that we don't want to be too blamed honest. A man can be too honest and worry himself over trifles that he ought not to bother over.

"I should say that if the honest man must bring two cents back let him turn it in some time when the boss wasn't 'round."

BETRAYED BY GOLDEN LOCKS.

The Sad Experience of a Public Official Who Sought the Aid of Hair Dye.

A prominent public official began to show signs of baldness, and then rather surprised his friends by appearing with a sleek, well-groomed crop of hair, says Bates the Philadelphia Record. For some time no one suspected a wig. But a few days ago he appeared with the top of his head covered with the usual dark brown hair, but a sharp line from the tips of the ears marked a strange contrast, for the hair below the line was of the bright golden hue which is the pride of the "chemical blondes."

It was found out that the man found his natural hair was turning gray and desired to make it match the wig, so he invested in a preparation warranted to darken the hair, and in the secret of his own room applied it. But, owing to some strange chemical combination, instead of making the silvered hair dark it made the dark hair golden, and so far the unfortunate man has found nothing that will counteract the striking contrast, so he is compelled to endure no small amount of chaffing from his friends.

THE KAISER KEPT HIS WORD.

Sends Troops to Crefeld So That the Girls Might Dance with Soldiers.

During his recent tour in the Rhenish industrial district the kaiser was extremely pleased at seeing so many signs of progress. He was in high good humor when at the close of the Crefeld visit he thanked the maids of honor for their address, and, turning to some strange chemical combination, instead of making the silvered hair dark it made the dark hair golden, and so far the unfortunate man has found nothing that will counteract the striking contrast, he is compelled to endure no small amount of chaffing from his friends.

HAD FAITH IN HIMSELF.

John Mitchell, President of the United Mine Workers, Began Life as a Mine Boy.

The leader of the coal miners and president of the United Mine Workers is thus described in a brief sketch in the Outlook:

Like so many other labor leaders in this country, he is still a young man. He is 33 years of age. He went into the coal mines as a boy of 12. His school education as supplemented by night studies, chiefly upon economic questions, and especially those relating to organization of labor. He joined the Knights of Labor in 1885, and ten years later, when he was 25 years old, he was elected secretary-treasurer of a district organization of the United

(President of the United Mine Workers of America.)

Mine Workers. His subsequent rise in power within the organization was extremely rapid. In 1897 he was elected a national organizer, in 1898 a vice president, and in 1899 president. At the beginning of the great strike in 1900 the powerful organization was almost exclusively among the bituminous coal miners of the west, who had gradually won by "collective bargaining" much better terms as to hours, wages and treatment than were accorded to the anthracite miners of central and eastern Pennsylvania. Among the latter less than 10,000 out of 140,000 were connected with the union. The success of the strike, largely due to Mr. Mitchell, was followed by the accession to the union of nearly the whole body of anthracite miners, including the recent immigrants from eastern Europe At present, therefore, he has supporting him a great organization, but the time of battle is not of his choosing.

CAKES FOR CORONATION.

London Bakers Are Trying to Outdo Each Other in Producing Elaborate Designs.

The bakers, in their efforts to tempt attention and stimulate a craving for their wares, have now taken advantage of the king's postponed coronation. While the services in the Abbey have been delayed by the illness of the king of England the bakers have undauntedly gone ahead and in many of their windows are exhibited crown cakes of the most elaborate design.

Some of the cakes are, more strictly speaking, coronet cakes, for they have been made to resemble the coronets of earls, viscounts and dukes.

"The crown proper," said a baker, whose window was ornamented with an enormous "king cake," "is made of almond or cream wafer paste; the gems are smooth sugared Dra-

The meringue is dusted with coarsely crushed, but evenly sifted cut loaf sugar. About the size of wheat kernels, and the dark spots are applied after baking with a camel's hair brush. The arms of the crown are made in sections and bent while hot over properly shaped tin strips, and the ends are neatly pinched and slightly twisted. The arms and leaves are then fastened on the head rim with hot sugar."

Daily Mails from Heaven.

A spiritualistic journal in St. Petersburg has a column headed "From the Other World." In it appears signed communications from the dead, in reply to queries from the living. Any subscriber can send a letter to a dead person on forwarding to the editor four copies, which are equal to about three cents. The dead seem to be prompt correspondents, for no inquirer has to wait more than a week for a letter to come from the other world. The heavenly mails are always on time.

OLNEY BARRED BY AGE.

Why the Democratic Party Is Not Likely to Nominate Him for the Presidency in 1904.

When some Memphis democrats let Richard Olney know that they would like to see him the presidential nominee of the party he told them he did not wish to be considered a candidate. He gave no reason for his unwillingness to respond to their kind advances. In a letter to a New York paper Edward Stanwood says Mr. Olney could have pleaded his age as an all sufficient reason why he should not be considered in connection with the presidency. In 1904 Mr. Olney will be 69 years old and would be over 74 if he were elected and served to the end of his term.

HON. RICHARD H. OLNEY.
(Proposed for President by the Democrats of Tennessee.)

Not one of the great political parties, says Mr. Stanwood, has ever elected or nominated a man so old as Mr. Olney will be in 1904. The oldest man ever elected president was William Henry Harrison, who was 67 in 1840. Jackson was 65 when elected the second time. Buchanan was 65 the year of his nomination and Taylor was 64. Henry Clay was 67 when he was a candidate in 1844. Gen. Scott was 67 when he ran in 1852, and Cass was 64 when he ran in 1848. There is no precedent for a presidential candidate of 69, and politicians are as much guided by precedents as lawyers are.

Mr. Stanwood says Mr. Blaine told him in 1892 when he was 62 that he no longer desired to be president; he had reached a time of life when he craved rest. "When the American people elect a president," said Mr. Blaine, "they require him to remain awake four years. I need my sleep." The American people make more demands upon the time and energies of their chief magistrate than they did in the quiet days of the first presidents. It is doubtful whether the average man put in the White house at the age of 69 would live through his term if he tried to do all that was expected of him. Lord Salisbury at the age of 72 has resigned the premiership because he no longer feels equal to the discharge of its duties.

The mental and physical strain to which an American president is subjected is increasing. The office is not one for men who have to nurse a strength weakened by the insidious approaches of old age. There doubtless are exceptional men of 69 who are able to stand a four years' siege of constant work and worry, but a political party will be quite excusable if it declines to look for them and gives preference to younger men.

The age limit set from which ex-Gov. Mr. Olney says the Chicago Tribune, will not be objected to by David Bennett Hill, who is only 59. It will not affect Arthur P. Gorman, who is a little over 63. It will not be difficult for the democrats to find a candidate who has not lived up to the maximum limit of 67 years.

JILTED BY MOONBEAM

Unhappy Love Affair Leads to Brave's Self-Destruction.

Cree Maiden Rejected Bear-Afraid-of-the-Wolf's Attentions and Then the Sioux Chief Cared to Live No More.

Red Blanket and several Cree Indians, who have been on a pilgrimage to the Bear Paw mountains, returned the other day to Havre, Mont., with the tragic suicide of Bear-Afraid-of-the-Wolf, a full-blooded Sioux Indian, who killed himself with a shotgun. Indian tradition records but few instances of self-destruction, and the suicide will go into history as one of the few cases of its kind on record.

Chided by the members of his tribe, and rejected by Moonbeam, a princess of the much-despised Cree Indian nation, the ardent lover left his tribe camp. When found his body was frozen, and near by were the carcasses of his two ponies, which he killed before taking his own life that he might ride on their spirits to the happy hunting grounds.

The body was brought into camp and for longer than a week the Indians have been in a great state of excitement. According to the custom of western red men, they inflict cruel and barbarous punishment upon their bodies during the lamentation over their dead. For a week these practices have been in progress at the various Cree camps in the vicinity of Havre.

The prominence of the dead chief by birth and that of his body was, on a granddaughter of Sitting Bull, together with the sensational and unusual character of his taking off, has prolonged the lamentation until the Crees all through the Bear Paw mountains are very much exercised over the affair, and the medicine men who have been consulted predict the death of Bear-Afraid-of-the-Wolf as meaning that the Great Father will soon give the Cree Indians a land of their own.

The dead chief was a descendant of White Bear, the famous Sioux after whom White Bear lake, near St. Paul, was named.

Twelve years ago Bear met-his wife, who is a descendant of Sitting Bull. They were married in the Judith mountains in June, 1890, with much pomp. Drifting for several years from place to place in northern Montana, Bear-Afraid-of-the-Wolf made love to many other Indian maidens, and this caused an estrangement which led to his separation from his spouse. There was but one true love for him, and that was the fair Moonbeam of a band of wandering Crees that Uncle Sam had refused to succor, and who had been ordered by an officer from Fort Assiniboine to return to the Canadian possessions from whence they came.

But Moonbeam had another lover—one of her own tribesmen. Bear was repulsed and rode out of camp a week ago with his two ponies. The search-ing party three days later found his frozen body, near those of his ponies, with the side of his head torn off with a charge of shot.

Flight of the Highlanders.

Richard Harding Davis relates this incident, which happened while he was acting as a correspondent during the English-Boer war: A regiment of Scotch Highlanders, noted for their bravery in action, during the heat of one battle were suddenly seen to break ranks and run in all directions. The officers as well shared in the stampede, and apparently made no attempts to urge the men under them into line. Their behaviour was a surprise to everybody on the field, and after the thing was over the colonel of the regiment was summoned before Gen. Roberts. "What in the devil was the matter with your regiment, sir?" asked "Bobs." "Well," replied the colonel, "there is not a man in the regiment afraid of a Dutchman's bullet, but we were steered into a field literally infested with bees, and you know, general, we were all in kilts and with bare legs."

New Noses for Everybody.

The latest development in surgery is the molding of noses in paraffin, which is now being practiced in Vienna. In the deformity known as saddle nose the most remarkable results are said to be obtained. The process consists in the subcutaneous injection of paraffin, which before it completely sets is molded into the desired shape. A warmed syringe is charged with the melted compound and the needle is inserted between the eyebrows, just above the root of the nose. Then the compound is injected into the subcutaneous tissues as the needle is slowly withdrawn.

ROAD CLAIMS BABY.

Railway Officials Lay Claim to Waif Left on a Train.

Will Be Reared and Educated at the Expense of Choctaw, Oklahoma & Gulf Railway Company—The Girl's Story.

From Wichita, Kan., comes the admonition that if you should forget and leave your baby on the train the child thereafter legally belongs to the railway company unless you can prove your ownership in a very forcible way.

The Choctaw, Oklahoma & Gulf Railway company has adopted a six-months-old baby girl left on one of their passenger trains and refuses to give it up to anyone laying claim to it, and the child now has the proud distinction of being the only baby that ever had a railroad for a parent. A man in Paris, Ill., claims that the child was given him by its mother. A woman has appeared at the children's home in Wichita and says she is its mother and wants her baby back. But the railway officials hold on tenaciously to their foundling and say they will raise it even better than any mother could do.

One of the finest wards in the Wichita children's home is set apart for Miss Okla Choctaw-Gulf, as this six-months-old foundling has been named. She has a special nurse, fine lace dresses, hoods and shoes, and, in fact, everything that money can buy. The children's home officers have been instructed to send the bill to the general offices of the Choctaw route, where the same will be honored and paid as one of the items in their expenses.

Last Friday a young woman boarded a local eastbound train at Parkersburg, Okla. She carried a large market basket, seemingly filled with bundles. The basket was placed on the seat beside her, and she left the train at Weatherford without taking the bundle along. James Grimes, 1167 North Washington avenue, Wichita, was seated behind the young woman when she arrived in and left the train. He said:

MOTHER WENT AWAY SOBBING.

"I noticed the bundle she left on the seat, but paid no attention to it until a slight sound came from the bundle. I unwrapped the bundle and found a very bright baby girl, apparently six months old. A bundle of clothing was also attached to the basket by a heavy silken cord. On removing the baby from the basket I found a note reading:

"'I was born December 13, 1901. I have no father or mother. Please take me to Wichita, Kan., to the orphans' home.'"

According to this note the baby was but two months old, but it is certainly six months and perhaps older, said the nurses at the hospital. The finding of a baby naturally created a great deal of excitement and a number of passengers wished to adopt it. The search for a friend more anxious to have it than anyone should it prove to have been a boy, but as it was a girl he gave it over to James Allison, of Paris, Ill. The conductor then wired headquarters, and before Mr. Allison left with the cars with his charge he was notified that the company refused to give it up. The conductor then took the child in charge, and, acting upon advice from the main office, brought it to Wichita and placed it in the home.

As yet no officer of the company has taken it upon himself to act as personal sponsor for the child, and all orders emanate from the road as a corporation. From this it would seem that Miss Okla is to be a child of a corporation.

Two days after the child was placed in the home at Wichita a strange young woman made her appearance and demanded that the baby be turned over to her, as she was its mother. The deaconess refused to give the baby to her and she went away sobbing.

It is quite certain that the Choctaw route intends to rear the child and make her the daughter of their destinies. She is what might be called a very pretty baby and will be a brunette. Her eyes are dark, but not black. She is a thoroughly healthy youngster, and looks as if she would grow up to be a credit to their benevolence.

Eloquent Graveyard Poetry.

A peculiar epitaph is engraved on a monument in Sleepy Hollow cemetery, Tarrytown, N. Y. It reads thus: "Here lies the body of little Jane, who ran out slyly and played in the rain; she caught the measles and it struck inside, and in less than four short weeks she died."

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

THINK IT OVER.

There are so many things which many people forget for the simple reason that they are always with us. Accustomed to see them so often, their very existence is forgotten. So it is that existing circumstances are often ignored and some careless observer assumed a state of affairs that really does not exist. So it is that many of the opponents of the Greater Plainfield scheme, although perfectly in earnest in their stand, have entirely forgotten to carefully consider existing conditions, a closer examination of which cannot fail to show the fallacy of some of their arguments.

Just forget for a moment all this talk about political jobbery and personal advancement and consider the two municipalities as they are, regardless of the personality of the population. They are naturally one. There is no natural boundary between them, they are alike in appearance. From a distance, it is impossible to tell where the city ends the borough begins.

When the county line was laid out along Green brook, there was no flourishing city of Plainfield. The settlement of that time grew in all directions. It was an admirable site for a city and little things like county lines were not regarded by those who were instrumental in building up the city. It has never been but one community, it is one community today. As the business centre of the com*munity happens to be located in the* city part, North Plainfield naturally contributes towards the welfare and prosperity of the city while Plainfield gives but little in return. It is in the city that the bulk of the stores are located. Here are all the banks and financial institutions, the two daily newspapers, the railroad station, the postoffice, and in fact all the principal institutions except the borough schools.

Who can gainsay the fact that North Plainfield is but the natural overflow of Plainfield? Both are dependent upon a single railroad, one postoffice, one express office. In all affairs of business and social life, there is no discrimination, the places are identical. Recognizing these facts, it inevitably follows that two governments are not necessary. They are only a useless waste of time and money besides being unnatural!

OPEN AIR CONCERTS.

It really seems strange that a little town like Westfield, which is not large enough to entitle it to the name of city, can support a series of open air band concerts while Plainfield, with its thousands of inhabitants and its many wealthy people, cannot do so. What is still more remarkable is that such concerts are decidedly popular here while in Westfield the turnout has been surprisingly small. Of course there was a crowd but it was by no means as large as one might expect after having seen the crowds at the concerts in this city during former years.

One of Westfield's energetic citizens did some hustling and raised sufficient funds to get the Acolian band from Garwood to give concerts every Saturday evening during August. The second of them was held Saturday night in the *centre of town. Many Plain*fielders attended but the Westfield people were not out in overwhelming numbers.

On every occasion that such public musical treats have been given here, thousands of people have turned out to hear the music. They have been wonderfully popular, particularly with those who are unable to take a week or two at some summer resort. They formed a very pleasant change from the usual routine and the local merchants felt the increase which would naturally come when so many people turned out.

Since the plan of open air concerts was first inaugurated by Former Councilman George H. Frost, they have been held at irregular intervals, largely through the efforts of Benj. LaVere, leader of the local band. Despite the popularity of them last year, Mr. LaVere was out of pocket at the end of the season and so did not feel inclined to resume the work this year. There has been some talk of arranging one or two of these concerts this month. Any movement to that end will have to be started very speedily if it is to be carried out. It does seem regretable that Westfield should show more enterprise in this direction than Plainfield.

Rev. Daniel H. Clare, of Waverley, N. Y., preached an eloquent sermon at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday morning upon "The Tenderness of Christ." Many out-of-town friends of the preacher helped to swell the large congregation present.

Roberts de S. Newhall Played the Eighteen Holes in Competition in 83.

REINHART AT HILLSIDE

Reinhart Tied for Second Honors There, D. H. Barrows Being Low Man—Newhall Was Low Man at Park Course—Ideal Weather and Courses Fast.

With so many of the local golfers on vacations, the attendance at the local golf clubs Saturday afternoon was naturally small. Those who did turn out found the courses in the best of condition and ideal weather conditions prevailing. Frank O. Reinhart appeared at the Hillside course and divided second honors with E. T. Newkirk. D. H. Barrows and W. T. Glenney were the low men in the regular weekly competitions. At the Park Golf Club, Roberts deS. Newhall broke the competition record for that course, making an 83, and taking first place in the regular weekly competition for the President's cup.

*Frank O. Reinhart made his reap*pearance at the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, Saturday afternoon, in his usual fine form. His round of the course in 79 gave him a share of the honors of the day, tieing him for second with E. T. Newkirk in the play for the Golf Committee cup. The lowest net score was made by D. H. Barrows, with a 78, giving him the three points more in the standing for the trophy.

Robert Abbott, who did not play Saturday, still leads for the cup. The changes resulting from last week's play advance Barrows to a tie with Glenney for third place, with seven and one-half each, Newkirk to fifth, with seven and Reinhart from thirteenth to a tie for seventh.

Following are the scores of Saturday:

PARK GOLF CLUB.

The best figures for the Park Golf Club course, made in competition since the course was changed, were broken Saturday afternoon in the weekly competition for the President's cup. Roberts deS. Newhall made an 83, which equals the figures of W. J. R. Thiers of two years ago. The course has since been made considerably harder without increasing the bogey. The bogey figures are 90.

Newhall made his first round in a three ball match playing against E. Maxwell Honeyman and Charles R. Morse. He made his second round in company with Morgan T. Townsend. His score in detail was:

Out ..... 5 4 7 3 5 4 6 4 5—43
In ..... 3 3 7 4 5 5 4 4 5—40

The bogey is:

4 3 6 4 5 4 5 4 5—40

Newhall had the advantage of ideal golfing weather while the course was at its best. It was quite fast and the putting greens true. His low score easily gave him first place while W. R. Faber was second. Charles B. Morse *scored a point for third thereby in*creasing his lead for the cup.

The scores better than 100 net were:

THEATRICAL.

The Fourteenth Street Theatre, New York, will open its season on Monday evening, August 18, with Brandon Tynan's new Irish play, "Robert Emmet." There have been more notable productions of Irish drama at this popular playhouse than at any other theatre in the United States, but it is promised that the performance of "Robert Emmet" will exceed anything ever seen in this class of drama.

Mr. Tynan's play is founded upon the stirring events of Emmet's insurrection in 1803 which ended in the execution of the young Irish patriot, and is said to be based on historical fact, much of which has been gathered from private papers in the possession of the Emmet family, which were kindly placed at the disposal of Mr. Tynan. As the period and the story were full of exciting episodes, the author has had much dramatic material to weave into his story and he is said to have taken advantage of that fact to the greatest degree.

More than one hundred people will take part in the performance. There will be two choirs in the church scene, one of mixed voices and the other a surpliced choir of male singers, and the cast, which embraces many players of celebrity, will be the strongest ever seen in an Irish play.

CAME INTO HER OWN.

Summer Resident at Chimney Rock Is Now Worth a Million.

Through a *decision of the Cali*fornia Supreme court, recently rendered, Mrs. Arnold Teneriffe, of Toledo, Ohio, who is summering at Chimney Rock, will become a millionaire. For eight years she has been in litigation with the State of California over the title of lands in the vicinity of Los Angeles, which were wrongfully taxen from her and which will now be returned. They comprise in all 20,000 acres worth $50 an acre.

The property was bequeathed Mrs. Teneriffe by her father, who was one of the forty-niners. A flaw in the title deprived her of them and she has since been fighting for her rights, the struggle ending with the decision just rendered. She expects to leave at once with her attorneys and convert the property into cash.

Cruising in Japanese Waters.

A letter received from Walter B. Rittenhouse, of Sandford avenue, who is now in Japan, says that he has just returned from a cruise on the great inland sea of Japan. He found it delightful although considerably different from cruising in American waters.

The Lamp of Steady Habits

The lamp that doesn't flare up or smoke, or cause you to use bad language; the lamp that looks good when you get it and stays good; the lamp that you never willingly part with, once you have it; that's

The New Rochester.

Other lamps may be offered you as "just as good" —they may be, in some respects, but for all good qualities, there's only one. To make sure the lamp offered you is a genuine, look for the name on it; every Steady Habits genuine lamp has it.

We make all stoves too, just as good as the lamps in fact, anything in oil or gas fixtures.

LOOKING OVER GROUND FOR NEW CEMETERY

Capitalists Viewed Site Near Oak Tree and Were Well Impressed With It.

INCLUDES 240 ACRES.

THE PARTY WAS CARRIED TO SITE ON A SPECIAL TRAIN.

Went Over the Ground Friday Afternoon—Were Greatly Pleased —The Tract is Nearly Free From Buildings.

Preliminary steps toward the laying out of the contemplated cemetery at Oak Tree are gradually being taken by the projectors. The matter has now reached a point where it remains for the capitalists to decide or not whether the scheme is to be pushed to completion. The proposed site was thoroughly viewed by a delegation, Friday afternoon, and they left the vicinity greatly pleased with their finding. A report will be submitted by them to the projectors at a meeting to be held in the near future and in all likelihood they will vote to begin actual work. None of the farms to comprise the cemetery have as yet been purchased but the owners have all given options on their property.

A special train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad conveyed the party from Newark to Oak Tree. The party consisted of Shreve Ackley, industrial agent of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, Lawyer Adam Frank, of New York, and three of the capitalists. At the station they were met by Lawyer Fresh, of Somerville, Wallace Vail, of this city, William C. Kelley, of Oak Tree, and a Daily Press reporter.

Carriages were in waiting and the party was immediately taken over the ground. The land all lays east of Woodland avenue and north of Pennsylvania avenue. Marcounier chapel and the ground owned by the church body is at the junction of these two thoroughfares but the property is exempt in all plans.

The farms which were inspected and which will be purchased of the deal in consummated are those owned by Mrs. Isaac Laing, of this city, David B. Kellogg, of New York, the latter being a part of the old John I. Holly place, Mrs. John Freeman, Eugene VanCourt, W. H. Knight and William C. Kelley. In all the farms comprise 240 acres and are nearly free from buildings. It is on the slope of a hill and with a small amount of labor could be transformed into a most desirable place of property, admirably suited for the intended purpose. An engineer tested the ground and made known the nature of the soil.

Permission to lay out a cemetery has been secured from Raritan township and as soon as the plans reach a nearer state of perfection articles of incorporation will be made. Among those who are interested in the scheme are Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees, of Elizabeth, and Judge Kirkpatrick, of Newark. It was the intention of both to be numbered among the party, yesterday, but previous engagements prevented.

To Improve North Avenue.

Workmen in the street department are relaying the gutter blocks on North avenue and preparing the thoroughfare for resurfacing. The avenue was one of the smoothest in the city, but constant excavations have left it in a rather dilapidated condition.

To My Friends.

It is with joy I tell you what Kodol did for me. I was troubled with my stomach for several months. Upon being advised to use Kodol, I did so, and words cannot tell the good it has done me. A neighbor had dyspepsia so that he had tried most everything. I told him to use Kodol. Words of gratitude have come to me from him because I recommended it.—Geo. W. Fry, Viola, Iowa. Health and strength, of mind and body, depend on the stomach, and normal activity of the digestive organs. Kodol, the great reconstructive tonic, cures all stomach and bowel troubles, indigestion, dyspepsia. Kodol digests any good food you eat. Take a dose after meals. L. W. Randolph.

SUIT FOR DAMAGES AGAINST A GOVERNOR

Andrew F. Power, of Netherwood, Has Started Suits for $500,000 for Slander.

EIGHT SUITS IN ALL

ARE BROUGHT AGAINST THOSE WHO CLAIMED POWER WAS DISHONEST.

Governor Kimball, of Rhode Island, and Others Are Defendants—E. W. Williams, of this City, is One of Power's Attorneys.

Complications likely to result disastrously for some of the parties interested in the affair have arisen in the difficulty between Andrew F. Power, of Netherwood, and Governor Charles D. Kimball, of Rhode Island. Suits aggregating $500,000 have been brought in the Supreme Court of New York by the Plainfielder against the Governor and Louis B. Curtis, of Bridgeport, Conn., the complaints in the charges recently made against Power. The latter is represented by Edgar W. Williams, of this city, and George Gordon Battle, of New York.

Malicious prosecution and slander are the charges instanced in the present cases. There are eight suits altogether, four against each of the defendants. Two of these are brought for Power personally and two for the Exporters' Association of America and the New England Manufacturers' Association. These are the organizations against which the charges were made by Kimball and Curtis in the matter in the Centre Street Police Court, of New York a few weeks ago, the claim being that Power had misrepresented their financial conditions.

In the suits against Curtis, Boothby & Baldwin are associate attorneys with the other lawyers mentioned. In speaking of the affair, Mr. Williams, counsel for Mr. Power, characterizes the whole proceedings on the part of Governor Kimball and Curtis as an outrage. He says: "The criminal prosecution brought against Power was a piece of unadulterated malice. There was not a scintilla of evidence to support any allegation which was made against Power. The complaint in the police court was dismissed by Magistrate Flammer without asking for any statement from the defendant or any evidence in his behalf."

In consideration of the unfavorable light in which the whole disagreeable affair has placed Power, the suits for damages have been brought. Summonses were served on the defendants on August 8 and they are allowed twenty days in which to file their answer.

It Needs a Tonic.

There are times when your liver needs a tonic. Don't give purgatives that gripe and weaken. DeWitt's Little Early Risers expel all poison from the system and act as tonic to the liver W. Scott, 531 Highland avenue, Milton, Pa., says: "I have carried DeWitt's Little Early Risers with me for several years and would not be without them." Small and easy to take. Purely vegetable. They never gripe or distress. L. W. Randolph.

Wrecked on Hill.

With a broken wheel on their automobile, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Rolfer, of Putnam avenue, waited at the foot of the Dugway hill Saturday evening until Capt. Hand's teamsters came to the rescue and towed the wrecked vehicle home. A rock in the roadway was responsible for the damage, tearing the tire and shattering some of the spokes, making it impossible for the machine to proceed.

RESULTS OF OTHER GAMES.

Westfield, 9; Rahway, 8.

After having secured a lead in the City Baseball League which confines the final victory to the two clubs, the Y. M. C. A. and the Hope Y. M. A. teams fell down Saturday afternoon. St. Marys did not find the Y. M. C. A. team a difficult proposition while the Safe Works players fell upon the Hope Y. M. A. combination in a way that brought tears to the eyes of the Hope rooters. In both cases failure to hit the delivery of the opposing pitcher was the primary cause for the defeat of the leaders. Only two more games remain to be played by each team. Y. M. C. A. and Hope Y. M. A. are still tied for first place and one or the other must win, the other two clubs being too far behind to catch up. There will be no league games next Saturday afternoon. The week following the leaders will meet. Then there are postponed games to be played off by Hope and Safe Works and Y. M. C. A. and St. Marys.

HOPES WIPED OUT.

A shut-out in all its baldness and also the first to fall to the lot of a League team was the bitter pill the Hope team had to swallow, Saturday. The Safe Works aggregation played all around their opponents and won out by a score of 12 to 0. Failure to hit Burns' delivery was one particular cause that can be assigned for the victory. At the bat the Iron Workers were all right. In the field they were better. They landed on Montroes and Hewitt, the latter being substituted in the seventh, for 13 hits, dropping them all around the field. The Hopes managed to get four scattered hits off Burns and get two men as far as third, but that was all.

Hopes were first to the bat and went out with a cipher. Their opponents immediately started a carousal and when the agony was over three men had scored. In the second they sent another man over the plate, in the fifth four more and in the seventh another four. Nearly all were made by a fine bunch of hits, that included two and three baggers.

With the Hopes it was the same story oft repeated. Time and again when a hit would have done wonders it wasn't forthcoming. In the fifth matters looked promising when Hartfelder rapped the leather for a two bagger and Gordon sacrificed to give him third. But Hewitt had previously struck out and Roseberry followed suit, settling the matter. The agony was worse in the ninth after Shortman flied out to Burns. Dalley reached second on a clean drive, and was advanced to third by Martin and Montross getting free passes. Hartfelder took the willow while the expectant crowd howled for a hit but he sent a measly fly in the air that was gobbled by Allen. This left everything to Hewitt and he prepared to kill the ball but instead sent a little fly to Jackson that was quickly gathered in and Hope gave up the ghost.

Burns' pitching was one feature of the game. The support he received was simply elegant and when he was touched up, somebody robbed the Hopes of a hit. The Safe Works people practically played an errorless game.

Horse Badly Gashed.

A valuable work horse, belonging to Henry Wierenga, was badly gashed in the side while in the pasture on Randolph road, Sunday. Efforts to stop the flow of blood proved fruitless until Dr. Pocock was called. The animal will be incapacitated for some time.

Stolen bases—Enright, Jackson. Two-base hits—Enright, Seigfried, Jackson, Dalley, Hartfelder. Three-base hit—Burns. Double plays—Franklin to Enright; Shortman, Hewitt and Dalley. Two innings decided the result of the game between the Y. M. C. A. and the St. Mary's. All the runs made by the former were scored in the second, when Doyle was touched up for five hits, which, with two errors, combined to give what looked like a safe lead. St. Mary's, however, settled matters in their fourth, making five of their seven tallies, off four hits, a base on balls, an error and the general slow work of the Y. M. C. A. in the field.

Except for two bad innings, both pitchers were in good form. Doyle especially distinguished himself, striking out nine men and giving only one pass to first. After the second, one scratch hit was the total until the ninth, when two singles fattened the Y. M. C. A. batting averages without affecting the result.

St. Mary's error column is deceptive, as only two of the six misplays were costly ones. Of the other four, that of Lederer's was an excusable muff of a long fly after a desperate run. Mack redeemed his fumble of Smith's grounder in the sixth by taking a hot liner off Burt's bat and doubling Smith at first.

Fast base running was another feature of St. Mary's play. Lederer and Taylor led with two steals, while Keene and Crotty took advantage of Y. M. C. A.'s slowness in the field by stretching out singles for two bases. None of the Y. M. C. A men succeeded in stealing and only one attempt was made. Eleven left on bases, against St. Mary's six, tells part of the story of the game.

Things looked dubious for St. Mary's for a few moments in the ninth, when Y. M. C. A. managed to get three men on base, with only one out. Burt singled, Barnes sent a grounder through Doyle's hands, advancing Burt, Bowman flied to Winn, Bolsterie singled. Doyle retained his steadiness, in spite of the nerve wearing conditions. George Dupee died on a pop fly to second and McLaughlin ended the suspense of the St. Mary fans by striking out.

'PLAINS' GOOD GAME.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, August 11—One of the most exciting games of the season was played Saturday afternoon on the local diamond when the Roselle Field Club went down to defeat at the hands of the local. From the time the first man was up in the first inning until the last man out retired in the ninth the game was all that could be desired by the most lusty rooter of either team.

The visitors had Parker, one of Newark's crack twirlers, in the box but the heavy hitting locals landed on him for two two baggers in their half of the first and before they were retired had netted three runs. After this Parker settled down, but could not stop the home team from making base hits at critical stages of the game. Manager Johnston tried out a new twirler during the first five innings by the name of MacCauley, who pitched last season in the New York State League. The visitors had some difficulty finding his curves, only six base hits being made in the fifth inning he was in the box.

In the fifth inning the visitors tied the score on a long hit to right field, which in being fielded in struck in a tree and before it could be returned to the diamond again two men had crossed the plate, making the score 5 to 5.

Manager Johnston brought Harvey in from right field to do the twirling in the sixth and it was all up with the Roselles as they were completely at his mercy, only one base hit being made off his delivery in the fourth inning, while six of them fanned the air.

Scotch Plains scored one in this half of the sixth but were shut out in the seventh and eighth.

Company K Stands at the Head of All National Guard in its Marksmanship.

Success has undoubtedly crowned Captain Browning's efforts to have Company K take the lead in point of marksmanship over all the other companies in the State. Out of five members who journeyed to the range at Sea Girt, Saturday, two qualified as marksmen, two as sharpshooters and one was raised to the expert's range.

The official figures have not yet been compiled, but it is known that the Plainfield company has broken the record held by Company M, of the First Regiment. A party of twelve Company K officers and privates will visit the range at their own expense Monday, August 25, for an exhibition shoot.

CLOCK GOLF.

Exciting Contest Among Women at The Hotel Netherwood.

Much interest was taken in the clock golf tournament at the Hotel Netherwood last week. The following played in the qualifying round: Mrs. Jacks, Mrs. Snan, Mrs. Land Brown, Miss Hibert, Mrs. Hendrie, Mrs. Balch, Miss Comes, Mrs. Comes, Miss L. Perozo, Miss M. Perozo, Mrs. Paul Sheldon, Mrs. H. C. Miller, Mrs. C. Stallman. The contest finally narrowed down to Mrs. Jacks, Mrs. Land Brown, Mrs. Snan and Miss Hibert in the semi-finals. In the finals, Mrs. Brown defeated Mrs. Jacks.

Benevolent's Anniversary.

Elaborate plans are being made by Benevolent Council, No. 256, Jr. O. U. A. M., for the celebration of its anniversary which takes place on Friday evening, August 22. Washington Hall has been engaged for the occasion and in addition to an unusually fine entertainment, the affair will terminate with a banquet. A committee is taking care of the preliminaries.

Martins Have Gone South.

Indications of an early fall have been shown in another alleged infallable sign. The martins, which for years have made their homes in the bird houses on West Front street, have left town, winging their way southward. Local weather sharps say that the yearly departure is never made until cold weather is within six weeks of arrival.

Knocked Down by Wheelwoman.

Willie Loller, the six-year-old son of Zadoc Loller, of Alton, was knocked down by a woman cyclist on West Front street, opposite Voehl's alley, Saturday evening. The little fellow was badly bruised and frightened but was otherwise unhurt. He was walking just behind his mother when he was struck.

Macadamizing Maple Avenue.

Work has been begun on the new macadamizing operation on Maple avenue, formerly Rahway road. The stretch from the Hillside golf course toward South Plainfield is being put into excellent shape by the Middlesex county authorities.

CLAMS FIRST, THEN POLITICS

That Was the Order of Events at Union County Republicans' Outing Saturday.

TWO THOUSAND THERE

Politics Took a Back Seat While the Guests Enjoyed the Clambake —Lots of Prominent Guests Were Present, But Wire Pulling Was on the Quiet.

Politics took a back seat when the Republican boats of Union county gathered at Galvin's Park, Saturday afternoon, for the much heralded outing of the county committee. Of course there was some political talk, with so much doing in the county it could not be expected otherwise, but each man's chief endeavor appeared to be to round up as much as possible of the clambake and enjoy himself thereon to his heart's content. Over a thousand gathered from all parts of the county and, although they may not have discovered the inside line to the county situation, they saw many prominent men and had their appetities satisfied.

Like other affairs of that nature, it was not possible to land the courses in their proper order. Some of the guests failed to land some of the attractions at all. It is safe to say, however, that no one went away hungry. It is no slight task to feed a thousand and the county committee managed to accomplish the task as well or better than is usually the case.

As each man entered the park he was handed a blue badge with a golden inscription, a polished clam shell dangling from the bottom, and a screaching eagle unfolding its swings at the top. True, the badges were intended for service, according to the date thereon, at a Republican love feast last year, but their requisition Saturday was noted as characteristic of the party fondness for economy. A few Democrats from Elizabeth, who contrived to gain access to the park, asserted that the whole affair was in honor of King Edward's coronation, and will make use of the event in the next campaign to show the imperialistic tendencies of their political opponents. One man, who came to the grounds, full faithful to the G. O. P., failed to get an adequate share of the bivalves and the viands, and now he says he will not vote for Roosevelt in 1904.

Noted Republicans were present from all parts of the county. But Senator Cross was conspicuous by his absence. And there was not a man in all that throng who had seen any other man there for the space of ages. At least such was the impression to be gained from the numerous handshakes, from the many faces wreathed with broad smiles, from the excessive cordiality in the air when one individual happened to see a fellow being. Of course there was some wire pulling during the day, but the wires were well insulated and no sparks were visible to the general gaze. Oratory was happily absent, and no one had time to listen to speeches anyway.

The menu provided a feast for the gods. There were a half-dozen pyramids of steaming clams, fourteen barrels of luscious lobsters, fifteen hundred chickens, 2,000 ears of corn, twenty-five gallons of hotchop, 500 pounds of bluefish, fifty firkins of butter, a plantation of water melons and a ton of bread. To wash it all down there was enough beer, ginger ale and sarsaparilla to float the Atlantic squadron, and in the shape of a siesta a cigar for every man in the press.

It took sixty colored waiters to wait on the 2,000 people present. Several long tables stretched along the green, where after being regaled with chowder in an enclosed building, the hungry multitude sat itself down to eat. There was a slight delay in the serving of the victuals, and excitement began to cool, when at 4.30 o'clock, the canvass was lifted from off the steaming pyramids of clams, and an odor, as of sea weed, filled the air. A mighty shout arose from the throng. Another moment and the tables were groaning beneath burdens of food. The greatest charge in the annals of warfare had just begun.

All the while Datter's band of Elizabeth, played "Arrah, go on, you're only fooling," "Ain't it a Shame, a Measly Shame," "Johnny, Get Your Gun," and other air appropriate to the occasion. At 6 o'clock the crowd began to disperse, and before many minutes the grounds were left in sole possession of the man who issues invitations to paralyze the artful dodger.

Noticed in the throng were Congressman Chas. N. Fowler, U. S. Senator John Kean, County Committee Chairman Hamilton Fish Kean, Surrogate Geo. F. Parrott, Sheriff Samuel Wootton, Prosecutor J. J. C. English, Colonel D. C. Collins, County Surveyor Bauer, Editor Henry S. Altai, German Free Press, Postmaster Charlock, Assistant Postmaster White, Former Assemblyman Ellis R. Meeker, Frank Bergen, County Clerk Howard, Michael Gannon, Robert Taylor, Elizabeth; City Collector F. H. Smith, Councilmen B. F. Coriell, Robert L. Lee, Clarence L. Murphy and Gleak, Freeholder W. A. Westphal, Postmaster E. H. Bird, Andrew McCardell, City Judge Wm. N. Runyon, Chief F. S. Kiely, Chief T. O. Doane, Mayor O. L. Jenkins, Former Assemblyman Chas. S. Foote, John Dean, D. C. Smalley, Plainfield; Mayor N. B. Smalley, Dr. A. H. Dundon, Frank Rowley, North Plainfield; Clerk of Board of Freeholders S. Russling Ryno, Chief of Police Wright, Councilman Brooks, Tax Receiver Charles E. Reed, Rahway; Assemblyman Hall, Cranford; Colonel E. W. Hine, Westfield; Freeholder King, Clark township.

A detail of Plainfield policemen composed of Patrolmen Overbaugh, Flynn and Higgins assisted a similar detachment from Elizabeth as a committee of safety.

HIGH WIND AT MILLSTONE.

Heavy Blow Caused Considerable Damage There Sunday Night.

The little hamlet of Millstone, on the Millstone river, received a taste of what Trenton suffered by the strenuous wind, Sunday afternoon. Trees were uprooted, fences blown down and many a barn lost its roof.

A costly steam launch belonging to Charles VanNostrand, to which a number of smaller boats were attached, was swept into the river and was practically ruined. The damage will amount to many dollars.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 29, 1901.
Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of myself, to be used at your discretion.
About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.
I applied to specialists for cure, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.
I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

INCREASE IN NEW JERSEY
SHOWN BY A REPORT SENT TO THE NATIONAL SECRETARY.

Growth of the State Council of New Jersey, Daughters of Liberty.

The report of the State Council of New Jersey, Daughters of Liberty, was mailed to the national secretary, William V. Edkins, of Philadelphia, August 4. The delay of a few councils to submit their reports prevented the report being completed sooner. This report was for the six months ending June 30 last and contained the following figures, which will interest members of the order and others who have watched the progress of the order in New Jersey: Initiated, 802 women and 149 men; reinstated, 39 women and 8 men; admitted by card, 41 women and 13 men; suspended, 414 women and 118 men; withdrawn by card, 44 women and 10 men; deceased, 26 women and 8 men.

The total number of members is 10,386 women and 2,309 men; total 12,695, of whom 126 women and eighty men are honorary members, the others being in the beneficial class. Of the men seventy-nine belong to the Order of United American Mechanics, 2,154 to the Junior Order United American Mechanics and seventy-six to both these orders.

The financial part of the report contained these figures, which apply to all the councils in the State: Amount invested, $13,335.31; amount in treasuries, $24,034.34; value of paraphernalia, $20,782.23, making a total worth of $58,141.88.

During the term the councils paid out $15,779.64 in sick and death benefits, and paid out $22,063.52 for other purposes. The per capita tax which accompanied the report amounted to $499.56. In all, 146 councils were reported, every county in the State being represented with the exception of Cape May county. Essex county leads with twenty-four councils and 2,230 members.

DOUBLE LAUNCHING.

Both the Mexican Gun Boats Will Glide Into the Water the Same Day.

It has now been arranged that there shall be a double launching at Lewis Nixon's Crescent shipyard, Elizabethport, September 15, the birthday of President Diaz, of Mexico. On that date the gunboats Tampico and Vera Cruz, both of which are being constructed for the Mexican Navy, will be sent afloat.

It was the original intention to launch the Tampico August 20, but Lieut. Nixon found this would be impossible, hence the change.

The places of the gunboats on the stocks will be taken at the shipyard by two large vessels to be built for the Mexican government, each to have 1,800 tons displacement.

Miss Grace Emmons, of Jackson avenue, is entertaining Miss Emily Dunham, of Yonkers, and Miss Lillian Keuns, of New York.

WHY FORMER SENATOR WAS NOT NOMINATED

Reed Faction of Somerset County Delegation Spoiled the Well Laid Plans.

HAD COUNTER SCHEME

OTHER DELEGATIONS JUST PREVENTED AN OPEN RUPTURE.

For Sake of Harmony the Project of Complimentary Vote for Senator Reed Was Abandoned —It Was a Close Shave.

Those who claim to be on the inside as to the proceedings at the Fourth District Congressional convention at Flemington on August 5, tell an unexpected story as to the danger which threatened that peaceful gathering. An open rupture between the two Somerset county factions, it is said, was almost imminent when the leaders were dissuaded from their alleged purpose of carrying the fight upon the floor of the convention.

What caused the seeming trouble was the expressed intention of certain of the Thompson retainers to secure a complimentary vote for the former Senator. They secured promises of support from some of the other delegates, who were ignorant of the fact that the ideal was to strike a blow at the Reed faction in the convention. When the latter learned of the scheme, they exposed the nature of it, and the neutral men were exceedingly displeased that they had so nearly aided in provoking a factional fight.

Trouble was avoided principally by the selection of Mayor Smalley as chairman of the Somerset county caucus. He told the gathering plainly that the North Plainfield delegation would not submit to any action showing endorsement of Thompson. When this news became known among the other delegates, they repudiated their promises to aid in giving the complimentary vote and declined to have anything to do with the scheme.

Further danger of factional trouble was then reached, it is said, by the action of the Reed men in going among the delegates and securing pledges of support for a complimentary vote for the nomination being given to their own leader. After a number had been secured, the Hunterdon and Mercer leaders learned of the new plan and finally dissuaded the Reed men from doing anything which would add to the bitterness between the rival Somerset county camps.

"It was a close shave," said a Somerset delegate who is not allied to either the Thompson or Reed faction. "It looked like an open rupture for a time. A lot of delegates were fooled, and they became angry. The Reed men had the upper hand eventually. They proved it by selecting Smalley as chairman of the delegation. It might have been a good thing, ultimately, for the Republican party in Somerset, but it had not occurred. We are tired of this factional scrapping, and we are anxious to have done with it. If North Plainfield votes to go over into Union county in the election to be held September 16, to determine that question, Charlie Reed will go with it and will cease to be a factor in Somerset politics. Otherwise we, who are neutral as between Thompson and Reed, are of the opinion that we may deem it necessary for the sake of harmony and unity to retire both of them from party leadership."

LITERARY.

It is not often that one finds a love story which is absolutely satisfactory, and a fine love story ending in reunion is still a rarer thing. Such, however, is "Broken Toys" with its Roman setting and its atmosphere of noble love and tragic renunciation. Another story which will interest readers of the August Cosmopolitan is "The Soul of Mozart" which centers in the theme of transmigration of souls, a problem fascinating even to the ancients. It is a tradition that society stories are written by those who have never moved in society; but Mrs. Poultney Bigelow writes "The Story of a Scented Note" from within the charmed circle. The tale of Heine's passion for Mathilde by Richard LeGallienne, and a pretty little Japanese romance help to make the number an interesting one for reading on cool verandas by the sea or within the city's walls.

Delightful Trip.

Miss Noel J. Bullock and Miss C. A. Barber write from Italy that ever since landing at Antwerp, July 1, they have had fine weather and a delightful trip. Their last letter was dated from Pisa after they had just crossed the St. Gothard Pass, with its 200 bridges and eighty tunnels. They are members of a small party ably conducted by Miss S. Lillian Blaisdell, formerly secretary of the Bureau of University Travel.

TO GREATLY IMPROVE HYDE MOUNTAIN TRACT

Will Convert Hyde Estate Into a Beautiful Residential Park on Mountainside.

OPENING NEW ROADS.

WILL NOT INTERFERE WITH FUTURE EXISTENCE OF PARK GOLF LINKS.

A Few Slight Changes Necessary in the Course—Frank de L. Hyde's New Colonial Residence and Gate House Now Building.

Extensive improvements, designed to make the place rank high among the residence parks of the State, are in course of operation at the Hyde estate, bordering on East Front street, and extending back along the slopes of the mountain. When completed, the work will have made the grounds one of the most picturesque in this section of the country.

Attracting marked attention from the outside will be the handsome lodge and gateway, now in course of erection. Running back to the golf links of the Park Golf Club will be a modern road, which will furnish a desirable passage from and to the course, in addition to the present means of access from the lower end. On the side of the mountain, with a splendid stretch of scenery before it, will be the new colonial residence of Frank de L. Hyde.

Should the contemplated sale of the building lots marked out on the estate be effected, other residences also will probably be erected, making a park settlement, in which handsome homesteads will be prominent features. Such operations, however, are only in prospect. The work in actual operation is upon Mr. Hyde's own home and upon the lodge and road. Extensive stables are to be built for the new residence.

From the work of engineers and architects, it is evident that the future of the estate will mean the conversion of 150 acres of mountain woodland into a cultivated tract of residential parkland. No effort is being spared to beautify the grounds in a permanent way, to make possible the erection of future homes in a setting which will be harmonious to costly effect.

With the extension of the building operations, some slight change has been made necessary in the Park golf links, which form part of the estate. The location of Mr. Hyde's new home will necessitate the removal of one of the holes on the course, which will be altered in accordance therewith. The Golf Club leases its land from the estate, and it was at first feared that the improvements might include an appropriation of the golf course. The apprehension has proven unfounded.

QUIETLY WEDDED AT HOME

MISS ANNA LOUISE BORRUP BECAME WIFE OF CHAS. KIRCHNER.

Ceremony Took Place at Bride's Home on Terrill Road August 6, at Noon.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Borrup, of Terrill road, was the scene of a quiet wedding, August 6, when their daughter, Miss Anna Louise Borrup was made the wife of Charles Kirchner, of New York. Only a few intimate friends and near relatives witnessed the ceremony. Rev. Dr. Parks, of Scotch Plains, officiated.

The bride was prettily attired in white silk and was given away by her father. Mrs. Andrew Krog, of this city, acted as matron of honor and Andrew Krog, as best man, completed the party.

Following the nuptials a repast was served which concluded with an informal reception by the bride and groom. The young people afterward departed on their honeymoon which will be spent at the Inwood Golf Club, of Staten Island, of which Mr. Kirchner is a member. On returning they will reside temporarily with the bride's parents until a new home which the groom is having erected on Central avenue, Netherwood, is completed. The bride received many handsome silver and china presents.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 17, "Gleanings From Many Fields"—Text, John iv. 35.

"Lift up your eyes and look on the fields, for they are white already to harvest."

This is literally true at the present time in respect to people becoming Christians. The change has come rapidly and finds the church unprepared to gather in the harvest which is ripe for the ingathering. A new era has dawned, and we have not become accustomed to the new conditions, nor have the older methods of doing been properly adjusted to the new needs. Many indications point to hopeful times. Increasing attention to the worldwide needs and careful study of the best means of meeting the pressing demands on the church to give the gospel to the non-Christianized masses of men are the demands of the hour.

1. A study of the fields. Every church should give at least one service a month to a careful survey of the general work of the church and its immediate lines. This can be done in a League service or in a more general meeting of the church. The old time monthly missionary prayer meeting on the evening of the first Sunday of the month can be modernized and made helpfully alive. The various mission fields of the church can be taken in succession. Begin with Japan. Let some one make a study of old Japan and in a brief talk or paper of ten minutes set forth the conditions of life in that country previous to the visit of Commodore Perry in 1854. This should be followed by a concise review of the changes which have made the new Japan, and the new spirit of the nation under the leadership of Count Ito and his colleagues. The present place of Christian missions in the empire and the work already done will make a third topic. Where possible a map should be used, and places of importance can be pointed out during the progress of the addresses or at the close. Information sufficient for the preparation of such talks or papers can be had in any public library. This failing, a letter to the missionary secretaries at New York or the Epworth League headquarters, Chicago, will bring needed literature and the titles of a few books, which can be bought at a very small price. Some chapters have during the season just passed made use of a monthly meeting for a third topic in the distribution of reading mission fields on the way. Several papers during the evening dealt with various topics of interest, such as routes of travel, public buildings, people, productions, local customs, history and present conditions. At the close a choice collection of views illustrating the matters presented was shown by stereopticon. The illustrated papers and magazines now give so many fine illustrations of all parts of the world that it will be easy to make a collection at small expense which will instruct and interest any company in this work.

2. How shall we increase our workers? How to harvest the fields?

Present the duty clearly in speech and paper for every one to lay aside regularly and proportionately of his income for God's work. Economize on personal adornment and pleasures and save money.

Bring home to the young men and women the pressing duty to fit themselves as preachers and teachers, and of others to do business so as to support these preachers and teachers.

Is Life Worth Living?

Life is worth living for the brute. He is not sensitive, and the lower he is in the scale of organized life the less his sensibility. But man, the summit of creation's development, is sensitive. He is capable of suffering in both body and mind, and by his power to anticipate pain and sorrow he may add does pralong his sorrows." If man is only the highest of animate creatures, his eminence is purchased at too great a price. It may be questioned whether that eminence is worth the cost. But if man is something more and something else, if he is connected with other than the creatures below him, if he is a candidate for immortality, then there is no question—life is worth the cost. "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."—Rev. Joseph G. Wilson in Episcopal Recorder.

Religion.

There are two ways of lighting a dark room. One is to attack the darkness with candles. The other is to open the shutters and let in the light. When light comes, darkness goes. There are two ways of forming character. One is to conquer our sins. The other is to cultivate the opposite virtues. The latter method is best because it is surest; the virtue replaces the sin. Christianity is not a drill. It is life, full, free, radiant and rejoicing. What a young man should do is not to vex himself about his imperfections, but to fix his mind on the bright image of perfection; not to weary his soul with rules, but to live with Christ as one liveth with a friend. There is one way to complete manhood, and that is fellowship with Jesus Christ.—John Watson.

Poverty and Uselessness.

There was a bitterness in her poverty. She sat and looked at it, often even laughed at it, for it bound all the family together hand in hand. It taught endurance, self dependence and, best of all lessons, self renunciation.—Dinah Maria Mulock.

Consider.

Consider well your actions;
What's done you can't recall;
No use to pull the trigger,
Then try to stop the ball.
—Lippincott's Magazine.

DELAY IN GETTING STEEL

THAT WILL DELAY BUILDING OF CENTRAL'S NEWARK BAY BRIDGE.

Further Details About the Bridge and the Lift to Take the Place of the Draw.

It is likely to be some time before the Central Railroad of New Jersey starts work on the construction of the steel bridge across Newark Bay from Bergen Point to Elizabethport owing to the delay in the manufacture of structural steel. The steel will not be ready for delivery to the company before the spring, but long before then the foundations for the immense stone piers which will support the super*structure will have been completed so* that as soon as the steel is received the work can be pushed with speed.

Further details of the new bridge show that the draw spans are to be built on a unique plan for this section of the country.

Each span will lift up from the centre pedestal into the air on huge roller shoes, thus permitting a perfectly clear passage in less than fifty seconds. The motive power for operating the lifts is to be electricity.

This new method of operating draws is known as the Sherver roller lift, and has been very successfully used in the west, especially in the neighborhood of Chicago, where the inventor resides.

The Central Railroad draw spans are, however, much longer, and will be much heavier than any heretofore constructed. The roller lift draw is a peculiar looking piece of engineering. The periphery of the great roller shoes, which are massive and heavy, counterbalance the weight of the draw and rest on a solid and massive foundation. The draw is lifted by electrically operated machinery, which causes the great roller to turn backward on its foundation, the arms of the roller—otherwise the draw—immediately swinging upward toward the sky. In Chicago, where these roller-lift draws are in use, the lift is opened inside of thirty seconds. Closing the draw is as simple an operation as its opening and as quickly done.

General Manager Besler of the Central Railroad says that the company's engineers had satisfied themselves of the practicability of the roller draw, and that the United States Bureau of Navigation connected with the Navy Department had examined the plans and approved them.

The arms of the roller lift will soar eighty-five feet in the air when the bridge is open and the immense lever age of this great draw is almost incalculable. The Navy Department especially indorses the plan to have the roller lifts placed in the centre of the channel on the usual central pedestal.

THEATRICAL.

Jessie Mae Hall, supported by the Proctor Stock Company, will present her comedy-drama, "The Princess of Patches," for the first time in Harlem, at Proctor's One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Theatre. Ideal bills of summer vaudeville continue to attract great crowds to the Twenty-third Street Theatre. Excellent bookings have been made for the current days and the continuous performances promise entertainment of a superior sort. The small troupe of international dancers, a late European importation for the Proctor circuit, will be the topping features of a twenty-five act bill. Richard Mansfield's original comedy-drama, "A Parisian Romance," adapted from the play by Octave Feuillet, will be played by the Proctor Stock Company at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, the principal role, Baron Chivrial, being played by Addison Pitt, who has been especially engaged for the part. Over in Newark another big bill of clever vaudeville will be presented at Proctor's pretty theatre on Military Park. Fiske and McDonough, the Mozart Comedy Four, Morris and Baker, Harry B. Lester, West and Lewis, and several other good entertainers have been retained for the ensuing week.

Gift of Governor.

Governor Murphy has presented to the Grandin Library of Clinton, Hunterdon county, a handsome and valuable volume, attractively bound in colonial blue. It is the National Register of the Society of Sons of the American Revolution. Another new addition to the library is from President Ralph Voorhees, a relative of the former Governor of that name, a very interesting work on "Introduction of Domestic Reindeer into Alaska."

Funeral of Geo. J. Barry.

All that is mortal of George J. Barry, of Greenbrook road, was laid to rest this morning, after the usual impressive ceremonies of the church. Solemn requiem high mass was said over the remains at St. Joseph's church and interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery. The pall bearers were John Carney, William Neal, Richard Birmingham, Howard Cooper, James White and Lawrence Beaner.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 17—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—The life of faith.—Gen. xii. 1-5; Heb. xi. 1-6.

One of the severest criticisms of the world upon the church is the emphasis that the church places upon the subject of faith. From many sides we hear the cry and demand that the church should preach more about the practical things of life and should not so often dwell upon the realm of faith. This criticism, however, is most unjust and unwarranted. The importance of faith to life cannot be estimated. Men live as they believe. What they are and what they do are above everything else determined by what they believe. The Puritans believed firmly in God, in God's control of the affairs of this life and in the teachings of the Scripture that there would be punishment for all here in the life to come. The effect of this belief was clearly seen in their lives. At a certain period in the history of the people of France they practically discarded all belief in God and sacred things. The result of this unbelief was most apparent in their lives. They gave themselves up almost entirely to the things of this life that make for destruction rather than for development, and history has never seen worse effects of unbelief than were manifested in France at this time. Faith inspires life; its fruits are works, and therefore too much importance cannot be attached to the subject of faith and its relation to life.

1. The life of faith is necessary. Paul says that we walk by faith and not by sight." There are many people in the world who try to walk by sight, but it is absolutely impossible. Our almost every act of life requires some faith. We eat because we believe that the food which we take will support our lives. This is an exercise of faith. We believe in past history, in places that we have never seen and people that we have never known, and thus we constantly exercise faith in all relations of our lives. This being true, it is absurd folly that the exercise of religious faith should be so often discountenanced. If we must live by faith, why should it be incredible that we should exercise religious faith? If we can believe in men whom we have not seen, why can we not believe in God although we have not seen Him? If we can believe in distant countries which we have never visited, why can we not believe in a land beyond this life and look forward to habitation in it?

2. The life of faith is possible. To some people it seems impossible to believe in the great religious truths, in God, in the inspiration of the Scriptures and in the life to come. This is not impossible. That a life of faith is not impossible is proved by the multitude of those who have lived a life of faith, whose entire lives have been controlled and directed by their supreme faith in God and eternal truths. The life of Abraham was purely a life of faith. God called him to go forth to a country that he had never seen. He went forth not knowing whither he went, but trusting the results of the future entirely to God. In the eleventh chapter of Hebrews we have a long array of patriarchs whose lives were based upon their faith in God and eternal truths. They endured hardships, they suffered many losses and persecutions because of their supreme faith in God. What is possible to them is also possible to us. If Abraham could live a life of faith in God, so can we. Such a life is possible, and it should be the aim of every one to base his life entirely upon his faith in God and God's control of this life and also of the future.

3. The life of faith is profitable. Without faith it is impossible to please God, but a life of faith is well pleasing to Him in sight, and God has promised great blessings to those who please Him in their lives. When Abraham was called to leave Ur of Chaldees, God made rich promises to him upon the condition of his faithfulness. Those promises were all fulfilled. A life of faith and of service based upon faith is the most profitable life that we can live in this world.

Looking to Christ.

If we could only look away from ourselves, our miseries and sins, to the sinless Man of Sorrows! We scrutinize the sores in our own bosoms instead of laying them bare to the gaze of the great Physician. We contemplate our wickedness instead of the blood of the Lamb. We look down in the grave instead of up into heaven. If we could only cease from self entirely! The cravings of the old nature shrink rebuked when we catch a glimpse of the lonely Christ tempted in the wilderness, the patient Christ reviled by the vilest, the suffering Christ weeping tears of blood in Gethsemane, the agonized Christ on the cross. Look away to Him! Keep that one sinless figure before thine eyes alike in life and death!—Philadelphia Ledger.

Christian Unity.

Christian unity can never be brought about by hard hitting theologically, but only by Christians learning to love one another; then they can defy the devil to keep them apart. "Our unhappy divisions" keep him master of the field. A united church would soon dispossess him of his wrongful rule.—Bishop Johnston of Western Texas.

Communion.

Wherever the self is forgotten
And goes not out to meet another,
Though lips may receive alms and falter,
There, on the Lord's holy altar,
Wait ever the bread and the wine.

For love is the bread that is broken,
The wine that is poured for the living,
And forgetting the self for another,
The tenderness shown to a brother,
Are done in remembrance of Him.

LAUNCHING OF WAR SHIP FOR MEXICO

Great Time Will be Held at Nixon's Shipyard at Elizabeth August 20.

SHIPS BUILT IN JERSEY.

TAMPICO WILL BE LAUNCHED FOR THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT.

Sister Ship, Vera Cruz, Will be Ready for Launching September 15—Dearth of Steel Has Delayed Construction of Both Boats.

With the launching of the Mexican gunboat Tampico, at the Crescent shipyard, Elizabeth, August 20, another notch will be carved in the constantly growing tally of warships built in this country for the fleet of foreign powers. Within less than a month later the Vera Cruz, a sister ship of the Tampico, will leave her cradle, and the double stocks made vacant will shortly afterward hold the keel plates of two more men-of-war for service in the navy of Mexico.

Having played no inconspicuous part in the construction of this nation's war squadrons, New Jersey is fast coming into prominence in the record of American-built ships for States that some day may be built. Even in this respect New Jersey is not far from leading, and recent records show that only Pennsylvania, with its immense Cramp yards at Philadelphia, has the advantage either in point of aggregate tonnage or number of vessels, and with that record of the Delaware River works in turning out splendid fighting craft for Russia and Japan especially, Jersey, with its recently augmented facilities, bids fair to stand in equal status.

Preparations are already under way to make the occasion of the Mexican cruiser's baptism a most propitious one. The date selected marks the anniversary of the birth of the border republic's Naval and War Minister, General Reyes. By September 15 the Vera Cruz will be ready for launching, after which work will immediately be commenced on two comparatively large vessels for the Mexican government. These are about to be ordered, and will be of 1,800 tons displacement each.

Under the contract with the Mexican government the Tampico and her sister ship should have been ready for service last January, but because of the dearth of steel her construction has been materially retarded. The little vessel has been put together upon lines designed by Lewis Nixon, president of the Crescent Shipbuilding Company, and until his retirement a few years ago a member of the construction corps of the United States navy. She is intended for patrol duty along the Mexican coasts and in her way will be a valuable addition to the country's tiny naval force. Besides being technically a gunboat she will be fitted out also to serve as a small army transport.

In addition to quarters for her complement of 150 officers and seamen, accommodations will be provided for troops to the number of 250.

The dimensions of the Tampico and Vera Cruz are as follows: Length over all, 201.6 feet; breadth of beam, 32.10 feet; depth, 15.8 feet; draft, 10 feet; displacement, 980 tons; contract speed, 16 knots.

The armament of each vessel will consist of four 4-inch rapid fire guns and four 6-pounders. They will carry two search lights and two steam launches, and will be fitted with two steel masts for schooner rigs.

The Busy Man's Way.

When you are going anywhere you always want to go quickly, and it is to appease the demands of the busy man that hourly trains have been placed in operation between New York and Philadelphia via the New Jersey Central, and to further aid him they are arranged to leave either city every hour and on the hour from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. The trains are palaces in railroad parlance, for no detail is neglected in their make-up. The road bed is model in every respect—rock ballasted, automatic block signal systemed and heavy railed and the running time is scheduled down to two hours for the 90 mile run. Then too, the country traversed is wealthy in scenic adornment and one finds comfort, convenience and speed, the signal word for every passenger. Next time you go to Philadelphia try the Jersey Central. c

WHAT TRENTON EDITOR DID FOR COL. BRYAN

Mr. Briest's Reasons for Thinking Congressional Nomination Should Come to Him.

HIS MANY EXPERIENCES.

SOME OF HIS TRIALS IN STARTING THE DAILY PAPER TO SUPPORT BRYAN.

Results of His Little Experiment for the Good of the "Cause" Now Appeals for Nomination in Return for the Same.

The public has little idea of the troubles of some newspaper men. It often falls to appreciate the difficulties which have to be overcome in order to bring the daily issue out regularity. Some editors are more fortunate than others. John Briest, editor of the Trenton Sunday Courier, appears to be numbered with "the others." He has just announced himself as a candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Fourth district and in his appeal for support, he has revealed some facts concerning his troubles which have not been known heretofore to the public.

His appeal, which recently appeared in the Trenton Courier, is decidedly interesting, especially to those who are interested in observing how far an editor will go in behalf of his political convictions. It is as follows:

"We notice that some Republican papers are picking out candidates for the Congressional nomination on the Democratic ticket in this district, and that among the names mentioned is that of W. Holt Apgar Mr. A. is a gentleman, a personal friend of ours whom we have known for years, whom we love and respect for his many good and noble qualities, but where was he in the Democratic Presidential campaign of 1896, when we were the head and tail, the centre and both half-backs and all the rushers, the backbone and the entrails, of the regular Democratic National party and its candidate for President, William J. Bryan? While a resident of this city he represented Hunterdon county in the Palmer and Buckner party, which was an auxiliary of the Republican party and run on funds provided by the McKinley campaign managers.

"There was no daily paper in the State supporting Bryan or his cause, and on promises and our own enthusiasm in the cause, we started one, the Daily Globe, and gave its readers the Bryan doctrine right from the shoulder. With a great flourish of trumpets, and with as much ceremony and consequence as if it were a million, the Democratic State Committee contributed $100! As soon as the promises found that Bryan was going to get it in the neck, they began to make excuses and promptly laid down on us.

"We begged and borrowed every dollar that we could to keep the paper going, and to get funds for that purpose we put our gold watch up the spout and lost it! We did not have our clothes off but once a week, doing two men's and a boy's work, and sleeping in the office on the floor. When the end came we were $1,100 out in cash and debts, and nobody cared a damn for us or Bryan, either.

"The only time we were ever used in our life was for debts incurred in running a Democratic Bryan paper. It was the direct cause of having our house, here we lived for thirty-two years, sold away from us by the Sheriff. In our early years the Democratic party of this city greatly honored us. We think that we have repaid the obligation. We admit that we have had bitter thoughts at seeing those who exerted themselves to best the party in days gone by now bossing it and reaping the rewards and honors and benefits, and we feel as independent as the proverbial shoat on the frozen Delaware.

"We want that Democratic nomination for Congress in this district. We are entitled to it, and we expect Democrats of all kinds and shades, independents of the same complexions, Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, Catholics and Lutherans, to support us, and we will stand by them, one and all. We have a plant to get out a daily paper in our own cause, and we are for free speech, free thought, freedom for every man to worship God in his own way, the prosperity of New Jersey and of the United States, the old flag, and a pension and appropriation for every man and woman that is entitled to it. Now, Democrats, give us your votes."

PLAINFIELD AS IT STANDS TODAY

The City's Attractions Well Set Forth by Mayor Jenkins in Letter to The New York Tribune.

Plainfield has had no better advertisement for years than the letter from the pen of Mayor O. L. Jenkins which appeared in Sunday's New York Tribune. It was accompanied by a few views of Plainfield which give but a faint idea of the beautiful residental city here. The letter served its purpose well. It was a concise statement of the attractions which this city has to offer. That it will have its effect in booming Plainfield there can be no doubt as the Tribune circulates among a class which Plainfield would be glad to see many more from.

The letter was such an excellent one that it will well repay every resident of the city to read it. For the benefit of those who did not see its original publication, it is printed in full herewith:

To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: A stranger standing at any of the four railroad stations of Plainfield during the busy morning or evening hours would scarcely deny to this city the title of "a New York bedroom," for some fifteen hundred commuters pass through these stations daily on their way to and from the trains running between Plainfield and New York.

The importance of the city to the Central Railroad of New Jersey may be judged by the fact that it furnishes more than forty trains each way daily, many of which make the trip in forty-five minutes, including the time crossing the ferry, and during the busiest hours trains run which make no stops between Plainfield and New York. Passengers on the railroad bear testimony to its comfortable cars, its superior roadbed and its unusual freedom from coal dust.

While discussing the city with our residents we find that their favorite designation is "the City of Homes," with an emphasis on the word "homes," which shows that they use the word in its highest and best sense.

A more detailed examination convinces one that the name is well chosen, for what always impresses the visitor is the large numbers of thrifty, well kept, attractive grounds; it is, as one has expressed it, "a city of lovely homes."

These homes vary in cost from $1,000 to a hundred times as much, but most, even of the poorer ones, show plainly the pride taken by the citizens in keeping everything about their places in the best possible order.

Only a few of the fences which originally bordered the older streets remain; so that the velvety lawns now stretch from the houses to the flagstone sidewalks, and from these to the curb lines, giving the streets a spacious and parklike appearance. Stately trees, well trimmed, unite their branches in arches of green above, and afford a grateful shade.

There are thirty-four miles of macadamized streets in the city proper, which are the admiration of all visitors, and which certainly are not excelled for smoothness and durability by any in the country. These fine roadways are not confined to the thickly settled portions, but stretch out into the suburbs and connect with the various county roads in every direction, making our city an ideal one for driving and cycling, and for the enjoyment of what is no doubt the coming vehicle, the automobile. The sidewalks are mostly flagged with bluestone, so that trains, schools and churches may be reached dryshod in all weathers.

Of Plainfield's water supply it is only necessary to say that it is drawn from deep driven wells in a sparsely settled part of the city, and that it is of exceptional purity, and so abundant that it is pumped to Fanwood, Westfield, Cranford, Roselle and Elizabeth. The pressure is sufficient to render the use of fire engines unnecessary except in rare instances, and the hydrants are so closely located that the houses are easily reached with streams from the fire hose.

We have twenty-six miles of sanitary sewers and are about to add four more miles, and our sewage disposal system embodies the latest discoveries, being adopted with the approval of the State Board of Sewerage Commissioners.

Two brooks, running through the city, receive the surface water from the streets, but there are many storm water sewers, which relieve those streets where the accumulation of water in heavy storms would be objectionable, and another such sewer is to be constructed this year.

The streets are lighted by electricity; not by a few dazzling arc lights (except in the business section), but by a large number of incandescent lamps, which are kept lighted every night in the year.

Geologically, Plainfield is of glacial origin, the terminal moraine at the eastern end of the city making ideal sites for the elegant country residences which crown its beautiful knolls. The underwash plain, on which the larger part of the city is located, is especially healthful, on account of the dry sand and gravel of which it is composed; the city is free from malaria, and is recommended by New York and Brooklyn physicians as a suitable place of residence for their patients suffering from catarrhal, throat and lung troubles.

A trolley system, consisting of six lines radiating from the central station, not only serves to make the different parts of the city and adjacent borough of North Plainfield conveniently accessible, but it affords the means of taking delightful excursions—northwest to the Watchung Mountains; northeast to the various towns between Plainfield and Elizabeth; to Staten Island Sound—southeast to the picturesque grounds of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, which are unsurpassed for beauty and for the care which is taken in maintaining them; southwest to Bound Brook, New Brunswick, Somerville and beyond. The introduction of this trolley system has opened up a large area of land especially desirable for building sites, and many new houses have been erected all along its lines.

Plainfield has, with North Plainfield, a population of about nineteen thousand; it has but few saloons, and these are regulated by a strict excise law. There are a number of excellent hotels, the Netherwood and the Mountain Park Inn being especially well known from their conspicuous location—the former on Netherwood Heights, and the latter overlooking the city from the Watchung Mountains.

Rents are reasonable, and good houses may be obtained to fit any purse. We have two national banks, a savings bank, a trust company, and several substantial building loan associations.

In her city government Plainfield has been particularly fortunate. Citizens of the highest rank, both commuters and local business men, have always been found who were willing to serve the people in the Common Council, and the people have been glad to elect such men to manage the city's affairs. The police and paid fire departments are considered models by visitors from larger cities, and they well deserve their reputation. Our people sleep in peace and security.

Considering all the benefits received by the people, the tax rate is very moderate, viz.: $2.50 on $100, and this on a low valuation; as the taxable property increases at about the same rate as the city's expenses, the tax rate has remained stationary for several years.

We have eleven public schools, including those of North Plainfield, under most competent direction. The pupils who maintain a satisfactory standing in their classes will be admitted on certificate of the principal, without examination, at Amherst, Williams, Wesleyan, Oberlin, New York University, Vassar, Smith, Wellesley and other colleges where the certificate plan is in force. They will also be fitted to enter, without conditions, Princeton, Harvard, Yale and Columbia. North Plainfield conducts a manual training school.

There are also in Plainfield several private schools of the highest rank, where young men and women are prepared for college, including Leal's, the Seminary and the Randolph-Cooley School.

Churches and religious societies of almost every shade of belief are found, the total number being about twenty-six, including several in North Plainfield.

Plainfield takes great pride in its Public Library, especially since the addition of the scientific department, for which we are indebted to the generosity of the late George H. Babcock. An annual appropriation for maintaining the library is made by the Common Council, and every effort is made by the managers of the library to extend its usefulness.

The Young Men's Christian Association has a beautiful and well equipped building, and its assembly hall is a favorite place for all sorts of charitable and literary gatherings.

To summarize, Plainfield possesses convenience of access, great natural advantages, a strong public spirit, and a high standard in the social, intellectual and religious life of the people; it is a place where parents may bring their children to grow up under the most favorable environment.

TAILORS USE CAMERA.

Perfectly Fitting Clothes Assured by Photographic Measuring System Recently Invented.

You can be measured for a suit of clothes by photography now, if you care to have it done in that way.

A Wisconsin man patented the process, which promises to be a boon to tailors, relieving them of much labor, and at the same time securing a degree of accuracy in measurements that is quite out of the question when the ordinary method is employed.

All you have to do is to stand close behind a screen of a peculiar kind, while the tailor puts his own head under a black cloth and focuses a camera upon you. The screen, which, mind you, is between yourself and the camera, is simply a wooden frame with wires strung tightly across it, at equal distances and parallel, so as to form a series of squares.

SECURING A PERFECT FIT.
(Ingenious Method for Obtaining Absolutely Correct Measurements.)

Necessarily, the resulting photograph is cut up by thin black lines into a network of squares, and your measurements are indicated by the number of squares and portions of squares occupied by your body in the picture. With half a dozen such photographs taken of yourself, in different attitudes, it is a simple problem in mathematics to calculate your dimensions all ways.

To make sure that such salient points as the armpits are correctly indicated in the photograph, the inventor has devised a sort of harness that holds the clothing close to the body—thus avoiding the necessity of stripping.

It may be that before long this ingenious plan will be applied to the measuring of women for tailor-made suits and other garments. Thus, says the New York Herald: one of the difficulties of the dressing business will be largely done away with, and there will be fewer wrinkles in the brows of properly gowned maids and matrons.

RAREST OF MONKEYS.

As Far as the Face Is Concerned, He Resembles Man More Than Any Other Animal.

The zoological garden of Berlin just now boasts of possessing a rare monkey, the only animal of the kind in captivity in Europe. It is known as the silk ape of Kilimandscharo, C. G. Schillings, the leader of the recent German East Africa expedition.

The Kilimandscharo silk monkey, as far as the face is concerned, resembles a human being more than any other of the animal species. Eyes, face, nose and mouth betray a remarkably intelligent expression. The eyes have not the staring, insane look of the beast, but regard one with contemplative calm. The most beautiful feature of the animal is its hair. The main fur is of a darkish brown, as soft as sealskin, but the face is surrounded with a white silk beard and he has a long gray silk mane and a large and bushy white silk tail.

The specimen in the Berlin zoological garden exhibits a morose, melancholy temperament whenever he is left in his cage without a monkey for a companion. This is a difficult task for the animal keeper, as most monkeys are malicious and pugnacious and the Kilimandscharo silk monkey is of a sweet, affectionate temperament. One companion was found which died a few weeks ago and now the Berlin zoo authorities are searching high and low for one to take its place.

BATTLED FOR POSSESSION

Frank Linke Held the Fort in the Morning, But Withdrew Later by Lawyer's Advice.

PUT OUT OPPOSITION.

Thrilling Things Happened When the New Manager of the Eastern Bottling Company Came to Take Charge—Formal Notice Served in Name of Company Prevailed.

Trouble brewing of late between Frank Linke, manager of the local branch of the Eastern Bottling Company, and the other members of that corporation, foamed over in a contest which waged all day Thursday. It ended last evening with the withdrawal of the Plainfielder from possession of the plant, but only after several hours' sharp fighting on the lawyers interested in the affair. The new manager, Edward P. Turner, who was appionted on July 25, is now in charge.

Mr. Turner did not take full charge as soon as he expected. Nevertheless, he made a charge in the premises. About 11 o'clock Thursday morning, accompanied by J. A. MacArthur, secretary and treasurer of the company, and Constables Manley and Gjettlesen, he repaired to the establishment on West Second street and demanded possession. Mr. Linke took a different view of the situation and refused to withdraw. Lawyers Swackhamer and Harry Runyon, for Turner, and William Newcorn, for Linke, then argued the matter in a wordy warfare, which ended with Paiman (German's) being called in to elect the visiting party.

This was done and peace reigned for a time, with the original manager in possession of the field. The contention of Mr. Newcorn was that is client had not been legally notified of his dismissal from service and that therefore, he was still legally responsible for the management of the place. To remedy this difficulty, one of the opposing lawyers made a trip to Newark in the afternoon and secured the proper paper, drawn up under the seal of the corporation and setting forth the fact that Edward P. Turner had been appointed manager of the local branch of the company. This notice was immediately recognized by Mr. Linke, who turned the keys over to his successor shortly before 6 o'clock last evening.

Another phase of the matter, however, remains unsettled. It is with regard to Mr. Linke's holdings in the stock of the company. The Plainfielder claims that the action of the company is a plain attempt to freeze him out. Some time ago they made him an offer for his stock, but it was over $2,000 less than he would take. At the same time, the provision was inserted that neither Linke nor his wife should engage in the business of bottling or selling liquor here for the period of ten years. The conditions were unqualifiedly rejected. This part of the matter remains in abeyance.

When the plant of the Eastern Bottling Company was placed in this city, Linke was appointed manager, under a stated salary, and with a contract for five years, providing that his services should be satisfactory. Mr. Linke claims that the company has turned in bills for war taxes amounting to $6,000, bills for freight and rent, and in this manner attempts to show that he has been conducting the business at a loss.

The corporation contends that his services have not been satisfactory, and that the right to retire him is valid. It is admitted that as a stockholder he has equal rights with the others to have access to the premises but that his period as manager expired with the first year of his service at the beginning of July, when the company had the power to dispense with him if they saw fit.

State Convention of A. O. H.

The State officers of the Ancient Order of Hibernians have issued the call for the forty-second biennial convention of the order, which will be held in St. Lucy's Hall, Jersey City, Tuesday, August 19. The convention will be preceded by high mass in St. Lucy's church. Captain C. A. Reilly, president of the Essex county organization, will be a candidate for State president, and has been indorsed for the nomination by the county board.

Recent Cold Spell Reminded Truthful Tourist of a Montana Winter Experience.

"Talk about this being cold weather," said the man with no overcoat to a Chicago Tribune reporter, "why, it's positively balmy compared with some of the weather I've met with out west. Last month, for instance, I was out in northern Montana and I had a lot of riding across country to do. One night my partner and I got caught out on the hills in a terrific storm, with the thermometer so far below zero that we lost all track of it. We rode for hours without getting in sight of a building of any kind. Finally my partner, who knows the country well, saw the chimney of a little shack off from the road and we turned towards it.

"'Lizard-Snyder lives there,' he said, 'and he always has some good liquor on tap. I reckon a good stiff horn of whisky is about what we need.'

"'Certainly, if there ever was a time when it was justifiable to drink whisky it was then, for the cold was in our bones and we were almost overcome with exhaustion. We knocked up old 'Lizard,' and he let us in without much grumbling.

"'We're almost frozen,' my partner said, 'and we want a drink of whisky.'

"'Lizard' went down behind his little bar and brought up his keg of whisky, but even it was frozen solid. The keg itself was cracked and long icicles of whisky hung down about it.

"'There you are,' said 'Lizard,' 'now what are you going to do about it?'

"For a moment we were up against it. Then my partner had a bright idea.

"'Just break us off a ten-cent icicle apiece,' he said.

"I haven't heard of anybody in this neck of the woods who has run against anything to beat the weather as tough as that, have you?"

"Near my old home, down south in Alabama, is a lake which until last winter had never been frozen, when for the first time a solid sheet of ice covered the surface of the water. On the edge of this lake was a little cabin, the home of a happy family of negroes.

"One evening a large flock of wild geese alighted on the ice and settled down for the night. When darkness came the whole family armed themselves with clubs, went out on the ice and started in to kill the geese, which they thought were asleep. But here they mistook the situation.

"The poor geese were wide awake, but would not get away because they were all frozen tight to the ice. Still, they made one mighty combined effort to escape, and in doing so carried away with them the layer of ice which had covered the lake, and with it the negroes, and off straight south they disappeared from view and were never seen again.

"None of this unhappy family was left behind except the aged blind grandfather, who had remained in the cabin, and it is for his benefit I am taking up the collection."

SOMERVILLE MAY LOSE ITS MILITIA COMPANY

Showing at Sea Girt Was So Poor That Brig.-Gen. Gillmore Was Disgusted.

MAJOR DUNGAN'S PLEA

AT HIS REQUEST SOMERSET'S COUNTY SEAT WILL GET ANOTHER TRIAL.

If Company M Makes Another Such Showing the Company Will be Disbanded and Gives to Trenton, Rahway or Elizabeth.

"I'll just give them another chance, and if they don't trip up, why, out they go," was the manner in which General Gillmore has characterized the showing made by Company M, of Somerville during the Second Regiment encampment at Sea Girt.

Company M came to camp with but thirty-six men and their poor appearance on the field compelled Colonel Collins to distribute them among the other companies and by this arrangement the regiment appeared on parade with one company shy.

Shortly before breaking camp rumors came from the colonel's headquarters that he had taken steps to have General Gillmore replace Company M with another company located in some other part of the State. Trenton, Rahway and Elizabeth were mentioned in connection with the new company's possible location. The matter had even gone so far as to an investigation of Trenton's resources for recruiting another company. Trenton was chosen because of the sure erection of an armory here, which would provide better facilities for drilling the men.

Last week, it is understood, Major Dungan, who commands the first battalion, to which Company M belongs, interceded with General Gillmore to have the company retained in the guard. His request was granted, with the warning that an occurrence similar to that of the encampment would result in the company's instant dismissal.

The decision of General Gillmore was to some extent received with disappointment by Rahway and Elizabeth, who were anxious to provide for the new company. Elizabeth, which had the support of Colonel Collins, who is a resident there, already has two companies. Rahway is without any.

Prior to the outbreak of the Spanish-American war a company of the Third Regiment was stationed there, which afterward was recruited in the volunteer forces. After the war the entire company was dismissed by court-martial for failing to report for inspection because of the unpopularity of its commander.

The situation now appears as though the Second Regiment will remain intact, at least until the passing of another encampment.

HELPED SURPRISE HIMSELF

SEXTON STEWART, OF HOPE CHAPEL, HAD A BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Assisted in the Preparations, Supposing It Was for Some One Else—A Good Time.

Genuine surprise was that afforded D. F. Stewart, the genial sexton of Hope chapel, by the members of the Young Men's Association last Thursday. In recognition of his birthday anniversary, which occurred a few days ago, he was given a complimentary party, at which some fifty of the young folks of the chapel gathered to congratulate the recipient and, incidentally, to enjoy themselves. Refreshments, prepared by the members of the Y. M. A., were served and general sociability, of the true Hope chapel type, was the rule of the evening. The committee in charge was Thomas Chamberlain, William Hartfelder, Albert Marsh and Elmer Hoffman.

What added to the merriment of the evening was the mistaken idea of the sexton that the affair was being arranged for some one else. He had even assisted in the preparations and it was not until everything was fully ready that City Judge Runyon brought him in front outside the building and introduced him to his own birthday party. Too overpowered by surprise to express his feelings, Mr. Stewart could only murmur his thanks and then tell all hands to enjoy themselves.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE PROPOSED PRIMARY LAW

Special Commission Hopes to Report a Bill at Next Session of the Legislature.

NEED OF SUCH A LAW

TALK OF HOLDING PRIMARIES AFTER SAME FASHION AS ELECTION.

Members of the Commission Have Something to Say Regarding the Work That is Now Before Them—Nothing Until After Election.

It is likely that a primary election act will be presented to the Legislature next winter that will, if enacted into law, not only preclude the possibility of the riotous scenes incident to the congressional primaries in Camden last week, but will also wipe the "boss" off the political map in New Jersey.

A special commission to consider the question and draft a bill for submission to the Legislature was named several weeks ago by Governor Murphy, who is much interested in primary reform. In his inaugural message the governor emphatically declared that there was need of a better primary system than that prevailing in New Jersey, and he recommended action by the Legislature. Rather than handle the knotty problem itself the Legislature passed a law providing for the naming of a special commission by the governor, which is to go fully into the matter and suggest a means for bettering the conditions at primaries.

It is quite among the possibilities that this commission will recommend that the primaries be held on the last registration day preceding each election, and that they will be conducted in just such manner as are the elections, the regular election officials acting as the primary officers. This, it is argued, would not be an impossible task for the election officers and would give every voter a chance to say just whom he would like to see nominated by his party. The commission having under consideration the matter of a new primary law is composed of Clerk in Chancery Edward C. Stokes, Corporation Counsel George L. Record, of Jersey City, and Joseph L. Munn, county counsel of Essex.

"Our present primary plan is weak in that it provides no punishment for fraud," said Mr. Stokes, in discussing the matter. "If primaries were under the supervision of the election officers and a proper penalty provided for irregularities, it would certainly do away with many of the present practices. The special commission has not buckled down to work yet, but when it does we hope to evolve a plan that will meet the approval of all good citizens."

County Counsel Joseph L. Munn stated that the work of the primary election law commission is progressing with due consistency. The commission, he said, is now gathering information and data concerning the laws regulating primary elections that are in operation in a number of states, and which provide better safeguards to the voters from the unfair and overt methods of dishonest political manipulators than is afforded by the present laws which pretend to regulate such elections in New Jersey.

"We will probably not do anything in the nature of drafting a bill until after the election of November next," said Mr. Munn. "No change in primary methods can be made except by legislative enactment, and that cannot be effected until the Legislature convenes next year. The task of drafting a bill will be only a matter of two or three days, so the commission has no reason to act with any haste in the matter.

"We have had several illustrations of the necessity of establishing a new law to govern the holding of primary elections in New Jersey. The recent elections in Camden in connection with the selection of delegates to the congressional convention is a case in point. By deferring final action on the report that we will submit to the Legislature until after the coming elections, we may obtain additional illustrations that may accentuate the necessity of enacting more stringent laws for the governing of primaries."

His Sight Threatened.

"While picnicking last month my 11-year-old boy was poisoned by some weed or plant," says W. H. Dibble, of Sioux City, Ia. "He rubbed the poison off his hands into his eyes and for a while we were afraid he would lose his sight. Finally a neighbor recommended DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The first application helped him and in a few days he was as well as ever." For skin diseases, cuts, burns, scalds, wounds, insect bites, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is sure cure. Relieves piles at once. Beware of counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

DELIGHTFUL PLACE FOR A HALF DAY'S OUTING

Interesting Spots to be Found by Visitors at Quaint Caldwell.

IS VERY EASY TO REACH

ITS HISTORY DATES BACK TO THE EARLY EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

Washington Stopped There—Has a Rare Old Cemetery With Many Aged Grave Stones—The Birth Place of President Cleveland.

One of the most attractive spots in this part of New Jersey for a half day's outing is the quaint but historic little village of Caldwell, which can easily be reached by trolley from Newark. There one may enjoy perfect quiet or look on spots which date from colonial times and possess interesting histories.

Compared with surrounding towns, the early history of Caldwell has been dimmed by the flood of years. Prior to its purchase, in 1740, it was the abode of an extensive band of Indians, most of whom left the same year and joined the Six Nations at Seneca Lake, New York.

It was not until twenty-one years later that the last of the Indians left Caldwell, but, strange to say, there is no record of anything but the most amicable relations between the whites and the red-skins.

One may easily locate the places where two extensive Indian burial grounds were 140 years ago, but all traces of the mounds have long since disappeared. One was on the road leading to Roseland and the other toward North Caldwell. The first house built in Caldwell was erected in 1748. It was used as an inn, and here, under a large tree, General Washington once dined. The old historians say he drank wine diluted with water. The exact location of the tree is not known.

Much has been written and said in connection with the fact that Caldwell is the birthplace of former President Cleveland, and this is one of the few historical facts that have contributed toward making the name and location of the quiet town known to the general public.

The house of Cleveland's birth, which was occupied at that time by his father, Rev. Richard F. Cleveland, pastor of the Presbyterian church, is on Bloomfield avenue, near Arlington avenue.

It is in an excellent state of preservation, and at present is occupied by Rev. Nelson B. Chester, one of the successors of the former President's father.

The room in which President Cleveland was born is on the first floor of the northwest corner of the house, in the rear. Farther up Bloomfield avenue, old residents of Caldwell will point out with a laugh where Mrs. Maria Crane lived at the time she made the first pair of trousers ever worn by Grover Cleveland. These were made in anticipation of the removal of the family to New York State.

Even a brief visit to Caldwell would be incomplete without a trip to the old cemetery which is rich with the flavor of Revolutionary days. In this moss-grown ground are interred the bodies of many patriots who fought for their country and helped to make the early history of New Jersey.

Many of the old stones bear inscriptions dating from the beginning of the eighteenth century; many are so worn by the elements or overgrown with moss as to be illegible, and doubtless date to the latter years of the seventeen hundreds. Here lies the body of the first settler of Caldwell, Thomas Gould, who died in 1698 at the age of ninety-nine years, leaving 207 descendants, most of them alive at the time of his burial.

To the visitor interested in church history ample material is readily obtainable. Although the present church edifice adjoining the burial ground is of comparatively recent date, the history of the trials of the original congregation is interesting. The question of building a church was first agitated in 1770, and the first structure was partially completed when the Revolution called its builders to arms. When the war was over the old frame building had fallen apart.

The first church was a portion of what is now known as the "Beach House." A church was erected on the site of the present edifice in 1796, and was considered an imposing structure. Situated on high ground its steeple could be seen for miles in every direction. It was destroyed by fire in 1872, and replaced by the present building, which was constructed at a cost of $75,000, and completed in 1875.

The second pastor of the church, for whom President Cleveland was named, was Rev. Stephen Grover. Having received an increase of salary he decided to erect a house of his own and abandon the parsonage. This house still stands and is located on one of the most picturesque spots in Caldwell. It is nearly opposite the church, and is easily found by a sign on the lawn designating it as "Grover House."

In the centre of the village, beautifully located on the banks of Provost Pond, a branch of Green brook, stands a quaint, vine-clad, one-story building, one of the old landmarks of Caldwell. This was the office of Governor Jonathan Provost. It marks the site of the famous Provost tannery, which was destroyed by fire in 1868. The view through the glen from the old building is one of the most attractive about the village.

REPAIRING TRACKS.

Gang Putting Trolley Tracks in the City in a Proper Condition—A Temporary Switch.

In response to a letter from Street Commissioner Davett to Road Master Knight, the trackmen of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railroad Company came to this city, Saturday, to make temporary repairs to the roadbed. The men also removed the new switch at Watchung avenue and East Second street, to send it back to the works for alteration as it was found unsuitable. The one now in use is intended for the turnout at Rock avenue and West Front street, and it may be a fortnight before the proper one is received again.

After the switch is completed, if the street is not left in satisfactory condition, the city roller and macadamizing force will be employed and the expenses charged to the street railway company.

DRESS CAUGHT FIRE.

Prompt Action Saved Mrs. Herman Kellar From Severe Burning.

Mrs. Herman Kellar, of Somerset place, had a narrow escape from being seriously burned Saturday evening. She was standing by the counter in her husband's store on Somerset street, when Mr. Kellar lighted a cigar and carelessly threw the lighter to one side. Mrs. Kellar leaned on the unextinguished taper and before she was aware of it her clothing was in a blaze. The aid of her husband the flames were extinguished before she suffered any injury.

SAVED HIS POSITION.

Store Detective Nearly Knocked Out by a Kleptomaniac.

Just When Things Looked Most Squally an Accident Enabled Him to Make Good His Charge Against Madame.

"The most remarkable case of kleptomania that ever came to my notice, and one that came very near being my ruin," said a detective the other day to a Washington Post man, "occurred several years ago. I was then employed in a large department store in Washington. One day during the winter holiday season a well-dressed woman entered the store carrying a muff and umbrella. As she passed by the leather goods department I saw her skillfully 'swipe' a pocketbook from a number that were on display. She placed the pocketbook in her muff. I followed her to the elevator, and on up to the third floor. On the way up she discovered that I was following her, and when she left the elevator she managed, without my seeing her, to place the pocketbook that she had stolen between two boxes on the doll counter. This, however, I failed to notice, and when she came downstairs I told the proprietor in her hearing that she had stolen a pocketbook.

"The proprietor looked at me horror-stricken, while the lady, turning about, demanded to know what I had said. I was so certain of my ground that I repeated the accusation, whereupon the proprietor said:

"'Oh, no, you're mistaken. This lady and her husband are friends of mine, whom I entertain frequently.'

"I was feeling awful shaky, but being so cocksure that she had the pocketbook, I put on a bold front and stuck to my first statement. The lady was terribly indignant, and the proprietor had a regular case of trembles. While he was making all sorts of apologies she was reading the riot act to me. She told me that I 'would pay for this dearly;' gave orders to the floorwalker to telephone for her husband, and insisted on being searched.

"Things were looking pretty squally for me, when a thing happened that changed the complexion of events very materially. I noticed that she had shifted the position of her hands in her muff several times, and that she had also placed her umbrella leaning against the counter, and thinking that she might have slipped the pocketbook down into the latter, I, without saying a word, reached over, picked up the umbrella, and turned it upside down. The pocketbook did not drop out as I had expected, but, what was better still, eight pairs of kid gloves, from which the tags had never been removed, rolled out upon the floor. They were not taken from nor did they belong in our store, but from the tags I recognized them as belonging in another establishment which dealt in gloves next door.

"I was beginning by this time to catch on, and without losing any time I went for the proprietor of the store next door. He came in, identified the gloves, and stated that she had been in his store, but that she made no purchases. At this time she broke down and began to cry, and, desiring to clinch matters all around, I made a hurried trip up to the third floor, looked over the doll counter, found the pocketbook that had been stolen, and brought it back in triumph.

"It turned out that her husband was a wealthy man, and could have purchased her almost anything she needed. She broke down completely, confessed that she was a kleptomaniac, and that she could not resist the temptation to take things. Her husband, who was coming down to polish me off as an impudent blackmailer, had the job of paying for the gloves and pocketbook and of brushing things up with the storekeepers.

"If I had failed to make good the charge I had preferred against this lady, losing my job would have been the slightest of all the woes that would have fairly rained down upon me. There is a great deal more of this than one thinks, and a department store detective frequently has to stand by in silence and see things stolen, rather than take the consequences that would certainly follow in the event he undertook to apprehend the genteel 'kleptomaniacs' who do the stealing."

TRAMP ACROSS COUNTRY.

Peculiar Trip Undertaken by Two Chicago Girls for a Wager of Six Pairs of Gloves.

Having "beaten" their way, penniless, almost 5,000 miles, Miss Louise Gauss and Miss Grace Fosland, of Chicago, have reached Omaha again, on their return trip, and, while the life of adventure has had its charms, the young women are overjoyed at being so near the end of their long journey.

It was a little wager of six pairs of gloves that actuated this freak trip on the part of two girls, who were well provided for at home. On March 20 last, more than three months ago,

RIDING ON A COAL CAR.

they started to reach San Francisco and to return without a cent.

Since then they have experienced many odd and some fascinating adventures. Much of the way they rode on the best trains, simply inviting conductors to "search us" for money. Some of the distance they "bummed" on freights, while many miles were covered by actual pedestrianism.

The cold waves throughout the valleys of the middle west in May has made "hoboing" really dangerous, and the girls say they almost froze one night, as they rode two hours on the brake beams of a coal car, between North Platte and Kearney, Neb.

At Omaha the tramps found awaiting them complete new attire, sent on by a Salt Lake City man, who had learned their story when they passed through there and admired their pluck. The girls are somewhat dubious now as to the wisdom of their actions. Said Miss Gauss:

"It's been a good experience, no doubt, and in some practical ways I suppose we have both benefited. However, it has cost me dear. My face is now as leathery as cowboy's and my hair is bleached to an unlovely tint. I'll stay home hereafter. We expected to get passes from here to Chicago, but failed, so will be compelled to 'bum' on in. But it comes easy now. Have we walked much? Well, I've worn out ten pairs of shoes on this trip."

PERFORATED AT LAST.

The Long-Expected Happens to the Little Boy Who Teased His Big Sister's Lover.

H. C. Jenkins, of Saylersville, Ky., is in jail, and Wallis Eastep, the ten-year-old son of a prominent farmer, is dying because of Jenkins' appeal to the pistol to settle the vexed problem of how to deal with Penfant terrible.

Jenkins says the Philadelphia American, has been in love with the boy's sister for several years, but the youngster has not looked on his suit with favor. On numerous occasions tender passages between the lovers have been interrupted by the sudden entrance of dead cats through an open window, or unsentimental inquiries and observations from beneath the sofa.

Jenkins called the other morning. The boy met him at the front door and was asked to go out and pay some of his friend's bets a visit. This he refused to do. The lover made a dash for him and the boy fled. Three times around the house went pursuer and pursued, and then the boy made a break for the fence.

Jenkins took a shot at him while he was on the top rail. The bullet entered the hip, ranging toward the knee, and the youngster's death is near at hand.

When Books Were Dear.

In the reign of Edward I—that was from 1272 till 1307—the price of a fairly written Bible was 27 pounds. The hire of a laborer was only three halfpence a day, so it may easily be calculated what the purchase of a copy of the Scriptures would then have cost a laboring man.

THREE MORE SUITS AGAINST TROLLEY CO.

Lawyer Newcorn Represents Plaintiffs in Action Amounting to $25,000 Damages.

FOR ALLEGED INJURIES.

PLAINTIFFS ARE MR. AND MRS. LAWRENCE POWERS AND G. H. LEIVERS.

Leivers Claims to Have Been Hurt in Accident on East Fifth Street —Powers' Were Injured in Accident in Fanwood Township.

Trolley troubles have again brought the local railway into court as the defendant in damage suits brought by passengers who have suffered alleged injuries while riding on the cars of the company. Attorney Newcorn represents the plaintiffs in three actions against the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway, aggregating $35,000. The plaintiffs are Lawrence and Catherine Powers and Geroge H. Leivers, the latter a son of former Councilman Alfred Leivers, of East Fifth street. All the cases will come up before the October term of the Supreme Court at Elizabeth.

Young Leivers was a passenger on board a Fifth street car on April 30 of this year. Defective apparatus, it is alleged, was responsible for the car's being uncontrollable and for the collision which resulted between it and another at Fifth and Richmond streets. According to the declaration, the young man was thrown out and "grievously shocked, bruised, wounded, broken, lamed, lacerated, mangled, maimed and disabled" besides being injured internally. For all of which, a demand of $5,000 has been made.

In the other suits, Mr. and Mrs. Powers are the plaintiffs because of an accident which occurred on Westfield avenue, in Fanwood township May 10. The car in which Mrs. Powers was riding left the track, and she is alleged to have suffered great injuries as a result. The sum of $10,000 is placed as the damage, while a similar amount is asked by the husband.

Jersey's Cadet Assigned.

John K. Herr, son of Judge H. Burdette Herr, of Flemington, who recently graduated from West Point, has been assigned to the Seventh Cavalry. He was probably the finest rider in his class at West Point and came into special prominence by his brilliant exhibition of horsemanship during the visit of Prince Henry of Prussia to the academy during the latter's visit to this country.

Miss May Nuttall, of Phillipsburg, is visiting Miss Rae Bowers, of West Second street.

Mrs. William A. Westphal and children, of Madison avenue, are sojourning at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Nomer and son, of LaGrande avenue, have been visiting at New Brunswick.

The Misses Lovell, of Flemington, have been visiting their cousin, Miss Ursula Krewson, of Somerset street.

SOMERSET CO. WILL DECIDE THE FIGHT

Thus the Trenton Times Views the Situation in the Fourth Congressional District.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE?

SEVERAL NAMES SUGGESTED AS CONGRESSIONAL POSSIBILITIES.

No Time Yet Fixed for the Democratic Convention — It Will Not be Fixed For Several Weeks Yet.

Because of the political uncertainty of the new Fourth Congressional district, says the Trenton Times, much interest attaches to the candidate that will be named by the Democrats to make the run against ex-Judge William M. Lanning.

The Republicans claim the district to be Republican by 500 to 600, but the impartial observers look upon it as about an even break.

Mercer county's Republican majority will about be offset by the Democratic majority of Hunterdon, so that Somerset county will decide the battle.

Somerset is not safely Republican, although its leaning is to that side of the house.

It is pretty well settled that the candidate will come from either Mercer or Hunterdon counties. Samuel S. Childs, of Somerset, who has been frequently mentioned is ambitious to go to the State senate and will likely get the nomination for that post.

Dr. Charles F. Britton, of Trenton, has been mentioned as a most likely candidate, if he would consent to make the run. He is an old-time Democrat, with hosts of friends and as he is himself a manufacturing potter, his candidacy would meet with favor in the industrial world.

Mayor Katzenbach could have the nomination if he would take it. The party leaders believe he would make the best run in the district. His business is such, however, that it does not seem at all probable that he will allow his name to be seriously considered.

W. Holt Apgar is looked upon with favor by many Democrats both in Mercer and Hunterdon counties. He is not an unwilling candidate and would undoubtedly make a good run.

Asked as to when the convention was likely to be called, Colonel Hurley, who represents Mercer county on the Democratic State committee, said that no time had been fixed. He added that it would not be called for several weeks to come.

COUNCIL MET LAST TUESDAY

The Books of the Board of Assessors Were Examined and Approved.

THE SESSION WAS SHORT.

Freeman-Dunavan Was Matter Laid Over Until the Next Regular Meeting of the Council in September—Objection by Counselor Robert M. Clark.

The possibility of a hearing being given in the case of Griffin H. Freeman against Louis M. Dunavan, members of the fire department, for infraction of the rules and regulations of the department, attracted a large number of people to the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last Tuesday. All were doomed to disappointment, however, for Councilman Lee offered a motion adjourning the hearing until the next regular meeting of the Council. The purpose of this is that Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh will be at home by that time and this is considered essential on the part of the officials.

Lawyer Robert M. Clark, representing Mr. Dunavan, asked the Council to note his objection to the adjournment on the ground that he had a number of witnesses present and it would inconvenience them and put them to unnecessary trouble to adjourn the hearing. The objection was noted.

The members then took a recess to examine the books of the Board of Assessors. This did not consume much time as there were no serious objections to the ratings, except one case, that of Councilman Pray, who felt that the rating on his residence property was too high. There was a good natured argument concerning the matter between Mr. Pray and Chas. H. Ward, the assessor from the Second ward.

After the books were examined Mr. Lee offered a motion that the books as presented by the Board of Assessors be accepted and the motion prevailed. There is every reason to believe that the rate for the coming year will be $2.50, the same as last year.

Mr. Lee offered a resolution that the $114.54 assessed against Reformd Hall in error for the years 1898 and 1899 be cancelled. The resolution was adopted, after which the meeting adjourned.

SOLDIERS' MEMORIAL.

Plans of Commission for Erection of a Shaft at Antietam Next Summer.

The commission appointed by Gov. Murphy to erect a monument to the memory of the New Jersey soldiers who participated in the battle of Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862, has held a meeting at the Astor House, New York, to examine the plans and proposals.

There were sketches and proposals from sculptors of several States, but the commission seemed to feel inclined to coincide with the Governor's suggestion to give preference to a New Jersey firm.

As the monument is to be a large and rather elaborate affair, it will take six months to complete it.

The monument will be set up early next summer, but the formal dedication will not take place until the anniversary of the battle of Antietam next year.

Time to Get Time.

There are still a few employes of the New Jersey Central Railroad who have not yet purchased new watches according to the requirements established by the officials. The company is giving the men all the time absolutely necessary, but it is expected that the new timepieces will be purchased at the earliest possible date. The employes who travel between Jersey City and High Bridge are required to go to Bayonne every three months and have their watches adjusted and regulated, if they need it.

Thompson's Work.

In accordance with a request made by H. D. Thompson, correction is made in the list of committeemen of the Hope chapel excursion. Mr. Thompson states that he was the chairman and that he feels proud of the success he has attained. The error was unintentional and this opportunity is taken to give him the honor to which he is entitled.

HE FAVORS LOCAL OPTION

GOVERNOR MURPHY'S SOLUTION FOR ATLANTIC CITY.

He Does Not Advocate Passage of General Law Removing Restrictions.

Governor Murphy in a recent interview expresses himself as opposed to the passage of a general act, but favors local option for such resorts as Atlantic City. As the matter is one affecting the entire State his opinion is one of general interest.

"The question," he said, "is one for the consideration of the Legislature rather than for myself. Whatever my opinions may be on the subject, the change you suggest can be accomplished by only one means. That is, by local option.

"The passage of a general law permitting and removing the present restrictions in force on Sunday would, it seems to me, be bad. While it might operate to the advantage of a place of the character of Atlantic City, it would not be true, I think, of the majority of the towns and cities of the State. There would be no gain, and I think there would be a loss.

"Of course I know the status of the question is different here. As I said, the only way to overcome the difficulty is by the giving to each community the power to make its own laws. I am a thorough Republican, and believe the will of the majority should prevail. Local option has been tried in this State, and the Legislature repealed the law. The people have settled the question, and there can be no change until the opinion of the majority of the citizens of the State prevails again, I suppose."

LOCAL ELKS ON EXCURSION

FIVE HUNDRED MEMBERS OF THE ORDER ENJOY THE DAY.

Spend Day at Point View Grove, L. I., Making the Trip by a Steamer.

Five hundred Elks and their friends, under the auspices of the Elizabeth branch of the order, enjoyed an outing yesterday at Point View Grove, Long Island Sound. One hundred pleasure seekers from Plainfield, many of them members of the fraternity left here in the morning to join the excursionists at Elizabeth.

The entire party sailed from Elizabethport on the steamer "Isabel," up the sound. A band discoursed music during the trip. On board the boat lunch was served and shortly after arriving at the grounds an elaborate dinner was provided.

The day was spent in a gala manner. The site affords not only an opportunity for bathing and all the advantages of a seaside resort, but baseball and other sports occupied the attention of the crowd. The excursionists started on the return journey home from the Grove about 7 o'clock.

The Plainfield contingent arriving home about midnight.

NO SANITARIUM.

Knights of Pythias Veto Proposition to Establish Such an Institution at Hot Springs.

The Supreme Lodge, Knights of Pythias, in session at SanFrancisco, where several Plainfield delegates are in attendance has decided against the proposition of erecting a sanitarium at Hot Springs, Ark., for sick and disabled members of the order. The report of the special investigating committee appointed at the last session was disregarded. The Supreme Lodge does not think the constitution gives the right to take any such action.

Too Much Liquor.

William Sanderson, alias "Maller," drank too much Boulevard red eye, Tuesday, and thought he could whip Patrolman Higgins. He was mistaken, but it cost him $10 in the city court, this morning, to learn the fact. The fine was paid by his employer.

Cleared Neat Sum.

At a meeting of the Hope chapel excursion committee, held Tuesday night, the members rendered their statements. When all bills had been deducted from the gross receipts it was found that a clear balance of $32.90 remained.

No Excuse Now.

A neat sign giving the city ordinance in reference to the regulation of the hack business has been placed on the North Avenue side of the North Avenue station, where all men engaged in the hack business may read it plainly.

CHARLES N. FOWLER AS A CAMPAIGNER

Congressman Is Attracting Special Attention in Political Affairs at Present.

IS SUPPORTING RUNYON.

A REMARKALLY SUCCESSFUL CAREER OF A CONGRESSMAN.

Work He Has Accomplished for His Party in This County—His Services Much Sought After in Campaigns Elsewhere.

Campaigning of unusual vigor is promised in the congressional fights in New Jersey this fall. It is anticipated that much spice will be added to the contests by the sending here of speakers of national reputation to stump the State.

In the Fifth District, where Representative Charles N. Fowler has been renominated for a fifth time, it is expected Secretary of the Treasury Shaw, Speaker Henderson and other orators of note will appear on the stump. Mr. Fowler is himself a most vigorous campaigner. Just now he is in Vermont, where he has been taking part in the very lively gubernatorial canvass that is on there. With Secretary Shaw, he fired the opening guns of the campaign. Both appeared at Manchester on the same night and were accorded rousing receptions.

More than ordinary interest is taken in Mr. Fowler just now in view of the fact that it is almost certain that he will be a candidate for United States Senator at the expiration of the term of Senator John Kean. As Senator Kean is a resident of Mr. Fowler's home city of Elizabeth the contest in that city and district is one of the most lively that has ever been carried on in a good-natured way in the State. Mr. Kean is vigorously backing Senator Cross for a renomination for the State Senate, in order that he may have one of his lieutenants on hand when the question of his own successor comes up. Judge William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, is opposing Senator Cross and while Representative Fowler has not taken a very active part in the matter his friends are giving Judge Runyon a most hearty support.

"I see no harm in a good-natured contest," declared Mr. Fowler to The Press correspondent while on a flying trip here one day last week. "Such contests if they are carried on in an honorable manner are calculated to do the party no injury and serve to stimulate a healthy rivalry."

Senator Kean is positive that Senator Cross will be renominated, and in this view has the support of the Elizabeth Republican organization, of which his brother, Hamilton Kean, the New York banker, is the chairman. The Kean forces are leaving no stone untarned to capture the nomination for their man. Senator Cross, like Judge Runyon, is a man of the highest type. He is a successful lawyer and was prominently mentioned for the presidency of the Senate last winter. He is at somewhat of a disadvantage, however, in coming from Elizabeth, which is a Democratic stronghold and which has for many years had all the good offices. Plainfield, the home of Judge Runyon, together with the townships, gives the Republican majority to the candidates, and Plainfield is making an earnest appeal for her favorite son. Elizabeth has had the State Senator for a score of years, and is argued that Senator Cross has had the satisfaction of being indorsed by his re-election three years ago. Previous to that time he served out the unexpired term of Governor Voorhees as Union county's representative in the State Senate.

Representative Fowler has had one of the most successful political careers in the State. He has been very much in the public eye for eight years, and his popularity has increased as the time went by. When he first took the nomination in the old Eighth District that political subdivision was strongly Democratic, and it was thought that his task was a hopeless one. He won by a substantial majority, and at each succeeding election, when he was a candidate, his majorities increased until in 1900 he carried the district by almost 10,000 majority.

The national leaders of the party are particularly interested in his campaign because of his wide knowledge on the currency question. He is chairman of the Banking and Currency committee of the House, and it is the expectation that a number of currency reforms will be carried into effect under his guidance. As he is making his present fight in a new district the national leaders are anxious to be sure of his re-election, and especial attention is to be paid to his campaign. It is expected that he will return from Vermont next week and the fight will be on in earnest in the district.

The Democrats have named DeWitt Clinton Flanagan, of Morristown, to oppose Representative Fowler. Mr. Flanagan is now serving out the unexpired term of the late Representative Joshua Salmon, of the old Fourth District.—Philadelphia Press.

COAL IN PLENTY PROMISED IN FALL

Predictions of Alarmists Set at Naught by the President, Mr. Truesdale.

NO FURTHER ADVANCE.

THE COAL HERE REMAINS AT THE PRICE AGREED UPON A WEEK AGO.

Officially Stated That the Scale of Prices of Two Years Past Will Prevail as Soon as Coal Begins to be Moved From Mines.

Pessimistic statements of retail coal dealers that an anthracite famine would be in evidence by the time the fall trade sets in, and that the present fancy prices would be maintained throughout the coming winter, received a setback yesterday through assurances from authoritative sources. There is no question but what the retailers are profiting by the present strike situation and it has been intimated that the greater part of the "scarcity" talk has been gotten up by them with a view to spreading alarm among householders who are now figuring on laying in their winter supply.

To offset these rumors, a statement made public yesterday, by President Truesdale, of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road, one of the greatest anthracite lines in Pennsylvania, gives an entirely different and more sanguine impression. He said: "I think work at the mines will be resumed in time to produce plenty of coal for the fall trade. Many of the strikers want to come back to work now and will return just as soon as they feel they will be thoroughly protected."

As President Truesdale has kept in close touch with the strike he is competent to prognosticate as to its end and his opinion that there will be an early cessation is not based on mere surmise. His statement was expressed and accepted at a meeting of the Temple Iron Company, in New York, yesterday, the directors of which are presidents of all the large anthracite coal roads.

The dreams of a golden harvest later on in the season harbored by the retailers have received a deathblow from another official statement made by the anthracite producers to the effect that when the strike was ended and the coal was rushed to market, there would not be the slightest advance in the price. The coal roads have announced that they will sell the anthracite and other grades at the same prices that prevailed a year ago. Further, it has been said officially also that the scale of prices which has been in vogue for two years past would prevail as soon as the coal began to move from the mines.

Local dealers have not added anything to the price during the past week and the cost of the necessary commodity to the householder is now $8 per ton for the egg and stove grades and $9 for nut. As Dunellen just three miles away the same grades are being retailed for six and seven dollars a ton, and even less at New Brunswick.

MUST NOT OBSTRUCT THE RIGHT OF WAY

Vice Chancellor Declares That McVey's Easement Should be Protected.

INJUNCTION MAY ISSUE.

THE HEARING OF CASE INSTITUTED BY MRS. LUCY C. M'VEY.

Cab Company to be Allowed Privilege of Using the Right of Way Through Place—Local Lawyers in Case—To File a Cross Bill.

The perplexing and oft-tried case instituted by Mrs. Lucy C. McVey against the Plainfield Cab Company and Mrs. Julia Peck came up for hearing before Vice Chancellor Stevens at Newark on a rule granted by Vice Chancellor Emery on July 23 to show cause why a temporary injunction should not issue restraining the defendants from interfering with Mrs. McVey's right of way from North avenue, through the livery stable to the kitchen door of the restaurant in the rear. The bill of complaint filed by Mrs. McVey showed that when the property was purchased from Daniel S. Roberts he also bot a right of way as described. Mrs. McVey alleged that the Plainfield Cab Company had left wagons in this right of way and otherwise obstructed the same.

The cab company denied any intention of interfering with Mrs. McVey's right and after argument in the matter the vice chancellor stated that the company would have no right to allow the right of way to become obstructed; that it must be kept clear, and that inasmuch as the rights in the matter were clear to the parties concerned no injunction would be issued.

The vice chancellor further stated that the bill of complaint was not specific enough, that it was too general. In refusing the request for a restraining order and a stipulation, Vice Chancellor Stevens added that it is unreasonable to ask that the doors of the Plainfield Cab Company be closed all night, in view of the fact that it had not been shown that it is necessary that Mrs. McVey have the doors remain open.

It must be shown that it is injurious to Mrs. McVey's business to have the doors closed from 11 p. m. to 5 a. m., and this you must show in order that you enforce your pound of flesh," said the vice chancellor.

It is understood that Mrs. Peck intends to file a cross bill to reform the deed granting the right of way, claiming an error in the transaction. It is alleged that the right of way referred to includes a distance from a brick wall to a wood partition and does not extend into the office of the Plainfield Cab Company. However, the vice chancellor said that if at any time the right of way was obstructed and proper proof of the same shown he would issue an injunction.

W. A. Coddington, of the firm of Reed & Coddington, represented the Plainfield Cab Company, and in presenting his case had an affadavit from D. S. Roberts taken before Nelson Runyon, showing the exact number of feet in the dimensions of the right of way. Between these and the dimensions in the bill of complaint there seems to be a difference. The cab company will, as usual, be allowed the privilege of using the driveway through the right of way and it is believed that so far as this particular point is concerned the matter is settled.

W. S. Angleman represented Mrs. McVey in her action, while Isaac P. Runyon, of the firm of Bird & Runyon, appeared for Mrs. Peck.

BUILDING PERMITS.

Plans for Three New Dwellings Filed With the Inspector.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane has granted to William D. Bird, of Somerville, a permit for the erection of a dwelling, two and a half stories, 27 feet front by 28 feet deep, on Clinton avenue, near Clinton place. Also a permit to Mr. Bird, for the erection of a barn on the same piece of property.

James Borrap and Charles Kirchner were conjointly granted a permit for the erection on Central street, near LaGrande avenue, two dwellings, two stories high, 29 feet front by 28 feet deep. John Rousman is the architect and carpenter, Wm. Howarth the mason.

—The regular services will be resumed at the Unitarian church in Park avenue early in September.

SALE OF THE COURT HOUSE

JACOB GORDON THE HIGHEST BIDDER FOR THE OLD STRUCTURE.

The Contractors for the Erection of the New Court House Building Have Filed a Bond.

The bids for the old Union county court house in Elizabeth have been opened and it has been found that Jacob Gordon's offer of $636.50 is the highest made. Mr. Gordon will be notified immediately. By the conditions of the bid he will have to remove the building in 60 days from the time he is notified to commence work by the county. He will secure none of the furniture, none of the piping and radiators and none of the gas or electric fixtures. All of this material will be used in the extension which is now being erected at the rear of the court house. Besides these the county will retain the bell and the statue of justice surmounting the cupola.

The October term of court from present indications will not be held in the present building. There is a room in the extension now being erected which may be used or permission may be obtained from City Council to hold court in the council chamber in city hall.

The county will notify the contractor for the removal of the building to proceed with his work as soon as the county clerk's records are removed to the new building in the rear of the present court house.

The John H. Parker Company, of New York, which has secured the contract for the new county court house, has filed a bond for one-quarter the amount of the bid. The contract and specifications have already been signed and filed. Orders for the stone to be used have been given, and it is now being cut at the quarries which furnished the stone for the Grant tomb in New York city.

PLANS FOR ENCAMPMENT

THE WOMEN'S ORGANIZATION ALLIED WITH G. A. R., AT WORK.

Various Associations and Places Where They Will Hold Sessions in October.

The work which women in Washington, D. C., are doing for the entertainment and comfort of the women's organizations allied to the Grand Army of the Republic, the national encampment of which will be held in Washington the second week in October, is on a most extensive scale and will excel anything of this kind heretofore attempted at such a gathering. The plan of entertainment is now well mapped out, and the committees are vigorously perfecting arrangements.

National headquarters of the Women's Relief Corps, ladies of the G. A. R., and Daughters of the Veterans will be at the Ebbitt House. The army nurses will have headquarters at the Bancroft, and will hold the sessions of their convention at the Washington Club 1710 I street.

The national convention of the Woman's Relief Corps will hold its sessions in the Church of Our Father, corner of 13 and I streets.

The national organization of the women of the G. A. R. will hold its sessions in the Lutheran Memorial church, Thomas Circle.

The Daughters of Veterans will hold their conventions in the hall at the corner of Fifth and G streets.

Committees of women from the various organizations, wearing plainly marked badges, will be on duty at the railway stations to meet the incoming guests and direct them to their quarters. It is probable that lodgings will be available at the rate of $1 a day.

There being no local organization of the association of army nurses Mrs. Massey appointed as chairman for that body of women Mrs. Charlotte Mann, a prominent member of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The Legion of Loyal Women, of the District of Columbia, will make the comfort of the army nurses its especial care.

The chairman of the reception committee is Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant.

No Pastor Yet.

So far as can be learned the committee from the First Baptist church appointed to secure a successor to the pastor, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, has not yet decided upon anyone. When a pastor is chosen he will be submitted to the members for a vote.

Miss Alice Gaffney, of Somerville, is the guest of her cousin, Miss Julia McCann, of West Third street.

SMITH WILL GO TO FRISCO

When the Body of Mrs. Chas. L. Fair Arrives Here From Paris.

WITH MRS. OELRICHS.

He Telephoned to Mrs. Oelrichs at the Waldorf-Astoria—Mr. Smith Says That He is Not Looking for the Fair Millions—Has Sold Out His Bakery Business.

William B. Smith, an own brother to the late Mrs. Charles G. Fair, whose tragic death occurred with that of her husband in Paris, last week, called at The Daily Press office Tuesday afternoon, and stated that he had sold out his bakery business to a Plainfield man for $500 and he and his wife were prepared at a minute's notice to go to New York to meet the bodies upon their arrival from Paris and accompany them to their final resting place in SanFrancisco.

Mr. Smith desires The Press to state for him that he is not going to the Pacific Coast for the purpose of getting any part of the millions of dollars in the Fair estate. He said that he is going simply out of respect for his sister whom he loved dearly. He thought it was an outrage the way the New York newspapers were publishing accounts concerning his sister and her husband. "They cannot even wait until their bodies are placed under ground," said Mr. Smith, "but they must constantly publish harrowing accounts about them and their millions. I want it distinctly understood that I do not care whether I get a cent of the money or not. All I ask is that the money which belongs to our side of the family is duly and rightly apportioned, and the relatives on Mr. Fair's side are welcome to all that they are entitled to."

During the afternoon Mr. Smith called up Mr. Herman Oelrichs at the Waldorf-Astoria on the telephone. He was informed that she had gone out for awhile, but he made an appointment to call her up last evening for the purpose of arranging for accompanying the bodies to SanFrancisco. Mr. Smith does not say how long he and his wife will remain in California.

A telegram was received by Mr. Smith on Monday morning informing him that his mother and brother, who started on Sunday for California, had arrived safely at Buffalo and all was well.

F. E. Higbie Again Becomes the Superintendent of Jersey Central Car Service.

Frank E Higbie has been reappointed superintendent of car service of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, to succeed W. M. Yount, who resigned to assume a similar position with a southwestern road. A Speaking Record.

Dr. Alexander F. Irvine, who will speak at the men's meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Sunday afternoon, spoke on successive nights for two years at the Grand Opera House, New Haven, Conn. In the summer he delivered his addresses on the green in front of the building. It will be remembered that he lectured here most eloquently on Millet, the peasant painter of Normandy, in May last.

Entertained Friends.

W. J. Pearson, of Vine street, Monday evening, entertained about thirty of his friends in a social way. Miss Bessie Moore, from the south, rendered several piano solos, and Miss Viola Hagerty and Miss Sara Pearson sang several selections.

Society Editor.

Miss Katherine O'Keefe, of New Haven, Conn., is visiting her brother, John Arthur O'Keefe, of 652 South avenue, this city. Miss O'Keefe has just returned from a pleasure trip to Nova Scotia. Miss O'Keefe is the society editor of the staid, old New Haven Register.

BLACK GOWNS.

Thin Materials the Vogue—Black Veiling Very Popular.

A great deal of black is being worn. The black net gown, inlet with motifs of cream guipure lace, embroidered with ecru silk or intermixed with Paris lace, is very fashionable, but these gowns are invariably mounted over shiny silk or over white, cream or biscuit tints.

A gown of black silk veiling is very smart if it has a godet frill covered with pin tucks and is joined on to the skirt by a deep insertion of crochet lace. The bodice can have a low, sleeveless foundation of white taffeta to match the underskirt and a high, almost close fitting, overbodice of crochet lace draped with veiling to simulate a bolero. The front of this bolero does not meet, but there are two straps of velvet, fastening with paste buckles, to connect the fronts. The sleeves of tucked veiling have banded undersleeves of unlined lace.

The dress illustrated is of black veiling over white silk. The skirt is elaborately trimmed with tucks and diamonds of black chantilly over the white silk. The waist has a tucked yoke of chiffon, with a shirred band over the bust and upper arm and two tabs of the unlined veiling finished with the diamond shaped chantilly pieces.

SIMPLE DRESSES.

Cool Gowns For Hot Days—Serviceable Country Dresses.

If coolness is desired, do not starch your summer gowns. For morning wear nothing is more comfortable than unlined piques, hollands and the old fashioned prints, and for smart gowns chiffons and fine makes of muslin mounted over soft silk, which is much cooler than the stereotyped glace taffeta of past seasons. A great many smart costumes are made of taffeta without linings of any sort. Stout people, of course, cannot follow such a style, for they feel the heat more than their slighter sisters.

A really flimsy muslin gown is of very little use in the country except for garden parties. The dresses that look best in the country are swiss muslins, linen piques and delaines. The latter look light, but possess a certain substance and solidity, for they are well able to stand visits to the washtub.

The old fashioned print or zephyr dress is always charming and looks well when simply made, with a flat sailor collar of the material, hand stitched and veined.

A simple but effective tucked shirt waist is here shown. It is made of old rose glace linen. The tie and collar are also of the same.

BLACK AND WHITE.

New Shade of Red—A Grass Linen Model Gown.

Some of the most successful dresses this season have been combinations of black and white. This is almost invariably becoming, and it always gives an air of distinction.

One of these dresses was made of white satin foulard having a mosaic pattern in black. The skirt was enriched with incrustations of white Irish guipure tapering to points of irregular length. It was finished at the bottom with three frills of white silk muslin, each edged with narrow black chiffon ruching. The bodice was cut in a tiny V shape at the neck and was similarly enriched with lace. The elbow sleeves had frills of muslin and chiffon.

There is a new shade called geranium red which is being much worn at watering places. It is combined with black and a deep shade of ecru.

A very seasonable dress of grass linen is herewith shown. The waist is made with a full front of ecru net banded with black velvet ribbons. The fronts are of heavy ecru embroidery. The sleeves are tucked perpendicularly, and the full top forms puffs at the wrists. The skirt is plain, with the exception of a wide flounce of the embroidery headed by tucks.

THE DRESS OF THE HOUR.

Loose Effects in Boleros—Late Summer Millinery.

There is a craze for loose effects in the pretty boleros and sack coats of the moment. Nearly all the dressier frocks are made with some suggestion of a bolero, either in lace or chiffon.

The late summer millinery shows many picture shapes both in black and white. Rose straws are giving place to crinolines and chips, and a great many of the best hats are trimmed with ostrich plumes.

The curtain effect gained by plaitings of lace is getting less exaggerated, and women are becoming tired of the shepherdess shape, both large and small.

Many well dressed women are wearing hats to match their frocks. This is always considered smart, but it requires a long purse.

Sleeves are becoming daily larger, and skirts are getting fuller around the feet. There is no doubt the fancy for jackets is increasing, and many jaunty little models are cut away in the front, with abbreviated tails in the back.

An attractive rose trimmed picture hat is here shown. It would be becoming to almost any young face.

EVENING TOILETS.

Empire and Floral Decorations Dresses Made of Chiffon.

Evening dresses this season are wonderful garments full of intricacies. Chiffon and taffeta floral decorations are the most effective trimmings, not to speak of empire embroideries, and these offer enormous scope for the dressmakers' ingenuity. Some of the most beautiful effects are styled semi-empire—that is to say, the waist is defined by a wide belt of embroidery studded with precious stones, sometimes pointed at the waist to accentuate it more than is the case in the real empire style. Then there are full sleeves of chiffon caught with jeweled bands and drooping gracefully over the arm.

Evening gowns of chiffon are very dainty and have the advantage of never going out of style.

A beautiful evening dress recently imported from Paris had a long pointed bodice consisting of beautiful embroidery studded with emeralds. Pouching over the top of this and forming the decolletage was a wide bertha of mechlin lace. The skirt was shirred at the waist, falling plainly to the knees, where it was a mass of flounces over accordion plaited green chiffon, the lace here and there caught up with rosettes of the chiffon, having jeweled centers. It had a train of great length.

An attractive garden party gown is here shown. It is of dotted china silk, with a tucked blouse and sleeves that end in a full ruffle at the elbow. The skirt is laid into fine plaits, and the lower edge is trimmed with five folds. There is a strapping of white silk trimmed with jet ornaments. An original feature is the wide lace collar, which droops far over the arms.

MORNING GOWNS.

Many Linens Worn—Smart Lines and Zephyr Gowns.

A great many linens are being worn this year, and these are nice with plain Irish crochet collars. On such a fabric a very fine lawn or lace collar is out of place.

A very smart green linen dress recently seen at Narragansett Pier was made in the following fashion: The skirt at the top was cut corselet shape, with strappings arranged to reduce the size of the waist; below the knees came a deep shaped flounce. The bodice was closely tucked and only ornamented with a yoke piece consisting of strappings. The sleeves were treated in the same way, and the neck was finished with a little turnover white linen collar and a black foulard scarf dotted with green.

Blue and white, pink and white and red and white zephyrs all make up charmingly for country wear, with skirts that just clear the ground.

A dainty morning gown is the one illustrated. The waist is laid in fine tucks and is trimmed with bands of spotted foulard. The collar and frills are of fine muslin. The belt is of the foulard, with a gold buckle.

DO Husbands and Wives Own Each Other?

A YEAR ago I was introduced to a handsome young married couple. They kept house in a pretty flat, to which they had gone when they were bride and groom. And when I met them it contained also a pretty white crib with a dear little baby in it, a baby that was in its mother's estimation the one object that made life worth the living. I could see that before I had known the pair ten minutes.

It was at a lecture I met them. The young wife was fashionably dressed. She made her strictly conventional little bow to new acquaintances and lifted her elbow to exactly the fashionable kangaroo crook when she offered her hand to old ones. Oh, yes; she was the very pink of conventional behavior! She had been put through her "haute ecole" paces, so to speak, and minded them, every one.

The husband was different. He was well dressed, but not strictly in tailor fashion plate style. His necktie may have been the hundredth or an inch away from the true center, and I think there were two hairs more on one side of the part above his forehead than on the other. His clear, steady eye and bold, strong chin showed that he thought for himself, and when he shook hands he did not do it with the kangaroo crook, but just extended his palm straight before him.

The lecture we listened to was concerning some scientific discoveries quite off the beaten track. He was deeply interested in it and talked of it with enthusiasm. I noticed that when he did so madam his wife looked quite freezingly at him, shut her mouth tight and uttered not a word. From that I judged that the wife was not interested in scientific discoveries.

Well, yesterday I heard that the handsome young couple had separated. They gave up the pretty flat, he moved into bachelor quarters, and she took the baby and went home to mother.

"Look at my belt, will you?" said the husband, telling the story to a friend. "I've taken it in to the last notch, and I used to fill it. I've gone down two inches."

It was his way of showing how the life had been nagged out of him. He was a hopeful, ambitious young business man, engaged in an occupation quite to his tastes, a thoroughly honorable one and a lucrative one if well managed. His heart and soul were in it; he worked early and late to make it successful. The other part of the story is that his wife despised her husband's business, although he made from it an excellent living for herself and her baby. She railed at him night and day; she got up early to nag him on Sunday, thinking she could nag him out of himself. Her most crying grievance was, however, that he would not change his religious views to suit the theology of her folks.

When he refused, she thought him unkind and said things that no wife can say to a husband and have them forgotten if the husband has the brain and spirit of a man. This husband had the spirit of a man, as his eye and chin showed. He endured till he had to take in his belt two inches; then he recommended that madam go back home and live with her "folks," which she did, and she now considers herself, and is considered by them, as a martyr, a victim and a wronged angel. The husband meantime goes on his way alone, still following, perhaps now with clearer vision than before, the high ideals he placed before himself years ago. And that brings me back to the question, Do husbands and wives own each other?

I say heaven forbid!

The Almighty created us and placed us here, each to obtain individual soul development, and we must get it in our own way. Nobody else can get it for us. In just so far as a husband or wife undertakes to dominate, control, shape or "boss" the individual opinions of the partner, just that far he or she sets himself or herself against the purpose of the Almighty and will have to suffer for it sooner or later.

SILK CULTURE.

A Matter of Great Interest to Women of the United States.

Can the production of raw silk be made profitable in this country? If it can, it will mean pocket money to millions of women and girls. The question has been a long time receiving an answer, for the Huguenot settlers around Charleston transplanted mulberry trees and brought silkworms from their native France fully two centuries ago. The industry flourished somewhat, and it sounds odd to be told that raw silk was among the exports of the southern states at one time. Now our silk manufacturers import annually $5,000,000 worth of raw silk, whereas in one year, a little more than a century ago, there was sent to England from Savannah, Ga., $75,000 worth of the same article. But then we had no silk mills in America, and one good black silk gown lasted a lady her lifetime.

To this day the children descendants of those old French Huguenots amuse themselves with rearing silkworms and making toy reels of shining, lustrous thread from the cocoons, but as a money getting occupation the business has died out.

Why it did so is hard to say. Some declare that the Revolutionary war killed the young industry, but so late as 1795 raw silk was exported from Savannah. Benjamin Franklin, too, who did so much else for his country, attempted to revive silk growing after the colonies became independent. At that time it was thought the worms could be made to live anywhere in this country. Connecticut established a bounty for those in the state who could show the best raw silk and the greatest quantity of it. So late as 1843 Connecticut women realized from the bounty and the proceeds of their industry $200,000. Then, in 1844, a killing frost came, the worms perished, and that, it is said, ended silk growing in Connecticut.

In an amateurish way women and children in various parts of the Union have continued to experiment with the worms. In Utah silk growing was one of the occupations Brigham Young endeavored to establish in order to make his hierarchy independent of all the world, and today many Mormon women actually make their own silk gowns at every step of the way, from the hatching of the worm that makes the cocoon to the spinning and weaving of the thread that forms the cloth. By the Mormon realm the industry has never been abandoned, and it was a lady from Utah who at the Chicago exposition of 1893 made the notable exhibit of the silk industry in every stage—moth, egg, worm, cocoon, silk reels, spindles and weaving looms as well as the mulberry trees on whose leaves the worms feed while they spin their shrouds about themselves. Utah women are able to teach their sisters in other parts of the Union the mysteries of silk growing.

Following the Philadelphia exposition of 1876, congress made a small appropriation for experimenting in the production of raw silk, but it does not appear that any large results have followed. The present United States secretary of agriculture, Mr. Wilson, has, however, taken the matter up with the energy he puts into other enterprises, and the silk growing prospect is brighter for this country now than it has been for a century.

To begin, Secretary Wilson "investigated the matter of climate, the extremes of which in America are against the industry. The cold kills the worms even so far south as Charleston. In Japan, however, the cold is quite as great as it is in the middle and southern belt, yet it is one of the two greatest raw silk producing countries of the earth. The United States agricultural department has found that as far north as Philadelphia silk cocoons can be grown with advantage. Farther south there is no doubt they can be produced very cheaply by women in their own homes. The spare time in the intervals of housekeeping would be sufficient for the work. It is likely, however, that in all except the most southerly states protection in winter will be necessary. Under cover and with warmth the worms can be reared anywhere. The agricultural department at Washington will be able to supply information as to where the beginner in silk growing can obtain instructions for commencing work.

The ordinary wild mulberry tree of this country will not produce the raw silk of commerce. The Chinese variety is the best for this purpose. But it is said that a worm can be reared from the leaves of the common osage orange a cocoon that will yield a commercial silk thread as fine and lustrous as any.

Patience, good temper, strong will, never giving down—these will accomplish apparent miracles. But if you abandon yourself to despair and discouragement even for an hour this puts off your good fortune coming.

THE WOMAN SNOB.

She Is Usually a Power of Practically No Social Importance.

"Awfully exclusive!"

"Yes; only goes with two or three people and won't even bow to any one else."

"Wonder who she can be."

These remarks were all directed toward a rather pudgy and commonplace woman seated in a wicker chair on a hotel piazza engaged in staring through her lorgnette at the passersby. A man and a girl strolled past. Up went the insulting lorgnette. The girl flushed. The young fellow—I am afraid he was only an impudent college "freshie"—laughed, and, taking from its leather case his fieldglass, he actually dared to glance through it at the snobbish lady. A gasp went around the piazza.

THE INSULTING LORGNETTE STARE.

The victim arose, purple with indignation, and swept upstairs to her room with an aggressive rustle of stiff silks. But outside every one was secretly glad of her downfall. One man even went up to the hero and invited him downstairs to have something cooling.

Afterward it developed that the woman snob was "nobody at all"—quite a mediocrity, in fact—and that she had adopted this pose in order to lend herself a social importance to which she was not entitled.

That is almost always the way. The people who are really worth knowing are the simplest and the easiest reached. The others resemble nuts which are very hard to crack and which, when opened, reveal nothing. Remember this, you who pride yourselves on being so exclusive.

And, anyway, why should a woman pride herself on being disagreeable? She was put into this world to bring sunshine and joy into it, and offense than not she does the very opposite. *Why should you wish to cause heart*ache when with a nod or a smile you may bring a little joy and comfort into some lonely life? What matters it if the recipient is not of blue blood or possessed of the supposedly necessary "social position?" She needs your smile all the more if she is not. The rich and great have plenty of friends. It is the others who lack them.

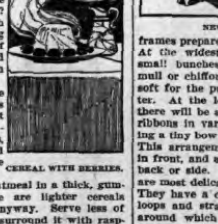
SUMMER BREAKFASTS.

A Few Hot Weather Hints For the Conscientious Housekeeper.

Breakfast unconsciously influences us the whole of the day. The dishes which compose it should be judiciously chosen, especially during hot weather. What is more depressing, for instance, than a dishful of meat on a morning when the thermometer registers anywhere from 90 to 100? And how much more appetizing is a saucer of berries heaped up with rich cream!



CEREAL WITH BERRIES.

Meat should be used as little as possible in hot weather. Berries, vegetables, cream, eggs and cereals are the proper diet.

Don't serve oatmeal in a thick, gummy mass—there are lighter cereals than oatmeal anyway. Serve less of the cereal, but surround it with raspberries, blackberries, strawberries or sliced peaches, according to the season. Dates and whipped cream make another appetizing breakfast dish. Remove the stones from the dates so as not to spoil the shape and place them in a saucer with a mound of whipped cream in the center. Minced chicken and mashed potato mixed with chopped parsley and browned in the oven after the fashion of an omelet is a light and easily digested meat dish. Tomatoes with eggs are also a dainty combination. Select large tomatoes and cut them in halves. Remove a little of the pulp from each. Into the hollows thus made pour the yolks of three eggs. Bake in a quick oven and garnish with parsley and hard boiled eggs. Tomatoes broiled or baked are excellent for breakfast. Plenty of green things and a change every day are the two essentials of the ideal summer breakfast.

FANCIES IN NECKWEAR.

Modish Women May Select From a Wide Variety of Styles.

It seems to me that everything now runs to new things in cravats and other fancies in neckwear. The fall goods are yet in course of construction, and all that can be done is to invent something novel to put around one's neck or to devise a fresh style of trimming a dress around the neck and shoulders which will deceive everybody except the "other women" into thinking it is another dress. There are so many things in this line that only a few can be noticed. The leader of all the neckwear in the way of beauty is the Marie Antoinette fichu, which is susceptible of so many different ways of arrangement. Of course it is not new, but it happens just now to be put forward as the prettiest and daintiest of all the neckwear.

It is made of any and every thing that is thin and transparent, even in organdies, to match dresses and of lace where the gown is made of lace, but the edges always have a full ruffle, so that when the ends fall they take the form of full jabots and cascades. If the fichu proper is of organdie or any other dress material, there is a ruffle of lace more or less wide around the entire garment.

In the illustration here are two of the very prettiest of these dainty accessories of the toilet. One is made of dotted net cut in a long oval, so that the points meet at the bust line, with long ends of the same. As these are surrounded by the lace in lavish quantities, it is no wonder that the fichu is a dressy thing. The other is simply made by sewing six ruffles of lace to a tape, all as full as the tape will hold, and these are left to fall in natural folds. To the tape, which extends below the waist line, there are two rows of lace set as closely as the other and left to fall in a cascade to the bottom. The Marie Antoinette fichu is always long enough to go around the waist and tie at the back, but this is not necessary now, as the preferred manner is to let the ends fall as the boas have been doing.

Fichus of fine linen batiste with a full hemstitched ruffle are very stylish and by some good dressers are preferred to lace ones, which are so very pretty and becoming as to be in danger of growing common. I saw one of cobwebby linen batiste, with a faint blue hem of the same material hemstitched on to the white. This was extremely novel and effective.

Another dainty fancy is the ribbon and chiffon or silk mull floral ornaments for the corsage. Liberty satin ribbon is employed for the roses, which are made by twisting the ribbon so that a bias edge is brought to a center and sewed fast round and round to form the flowers. The leaves are simulated by rough bows of the same. In some cases there are several ends of narrow ribbon, each of which has a tiny bunch of violets or pleasure roses at the end, and also a bunch at the top. These are of ribbon in different shades and make very pretty ornaments. Generally they are for the front of the corsage only, though often one piece is worn at the belt and another at the bust and neck, or even on the shoulder. This last style is only used for very dressy afternoon occasions.

Frequently a belt is made by sewing narrow ribbon over the featherbone frames prepared for such requirements. At the widest portion there will be small bunches of flowers of ribbon, mull or chiffon. Chiffon is rather too soft for the purpose, and mull is better. At the lower part of the point there will be a bunch of long, narrow ribbons in varying lengths, each having a tiny flower and a bow at the end. This arrangement is sometimes worn in front, and at others it hangs at the back or side. Tiny roses of silk mull are most delicate and attractive of all. They have a center made with a few loops and ends of ribbon, and around which the petals are sewed. To make the petals, cut squares of the mull, fold them bias and bring the points and all the intervening parts together. Fasten these closely to the fine wire used as a foundation for the floselle. They will then take to a round and slightly curved form like real petals. These can be set in a line or formed into a bunch. In either case they are lovely.

NEW NECKWEAR.

New ties and cravats for wear with shirt waists are of many kinds, the prettiest perhaps being those where the stock is white and the cravat itself is of some other color.

Small black satin ties are much liked for wear with high white collars or stocks, and polka dotted ribbon is tied in a double bow in other cases. The derby and the four-in-hand are also affected. These have long ends, and the chic is to have the ends fall to the waist line. Lace mitts are not to be worn with any of the mannish ties.

Some Timely Gossip from the Realm of the Athletes.

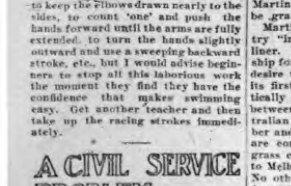
Swimming is Popular

Swimming will never become passe at the summer resorts. This season the little lakes and rivers so much frequented by the resorters have been liberally supplied by Jupiter Pluvius, and there is little danger of many of them "going dry" as was noted last year during the long period of drought. To illustrate how a rainy spell that brings frowns on the face of the farmer may cause laughter wrinkles on the countenance of the city merchant, it is a matter of fact that the big houses have sold more bathing suits this far this season than they did during 1900 and 1901. A great deal of this unusually large sale is attributed to the abundance of water in the resort lakes and the increased desire of the summer bearders to swim.

No one can tell the anguished father what to do if he sees his baby struggling in the water of a treacherous little lake and he, is powerless to swim out to its assistance. But there are thousands of teachers who will provide everybody with the instruction necessary to make swimmers out of those who cannot make progress in the water. Do you want to be able to save life at the summer resort? Do you want to be free from fear when out in a storm? Learn to swim. "The knowledge of the art of swimming is worth more than all the money in the world if you are a long way from shore and there is no one putting out in a boat for you," once remarked Howard F. Brewer, the Pacific coast champion swimmer, while we were swimming together recently. "I believe I would not be afraid to get dropped overboard in the Pacific, 100 miles from shore, if I could be guaranteed that no shark would get me. It is possible for a human being to do so much more in the water than the average man thinks can be done, that some day some powerful swimmer will adopt that scheme —swimming many miles to land—to inspire within the breasts of his fellow men the respect that should be shown for swimming."

Brewer is so well known that a few "pointers" from the champion, to be perused while sitting in a boat at some resort, should be of interest.

"While the teachers will tell about the several distinct steps to be acquired in learning to swim," remarked the "human water rat," as the water polo boys who played with Brewer called the Californian, "it must be remembered that any boy may swim if he falls into water over his head for the first time by simply imitating the motions of a dog who is hurled into the water. Lessons are well enough, but presence of mind is the greatest cork lifebelt, so to speak, that you throw out to a person in deep water. You may watch your teacher go through the movements used in swimming, urging his or her class to follow them before going into the water and you may spend hours in practicing the arm movements, paying strict attention to the injunction to keep the hands flat, palm downwards, to keep the elbows drawn nearly to the sides, to count 'one' and push the hands forward until the arms are fully extended, to turn the hands slightly outward and use a sweeping backward stroke, etc., but I would advise beginners to stop all this laborious work the moment they find they have the confidence that makes swimming easy. Get another teacher and then take up the racing strokes immediately.



When the city fathers of one of the largest municipalities in the United States passed an ordinance making many small parks for the benefit of the children who would use them for playgrounds and athletic grounds, a novel problem in examinations was set for the civil service commission. It was necessary to engage a superintendent or a director of sports who could teach the youngsters how to utilize their evenings and half-holidays in developing their physical makeup.

"Let us have some college strong man," said one of the commissioners. "College strong men are not athletic trainers," maintained another. "They can teach their systems only to ambitious adults."

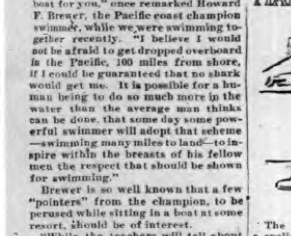
"Well let us have the Amateur Athletic union officials suggest questions for examination and throw the competition open to all who have had university athletic exjperience," ventured another.

The latter was done, and men who had trained college teams, old footrunners, former gridiron stars, etc., were asked to take the examination. It is worthy of notice that a man who for three years had trained the athletes of two big universities and who for one year was the trainer of some husky material in an agricultural college that won a state championship, only passed fourth in the list of five who took the examination. He got the place on the 60-day appointment plan, which often gives the incompetent man the job ahead of the man who has no "pull," but his examination papers if read off to the parents who send their aspiring youths to the public athletic grounds for instruction would "queer" the old trainer.

"What is your opinion about the Olympian games?" was one question. The trainer had tried to get an appointment as secretary of one of the many committees and he answered: "Everything." President Furber, of the Olympian Games association, might take a long vacation and engage this man to run the big athletic carnival.

"What muscles are used in climbing?" was another question. "The legs and arms," was the answer given.

"Name the principal muscle of the upper arm," was another question. "The upper arm muscle," was the answer. These and other answers illustrate how even the experienced trainer of varsity athletes may fail to impart his information when questioned.



The athletic marvel of the age is a cyclist who is not a champion. He never earned athletic honors in any other line than cycling, and he is 42 years of age. He is riding in cycle races now for the money he can make and soon he will retire to Australia to conduct his two hotels, leaving the management of his Lowell (Mass.) realty to friends. William Martin is his name, but everybody who reads knows him as "Plugger Bill." Twenty years ago—so far back that the "safety" was not known and the "Jersey Skeeter," otherwise the redoubtable Arthur Zimmerman, was winning races on the "Star" wheel, this remarkably developed strong young man began to pedal for prizes. Once in awhile he won, but few ever paid any attention to him. He was slow and plodding, hence his name "Plugger."

But it is possible for a man like Martin to have an ambition which may be gratified if perseverance is used.

Martin recently came to this country "in style"—first cabin on a big liner. Eight years ago, when he took ship for Australia with the consuming desire to win the Austral race, with its first prize of $2,000, he went practically as freight. He had quarters between decks. Six winters—the Australian racing season begins in October and ends in April, and the events are contested on asphalt and even grass courses—did "Plugger Bill" go to Melbourne only to be disappointed. No other American ever coveted the Australian race as did Martin. It was persistency personified, this continual effort on his part. Perhaps the fact that there were often 45,000 paid admissions to those tracks to see the Austral contested had something to do with his ambition to win. For six years defeat had come to the Massachusetts man, but the antipodeans were only preparing themselves for humiliation when they made fun of the "also ran."

Last winter "Plugger Bill" felt that his time had come, and again he went to the far side of the earth to do battle with the Australian cracks. "It's do or die," said Martin, and he wagered his life's savings—$5,000—on himself with the bookmakers, who do a big business in the big throng at the annual event—the Epsom Cycling Derby of the world. His odds were 7 to 1. When he "cleaned up" after riding to victory, he took a check for $40,000 and deposited it in an Australian bank. Most of that money is now invested in the British colony, and Martin is taking his "American vacation."

GOOD BUSINESS MAN.

Heir to Mackay Millions Respected by Financiers.

Suggested Some Successful Schemes to His Father—His Weakness for Horses Has Never Become a Vice.

Clarence Hungerford Mackay, who, by the death of his father, John W. Mackay, becomes the head of the family and of the great business interests which it controls, has for years been familiar with the various business enterprises in which his father was engaged. Up to the present time he has never taken active part in the direction of the Mackay business concerns, but it is well known among the friends of the family and among the men who were the business associates of John W. Mackay that Clarence H. Mackay had the confidence of his father in business matters, who gave him credit for having suggested some of his successful business schemes.

Clarence H. Mackay was born in San Francisco April 17, 1874. With his brother, who died in 1895, he was taken to Europe, and his boyhood days were spent at Villebon, near Paris, the beautiful estate now leased by W. K. Vanderbilt, who has converted a part of the place into a horse breeding establishment, where he keeps Halma and other famous horses.

If Clarence H. Mackay has a weakness it is for horses. He had owned a number of good horses, but had never become known on the turf until he won the great International stallion race at Paris with Sweaze. The American colony at Paris was deeply interested in the race, because many prominent owners had entered horses. Little was known of the animal which Mr. Mackay had purchased at Little Silver, N. J., for $2,500. To the surprise of the natives and the great satisfaction of the Americans, Mr. Mackay's horse won in straight heats in 2:18 each. This was on the turf, and not on a level track, and the performance has not been equalled since that time.

Mr. Mackay's first venture on an American track was with Banastar, with whom he won the Metropolitan handicap. The Mackay stable was gradually enlarged, and although it is now not as large as many of the American stables, it contains about 15 horses which, according to an expert, "have a bright future."

(He Will Control His Father's Great Business Interests.)

Clarence H. Mackay, although he is a sportsman in everything that the word implies, has never been a "sport." He is never seen in the places frequented by the sporting fraternity; he is a temperate man, but not a total abstainer, and is not a gambler, although he occasionally sits in a friendly game of poker. He is an all-around athlete, but is not a big man.

Mr. Mackay married Miss Katherine Duer in May, 1898, and a daughter was born to them on February 5, 1900. His home at Roslyn, Long Island, is a beautiful place, which was completed recently at a cost of more than $1,000,000.

As to the fortune which will come to the young man there are no positive figures, says the New York Tribune, and while it has been variously estimated from $50,000,000 to $60,000,000, some persons who know the value of the investments place it as high as $80,000,000, and contend that John W. Mackay, despite his great business capacity and his thorough knowledge of the enterprises with which he was connected, did not know within $20,000,000 how much he was worth. He was so methodical and had the uncertainty of life so constantly before him that he left his affairs in perfect order, and even without his directing hand everything will go on in the Mackay concerns just as though he were still conducting them.

Among the larger concerns of which Clarence H. Mackay will become the head are the Mackay-Bennett Cable company, the Postal Telegraph company and the Pacific Commercial Cable company. The large sugar refinery at Yonkers, the Canadian Pacific railway, the Southern Pacific railroad and the White Knob Copper company are among the corporations in which he will be a prominent figure. There are also several large companies in the new gold fields in the Klondike in which much Mackay capital is invested.

John W. Mackay was always proud of his good name, and in this respect the young man also resembles his father, for whom he always showed great love and affection.

HORSE AND AUTOMOBILE.

The Animal Made Acquaintance with the Machine and Was Easily Cured of His Fear.

There is some talk of a school wherein horses may be educated out of their fear of automobiles; whether this would serve or not is another question, but here is a little instance of what one sensible, considerate automobile driver did for the sake of a frightened horse, says the New York Post.

The automobile had come to a standstill in the roadway to permit the passage of a small and apparently very young horse in trotting rig attached to a training sulky. The motor had not been shut off, so the machine kept chug-chug-chugging as the horse approached. With a snort and a leap the horse whirled to the side of the road, nearly throwing out the man in the sulky. Then the automobilist shut off the motor and called to the driver: "Wait a moment until the animal quiets down; then drive him up slowly while I sit still."

Then the driver did, and when the horse was within 10 or 12 feet of the machine his progress toward it having been slow and fearful, the automobilist got out, took the horse by the bridle, and let him carefully look to the car, patting the animal the while and talking to it. "Now, look it over, smell it, see there's nothing to hurt you."

For fully five minutes the horse was permitted to inspect the machine, and at last it seemed quite accustomed to it. After that the horse was driven back and forth several times without evincing the slightest fear. The automobilist did not start his car until the horse was almost out of sight.

WHEAT LANDS IN EUROPE.

Shown by Analysis, the Soil of Siberia Is Similar to That of America.

We are told that the south European wheat lands constitute a broad belt of prairie, 600 to 700 miles in average width, beginning in Hungary and extending northeastward to the Ural mountains, and then westward into Siberia to unknown boundaries, says the Export Implement Age. On the north and the west are the "gray forest lands," and on the south and west are the alkaline districts and sandy wastes, and finally the Caucasus and the Ural mountains. By both chemical and mechanical analyses the soil is shown to be remarkably similar to that of our own prairies, also commonly known by the similar term of "black loam." The depth is, on an average, probably a little greater than tht of our prairie soil. From a chemical standpoint the soils of the two regions are similarly characterized (1) by an exceptionally large amount of thoroughly humified organic matter; (2) by the presence of an unusual proportion of phosphoric acid, and (3) by a great amount, comparatively, of lime, potash and other alkalies. These soils are therefore distinguished, while others, especially of forest regions, are acid. It is well known that the substances thus more abundant in these soils than in others are just those usually needed by the wheat plant.

THE AUTHOR'S POWER.

Wields a Magic Influence Over the Mind of the Average Reader of Fiction.

Everybody knows that in a novel a commonplace person may be made interesting by a deliberate, patient exposition of his various traits, precisely as we can learn to like very uninteresting persons in real life if circumstances place them day after day at our elbows, says Atlantic. Who of us would not grow impatient with the early chapters of The Newcomes, for instance, or The Antiquary, if it were not for the fact that Thackeray and Scott know their business, and that every one of these commonplace people will contribute something in the end to the total effect? And even where the gradual development of character, rather than the mere portrayal of character, is the theme of a novelist, as so frequently with George Eliot, how colorless may be the personality at the outset, how narrow the range of thought and experience portrayed. Yet, in George Eliot's own words: "These commonplace people have a conscience, and have felt the sublime promptings to do the painful right." They take on dignity from their moral struggle, whether the struggle ends in victory or defeat. By an infinite number of subtle touches they are made to grow and change before our eyes, like living, fascinating things.

Dragon-Fly Farms.

The breeding of innumerable hosts of dragon flies, or devil's darning needles, as they are called by country boys in some parts of the United States, in order that these insects may extirpate the mosquitoes, is now advocated in certain quarters, says the New York Tribune. Are we to have dragon fly stock farms, with annual sales of weanlings of the choicest pedigree? Alas, it is to be feared that, no matter what we do, we shall have the mosquitoes always with us, like the poor. Nevertheless, the sparrow of the air can undoubtedly be lessened in numbers and in the evil which they work.

HOME IN PIANO BOX.

Baltimore Fisherman Spends His Life in Tight Quarters.

Likes It Because He Has to Pay No Rent and Isn't Bothered About Anything—Hint to Prospective Hermits.

Not many of even the meek and lowly spirited citizens of Baltimore would take kindly to the thought of living nine months of the year in a piano box six feet long by two and one-half feet wide and five feet high, says the Baltimore Sun.

And yet that is what James Thomas Bailey, a weather-beaten and white-haired fisherman, 58 years old, has been doing for the past four years. He seems to thrive on it, too.

The box stands at the end of a row of others, all of which, with the exception of Bailey's, contain fishing tackle, on the shore of Spring Gardens, at the foot of Hanover street.

About ten years ago Bailey became a fisherman at the spot where he now lives. He says that the idea of seeking the piano box was first suggested to him when the snow of the famous blizzard of February, 1899, sifted through the cracks of a shanty he was then occupying and opened his eyes to the weather. He thought a more compact apartment would be better, and, looking upon the row of boxes that line the shore, determined that one of them would be the very thing. He bought one for 75 cents, fitted it with some bed clothing, and has lived there ever since, cooking his meals on the open ground just outside.

To a visitor of the place Mr. Bailey hospitably showed his home. "Yes," he said, in reply to a question as to whether it really was true that he lived in a box, "there it is." And, lifting the tin-covered lid, he displayed the interior.

It is truly a lesson in economy of space. On a shelf running the length of the box, out a half-foot below the top, were placed pipes, tobacco, a coffee pot, comb and brush, fishing tackle and many useful articles. There was no attempt at ornamentation. In the bottom, with about three feet of space between it and the top, was Mr. Bailey's bed. It hardly looked like a bed, bearing apparel being scattered about it so promiscuously—blue overalls, spare trousers, and, sticking aggressively in the center, Mr. Bailey's reserve woolen leg, painted black and highly polished.

"THERE IS MY HOME."

"Well, you will certainly never trouble out of bed," said the visitor.

"No, and I never have to hunt for the keyhole," was the answer, as Mr. Bailey showed that he had no lock on his street door, but it was simply fastened by a common padlock staple minus the padlock. "I don't live here all the year 'round," he further explained. "You see, in the real cold weather a man would freeze. That blizzard taught me that. But I come early in April and stay until late in December. The other months I usually spend with my daughter in town. I make my living by fishing here in the river. I own a boat and I own my own house, and I'm contented. When I go in and shut the lid down nothing bothers me—I'm dead to the world. If it rains I hear the patter of it outside, but it don't come in. You see, I have the top covered with tin. I don't pay taxes—I don't pay any rent. I ain't bothered about anything."

It All Depended on Dinah.

A girl baby was recently brought to a clergyman to be baptized. He asked the name of the baby. "Dinah M.," the father responded. "But what does the 'M.' stand for?" interrogated the minister. "Why, I do not know yet; it all depends upon how she turns out." "How she turns out? Why, I do not understand you," said the cleric. "Oh, if she turns out nice and sweet and handy about the house like her mother I shall call her Dinah May. But if she has a fiery temper and displays a bombshell disposition like mine I shall call her Dinah Might."

Market for Stolen Goods.

In the City of Mexico is a Thieves' market, in which stolen goods are publicly offered for sale. It occupies an entire square. Here is found everything that is portable, from a telescope to a ring, a silk dress, or a pair of stockings, and the articles are sold at about one-fifth of their actual value. The thieves do not sell the goods openly, for that would be dishonest, in the estimation of the Mexicans, but the sellers are they who purchase secretly from the thieves.

AGRICULTURAL SEEDS ONE of OUR IMPORTANT PRODUCTS

WE MEET THE DEMANDS OF HOME CONSUMPTION AND SUPPLY MUCH OF EUROPE.

It is a little more than a hundred years since the United States has imported any considerable quantity of red-clover seed. For many years before that grain, clover and grass seeds had been gathered and sold in the colonies, but much had always been imported. This condition was reversed soon after the opening of the nineteenth century, and from that time the amount of seed raised in America for home consumption and for export has steadily increased, until to-day Europe looks to the American farmer for a large part of her supply of agricultural seeds. On our side, we import in quantity only a few kinds, the culture of which is still comparatively new in this country. Of necessity, the improvement of machinery for harvesting, thrashing and cleaning seed has kept pace with the increased output. This could not have been otherwise, since without better machinery the seed of some grasses, and even of clover, could not have been economically produced in quantities sufficient to supply a large demand. The domestic production of seed has tended to reduce prices, and to-day the seeds that are so expensive as to seriously limit their use are all imported. In some cases, not counting cereals and flax, the seeds of agricultural plants have assumed such importance in trade that they are quoted on the produce exchanges or on the boards of trade of all the large cities, and dealing in futures in clover and timothy seed is as regular a part of the trading as in the case of corn or wheat.

A FIELD OF PUMPKINS GROWN FOR SEED.

That the trade in agricultural seeds has assumed enormous proportions needs only to be mentioned. Unfortunately, data are not available for making reliable calculations of the quantities and value of all seeds produced in the United States. Some statistics are, however, at hand showing the amounts of clover and timothy seed produced by a few states. The export trade in clover and grass seed during the year ending June, 1900, amounted to $3,050,193, and of course the domestic trade is vastly greater. In 1900 the clover-seed crop of Illinois aggregated 52,992 bushels, and Missouri sent out of the state 51,683 bushels.

HARVESTING KENTUCKY BLUE-GRASS SEED.

In 1899 Ohio reported 350,777 bushels of clover seed produced in that state. In the same year Michigan produced 68,744 bushels, Wisconsin 85,423 bushels and Missouri more than 30,000 bushels. In 1897, a year of large clover crops, 810,341 bushels were grown in Indiana alone.

In 1900 Illinois produced 103,401 bushels of timothy seed, valued at $188,831, and 60,649 bushels of Hungarian and millet seed, worth $37,770. The crop of timothy seed raised in the state in 1900 was the smallest for many years. In 1897, the high-water mark for value, although not for production, having been reached in 1881, when the timothy seed crop was worth more than $1,000,000. The amount of timothy seed harvested in Wisconsin in 1899 was 61,766 bushels; while Missouri, in the same year, produced 72,535 bushels, besides more than 1,000,000 pounds of unclassified grass seed. In 1900 Missouri reported the amount of timothy seed exported as 2,976,648 pounds. And of millet seed as 2,851,300 pounds in the same year Iowa produced 14,700,950 pounds of timothy seed.

These figures serve to convey some notion of the volume of the trade in agricultural seeds in the United States.

While most of the important seeds can be produced throughout the greater part of the United States, yet there are centers where these seeds are produced most abundantly and most cheaply, and from these the commercial supply is therefore largely drawn. Not only does the trade reversed soon after the opening of the nineteenth century, and from that time the amount of seed raised in America for home consumption and for export has steadily increased, until to-day Europe looks to the American farmer for a large part of her supply of agricultural seeds. On our side, we import in quantity only a few kinds, the culture of which is still comparatively new in this country. clover seed is more valued than any other, and commands the highest price in the market. These areas of production are in some cases rather limited, and in others are coextensive with the boundaries of many states. Sometimes the areas of production are localized and separated by thousands of miles, chance or similarity in conditions having given birth to the same industry in widely distant places.

The trade in cereals for seed purposes must be carefully distinguished from that trade in wheat, corn, etc., which is a daily feature of the Chicago and New York markets. Seed wheat is not bought on 'change, nor is the price of high-grade seed corn affected by the fluctuations of the market. The great bulk of the seed of the cereals is undoubtedly grown in the locality where it is to be used; most of it does not move far. The seed that is offered for sale by dealers is obtained in three ways: Some dealers buy seed in the open market, selling by the name under which the seed was bought, without inquiry of any sort into the quality or the origin of the seed. Such dealers usually sell seed that should have found its way to the nearest gristmill. Other dealers, while buying by sample in the open market, use all the care the circumstances permit to obtain correctly named seed of good quality. This seed is, if necessary, recleaned, the light and injured seeds removed, and only good, sound seed exposed for sale. A third and small class of dealers make a specialty of some varieties, and these are grown for the dealer under contracts in the same way that vegetable seeds are grown. Such seed is of the highest quality and, what is of great importance, is almost always true to name. In general, good seed of any of the different classes of wheat comes from the section in which that class is most commonly grown. For example, seed of Turkey red wheat should be bought in Kansas, Nebraska or Iowa; Somora wheat in California; and spring wheats in the Dakotas, Minnesota, or states to that section.

It is a commonly accepted rule that plants raised from northern-grown seed will mature earlier than those from southern-grown seed of the same variety. This rule holds good for spring-sown wheats, of which the northern-grown seed is preferred, but the contrary is true of fall-sown grain.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL WORKS.

No matter how honest the local investigators may be, any report they may make concerning the condition of the city sewage disposal works is bound to be disbelieved by some people who will think they are trying to cover up a state of affairs which does not really exist. There can be no claim of partiality on the part of an expert in the employ of the State Sewage Commission. His report is bound to show the exact state of affairs.

Thomas LeClear, an expert chemist in the employ of that commission, has finished his exhaustive tests of the beds and has prepared his report which will be presented to the commission at its next meeting. The results of his investigations show that the claims made for the new method of disposal have been fulfilled. It was then said that it would require a few months to get the system in proper working order. The report of the expert shows that such has been the case. There have been some irregularities which the expert accounts for in just that way.

There is no use for the uninitiated to try to wade through the voluminous report. It is all so much Greek to those who are not acquainted with the subject. Briefly summed up, it shows that the beds accomplish the desired end. The water is clarified to such an extent as to be in condition to empty in a stream which is not used as drinking water. With all the various establishments which line Green brook, no one ever thinks of using that stream for drinking purposes.

An exchange says: "The census bulletin on printing and publishing shows that while the prices of other things are raising, the cost of newspapers advertising (for each 1,000 of readers) is steadily falling. In the ten years from 1890 to 1900 the aggregate circulation of the newspapers increased 74.5 per cent., while the amount paid by advertising increased only 34.6 per cent. In twenty years the newspapers have quadrupled their circulation, while the advertisers have only doubled their payments (and that chiefly for enlarged space)."

The stand taken by various municipalities against granting all sorts of franchises without proper compensation seems to be contagious. Bloomfield people are the last heard from and they too demand that a trolley company shall pay for the privileges extended to it. The Essex Cross Railway Company has applied for certain *concessions and it is said that a ma*jority of the Bloomfield Town Council will oppose giving away valuable privileges. The course is a proper one.

The popular theory that specially gifted men marry much less and more frequently later than men of average intelligence is denied in an especially interesting article in the Popular Science Monthly. Prof. E. L. Thorndike, of Columbia University, the writer, declares that there is no distinction in this respect. He proves his assertions with facts and figures.

The chauffeur of Oliver Harriman, Jr., was fined $10 the other day in Newport, R. I., for racing. Considering the great danger of this foolhardy practice the punishment was not commensurable with the offense. Better made it ten times the amount for the first offence.

Governor William A. Stone says politics doesn't pay. Just to think of it, this from a governor of corrupt Pennsylvania! Has "addition, division and silence" been discarded suddenly as a motto there.

New Yorkers say that Santos-Dumont has a case of swelled head. Considering the number of banquets he attended while in this country the report is no doubt true.

Wonder if beef and coal will be among the exhibits in a museum a century hence, or will they be memories.

Remember the Date.

Thursday, August 28, is the day and date set for the trolley excursion to Riverside Park to be given by the Retail Clerks' Association. The start will be made from the Watchung Avenue station at 7:15 o'clock in the evening. At the park there will be a vaudeville show and dancing.

NEWARK COPS WERE BEATEN

The Famous Fourth Precinct Team Beaten by Plainfield Police Friday.

THE SCORE WAS 10 TO 7.

A Thousand People Saw the Great Victory on the Hope Common—It Looked Like an Even Thing at First, But Plainfield Took Lead in Third Never to be Headed.

Newark's finest found something finer in the baseball line Friday afternoon. Coming to Plainfield with a high flying reputation and with the appearance of being great things, the famous Fourth Precinct team fell down before our own darlings on the force to the tune of 10 to 7. And now, Plainfield is wearing feathers in its cap and its coppers are thrusting our their chests another inch or two on patrol.

To tell the story of the great game on Hope Common would require many columns of printed words. Praise of Plainfield might occupy long, glowing paragraphs. But the public was there, to the extent of 1,000 people, and the glories of the guardians have already been spread far and wide throughout city and State. Going into the battle with suspicion and something of fear, they emerged with smiles and victory.

Pitching may be said to have been responsible for the fact that the game was a good one to look at. Whatever may have been the possibilities of the fielders on each side, the fact that the batsmen were unable to do any heavy connecting with the twisters sent from the box made the afternoon easy for most of the players. Errors, however, were among the glaring features of the game. As nearly as could be calculated, some twenty-six misplays were recorded, Plainfield carrying off the laurels with sixteen.

Winn pitched a good game for the home team, having eleven strike-outs among the Newarkers, with two more who gained first because of Conroy's in ability to hold the ball at the critical moment. Jack had several other passed balls, although he redeemed himself by good work in general throughout the rest of the game. Carr, the ex-League twirler who was in the points for Newark, fanned thirteen, also having strikes not caught by his back-stop. "Carrie Nation" Higgins took all the medals in the game for striking out, doing the trick and they too demand that a trolley company shall pay for the privileges extended to it. The Essex Cross Railway Company has applied for certain *concessions and it is said that a ma*jority of the Bloomfield Town Council will oppose giving away valuable privileges. The course is a proper one.

The popular theory that specially gifted men marry much less and more frequently later than men of average intelligence is denied in an especially interesting article in the Popular Science Monthly. Prof. E. L. Thorndike, of Columbia University, the writer, declares that there is no distinction in this respect. He proves his assertions with facts and figures.

The chauffeur of Oliver Harriman, Jr., was fined $10 the other day in Newport, R. I., for racing. Considering the great danger of this foolhardy practice the punishment was not commensurable with the offense. Better made it ten times the amount for the first offence.

Governor William A. Stone says politics doesn't pay. Just to think of it, this from a governor of corrupt Pennsylvania! Has "addition, division and silence" been discarded suddenly as a motto there.

New Yorkers say that Santos-Dumont has a case of swelled head. Considering the number of banquets he attended while in this country the report is no doubt true.

Wonder if beef and coal will be among the exhibits in a museum a century hence, or will they be memories.

Remember the Date.

Thursday, August 28, is the day and date set for the trolley excursion to Riverside Park to be given by the Retail Clerks' Association. The start will be made from the Watchung Avenue station at 7:15 o'clock in the evening. At the park there will be a vaudeville show and dancing.

SECOND OPERATION.

Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh Successfully Undergoes Another Operation.

The many friends in this city of Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh will be pained to hear that she has passed through a second surgical operation. It was performed Sunday at the home of her parents in Elizabeth and was made necessary through the inflamed condition of the wound from the first operation and was to make sure that the limb would be perfectly straight when she recovered the use of it. Mrs. VanEmburgh bore the ordeal bravely, and her condition is now better than at any time during her illness.

LITERARY.

Eleanor Gates, whose graphic description of a prairie blizzard formed part of the "Chapters from the Biography of a Prairie Girl" in the August Century, will contribute a special paper in this series to the September number of that magazine. It is entitled "The Story of a Planting," and recalls the experiences of a little girl on a summer's day corn planting. It may be said incidentally that not only the writer, but also the illustrator of this paper, Miss Fanny Y. Cory, is from the far Northwest, and is thoroughly familiar with the life described.

On the Tenderloin.

Dr. Alexander F. Irvine, of New Haven, Conn., will address the men's meeting next Sunday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. Dr. Irvine is well known in Plainfield, having addressed a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. Hall here to a large audience a few months ago. He is a noted worker in the slum district of New York, and will relate what has fallen under his own observation. Dr. Irvine speaks with absorbing interest.

Fountain at Duke's.

Saturday the water was turned on for the first time at the fountain on the extensive preserves owned by Jas. B. Duke at Raritan. It is the finest drinking fountain in America, and cost $60,000, which includes a bronze statue that Mr. Duke purchased in Italy for $25,000.

Since the First . . .

ROCHESTER LAMP was made there have been many "likes" on the good as it showed upon the market, and were even said to be "just as good." Others have claimed to be "just as good," but experience proves that there is only one lamp that is really better, and we make that, too.

THE NEW ROCHESTER

In it we embody all that is really worth having in a lamp, both as to quality and style. Don't forget, every genuine ROCHESTER is stamped with the name.

We can fill every lamp wants. No matter whether you want a new lamp or stove, an old one repaired or refitted, or want to put in a NEW incandescent light, we can do it. Let us send you literature on the subject.

BRUISES AND CUTS FROM COLLISION

Four Persons Injured, But as Far as Can be Learned, None Has Broken Bones.

CRASH ON THE STREET.

A TROLLEY CAR AND A CARRIAGE COME IN CONTACT.

Mrs. F. R. Searles and Mrs. C. E. Bristol, Daughters of Dr. H. H. Lowrie, Hurled to Ground, as Were Mrs. Searles' Children.

In a collision between a trolley car and a phaeton at the corner of Madison avenue and Fourth street, Monday afternoon, the vehicle was almost completely demolished and four occupants received more or less severe injuries. From the manner in which the two crashed together it is regarded as miraculous that all escaped with their lives.

Those in the wagon were Mrs. F. R. Searles, of Springfield, Mass., and her two children, Rufus, aged four and an infant, and Mrs. C. E. Bristol. Both women are daughters of Dr. H. H. Lowrie, of Park avenue. Mrs. Bristol was driving along Madison avenue and wished to reach Park avenue, turned into Fourth street. She claims she neither saw anything in the shape of a car approaching or a warning bell, but she knew had hardly cleared the tracks when the carriage was struck squarely in the middle by a west bound car in charge of Motorman Joseph Hansen.

All four were hurled to the street and Mrs. Bristol was caught in one of the wheels. The horse started to run away and she was dragged for some distance before the animal's progress was halted. When she was extracted it was found she was not injured to any great extent. Mrs. Searles and the two children were picked up in a dazed condition and with Mrs. Bristol were taken to a nearby house. Drs. Martha Stillman and T. E. Davis arrived in answer to summons but neither was able to determine to the full extent of injuries. The unfortunate people were covered with cuts and contusions but were able to be taken to their homes. There a further examination was made by Dr. Davis with the assistance of Dr. Fritts but it will not be known for a day or two whether there are any internal hurts. The physicians are satisfied, however, that there are no broken bones.

It has not yet been learned who was to blame for the accident but a rigid investigation is being made by the railway people.

FAIR'S WILL.

Mrs. Oelrichs Removes Documents From Vault on an Order of Supreme Court.

On an order obtained by Mrs. Herman Oelrichs from Justice Giegerich, of the Supreme Court, the safe containing papers belonging to the late Charles L. Fair in the vaults of the Stock Exchange building, New York, was opened Monday in an effort to find a will.

The safe was opened by experts and in the presence of Mrs. Oelrichs, Charles M. Oelrichs and Colonel William Jay. The contents of the safe were handed Mrs. Oelrichs and examined by her. She refused to make known the condition or the contents of the papers discovered. No new developments have occurred at New Market.

CAMP WATCHUNG.

Boroughites Return From an Outing Along the Shores of Lake Hopatcong.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Cleaves, Frank Cleaves, William Cleaves, Miss Florence Beekman, Miss Higgins and Walter Linbarger, all of the borough, returned Monday evening from Lake Hopatcong, where they were camping out for a week. The name of the colony was "Camp Watchung," and it was established at Bass Rock. The party enjoyed plenty of fine fishing, boating and other amusements. A Newark chef was engaged and the inner man was well provided.

DASHED AWAY FROM TRACK

A Bay Mare Cuts Up Mad Capers at the Matinee Races Saturday.

ANIMAL NOT INJURED.

Causes Great Excitement, But Little Damage—D. C. Smalley's "Ned Davis," a Winner, As Was Also A. C. Vail's "Kenelem"—The Programme.

At the first of the matinee races, held at the Plainfield Driving Club Park, Saturday afternoon, what might have been a fatal accident was narrowly averted. It was in the first heat of the race in which were entered N. B. Smalley's "Alicia," John Osborn's "Fairmount Maid," D. C. Smalley's "Ned Davis," and George Jenner's bay mare. The horses were being driven by their owners and were well under way when the first turn was made. It promised to be one of the best races of the afternoon and it was being watched with great interest by a large crowd.

Just as the horses were making the turn the brace which runs from the wheel to the shaft gave way on the sulky in which was seated Mr. Jenner. Quick as flash he was thrown sideways, but with strong presence of mind, he held fast for a distance of fifty yards and did all in his power to bring his horse to a standstill. The animal was gaining, however, and Mr. Jenner realized his inability to hold the horse allowed himself to fall off the sulky, thereby escaping with a few slight injuries.

The horse then started on a wild run. He encircled the track three times, despite the efforts of a large crowd to capture him. On the third round he escaped from the track through a gate and dashed for the stables, where he made several turns. From there he ran to Park avenue and then to South Plainfield and finally got on the tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, where he ran along the tracks a distance of a half mile. Just before going on the tracks a fast express train went by and the animal had a close call from being instantly killed. In the mean time he had broken loose from the sulky and was perfectly free. After running a half mile he came to a bridge, where his wild flight came to an end. His legs went through the cross beams and he was held a prisoner until extracted by railroad track hands. Aside from a few bruises and cuts the animal was not seriously injured. He will not be in condition, however, to trot again this year.

After this exciting feature, the race was started over again and D. C. Smalley with "Ned Davis" won in 2:32½. In two heats "Fairmount Maid" led to the three-quarter post, but every time "Ned Davis" pulled away from him in grand style and won easily. A second race between A. C. Vail's "Kenelem" and Chas. Brower's "Rover R" was won by the former. Aside from the accident the programme was enjoyed and no doubt these matinee races will be largely patronized in the future.

Peter Thoms Dead.

Peter Thoms, son of Burton Thoms, who was well known to the older residents of North Plainfield, as was also the son, died at Vineland, N. J., Saturday afternoon. It was Peter Thoms who sold to the borough of North Plainfield the property upon which the High School now stands. The funeral took place Monday afternoon.

LEAGUE TEAMS MEET DEFEAT

Scotch Plains Beat the Safe Works; St. Marys Defeated by Plainfield Athletics.

ONE GAME WAS EXCITING

Plains-Safe Works Game Was a Good One—Won 6 to 4—St. Marys-Plainfield Athletics Contest Was a Poor Exhibition of the National Game—Westfield Beaten.

SATURDAY'S GAMES.

Scotch Plains, 6; Safe Works, 4. Plainfield Ath., 18; St. Marys, 10. Equitables, 4; Westfield, 3.

While there were no games played Saturday in the City Baseball League, there were several contests on the diamond which attracted almost as much attention as the league games. After the great record which Scotch Plains has been making this summer, there was more than the usual interest taken in the meeting with one of the league teams. The Safe Works nine went to Scotch Plains Saturday afternoon and met defeat by a score of 6 to 4. It was an exciting game, well played by both sides. The St. Marys and the Plainfield Athletics, formerly the Clinton Avenues, attempted to see which could play the worse ball. St. Marys won out in that end of it but lost the game 18 to 10. The playing on both sides was extremely ragged. Most of the Hope Y. M. A. players spent the day at the shore with the Hope chapel excursion.

ST. MARYS OFF DAY.

Ragged in the extreme was the playing on both sides in the game between Clinton Avenue and St. Mary's on the latter's grounds Saturday afternoon. Several hundred people gathered in the hope of seeing something reasonably like baseball, but agreed afterwards that they had witnessed the poorest exhibition of the season. Clinton Avenue won without much effort, to the tune of 18 to 10.

Changes in the St. Mary lineup, owing to the absence of Crotty, Keeffe and Scott, is the excuse offered by that team for its general yellowness. Barry was unable to hold Doyle, while "Doc" was away off his usual form, allowing thirteen hits, two bases on balls and three dead balls. Seven strike outs were recorded in his favor. Pohlman, the Clinton Avenue twirler, fared somewhat better, being touched up for only ten hits and giving four passes. The support given both pitchers was so discouraging as to be largely responsible for their unsteadiness at critical times.

Clinton Avenue took the lead in the first inning with four runs, and they were never headed. Batting rallies, aided by the ever present errors, kept the crowd amused for two hours, but the loose playing detracted much from the interest. A summary of the game follows:

SAFE WORKS LOSE.

It was a great day for the rooters of Scotch Plains. The Safe Works team, fresh from victories at home, and thirsting for more abroad, journeyed to the suburbs Saturday afternoon and fell by the wayside. When the dust cleared away, the score was 6 to 4, in favor of Scotch Plains.

Safe Works got a lead in the first inning that looked difficult to overcome. An epidemic of errors in the infield let in four runs. Four fumbles of easy balls in succession was the record. Eight men came to the bat in that inning, but for the rest of the game errors by the 'Plains nine were an invisible commodity, and not another man for eight innings travelled as far as third.

'Plains tallied one in the first, and tied the score in the fifth. Franklin's miss of a fly at centre allowed the winning runs to be made in the seventh. It was an off day for Franklin at any a rate. He made two costly errors in the field, both responsible for runs.

Harvey for Scotch Plains pitched a great game. There was only one man on the Safe works team who struck out, Cooney, and he fanned twice. But none of them could rap the sphere beyond the infield. Throughout the game he allowed but seven paltry singles, scattered where they did the least damage.

Burns too pitched good ball, having been touched up for only nine hits, but his support was rocky at critical moments. Five of the 'Plains' sluggers, in desperate attempt to connect with his slants, failed to hit anything but microbes.

By defeating the Safe Works, the 'Plains team demonstrated its ability to go up against anything in Plainfield. Except for the ragged interval in the first inning, Saturday, the all round play of the team was of the variety to make them candidates for the professional bench.

Umpire Coro made a bad decision in the first inning. With three men on bases, the man up fanned, but Allen missed the ball. The man on third, thinking he was forced, or thinking to steal home, or not thinking at all, started on a race for the plate. He quit half way, when he saw that Allen was waiting for him. The man from third was undoubtedly out. According to rule, the man that fanned was also put, but despite protest the umpire called him safe. The decision, however, would not have affected the result of the game. Following is the summary:

"While picnicking last month my 11-year-old boy was poisoned by some weed or plant," says W. H. Dibble, of Sioux City, Ia. RESULTS OF DAY'S PLAY.

E. T. Newkirk Was Low Man at Hillside and Took Lead for Golf Committee Cup—Gordon Abbott First for Boys' Cup—E.M. Honeyman Took First Honors at Park.

Vacation times still continue at the local golf courses and the weekly competions suffered accordingly. The day was an ideal one for the sport while both courses were in the best of condition. At the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, there was a shake-up in the standing for the Golf Committee cup which landed E. T. Newkirk on top, with D. H. Barrows second, both passing Robert Abbott, Gordon Abbott was low man for the Boys' cup. At the Park Golf Club, first honors went to E. Maxwell Honeyman while Charles B. Morse still leads for the President's cup.

HILLSIDE CLUB.

Despite the fact that Saturday was an ideal day for the popular game of golf there were but a few who turned in their scores for the weekly competitions at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. The course was well filled with contestants, but many were playing independently of the scheduled events.

In the morning Gordon Abbott won the first honors for the Boys' cup, while W. T. Glenney and Arthur Peterson finished second and third. This puts Glenney in second position with fifteen and one-half points and Abbott third with thirteen and one-half points, while Arthur Peterson, who holds first position, increased his lead one point, making a total of eighteen and one-half. The scores for the Boys' cup were: Gordon Abbotts, 91. 10—81; W. T. Glenney, 98, 10—88; Arthur Peterson, 119, 10—109.

PARK GOLF CLUB.

While the Park Golf Club course was quite a busy place, Saturday afternoon, there were comparatively few who turned in their scores for the regular weekly competion for the President's cup. E. Maxwell Honeyman, a newcomer in the race, was low man for the day. Roberts deS. Newbaill, whose phenomenal score of the week before made a new course record, was way off his game. Morgan T. Townsend was not up to his best form. As a record of Saturday's play there was no change among the leaders for the trophy. Charles B. Morse still leads by two points with S. St. John McCutchen.

The scores were as follows:

LAW BEARING ON FAIR CASE

Decisions Concerning Inheritance When Husband and Wife Die Together Vary.

IN THE FRENCH COURTS.

Statutes in California and Elsewhere —If Money Comes Here the State Can Collect the Collateral Inheritance Tax—What the Texas Writers Have to Say.

Unusual interest in the final disposition of the Fair millions is taken here as a naturaly result of the fact that the heirs of Mr. Charles L. Fair mostly reside in the immediate vicinity of Plainfield. It is a matter of consequence to the State as well for should this vast wealth fall into the hands of the wife's relatives here the collateral inheritance tax exacted will amount to no mean sum.

As previously stated in these columns the whole question concerning the inheritance depends upon a question of fact, that is, as between husband and wife who died first? Should there be no circumstances from which this fact may be ascertained, the decision depends entirely upon a presumption of law. This question differs in various jurisdictions. The decisions rendered by the courts of New York, Florida, Maryland, Maine, Colorado and Kansas under the presumption of survivorship are negative, very cases in which the question is involved being adjudicated according to its individual merits, or through the ordinary agencies of proof.

In California, however, when two persons lose their lives in the same calamity, and it is not shown who perished first, and there are no particular circumstances from which it can be inferred survivorship is presumed from the probabilities resulting from the strength, age and sex, according to certain rules, one of which is, if both be over 15 and under 60, and the sexes be different, the male is presumed to have survived. When the parties dying are a father and a son, if the son survive but a moment, his wife shall have dower, for the lands descended the instant the father died.

The old Roman law upon this subject enacted that when persons of different ages perished, and there was no evidence presented to show which survived, those under puberty were presumed to have died first, but if one person was above the age of puberty and both perished together, it was presumed that the former survived the latter. In the case of husband and wife, the husband was presumed the survivor.

According to the law of France if several persons, naturally heirs of each other, perish by the same event, without the possibility of knowing which died first, the presumption as to survivorship, according to the French law, shall be determined by the circumstances of the case, and in default thereof by strength of age and sex.

If those who perish together were under 15 years, the oldest shall be presumed the survivor.

If they are all over 60 years of age, then the youngest shall be presumed the survivor.

If some were under 15 and others over 60, the former shall be considered and presumed the survivors.

If those who perished together were over the age of 15, but under 60, the males shall be presumed the survivors where the ages are equal or the difference does not exceed one year.

There is no probability of survivorship afforded between the ages of 15 and 60.

In the case of a man and a woman perishing by the same calamity, the presumption of survivorship is in favor of the former when it is a question of physical strength and courage, although the question might have to be considered. When, however, the passive endurance of the party is considered, the presumption of death would be in favor of the woman.

The following extracts, interesting in their bearing upon the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Fair, are from Dr. Justis Herold's "Legal Medicine:"

"At one time it was said that where several persons have perished in the same catastrophe, the presumption was in favor of the survival of the stronger person, and again, many cases are to be found seeming to support the position that simultaneous death is to be presumed. But it must now be taken as the law that there is no artificial presumption in cases of this nature, either that any one in particular survived or that all died at the same time; and it will merely be considered, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that one of them survived, leaving it to be discovered from the evidence who was the individual survivor.

The question is one of fact, depending wholly on evidence, the real or supposed superior strength (as from age or sex) of any of the persons perishing by a common calamity being left merely to carry its natural weight, namely, as a circumstance proper to be taken into consideration by a judicial tribunal, but which, standing alone, is sufficient to shift the burden of proof. The onus probandi is on the person who claims derivatively through a survivorship of one out of several to prove the fact affirmatively; and if the evidence does no establish the survivorship of any one, the law will treat as a matter incapable of being determined."

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only 15 operation could help me, and even that only temporarily. He said the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

Then I saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

NEW JERSEY'S PROBATION OFFICER

Prize Essay by Miss Lulu Harriet Fuller, of This City, on the Probation Officer.

Plainfield was particularly fortunate in the showing made by the members of the graduating class of the City High School in the essay competition for the best one on "The Probation Officer of New Jersey." The first prize was awarded to Miss Lulu Harriet Fuller, of this city. The subject is an interesting one but peculiar interest is attached to it from the fact that it was a Plainfield young woman who best described that new official.

While portions of Miss Fuller's essay have already appeared in print in the Newark News, the following is the essay in its entirety:

Sixty years ago, in 1842, Lord Stanley began a work which ever since has been developing and enlarging slowly but surely. This work was the Probation System, which today is growing and gaining a strong foothold in many of the States of our Union. The first attempt to start this movement in the reformation of criminals was begun in VanDiemen's Land, where gangs of men were placed in different parts of the country for the purpose of watching and protecting all petty offenders who were placed in their charge. These offenders were obliged to pass through three stages before they could be free. They carried on their business just as they did before they were on probation, but, during their first confinement, they were obliged to turn over a part and, in some cases, all of their wages to the officers who kept it for them. By good behavior and strict observation of the probation laws they were placed in the second grade where they received a ticket of leave. In course of time they entered upon a conditional pardon where they staid until fully released. In extreme cases more grades were added, but generally more were not necessary. This was only a feeble beginning of what has grown to be an almost necessary factor of good governments. And we, who are interested in the salvation of those who are dear to ourselves and to others are proud that such a law is in force in our own State of New Jersey.

"But what is the use of the Probation System," some one may ask? I should answer: "To help the weak, to protect, guard, and save the young from the sin and deadening influences of the prison." "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," we often hear quoted, but I would make it a ton. No amount of repentance, no matter how sincere, ever worked as much good as a little bit of prevention. We want prevention of crime from the cradle up. We must have heart and brain culture and a power and desire to do something useful for self and society, if we ever wish and hope to have a safe and desirable community. This is the aim of the Probation System. Instead of casting a juvenile offender in prison and causing him to serve time there, it put him on probation with a kind guardian to watch over him and direct his steps until he is able to control them for himself. Mr. William Reed says: "Protection has saved many of both sexes from exposure, shame, and loss of situation in cases where they have committed their first offence and not only saved them for the time being, but for all times." This briefly shows what the Probation System tries to accomplish. Often the question arises, "Shall we punish?" "Shall we imprison?" Sometimes, yes. But it is my belief that punishment does not cure, as a rule, although there are cases where it is a necessity.

There are two kinds of criminals, the habitual and the occasional. For the former the Probation System would hardly serve, for a hardened criminal could seldom, if ever, be won by the methods employed for those not so deep in crime. We deal in this paper chiefly with the latter class. How often a young man or woman stands on the threshold, having committed for the first time some trivial offence and how often at this critical moment their future is decided either for good or evil by some one circumstance. It is just at this stage in the lives of the weak that the Probation Officer steps in. He lifts up the down cast and sends him out a stronger and better man, not alone into the world, but with some one to watch and guide his every step.

It is impossible for a machine to turn out a piece of satisfactory work unless the machine itself is in perfect order and just as truly is it impossible for a reform like the Probation System to work to the best advantage unless all parts of its machinery are of the best material. The Probation Officer above all else must be a Christian man with the highest standard of morals, a man whom every one can and will respect. He should be exemplary in his life and habits, if he wishes to influence those on a lower, plain of life to rise to something higher and better. It is his duty to plead the causes of those in whom he is interested and to protect them by his love and sympathy. By combining firmness with his kindness he will be able to control even the most stubborn character.

Assuming that all the Probation Officers in our State possess the noble qualities just mentioned, let us look at the people whom this system directly benefits. As has been said, the Probation Law effects more particularly the juvenile offender and those who have just entered upon the downward path. It is wrong to place one who has committed some trivial offence in jail, where he is apt to come in contact with those who undoubtedly will influence his life for the worse. A young criminal should never see a prison, let alone being placed behind iron bars. The very thought is enough to ruin any young life, which, without a doubt, has its ambitions, although it may have committed some fault. Hope is the guiding star of humanity and to remove it is to crush many an ambitious and promising young spirit. What sensitive young person could come from a prison among his associates again without feeling a sense of shame and a loss of self-respect? No matter how hard he tries, if he is not driven deeper into sin by his thoughts, he will always remember his disgrace with a sense of shame. But on the other hand, if he is influenced by the Probation Officer rather than by the prison walls, he will feel no loss of self-respect, but gratitude for those who are helping him to live a satisfactory and useful life. How many lives of young men and young women too, for that matter, have been ruined for life by the simple remembrance of one or two nights behind some iron bars. I love to think that God never punishes his children when he can win them by love and it is in just this light that the Probation Officer appeals to me. Instead of sending a young offender to a place where he will be under evil influences, he takes him under his supervision and cares to him as a father for his son.

While it is the officer's duty to care for men and women of all ages, still his greatest work lies among the young boys. A boy's young life is as susceptible to all kinds of influence as a flower is to the dew, which it drinks in every evening. Many times the boy who comes under the influence of the Probation Officer is one whose home surroundings are far from the best. Often he has no father or mother to care for him and when he is missing, to sing "Where is my wandering boy tonight." When these conditions of a young person's life are denied him by those from whom they should come, it is the duty of the State to supply them. He is then her child. Who could fail to see the effect upon a young life, when a kind judge should put his arm around a guilty youth and say, "Here is a charge against you, my boy, what have you done?" How often in such cases the child would break down and cry and how often he would go from the judge's office under the care of the Probation Officer with no humiliation in his young heart, only a true and sincere resolve to live a better life under the controlling hand of one who is stronger.

I believe it is easiest to keep the average boy within bounds when he has the greatest liberty. God gave us the children to be trained, but he never meant that his little ones should be trained behind iron bars. Once a child in knee trousers took delight in ringing doorbells much to the disturbance of the people around his neighborhood. The child was not bad, only mischievous, so he was inclined to indulge frequently in a game for the fun. One day, while roaming through an empty house, he picked up something of little value. Some one found it out and had him arrested. He was put in jail and all night the little fellow kept crying for his "mamma." Does this seem humane? Does it seem possible that people in our State and of our civilization would permit a mere child's life to be branded and injured by the stigma of commitment? It is not humane nor right to place a child in such a place, even if he does something twice as bad. It is our duty to save the young from a life of degradation and sin and not to push them into it.

Not only does the Probation System benefit the individuals under its laws, but it also has great advantages for all society. Our State, as well as others, needs all the good men it can obtain to carry on its laws and work its reforms. But no man or boy placed up in a prison, unless he be a habitual criminal, can in any way benefit his State or society. When released, if he doesn't go directly deeper into crime, he is too much humiliated by his disgrace to make himself as all prominent. On the other hand, a person under the control of the Probation Officer has no disgrace clinging to him. If he obeys the laws, he is as free and independent as any other citizen and has just as much a chance to rise and benefit himself and his community, as one who had never committed a wrong deed.

Nothing of value can be obtained in this world unless the proper price is paid for it and the Probation Officer, like all other great things, costs money. I have no patience with a person who counts the cost of manhood or who finds time to discuss the difference in cost between two methods of saving human souls, but, nevertheless, it will be interesting to note briefly how much money the Probation Officer in the long run saves our State. When a man is put in jail, a fine is placed upon him which he must pay by working in the prison at the rate of fifty cents a day. During the time he is confined, the State must not only provide his meals, but many times support his neglected family. When one individual is considered the expense seems small, but remember that the State has not only one dependent, but many hundreds. On the other hand, the Probation subject is all the while turning in money to the government. When on probation, a man can continue to hold his position as before. He receives his regular salary and the fine, which he has to pay, can be paid at a greater rate and consequently in a much shorter time than that paid by the man who is working in jail. No meals must be furnished him; no support is needed for his family. He can be independent and ready to help himself and others. The money received from these people more than pays the salary of the Probation Officers. The taxpayer is not assessed a cent by this plan and he should remember that by supporting such a system he is lessening the number of criminals for whom he would have to pay years hence. And by diminishing the number of criminals, he is helping to do away with much crime.

These facts which have been mentioned are by no means all the reasons why the Probation Officer is an advantage to our State. They are but a few and many others could be cited which would show equally well other advantages, but still, I think, that these few prove that the adoption of such a method by our State means the salvation of many human souls. In New Jersey the Probation Officer is still in his infancy but he is sure to grow and he will certainly gain strength as he matures. To show what headway he has already gained, I will mention the results obtained in Essex county. Here the Probation Officer was first elected on April 1, 1900, and since that time he has had one hundred and ninety-three persons under his care. One hundred and eighty-four have been male offenders and only nine female. It is remarkable that but fifteen of this number have broken their probation in any way. Fifteen is a comparatively small number to go wrong, when we consider the temptations which beset the weak and strong alike. Had it not been for the Officer, undoubtedly these offenders would have served some time in the Penitentiary, lost their self-respect and been pushed further down the road of sin. One can not help but see the good worked by such a method. It is next to impossible for one to go astray, when he knows that he is on his honor to do the right thing and that he must report at stated times to the one who is so kindly helping him to live right. Thus we are proud that our State has adopted such a noble and loyal way of helping her children to surmount their difficulties. She is simply teaching them to have courage, for "Heaven is not gained by a single bound,

But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies.
And mount to its summit round by round."

By his sympathetic words and fatherly care the Probation Officer encourages and saves many a wavering soul by teaching them that

"There are gallant men in the losing fight,
And as gallant deeds are done
As ever graced the captured height,
Or a battle grandly won."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 24—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—Freedom for service.—II Tim. ii. 1; Gal. v. 1; Heb. xii. 1, 2.

God saves us not altogether for the sake of saving us, but also that our lives may be consecrated to Him. We are saved to serve. In the twelfth chapter of Romans Paul says, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." That this consecration and this service may be performed to the fullest extent it is absolutely necessary that we should be free and untrammeled in our service. That freedom for service is necessary Paul suggests to Timothy by the illustration of the soldier. "No man that warreth and tangleth himself with the affairs of life that he may please Him hath chosen him to be a soldier." No soldier can be entangled with other affairs in life. He must give himself up entirely to the service; he must be free from worldly cares and avocations or it will be absolutely impossible for him to produce the best results as a soldier. The same thing is true of the Christian soldier. To be a good soldier of Jesus Christ we must have freedom for service.

We must be free from affairs of this life. There is nothing that so much interferes with the active Christian service as unnecessary association with the things of this world. A spirit of worldliness crushes out a spirit of consecration and service. An unwise indulgence even in the harmless things of life seriously interferes with the faithful performance of our obligations and our duties to God. Unnecessary worries about the cares and the business pursuits of life deprive us of the power to serve God as we ought to serve Him. While in the world we are not to be of the world to the extent that our relations with the world interfere with the performance of our duties to God.

2. We should be free from false conceptions of the law. "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberties wherewith Christ hath made us free and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." The yoke of bondage here referred to was the bondage of the law. It was the conception of the ancient people of God that they were to be saved by the observance of the law. The result was that they became slaves to the law. It usurped the place in their lives that Christ should have had, and it was impossible under these conditions for them to render the cheerful and whole hearted service to God that was His due. The lives of many Christian people have been made miserable and they have been made incompetent for service by a false attitude toward the law. He has no idea of God as a kind and loving Father or a realization of the fact that Christ had kept the law for him and had paid the penalty for it on the cross. The result was that his life was miserable and he was unfitted for the joyful service of God. He is not only when the scales fell from his eyes and he lived in the liberty wherewith Christ made him free that he was enabled to perform great service to God. Christians are not above the law; they are not immune from the penalties of the law, and yet in Christ they possess a freedom from it that should inspire them to better lives and should give them greater liberty for effective and whole hearted service.

3. We should be besetting sins. "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." All sins have not the same attractive power for all people. What tempts one man may have no temptation for another. In each one of our lives are besetting sins or sins that easily beset themselves about us. The apostle here likens the form of such sins to the flowing robe of the Grecian athlete. We can easily understand how the runner would be hindered in the race if he had about him the loose, flowing garments of the Greek. It would wrap itself so closely about him as to hinder his every movement. Such is the result of besetting sins in the life of service. If they are allowed to have power and influence with us, they hinder us and destroy our powers for effective service. That we may be free to serve it is therefore important that we should lay aside all cares and all besetting sins and that we should look to Christ for the power to overcome besetting sins and to continue in the life of faithfulness and of patient service.

The Main Battlefield.

The main battlefield is the one which moves about with us, go where we will in society, the dingy and inglorious oftentimes that we would like to flee it altogether and lose ourselves in some great campaign which should keep us from ever being reminded of it again! Great things have sometimes been done by men who never won the battle of their own natures, but they are the standing incongruity and puzzle of the moral world. When the thing we want to do has outrun the thing we want to be, our thought about life has ceased to be real and moral and essential, and God and men will forgive us all the delay that is necessary in order for us to go back into that battlefield of our own souls.—Sunday School Times.

The Test.

The test of a fine character is attention to the minutiæ of conduct—to do the little commonplace service of love, the cheerful word, the cup of cold water, when rendered not grudgingly or of necessity.—Friend.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 24, "Freedom For Service"—Text, II Tim. ii, 4; Gal. v, 1; Heb. xii, 1, 2.

It is a matter of common remark that many Christians do not live up to their duty. They neither enjoy nor increase in efficiency nor do much of any distinctively Christian work. The unconverted see little difference between themselves and such Christians and have little respect for such piety or attraction toward it.

The difficulty is that these Christians are in bondage. They may be unwilling to acknowledge the fact, but, however it may be disguised, it is still true that they lack freedom in God's service.

This has been one of the difficulties which the followers of Christ have met from the first and probably will meet to the end. It is not an easy task to give the life completely up to the service of God. Many prefer to serve in the militia rather than in the regular army. There is an attractiveness in volunteer service, a sense of independence which does not attach to the other. Some chafe under the sense of pledged responsibility and feel a constraint in being held closely to duty. They wish to be free, as they express it. The root of the trouble lies in the lack of the early discipline of obedience and self control. Instead of getting a real freedom, they are always chafing under restraint and never settle their shoulders into the yoke to pull the load.

Freedom for service comes first from a willing mind determined to fulfill all needful conditions and to compel success. It is willing to work hard if by such effort the results can be reached. It wants to be a good soldier. So it enlists and settles down to study military science and to practice the soldierly arts. It is not content with playing soldier and an occasional drill in the evening after the day's work is done and one week's encampment a year with home comforts. The one who really wishes to be a soldier of Jesus Christ is ready to lay aside the worldly lusts and entanglements and settle down to serious work.

Indolence is one of the most serious hindrances to all progress. No one gets ability to speak or pray without effort if the speaking and praying really amount to anything. Knowledge of the nature of the Christian life does not come spontaneously to any one. Some never master it because they will not apply themselves. The practice of the virtues of Christian speech and Christian life is not spontaneous than it should be because of the dislike to get down to earnest application. It is hard routine to drill the lips to speak the truth and only kind words. It is irksome to many to cut off the questionable and frivolous reading, amusements, and companionship, and it is much easier to drift down stream than to row against the current that many drift, but that is not freedom, nor is it permanently enjoyable.

Our enjoyment and sense of worthiness can be satisfied only as we put forth our best powers. Freedom is in the full exercise of all faculties. In the full swing of power comes keen joy. In time of battle we get results for all the long drill and are satisfied as we win.

How God Helps Us.

"God is my helper" is a truth as old as the Bible and confirmed by myriads of testimonies. It is very important for us to know how our loving Father helps us, for we may expect things that He never grants and lose things that He offers to give us. There are a right way and a wrong way of looking at God's dealings; that which sets us to murmuring and complaining, the other gives us a wonderful uplift. If we looked at God as always wise and always loving and always holy, we should know, in the first place, that life often helps us by a sharp discipline that tries us most terribly. It helps the grass on my lawn in summer to put the mower over it, and it helps my grapevines to apply the pruning knife. As best befits a steamer's fires been more briskly under the boilers, so adversity often drives a true Christian ahead in his spiritual life. Everything that makes you and me purer, humbler, braver, stronger or holier is a mighty help, and if we keep the eye of faith open we shall see a loving God behind the pruning knife and behind the furnace of affliction.—Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler in Evangelist.

Vacant Churches.

We have a distressing way of talking about "vacant" pulpits and "vacant" churches. It is an unfortunate part of our overemphasis of the place of a minister in our various systems of church polity. It is of a piece with the talk about "dying" churches. A church is not vacant until the holy Spirit has left it. As long as through humble hearts there is evidence of the divine indwelling a church is great and rich. A log cabin with a simple hearted layman's prayer and exposition of the word of God may glow with dignity and glory of a temple, while a gorgeous architectural pile with a superb organ and an intellectually gifted preacher may be "vacant" indeed.—Congregationalist.

The Big Rewards of Life.

The man who sees in life the opportunity to express himself in the largest terms, who after ascertaining what faculties he has determines to develop them to the highest possible efficiency, who is capable of seeing the sweetness and joy that lie all about him, who, being proud, does not allow his body or mind to be defiled—he is the one who obtains the big rewards, the big successes.—Oppenheim, "Mental Growth and Control."

A PLAINFIELDER TURNS FARMER

Edward E. Anthony's Successful Search for Renewed Health Among Dutchess County Hills.

Ordered by his physician to seek renewed health in outdoor life, Edward E. Anthony left Plainfield last March thin and hollow eyed, with his nervous system in a state of collapse. Today he looks sturdy and bronzed and capable of tackling anything. While Mr. Anthony's friends might recognize the well-known Plainfielder in the energetic farmer of Dutchess county, New York, who daily supplies the larger merchants of Matteawan and Fishkill Landing with some of the best of their vegetables and fruit, the task would be a difficult one if they did not happen to be looking for him in that guise. The few months of country life have done wonders and Mr. Anthony is feeling far better than he has for some time, yet it will take time to regain all his former strength and health.

Edward E. Anthony.

While it was generally known that Mr. Anthony had located on a farm near Fishkill Village, there are few who know how comfortably he is quartered. Fishkill Village, which is seven miles inland from Fishkill Landing, was the old home of the Anthony family. Seven miles further from the Hudson river is the new home of Mr. Anthony. It is a mile from the nearest postoffice, Wiccopee, which has only recently risen to that dignity from the more old fashioned Johnsville. Two miles away is Brinkerhoff, the nearest railroad station on a branch of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

Myrtlawn, as Mr. Anthony's home is called, is located right in the heart of the richest truck farms of Dutchess county. There is a tract of sixty acres on which he raises a great variety of vegetables and fruit. With the aid of a young farmhand, Mr. Anthony has already had remarkable success and has won for himself a reputation for the best with the dealers of Fishkill and Matteawan. The house itself is not at all what one might expect to find there. The former owner spent a fortune in trying to outdo all her neighbors. She succeeded but her fortune was gone and the farm had to pass into other hands as well. It is an immense house, with many large rooms and every modern convenience. It is fully the equal of any city residence. It stands in a grove of large trees, flanked by a garden and with an orchard in the rear.

In order that Mr. Anthony's friends might see how he looks, the accompanying photograph was taken of him in his garden by The Daily Press' own artist. It is an excellent likeness. It is not difficult to see that country life agrees with him. Mr. Anthony is well-known here having been prominent as an officer in the old volunteer Alert Hose Company and in Fourth ward Republican circles. He was a deacon of Trinity Reformed church, superintendent of the Sunday-school there for eighteen years and has held offices in the City, County and State Unions of Christian Endeavorers. In the last connection, he is well known throughout the State.

With Mr. Anthony are the members of his family, his wife, his daughters, Matie R. and Mae E., and his son, Ned. They are all in good health and have made many pleasant acquaintances. Most enthusiastic of all is little Ned who takes a keen enjoyment in assisting his father on the farm.

TROLLEY PARTY.

Retail Clerks' Association Making Extensive Preparations for Its Last Outing.

The Retail Clerks' Association will give the last trolley excursion of the season to Riverside Park on Thursday evening, August 28. An effort will be made to make it one of the best of any thus far given and the committee has made arrangements with the owners of this park for the use of the pretty theatre and new dance hall for the evening.

The trolley cars will leave the North Avenue station of the trolley line at 7:15 o'clock and will arrive at Riverside Park one hour later. The performance at the theatre will last about one hour, after which the dancing will be commenced and continued until 11:30 o'clock. Those who do not care for dancing will find other amusements equally as interesting. A nominal fee will be charged for the round trip and entrance to the theatre.

The committee in charge consists of Albert Koch, H. P. Greenwood, A. C. Hoagland, James McLean, Joseph Plum and Edward Baker.

ROOSEVELT EXPECTED.

Will be at Northfield to Address the Moody School There September 1.

The announcement of the programme for the post-conference addresses which are to follow the general conference at Northfield, Mass., has just been made. The conference closes on August 17, and the post-conference addresses begin on the nineteenth and last until September 7. President Roosevelt while on his New England trip will stop off at Northfield on September 1. It is planned to have the President speak in the Auditorium to the Northfield people, and later he will address the 500 students who will be at the young men's school founded by D. L. Moody at Mt. Hermon. The President's visit is most opportune for those who wish to stay over from the general conference, or have postponed their trip to Northfield till the last of August or early part of September. Rev. F. B. Meyer, of London, will give an address each day until August 29, after which other well-known preachers have arranged to speak. The post-conference work is the fifth and last of the Northfield conferences for this year, and its close will end, both in respect to the thousands who have attended, and the seeming good accomplished, one of the most remarkable series of religious gatherings ever held.

FINEST CAR SHOPS IN ENTIRE COUNTRY

Such the New Shops of the Jersey Central Railroad at Elizabethport.

NEARING COMPLETION.

INTERESTING DETAILS ABOUT THIS REMARKABLE COLONY.

Largest Modern Repair Shops in the Country — Passenger Car and Paint Shops Now Under Construction—Other Details.

The Elizabethport shops of the Central Railroad of New Jersey will be, when completed, says the Elizabeth Journal the largest and best railroad shops in the country. At present there are only two shops of larger size, and they are old establishments, and have not an equipment to compare with that installed in the Central's plant. The portion of the plant now in operation includes the locomotive shop, the blacksmith shop, the storehouse, the oil house, and the round house. In process of construction are the passenger car shop, the paint shop, the lumber storage sheds and the water tank.

The passenger car shop is north of the round house, and on the west side of the transfer table. It is of concrete and expanded metal construction like the other building. It parallels the Newark branch for 400 feet and is 100 feet wide. Here all the repair work on the passenger coaches of the entire road will be done. It will be fitted up with a complete equipment for such work. It is extremely light, as the roof is covered with skylights and the east and west sides have many large windows. All the tracks in the shop run direct to the transfer table, where cars can be transferred to any part of the paint shop, which is being erected on the opposite side.

The paint shop is north of the blacksmith shop, is of the same construction, and is 320 feet long and 150 feet wide. The latter is not quite so far advanced as the paint shop. Both of the buildings are expected to be ready for occupancy by the middle of September. Here the passenger coaches will be painted and decorated in the latest style.

It is expected that when the paint and passenger shops are complete that work will be begun upon the pattern shop. The plans are prepared for the freight car shop, and it is expected that work on this shop will begin next spring. Here all the repairs will be made on the road's freight and coal cars.

The lumber storage sheds are now in process of erection. Here all the lumber used will be stored and seasoned. This is being done at present at the storage sheds at Somerville. When these sheds are complete the plant will be removed from Somerville to Elizabeth.

Along the Newark branch between the round house and the passenger car shops is being erected a round structure that has aroused a good deal of curiosity and speculation. The building is of concrete construction, and affords a good example of that method. Two circular wooden walls were erected, one inside of the other, forming a circle 8 feet through about 18 inches wide and 6 feet high. In this trough the concrete was placed and allowed to harden. When the lower section was thoroughly dry the wooden walls were raised, section by section, and the process repeated. This will be kept up until the desired height is obtained. On the top of the concrete structure will be placed a large tank. This will be kept filled with water for fire purposes and will be of such a height as to afford adequate protection from fire. The tank will also be used to supply water for general purposes at any time that the city water supply may fail.

The fence which will surround the plant will be started next week. Four thousand three hundred and seventy feet of picket fence six feet high, with two rows of barbed wire fencing on the top will guard the north side of the grounds. On the east side there will be erected 3,600 feet of barbed wire fencing. Thus the fence will be over a mile and a half long.

The shops for repair shops have an up-to-date equipment. All large machines are equipped with their own electric motors. Smaller machines are grouped and one motor is placed to supply the group. Compressed air is used to run all sorts of hand tools. Electric cranes travel up and down the shop, moving everything from the heaviest freight locomotive to the smallest casting. Some of the statistics of the power employed at the shops are given by W. L. Harrison, the superintendent. Mr. Harrison was formerly connected with the Great Northern system, and is a railroad man of wide experience.

There are 150 motors in the blacksmith and machine shops, of a total horsepower of 1,300. There are five electric cranes in the big shops. Two have a capacity of fifty tons, one a capacity of ten tons. One hundred and ten arc lights and 300 incandescent lights furnish the illumination. In the power house are three Ball & Wood engines 16x16 inches, making 250 revolutions per minute. At present but two of the engines are being used, the third being held in reserve for an emergency. Each of the engines is directly connected with a Sprague generator. The three generators have a capacity of 1,245 amperes. There is room in the engine room for the installation of three more engines of like capacity.

There are also installed two air compressors, made by the Ingersoll-Sergeant Drill Company, with a capacity of 960 cubic feet of free air per minute. Only one of the compressors is now being used, the other being in reserve. Steam is generated in four batteries of Babcock & Wilcox boilers, of 250 horse power each. There is room for two more batteries, thus increasing the present horse power of 1,000 to 1,500. Forced draught is used in the boiler room, and thus the use of a tall smoke stack is avoided.

The shops are heated by the indirect system of steam heating. The cold air is forced over the steam coils and then distributed through ducts along the ceiling, having openings controlled by dampers at frequent intervals. In the machine shop about a mile of steam pipe is needed to warm the building. In the blacksmith shop about a half mile is used. The steam used is the exhaust from the engines. All the rainwater falling on the buildings is collected in a huge cistern, 75 feet in diameter and 16 feet feet in depth. With the pipes, it has a capacity of 500,000 gallons.

In about three weeks a new riveter will be installed in the locomotive shop. It is to be operated by compressed air instead of hydraulic pressure as is commonly used. The success of this new departure will be watched with great interest by the mechanical world. The foundations for the big machine are now being prepared. It will cost $8,000 when erected. The value of the entire plant at present is about $650,000, and when complete it will easily exceed the million mark. The pay roll of the shops alone, not including the contractors' men at work on the new construction, is over $30,000 monthly.

Since the new repair shops have been in operation there has been a marked decrease in the number of breakdowns in the locomotives employed by the road. Where mishaps were around the hundred mark a month they are now under a score. Trains are now arriving at the stations ahead of time. The new locomotives that the road has recently put in service have the speed and power to do this and the Port shops are going to keep them in that condition as long as it is possible for that to be done.

HAS HUMOROUS SIDE.

Charity Work Sometimes Calls Forth Laughter or Smiles.

A Case of Pride and Coal Reported from New York—A Happy Reconciliation — How Mike Wanted to Be Helped.

How flexible and adaptable in its methods and how difficult to reduce to fast rules and principles the work of a great charity is, is illustrated by a few typical anecdotes which have been prepared by the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor. The following are reported by the New York Post:

Two sisters, unusually large, powerful women, applied for coal. When visited they admitted that they had plenty of work, but some neighbor had "got it," and they wanted some, too. Seeing that there was not the shadow of an excuse for their asking for the coal, the visitor began to explain why they should not have it given to them, appealing to their pride, when, in reply, one of them shrieked at her:

"Pride, did you say? Well, I'll tell you what, miss; you can have the pride and we'll take the coal."

Visits of investigation frequently result in lasting good to the beneficiaries, as in the case of a woman who asked for sewing to do at home, because it was difficult for her to go out. It was found that this "difficulty" was caused by the lack of a thick-soled boot, one leg having been shortened through a fracture which she had sustained several years ago. It was decided at once to supply this need, but a visit was first made to her "only relative," a sister, to see if she was in a position to help. She, too, was poor, but it was learned from her that there was a brother somewhere in the city with whom they were not on good terms, and whom the sisters had not seen for years. Through the city directory he was traced and found to be in comfortable circumstances.

TOO STOUT FOR COOKING.

When his sister's condition was tactfully presented to him, he expressed gratitude for this opportunity of learning her address, which he "had lost," and said that he would immediately attend to the need. He kept his word, and a reconciliation was effected between these elderly people, which did the lame woman even more good than the shoe.

A visitor, upon her first call, found at home a huge Irishman, comfortably eating a dinner of potatoes and codfish, his wife, a thin, faded little woman, and several pale young children, looking on. An equally thin, half-fed looking boy, of 14, the main support of this family of ten, was at work in a factory, being his noon lunch hour, and had just finished his bread and tea, and was reading "Dombey and Son." Upon inquiry as to what their trouble was, the meek little woman waited for the head of the house to speak. In a few seconds he waved to her to explain, as he evidently did not wish his dinner interrupted, so she said that "Mike didn't seem to be able to get no work at all." The visitor promptly and cheerfully replied that the society could help him in that respect immediately, and would give him tickets to the wood yard. "Mike" suddenly became interested, and said that he did not know about taking the tickets, as he had never done that kind of work, but added: "I'll tell you what would help—if you'll just get my wife some work."

A rather difficult case to plan for and assist in is that of a woman of large size, who has grown to enormous size, having passed the 400-pound mark. She worked as cook, and, during her earlier years, supported her delicate mother and sisters, until they died. She grew too stout to keep her place in a boarding house, and some friends gave her a little furniture with which to make a home for herself. She absolutely refused to consider going into a museum, which every one advised, and is now modestly trying to make a living at washing. As she cannot walk a block without being utterly exhausted and creating a good deal of amusement for the neighborhood, she took in a homeless, feeble-minded old woman, whose business it was to go out to call for and deliver her work; and this combination promises well, as the old woman required very little food or clothing. But one day the feeble-minded old woman wandered off, and now she sleeps in a sitting room, endeavoring to get on with the occasional help of a neighbor's boy, who treats the situation as a huge joke.

SEWAGE PLANT IS EXAMINED

Expert of State Sewage Commission Makes a Report on Plainfield's Disposal Beds.

IS VERY SATISFACTORY.

Process, According to the Report, Accomplished a Reduction of 87 Per Cent. in Number of Bacteria —The Purposible Matter Was Entirely Eluminated.

Jersey City, August 15—Thomas Le Clear, the expert chemist who was appointed by the State Sewerage Commission to investigate the working of Plainfield's sewage disposal plant, has completed his labors and made his report to the commission. In May, 1900, the commission received from the Health Board of Dunellen a complaint that Green brook was being polluted by the effluent from Plainfield's disposal works. The commission looked into the matter and notified the authorities of Plainfield that the beds were in an unsatisfactory condition and the board trusted that prompt action would be taken to remedy the evil by placing the beds in proper condition.

The Plainfield authorities did as requested and built a new disposal plant, consisting of a septic tank with contact filter beds. Septic tanks are still in the experimental stage and it was for the purpose of ascertaining how well the Plainfiled plant does the work expected of it that the investigation was ordered.

Mr. Le Clear's report is voluminous and goes into the matter minutely. He gives a table showing the number of bacteria in a cubic centimeter of the crude sewage effluent from the septic tank and effluent from the contact beds in June, 1902. From this it is seen that in the septic tank the crude sewage lost 58 per cent. of the bacteria present and on the contact beds there was a further loss of 29 per cent., so that the final effluent contained 31 per cent. of the number of bacteria in the original crude sewage.

The chemist concludes that the intestinal bacteria are not destroyed by the septic treatment, and water into which this sewage effluent is allowed to flow is not suitable for drinking and general domestic use.

The report then sets forth the results of several tests, which are thus summed up:—"The results of these tests fully affirm the conclusions reached from the consideration of the composition as shown by chemical analysis, namely, the sewage modified by treatment is so changed as to render it less putrestile and so less objectionable for introduction into natural streams."

The results of the chemist's observations are summarized as follows:—"The treatment accomplished a reduction of 87 per cent. in the number of bacteria. This reduction was not accompanied by a complete removal of the objectionable bacteria, at least 10,000 intestinal bacteria being still present in a centimeter of the final product. From this it follows that the resulting product was unsafe for introduction into water that is subsequently to be used for the head of the house to speak. In a few seconds he waved to her to explain, as he evidently did not wish his dinner interrupted, so she said that "Mike didn't seem to be able to get no work at all." The visitor promptly and cheerfully replied that the society could help him in that respect immediately, and would give him tickets to the wood yard. "Mike" suddenly became interested, and said that he did not know about taking the tickets, as he had never done that kind of work, but added: "I'll tell you what would help—if you'll just get my wife some work."

"The septic tank much of the crude sewage was brought into solution. In the contact beds much of the organic matter of the crude sewage was oxidized.

"Owing to these changes the organic matter in the final product was no longer putresible under the conditions that existed in the sewage. From this it follows that the product resulting from the treatment is free at least from the objection that is associated with crude sewage and that its introduction into natural waters will not result in the production of the great degree of filth that results from the introduction of crude sewage."

The commission will consider the report at its next meeting.

Conkling, of the Safe Works, will reside on Mariners avenue in October.

Is Golf Catching

on to popular favor? It seems to be. A noticable increase in sales of Painkiller comes from golf districts. The reason for this is clear, as Perry Davis' Painkiller is the oldest and best remedy extant for sprains, strains, bruises and soreness, all of which are of common occurrence; either in vigorous play or through accident. TREED BY MAD BUCK.

Disagreeable Plight of a Man Who Played Good Samaritan to an Injured Fawn.

Olen Bowles, of Costello, Pa., will never stop again to be Good Samaritan to a deer in trouble.

He works for the big tannery company there. He was in the woods one day recently looking over a bark contract.

Passing along an old woods road he saw a fawn lying in a clump of bushes. As the fawn did not move he walked up to it and found that it was bleeding from an injury in its shoulder.

With the intention of taking the wounded fawn home with him and doctoring it, Bowles was stooping to lift it up in his arms when the frightened little animal began bleating piteously. It had scarcely uttered its first cry when Bowles heard a commotion in the brush, and looking up saw two deer, a big buck and a doe, bounding toward him.

THE BUCK ON GUARD.

The buck had on a fierce front, the bristle on his neck standing erect and his eyes blazed with fury. Bowles hastily climbed a tree. He got out of range of the buck just in time to escape a savage lunge from his horns.

The doe took the fawn away into the wood. The buck, however, stayed right at the foot of the tree and pranced and snorted around it at every move Bowles made, keeping him there until long after dark.

When he thought the buck had gone away Bowles slipped down out of the tree and started to put behind him the three miles that lay between that spot and home as quickly as his legs would let him. He hadn't gone 50 yards, though, before the buck was after him. Dodging from tree to tree Bowles made his way along until a man answered his cries for help. Then the buck abandoned the chase.

The settler who went to Bowles' rescue said the buck was a terror of that neighborhood and known to the hunters as Old Golden.

CONDUCTOR WAS WITTY.

Didn't Care Whether Passenger Was Man or Monkey So Long as He Paid the Fare.

The street-car conductor with a talent for repartee of the neat and polished order is very rare and note should be made of him when found. A dissatisfied passenger found one out in the neighborhood of Bronx park last week.

"TWO, MA'AM?"

says the New York Times, when two women who had been trying to get to the zoological show complained of the difficulty they had had in eliciting any information about its whereabouts.

"Yes, madam," the dissatisfied man—a stranger to them—chimed in, "I can quite sympathize with you. The fact is, I don't believe these conductors know the difference between botanical gardens and zoological. I doubt if any of them could even tell a monkey from a man."

"Fares, please," said the conductor, cutting the conversation just at that point. "Fares, please. None of our business what you are so long as you pay your fare. Two, ma'am?"

Death Caused by Hatpins.

Leone Jeodle, for two years a novice in a convent at Flushing, L. I., died after a long and mysterious illness. An autopsy was performed, and in the region of the heart and piercing the pericardium was found a headless steel hatpin four and a quarter inches long. In the stomach was found part of another hatpin one and a quarter inches long, also headless. The young woman had complained of pains in the stomach since 1896, but died without having mentioned the cause of her illness.

CHILDS FAVORED TO RUN AGAINST LANNING

A Conference of Democratic Leaders in Fourth District Favors Somerset Man.

CHILDS OR DARK HORSE.

THAT IS THE SENTIMENT EXPRESSED BY PROMINENT POLITICAN.

Mercer County Will Not Have a Candidate, While Hunterdon Wants Childs If He Will Accept the Nomination.

Flemington, September 15, is the place and date fixed upon by the Democratic managers for the Congressional convention for the Fourth district, embracing Mercer, Hunterdon and Somerset counties. A conference was held at Belmar, recently, at which the Congressional situation was discussed, and while there was no agreement to support any one of a multitude of names suggested, the concensus of opinion seemed to be that S. S. Childs, of Somerset county, would be the candidte, if he can be induced to stand. The conference was called by the members of the old Congressional committee of Hunterdon and Somerset counties.

Mercer county did not have a Democratic Congressional committee. Mayor Frank S. Katzenbach, as the recognized head of the local Democracy, was in attendance, and among the other Trenton Democrats at the meeting were former Senator Jonathan H. Blackwell, who has been regarded as a strong possibility for the Congressional nomination; Richard Stockton, who is likely to be nominated for county clerk; Counsellor John H. Backes and Tax Receiver E. Furman Hooper.

Mr. Childs is known to be ambitious to come to the State Senate as the representative of Somerset county, but a strong effort will be made to get him to accept the Congressional nomination. He is looked upon as one of the very strongest men, in the district. Mercer county will have at least a portion of its Republican majority offset by the Democratic majority of Hunterdon county, and the Democrats are of the opinion that if they can get a strong Somerset county man to lead the fight, they can carry that county and elect a Congressman.

Former Senator Blackwell declared to a reporter that he was positively out of the canvass, and would not be a candidate under any condition. His business interests are such as to require him to be in Trenton most of the time. From what could be learned of the discussion at the conference, it also seems pretty well settled that the other Mercer county men who have been heretofore mentioned will not receive serious consideration.

"If it is not Childs it will be a dark horse," declared a leading Democrat. "We have a man in mind who would make a good run, and you can put it down that the Democrats will give their political opponents one of the fights of their lives. We expect to name first-class men for every office, with a view of electing them. It will not be a case this time of putting up candidates for the mere formality of the thing. We are going in to win, and we believe that we have a very good chance, inasmuch as there seems to be a general feeling of dissatisfaction with the party now controlling the local situation."

The convention is to be held in the Flemington county courthouse, where former Judge William M. Lanning was named by the Republicans last week as their standard bearer. The lateness of the convention will make the campaign of little more than a month's duration, but the Democrats are preparing to make things fly while the campaign is on.

THEATRICAL.

With almost the whole of the summer past, Keith's bills still retain their prominent position in vaudeville and Keith's audiences far from showing depleted ranks, are still the marvel and despair of all other managers who essay to present vaudeville. Next week the headliners and a remarkable bill will be Sheehan and Warren, who presents their famous "Quo Vadis Upside Down," a travesty upon the famous play which has made people laugh over the world. The Sandor Trio, in their thrilling acrobatic feats; the Exposition Four, who will delight all music lovers; the Nichol Sisters, two very attractive girls who care so little for their appearance that they do their songs and dances in blackface; John H. V. Byrne, the celebrated monologue artist; Whalen and Otto, celebrated for Dutch comedy; Susie Fisher, vocalist; and eighteen other strong acts, among which are imported novelties, as well as good domestic acts, complete the bill.

OLD RESIDENTS KNEW JOHN DUNNING WELL

News of His Sudden Death at Lake Sunapee, New Hampshire, Has Reached Here.

ONCE IN BUSINESS HERE.

CONDUCTED A CARRIAGE PAINT SHOP FOR MANY YEARS.

Since His Departure From Plainfield, Mr. Dunning Often Visited His Old Friend, John B. Brown, of Park Avenue.

Plainfielders of the last generation will remember John H. Dunning, for many years a resident and business man of this city. Word has been received of his sudden death of heart failure at the summer home of his son at Lake Sunapee, New Hampshire, Monday, August 11.

Half a century ago, Mr. Dunning was a prominent figure in local business circles. The firm of Heath & Dunning, carriage painters, as early as 1846, occupied the only building on West Fourth street between Park and Central avenues, now known as the old French house. At that time Park avenue ended at Fourth street, turning at that point into the latter thoroughfare. In 1846, J. B. Brown, of Park avenue, also came to Plainfield, from Somerville, and he worked with Mr. Dunning for a number of years before starting for himself on Somerset street.

Shortly afterwards, the firm of Heath & Dunning was dissolved, and Mr. Dunning took the upper part of the shop used by Mr. Brown. The latter sold out his business in 1875, but Mr. Dunning remained at the place a number of years later. In 1887, he broke up his home on Duer street, and went to New York, where his son and daughter were both engaged in school work. The three had been living together ever since. Mrs. Dunning died at the Duer street home.

After removing from the city, Mr. Dunning was a frequent visitor here, especially at the home of his old friend, Mr. Brown. On his last trip here, he complained of the trouble he was having with his heart, and Mr. Brown felt then that he might never see his guest alive again.

While prepared in a measure for the news of his friend's death, Mr. Brown was somewhat shocked by the suddenness of the event. He has many pleasant memories of the times spent in the workshop or about Plainfield with Mr. Dunning and indulges in numerous reminiscences of their past. The dead man would have been seventy-nine years old in October. He leaves a daughter, Miss Matilda, and a son, William A., at whose home he died.

SUSSEX'S CLAIM.

Member of Board Says State Sanitarium Is Not Located Anywhere As Yet.

A strong effort is being made to have the projected State Sanitarium for Consumptives located in Sussex county, the claim being made that the climatic conditions in certain parts of that county are superior to any in the State for the treatment of tuberculosis.

The board of managers of the sanitarium will send a committee to make an other investigation into conditions in Sussex county with a view of giving that place further consideration. It is probable that the board will be ready to report on a site at its meeting to be held in the latter part of September.

Dr. Elmer Barwis, a member of the board, declared that there was no warrant for the statement that a farm had been purchased in Hunterdon county for a site for the hospital. He said that the board had given that section of the State serious consideration, but no purchase has been made, nor was there any certainty that a site would be selected in Hunterdon.

MAY INHERIT FAIR MILLIONS

New Market Directly Interested in Doubly Fatal Automobile Accident in France.

WHO MRS. C. L. FAIR WAS

Disposition of California Millionaire's Fortune Depends on Whether Husband or Wife Died First—Mrs. Fair Was Daughter of Mrs. Hannah Nelson, of New Market.

Tragedy trailing after an automobile near Evreux, France, Thursday, spread grief through the upper circles of this country and touched the nearby village of New Market most deeply with its terrible tidings. In the sudden death of Mrs. Charles L. Fair, with her husband, the California millionaire, Mrs. Hannah Nelson, of New Market, has lost a daughter. As a result of the disaster, all the Fair millions may revert to the young woman's relatives in this section.

Enthusiasm over the subject of automobiles was the indirect cause of the accident. When Mr. Fair and his wife left San Francisco in May for their trip abroad, it was mainly for the purpose of securing something new and fast in the way of a machine. It was in a newly purchased one of forty-five horse power that the couple were riding when they met their death. Some mishap to the steering apparatus is thought to have been the cause of the accident. The big car, speeding along at the rate of sixty-two miles an hour, suddenly swerved from the chauffeur's control and plunged into a large tree at the road-side. Both Mr. and Mrs. Fair were hurled through the air with terrific force and almost instantly killed.

Interest in various sections has long been rife over the checkered career of the son of the late Senator Fair, the silver king. Young Charles, who was only thirty-five at the time of his death, had traveled a fast pace since his boyhood. He was married in 1898 to Miss Caroline Smith, then living in Chicago under the name of Maude Nelson. Fair was disinherited by his father because of the marriage, but a reconciliation was afterwards effected at the deathbed of the father.

Mrs. Fair was the daughter of Mrs. Hannah Nelson by her first husband. Of the second number of children, all the sons, Abram, Fred, Frank and Herbert, are well known in this city and vicinity.

Mrs. Joseph Harvey, of New York, one of Mrs. Fair's most intimate friends, is authority for the statement that the greater part of the Fair millions will now go to the Nelsons. She says: "Mrs. Fair took good care of her relatives. She bought homes for them, established her brothers in business, made her mother comfortably rich, provided for the education of her nephews and nieces and settled monthly allowances on all the members of the family. Now her will is to convey Charles Fair's millions to them, for she told me that her husband had made a will leaving all the property to her and making her executrix without bonds, and that she had at the same time made a will giving all her estate to her relatives in New Jersey." Mrs. Harvey states further that Mrs. Fair's will named her mother, her brother, William Smith, and her half-brother, Abraham Nelson, both of New Market, as legatees.

On the question as to which of the couple died first, depends the disposition of the estate. If it can be shown that Mrs. Fair outlived her husband, all the vast property is hers, and will be distributed according to the terms of her will. Even if the wife be shown to have died first, the wealth which she held in her own name is believed to be enough to make a most generous legacy.

Under the law of California, when a man and his wife are the victims of a common calamity, and there is no evidence as to which died first, the man is supposed to have lived the longer. In such a case, the property would go to Mr. Fair's relatives, on the presumption that he died a widower.

ATE MANY CLAMS.

Outing at Allen's Grove Was Attended by a Hundred People—The Menu.

One hundred people were fed at a clam bake at Allen's Grove, near the end of the trolley line on Somerset street Sunday. Members of the "Old Oaken Bucket Society" were the hosts of the occasion. The bake was not served till 3 o'clock, but there was feeding all day. On the menu there were clams, in five or six varities, crabs, water melon, corn, chicken, fish, lobsters, and a whole lot of stuff falling under the head et cetera. Those present say the bake was a howling success, far surpassing the Republican jamboree at Galvin's recently.

The "Old Oaken Bucket Society" is a quiet, unassuming social organization that seldom comes before the public eye. The president of the society is Richard Boyce, vice president, Andrew Carney; treasurre, W. K. McClure.

BABCOCK PLANS APPROVED

BUILDING INSPECTOR DOANE PASSED FAVORABLY ON THEM YESTERDAY.

The New Structure Does Not Materially Differ From the Old Building.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane yesterday approved of the plans filed for the re-erection of the burned portion of the Babcock building. The building will be practically the same as before. The question as to whether or not the fire walls shall be constructed through the roof is left unsettled until the erection of the same, but it is agreed that they shall be constructed to meet the requirements of the building inspector and board of fire underwriters. Ernest F. Guilbert is the architect who drew the plans.

The first floor will remain unchanged, except for a few repairs. The second and third floors have a row of offices along Madison avenue and Front streets, with similar rows directly across the corridor, light being provided by a large open shaft. The same arrangement is true of the fourth floor, except that provision is made for a banquet hall.

The fifth story will have on Madison avenue a lodge room, reception, smoking and ante room. On Front street there will be another lodge room and also a second banquet hall. In the rear will be situated an art gallery, with exhibition rooms, studio and dark room.

Dispensing with the bow windows on Front street will be the only material difference in the exterior of the building. But within the finishings with the marble work, mirrors, painting and decorating will be palatial. The plumbing, electric wiring, conduiting, steam heating and plumbing apparatus will be of the most approved and modern variety.

No contracts have yet been let for any part of the construction, but some contractors are now figuring on sets of plans that have been sent out for the purpose.

ATTRACTIVE SERVICE.

Enjoyable Programme at the Park Avenue Baptist Church Sunday-School.

Superintendent George E. Hall presided at the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school Sunday. The lesson was taught from the desk by George H. Krause, of Cranford. There was a cornet solo and cornet accompaniment throughout by DeWitt Frazee.

A vocal quartette, Miss Adelaide Runyon, Miss Etta Cuming, Harry F. Cuming and George F. Watts, sang special music. The hymn, "More About Jesus," chosen by Mrs. Nelson Runyon's class as class song, was sung as a solo, the school joining in the chorus. Closing remarks were made by Rev. A. B. Dills, Lowell, Mass., a former pastor of the Park Avenue church. Souvenir programmes were presented to all present.

TOLD ABOUT MACKAY

British Death Duty May Be Imposed on His Estate.

Mackay Mausoleum at Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, Is a Princely Tomb—Millionaire Was a Good Fighter.

Estimates published in London put the late John W. Mackay's fortune at $40,000,000 to $70,000,000, and in legal circles it is considered a nice point whether the British government is not entitled to claim a death duty of five per cent. on what Mrs. Mackay inherits under her husband's will, as, though not naturalized, she is domiciled in England. Then a death duty will have to be paid on all the testator's investments in English securities, so the chancellor of the exchequer calculates making a handsome haul out of his estate, as Mackay's English investments are said to be nearly $10,000,000.

His friends declare that four years ago, foreseeing a prospect of his estate being mulcted by the English treasury, owing to his wife being domiciled there, he asigned to her the greater part of the fortune he intended to bequeath to her, including his English investments, and that the remainder of his fortune goes to his son.

The Mackay mausoleum at Greenwood, Brooklyn, where the body of John W. Mackay will be laid at rest, is one of the most magnificent tombs in the world. It cost $300,000.

The mausoleum is situated on a promontory near the Ninth avenue entrance to the cemetery, facing the east. It is built of Hallowell granite, and is in the form of a Maltese cross, surmounted by a Grecian cross.

On each corner of the tomb is a large heroic group cast in bronze. The statues symbolize different attributes of sorrow and faith, death and life. With the exception of the carving on the cross surmounting the structure and the frieze around the pillars, the exterior is severely plain.

The entrances are guarded by four massive bronze doors. Fronting the main entrance is the altar. The base

THE MACKAY MAUSOLEUM.
(Said to Be the Most Expensive Tomb in the Country.)

is of white Carrara marble, and the altar proper is one large slab of black Irish marble from Connamara. It is a striking piece of work.

On the platform of the altar rest four columns of onyx, which are supported by two ornamentations of green small Irish marble. Between the ornamentations, over the altar, is a bas relief of pure yellow Carrara marble, representing the Virgin holding the infant Jesus in her arms. The figures are of nearly life size. Beneath the mother and child is the figure of a cherub.

Underneath the altar are two of the catacombs destined to receive the bodies of the Mackay family. Large bronze doors guard the entrance to these vaults. On the other side of the main chamber are arranged ten more tombs. Each one will be hermetically sealed as soon as an occupant is placed in it.

On each side of the tomb is a large solid pillar, arching overhead into fretwork. The sides are composed of many varieties of marble. The floor is of Italian mosaic, and a large arrangement of the family monogram included in it. The ceiling is of mosaic work in glass, and the side windows are of stained glass.

The dimensions of the tomb are 33 feet from side to side, 33 feet from front to rear, and 47 feet from base to summit.

That Mackay was a fighter physically as well as with his brains was shown on January 29, 1891, when he thrashed W. C. Bonynge, a San Francisco broker, in the president's room of the Nevada bank. Mr. Mackay thought he had reason to consider that certain cowardly attacks upon his wife had been instigated by the broker, and he beat him within an inch of his life.

Last year there were circulated in Japan alone over 128,000 copies

MASSACHUSETTS CAN'T SINK.

Survival of the Battleship After Some Narrow Escapes From Sudden Destruction.

The battleship Massachusetts has had more narrow escapes from destruction than most vessels survive. On December 10, 1898, she ran aground on the Diamond reef in New York harbor and sustained such damage that it cost close on $100,000 to repair her. In June, 1901, she made the perilous passage of Hell Gate and established a record for vessels of her draft by getting through in safety. Only one ship of any thing like her size had attempted it before, the ill-fated Maine, whose captain found himself in the position of choosing between running down an excursion steamer or running aground himself. He chose the latter alternative and saved many valuable lives, reports the New York Sun.

On another occasion she escaped injury as though by magic. She was on a trip from Nantucket to Newport when she touched the Five Fathom bank horseshoe. The engines were reversed, the guns shifted and she slowly slid off without any injury whatever.

The Massachusetts is a first-class battleship of 10,288 tons, she has a speed of 15 knots and carries four 13-inch, eight eight-inch, four six-inch, four one-pounder, 20 six-pounder and four gatling guns, besides being fitted with three torpedo tubes. Her crew consists of 37 officers and 438 men and her cost was $3,020,000.

UNEXPLAINED ENERGY.

Strange Properties of Metals Which Seem to Be Opposed to Existing Chemical Theories.

The new chemical elements of the last few years have impressed us with their suggestions of secrets yet to be revealed, says the London Trades Journals' Review. A French writer notes that the rare metals from uranium ores—prolonium, radium and actinium, discovered in 1898 and 1899—have startled us with properties that appear to be opposed to existing physical and chemical theories, and probably open the way to a new era in the history of science. They seem to create energy from nothing. Without perceptible loss of outside aid, they produce light and electricity, and their emission of Becquerel rays—which resemble Roentgen rays and were first noticed in 1896 in uranium—is 100,000 times greater than that of uranium. The self-luminosity of radium, sufficient to show writing, is not sensibly diminished at the end of the year. The new metals impart fluorescence to the diamond, alkaline substances, paper, etc., and their salts have powerful chemical action—converting oxygen into ozone, discoloring glass and porcelain, energetically attacking photographic plates, and attacking the skin and destroying the germination of seeds. These are effects of radiation.

WAS ENTITLED TO A SEAT.

Youthful Newspaper Vender Asserts His Right and Fools a Fussy Passenger.

The other day on an elevated train in New York a small boy stood before a huge pile of newspapers that occupied one of the seats. He was sorting them and dropping a package upon each station as it was reached for the news stand located there. The car was crowded and seats at a premium.

A fussy old man watched the boy for a time. Then he touched him on the shoulder and said in a loud and arrogant manner "See here, my son, what right have you to keep those papers on that seat when passengers are compelled to stand up?"

The boy looked up and politely said: "Do you object to my having those papers on the seat?"

"I do," he said the man. "I have paid my fare and have a right to sit down."

The boy carefully removed his pile of papers from the seat to the floor, a small bundle at a time. The protesting passenger stood in an expectant attitude; the spectators looked on with absorbed attention.

When the seat was empty the boy turned about and sat down. Looking up at the man he said, quietly: "I paid my fare, too, and I guess this seat belongs to me."

WATER AS MOTIVE POWER.

It Is Believed in New York That Niagara Falls May Yet Turn Their Wheels.

Interest in the subject of a return to water power as a primary agent in supplying motor energy is stimulated by the news that Baltimore's trolley system is to be run by the Susquehanna river force. The methods to be applied are those of the Niagara plan, by which the great cataract evolves electric power for mills, traction lines and street and house illumination all through its corner of New York state.

It is the idea in Baltimore that the Susquehanna energy may yet run the cars and light the streets and buildings in a number of Maryland towns, says the New York World. So in the Empire state there is the dream, perhaps to be realized, yet, that the tremendous Niagara power now going to waste will become a force in Manhattan. To the dawning of such an approach to a smokeless age we might give hearty welcome in the present days of soft coal menace.

THE MARAUDER WAS FOILED

INTRUDER, HOWEVER, ENJOYS A MEAL.

Thief Entering Home of P. C. Johnson Fails to Obtain Anything of Value.

For an exhibition of coolness the palm is awarded to P. C. Johnson, of Plainfield avenue, just beyond the city limits. At an early hour Saturday morning a burglar visited his premises and effected an entrance to the house by way of the basement. Mr. Johnson happened to be awake at the time and looked out the window just in time to see the unwelcome visitor letting himself down the hatchway. Johnson immediately procured his revolver and sat by the bedside awaiting developments.

The burglar, unable to get from the cellar, finally departed the way he entered. Mr. Johnson followed the intruder into the night, but failed to land his quarry. The burglar, seeing he was pursued, made good his escape. Johnson fired no shots at the man.

An examination of the cellar showed that the milk and cream had suffered depletion at the hands of the marauder. Cold meats and other food stuffs also received a share of attention, but the burglar failed to get anything of value.

DIED IN WEST.

John C. Bonnell, Son of a Borough-ite, Passes Away at Grand Rapids.

The Evening Press of Grand Rapids, Mich., in its issue of August 9, contains an account of the sudden death of John C. Bonnell, of that place, which occurred during the previous night. He was the son of the late Alfred Bonnell, of the borough, the latter being one of the oldest citizens of North Plainfield. He was also a brother of George C. Bonnell, who resided in the borough up to the time of his father's death two years ago.

Mr. Bonnell was found dead in bed. Only a short time previously Mr. Bonnell's wife died. He was born in New Brunswick, but had lived in Michigan since the age of 20 years. He was interested at times in the Standard Oil Company, the Simmons Knitting Company and in other corporations. He is survived by four children.

Andrew McClellan May Be Disfigured for Life for Teasing Dog.

Annoying an Irish setter, having a litter of pups, may result in Andrew McClellan, of Watchung avenue, being disfigured for life. He was teasing the dog, which belongs to Fred Ivamy, of Scotch Plains, when the animal suddenly leaped up and sank its teeth in his nose. He managed to shake it off and Dr. Ward, who was stopping at the hotel, cauterized and fixed up the wound. A large gash was inflicted which may leave a bad scar.

ANOTHER BIG TROLLEY BRIDGE

WILL CARRY TRENTON AND BRUNSWICK COMPANY'S TRACKS.

Must be Constructed Without Interfering With the Railroad Traffic Below.

The Trenton and New Brunswick Traction Company has on its hands the peculiar problem of putting up a bridge over the Freehold and Jamesburg Company's line without interfering with the latter's traffic.

To that end the Pennsylvania Steel Company, of Steelton, Pa., have been engaged, and has put up two huge derricks at the proposed crossing, which is about midway between the Monmouth Junction and Dayton stations on the Freehold and Jamesburg road. Sunday these derricks will raise into position the iron girders which will support the new bridge. Each of the eight girders weighs fourteen tons.

With the iron work in position the rest of the work on the bridge will proceed more leisurely, and the structure will be completed in about four weeks. This will complete the last link in the line, for by that time the overhead wires will have been strung and the road will be ready for traffic.

The plan of carrying trolley lines over steam railroad lines is the same put in force at Bound Brook, although the bridge at Dayton is an entirely different sort of structure. Instead of the cars running up a steep incline as at Bound Brook, they will ascend a long gentle slope over a wooden trestle until they reach the iron bridge. Very little time will thus be lost in the crossing.

The bridge will be supported on eight massive stone piers which have already been sunk, four on each side of the Freehold and Jamesburg line. The Pennsylvania is the lessee of the latter line and opposed for a time the crossing of the trolley company. Recourse to law was threatened then, but the matter was settled privately by the trolley company agreeing to cross by the overhead bridge.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

Chauffeur Prevents Accident by His Quick Action, But Tears Up the Macadam.

While Robert Toney, chauffeur for Edward M. VanBaren, of Central avenue, was giving Mr. VanBaren's cousin, Mr. Morse, of New York, a ride in his Oldsmobile Saturday evening about 6 o'clock, the front axle of the machine broke and a serious accident was prevented through his quick action.

The machine was being run at a rapid speed along Ninth street, between Arlington and Madison avenues, when the accident occurred. Toney instantly reversed the lever, thus shutting off the power. The front of the carriage dropped very suddenly and for a short distance tore up the macadam. The machine was damaged but little.

MUCH NEEDED CHANGE NOW GOES INTO EFFECT

Improved Quarters for the United States Express Company's Business.

IN NORTH AVE. STATION.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE WELL-APPOINTED OFFICES.

To Take Possession on Tuesday—The New Arrangement Greatly Facilitates Business—Is Now the Best in the State.

Commencing with September 1, the local office of the United States Express Company will be moved from its present location on North avenue, to that part of the North Avenue station formerly occupied for the Western Union Telegraph purposes and baggage offices for so many years. For several weeks past workmen have been busy making the necessary improvements for the change and when Manager E. W. Mills takes possession he will have the best equipped offices along the line of the New Jersey Central. They will be electric lighted and steam heated and arranged so as to make the best service possible.

Manager Mills and the cashier, C. D. Bastian, will occupy the office, which was used for the telegraph office. This office has been divided off, giving the manager ample room, as well as the cashier and the furnishings will be up-to-date and attractive. This office leads into another large room, which will be occupied by Fred Voorhees, the bill clerk. With the change the necessary extra room for the handling of express matter will be given and this will greatly facilitate in getting goods out on time. The offices have been attractively painted and thoroughly renovated.

This change will also give the much-needed shelter for goods in rain or snow storms. The old driveway and platform will be used as at present, and a great improvement to be made is the location of two extra gates in the iron fence separating the east and westbound tracks. One gate will be at the east end of the fence and the other at the west end opposite the express platform. This will be a great benefit in taking express matter off of trains and will prevent unnecessary steps to the one main gate now in use and will lessen the possibility of accidents.

At the Inter-State tournament held at Brunswick, Me., he was high man, breaking 370 out of 400 targets shot at. He made a straight run of 106 breaks and scoring 99 out of the last 100 shot at.

Young People of Park Avenue Baptist Church Attended and Gave a Service of Song.

George E. Hall, superintendent of the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday-school, gave a stereopticon entertainment at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home last Tuesday. Forty young people from the Park Avenue Baptist church were in attendance. Seats were arranged on the lawn and the side of the house served as a canvas. The pictures included the ships and naval boats of various nations, scenes in Colorado, California, Newport, West Indies and a number of comic pictures, among the latter being "Foxy Grandpa." The evening was greatly enjoyed and enthusiastic cheers were given for Mr. Hall.

At the conclusion of the pictures the young people from the church gave a service of song with organ accompaniment by Miss Etta Cuming. As the visiting friends departed from the Home the mothers and children sang "God be With You 'till We Meet Again."

NOT ONE PER CENT.

Debt of Union County in Proportion to the Assets is Insignificant.

The Union county assessors' official abstract of ratables shows an increase in taxable property for 1902 of $2,494,000, or nearly two and one half millions. This brings the ratables of the county up to $45,269,400, so that the debt of the county is less than one per cent. of the assets. Plainfield's increase for 1902 is $290,700. The local assessors' list, which is now in the hands of the county board, shows an increase of North Plainfield ratables of $5,695 for the year.

LOST AT HOPE CHAPEL.

New Yorker Dropping Pocket Book There Recovers It.

Frederick Metzler, a representative of a New York publishing house, lost a pocketbook containing over $50 in Plainfield Tuesday afternoon and recovered it about three hours later without testing the virtues of advertising, or suffering any further inconvenience than a walk about town to several places he had visited, and an attack of nervousness at the thought of being stranded. Early in the afternoon Mr. Metzler was in the West End of the city and sat down on the steps of Hope chapel while waiting for a car. He came up town and it was when seeking coin to pay for an article he purchased in a West Front street emporium that he discovered he was minus his gold. After going the rounds of several places where he had stopped and making inquiries he returned to the place where he sat down to rest three hours before and found the pocketbook with the money intact lying beside the steps.

STARTED CARNEGIE LIBRARY

FIRST SHOVEL FULL OF EARTH WAS REMOVED YESTERDAY.

The Honor Fell to Rev. Linn E. Wheeler, of the Library Board of Trustees.

New Brunswick, August 27—Rev. Linn E. Wheeler, who is a member of the building committee of the Board of Library Trustees, had the distinction yesterday morning of raising the first shovel of earth from the excavations for the foundation for the new Carnegie Library, to be erected on Livingston avenue.

He was the only library trustee present at 9 o'clock, when the work for the excavations was commenced, and Architect George K. Parsell tendered the honor of removing the first dirt to him. The act was photographed by Myron Pollard, who caught a snapshot of it, and the photograph in future years will be a cherished souvenir.

It is expected that the work commenced yesterday will progress so rapidly that it will be possible to lay the cornerstone of the library building in about two months' time. This will be done with appropriate ceremonies, with an address by some local or out-of-town speaker. Architect Parsell expects to have the building completed by July 4, 1903, when a dedication celebration will take place.

SALARY TOO SMALL.

Rev. J. Beveridge Lee Says $5,000 is Entirely Too Little to Live On.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 27—Rev. J. Beveridge Lee, of Immanuel church, Milwaukee, preached in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, in Plainfield, N. J., last Sunday, where there is a vacancy. Mr. Lee spoke at the request of a committee which is selecting a new pastor. It is said that this would indicate a possibility that Mr. Lee may leave Milwaukee.

Recently he asked his Milwaukee congregation for more pay than the $5,000 a year he is now receiving, saying that no preacher could afford to live in the style demanded by fashion on a salary of $5,000. This request was denied. Mr. Lee has been in the east for a vacation.

JURORS DRAWN.

The North Plainfielders Who Will Serve at September Term—Sentences Pronounced.

Sheriff McMurtry, in the presence of Law Judge Schenck, yesterday, drew the petit jurors for the September term of court. Those selected from North Plainfield are J. Worth Coddington, George A. Fairchild, Daniel Ackor, John P. Emmons.

The following prisoners received their sentence at the hands of Judge Schenck: Louis Jackson and Samuel VanLiew, who pleaded guilty to shooting fowls, two months in the county jail; Augustus Baker, assault and battery, three months; Martha Johnson, who raised a check from $6 to $16, four months, and Charles Williams, who broke into The Annex at Bound Brook, one year in State prison.

STUNG BY WASP.

An Insect Causes a Horse to Kick and Runaway.

Thomas Stephens on his way home over the mountains Tuesday afternoon alighted from his carriage beyond the trolley line on Somerset street and left his horse standing by the roadside while he talked to a neighbor. He had barely walked away from the animal when it gave the dashboard a terrific kick and started on a wild gallop down the road. For a moment Stephens was nonplussed and was at a loss to account for the actions of his usually quiet horse. On going to the spot where the animal stood Stephens himself was stung by a wasp. Hastening from the spot he soon learned that wasps likewise were the cause of the runaway. There was a swarm of them buzzing around a nest in the vicinity.

Narrow Escape.

While John Carruthers was driving along West Front street last Tuesday he ran into a young lad that was crossing the street. The youth ran headlong into the body of the horse, was knocked down, but luckily was not hurt. He rolled under the animal's feet, and when Mr. Carruthers checked the animal the lad's head was almost beneath the wheel.

AUTO ACCIDENT KILLED THREE

Fast Machine Plunged Off the Railroad Bridge at Elberon Killing Owner Instantly.

TWO FATALLY INJURED

J. F. Matthews, of Jersey City, Was First Victim—Mrs. J. H. Cobb and Mrs. W. D. Pizzini Died at the Hospital Last Night—Accident Happened Tuesday Afternoon.

Long Branch, August 27—By the plunging of his new $8,000 thirty horse power automobile off the railroad bridge at Elberon to the tracks of the New York and Long Branch Railroad, thirty-five feet, yesterday afternoon, J. F. Matthews, a wealthy real estate dealer of Jersey City, was instantly killed and his guest, Mrs. J. H. Cobb and her sister, Mrs. W. D. Pizzini, of Atlanta, Ga., received injuries which later proved fatal. The women were removed to the Monmouth Memorial Hospital where Mrs. Cobb died three hours later and Mrs. Pizzini passed away at 10 o'clock last night.

In the machine also when it took the fatal leap were the chauffeur, Rudolph Meyer, and Rev. Patrick J. Grant, of the Paulist Fathers, of New York. The latter emerged from the wreck with hardly a scratch and by jumping, Meyer escaped with a broken leg.

Mr. Matthews was an enthusiastic automobilist and one week ago imported the machine, of Rhoder-Snyder make, and was learning its intricacies under the watchful eye of Meyer. Yesterday he invited a party of friends to accompany him on a run from the Hathaway Inn at Deal to the surrounding countryside. The railroad bridge at Elberon is always crossed carefully by automobilists on account of its height but as Mr. Matthews approached it, yesterday, the wheels of the vehicle slid on the car tracks of the Atlantic Coast railway which have to be crossed at that point. He attempted to straighten the machine out without first stopping it and to further complicate matters, just at that moment, William Havens, a gardner, got in its way and was knocked down. Immediately after the auto swung to the right, crushed the guard rail of the bridge like paper and turning a half somersault landed on the railroad tracks.

Mr. Matthews was beneath and the entire weight of two tons was on him. Mrs. Cobb was caught and held down, while Mrs. Pizzini and Father Grady were thrown in the air. The chauffeur leaped before the plunge was taken.

Bystanders hurried to the railroad tracks and the wreck of the machine was tossed to one side. A New Jersey Central train coming up at that moment took all on board and conveyed them to the hospital.

Mrs. Pizzini regained and lost consciousness several times but died without knowing that her sister was dead.

Among the passengers on the train which conveyed the injured was Miss Constance Patton, of Plainfield.

NO MORE INSPECTORS.

Labor Candidate Receives Notice From the Governor.

Trenton, August 27—Private Secretary Swayne yesterday wrote a letter to Mrs. John T. McDonald, of Paterson, informing her that Governor Murphy has no intention at present of appointing any additional factory inspectors.

Mrs. McDonald was a candidate for the position of woman inspector under a law passed last winter, and had the indorsement of a great many labor organizations. Secretary Swayne says the Governor was impressed with her strong recommendations, but the law is an optional one, and he feels satisfied that the present force of inspectors is sufficient.

Clam Bake Didn't Pay.

The deficiency as a result of the G. O. P. clambake amounts to $700. The total receipts were about $1,000 and the expenses $1,800. The committee in charge of the affair met this week and discovered the deficiency. Provisions will now be made to pay the shortage.

WOULDN'T PAY FOR TOMBSTONE

THEN L. L. MANNING & SON SUED THE WIDOW FOR IT.

And the Court at Whitehouse, Hunterdon County, Gave a Verdict in Their Favor.

L. L. Manning & Son, through counsel, S. S. Swackhamer, got a judgment before Judge Davis at Whitehouse Monday against Lucretia Anderson for the cost of erecting a tombstone over the grave of her late husband.

It seems the plaintiffs sold a stone to a customer, who, when the monument was completed, decided to have a more expensive one. This same monument they engaged to cut down and remodel for the defendant, and place the same at the head of her dead husband to mark his last resting place for the sum of $40. When the stone was placed in the graveyard, Mrs. Anderson disputed the claim saying the monument was not the one she had ordered.

The Mannings produced lithographs proving conclusively that it was the same stone, and satisfying the justice that their claim was valid. He awarded them the full amount and costs.

It was the general opinion in the neighborhood that L. Manning & Son had acted fairly in the matter and lived up to their agreement and that the suit was an attempt to fleece them.

WEDDED SECRETLY.

A. M. Lederer and Miss Florence Vreeland Were Married in Allentown on Monday.

Word has been received in this city of the marriage of Albert M. Lederer, son of Isaac Lederer, the West Front street merchant, and Miss Florence Vreeland, which took place, Monday, in Allentown, Pa., at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Freeman Steeker.

It was not known by either family that they contemplated marriage. Monday they left for Allentown, ostensibly on a visit but in reality to take the step of which announcement has been received. The young people have since gone to Delaware Water Gap where they will spend two weeks. Mr. Lederer is a well known young man and is associated with his father in business.

JOINT MEETING.

Hope Chapel and the Elizabeth Endeavorers at the Westfield Fresh Air Camp.

Thirty Christian Endeavorers from Hope chapel journeyed by special car to Westfield, last Tuesday, where they took part in the service at Camp Woolfe. The Plainfield society was scheduled to take charge but on their arrival an Elizabeth band of Endeavorers was found to be conducting the meeting.

Miss Luella Harris, of the First Baptist church' choir, sang acceptably, and prayer was made by H. D. Thompson, Rev. L. K. Howard and Henry A. Pearce. The Hope society is making preparations to spend an evening in the near future at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp.

TRAINER GILBERT DEAD.

Was a Familiar Figure in Sporting Circles Years Ago.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 27—Jacob P. Gilbert, who was well known to sporting men, especially those of the older generation, died Monday. He was in his eighty-first year. A prolonged illness had kept him confined to his house for nearly a year. The funeral was held today. He was head trainer of the stable of William Rockefeller, and managed the stock of Robert Bonner and Joseph Harker when they were leading figures in the horse world.

DOWN EMBANKMENT.

Serious Accident to Motor Car and Its Passenger at Whitehouse.

Whitehouse, Aug. 27—While Theodore McDowell, auditor of the Rockaway Valley Railway, was journeying from this place to Pespack on his motor car Monday the vehicle struck a small stone that had been placed on the track and was hurled thirty feet down an embankment.

McDowell was thrown against a fence. Several ribs were broken, an ankle sprained and he was otherwise badly bruised.

EDUCATION THE TOPIC.

Important Annual Session of Society of Friends at Asbury Park —500 Delegates Expected.

In the Beach Auditorium, Asbury Park, from September 5 to 11, the Society of Friends will hold national sessions. About 500 delegates are expected.

The chief business which will occupy the attention of the convention will be that of the educational system of their society. Eugene Baker, principal of the Friends' Central School, Philadelphia; Dr. Luther Gulick, principal of Pratt Institute High School, Brooklyn; Joseph S. Walton, principal of the George School; Charlton C. Lewis, president of the Prison Association, New York; Joseph Swayne, president of Swarthmore College, and former Congressman Newton S. Curtis, of New York.

UNITE TO FIGHT SKEETER

LONG BRANCH CITIZENS ORGANIZE IN CAMPAIGN AGAINST IT.

The Society Thus Formed Will Urge Remedial Legislation on Lawmakers.

Long Branch, Aug. 27—Those interested in the extermination of the mosquito along the north Jersey coast expect to incorporate soon under the title of "The Monmouth Beach Improvement Association." Colonel William Barbour, of Monmouth Beach, and D. D. Cook, of Seabright, are in charge of the incorporation.

The new association is working to accomplish such within a few months. Petitions will be circulated among residents and property owners of Long Branch, Monmouth Beach and Seabright, addressed to the New Jersey State Legislature, asking for stringent legislation which will best the commercial effects upon the "skeeter" nuisance, together with an appropria*tion for the continuance of the work* and the appointment of officers to enforce the laws.

Among the new subscribers to the fund are Colonel William Barbour, Bayard Dominick, H. L. Thornell, G. C. McKesson, John L. Riker, William M. Whitney, I. S. Platt, Henry L. Thornell and W. L. Walker. Already $600 has been contributed to assist in the extermination of the mosquito.

QUEERLY MATED.

Bride Sixteen, Groom Forty and Both Are Italian Residents.

The residents of Cottage place, other than Italians, are discussing at great length the marriage of a couple of that extraction from among them, which took place at Westfield, Sunday. The bride is Angela Pastora, who recently turned sixteen and is comely. The groom who answers to the name of Cammon Kossuth confesses having passed the fortieth mile stone in his life's journey.

Kossuth is not as spry as some men of his age and beside he has a generous sprinkling of gray in his hair. The couple have gone to Elizabeth where they will make their home. The bride's father is a member of Street Commissioner Gaveti's sweeping force.

VanNest Hearing Adjourned.

The case of James Anderson against Arthur VanNest, who is charged with committing a theft at the home of the complainant, was called in the city court Tuesday before Justice Huff. The State asked for an adjournment on the ground that several witnesses were absent. Francis J. Batz, representing the defendant, made a strong plea to have the case tried as it had already been adjourned once. Justice Huff finally decided to adjourn the case until next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Sprained Her Ankle.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane has granted a permit to Peter Thomsen for the erection of a dwelling on La Grande avenue, near Berckman street. The structure will be two and a half stories, 18 feet front by 32 feet deep. F. C. Lancaster is the architect and William Wyckoff the mason.

SOCIETY CIRCUS BY NEW BRUNSWICK FOLK

Real Thing is Being Planned to be Held There in September.

BY BRUNSWICK CLUB.

THERE WILL BE THE MENAGERIE AND ALL THE SIDE SHOWS.

Programme Will Include Special Acts by Outside Talent and Turns by Well-Known New Brunswick Performers.

New Brunswick, August 27—The people of this city are in for a treat. The members of the Brunswick Club are to give a society circus on Friday and Saturday, September 19 and 20. The affair will be on the order of the society functions given at Newport and will eclipse anything ever held here in the way of an amusement.

The performances are to be given under the management and personal direction of Alexander A. Duchemin, of New York City, who has conducted numerous affairs of the kind. There will be a side show and menagerie besides the regular performance, which will be given in a 100-foot ring in a tent accommodating between 1,200 and 1,500.

There will be special acts by outside performers and burlesques and other attractions by the local men. The patrons will have the opportunity of seeing young townsmen as clowns, bare-back riders, acrobats, tight-rope walkers, etc. So far there has not been a great demand for the high trapeze artist's position.

Menagerie and side shows will be composed of Brunswick Club members. The beautiful lady, the fat lady, the living skeleton and the Wild Man of Borneo will all be recruited from the members. The circus tent will probably be located on the VanCleef grounds on Somerset street. The tent, seats, horses and other parabernalia will be furnished by Mr. Duchemin, who will be here tomorrow to conduct the first rehearsal and assign parts.

The committee selected by the club to take charge of the circus is as follows: T. Henry Rastall, chairman; Dr. W. A. Rice, Wm. Van Dyke, John E. Clayton and Henry F. Miller.

Mr. Duchemin, the manager of the circus, conducted a society circus at Newport last August. He also managed the carnival of sports in the Twenty-second Regiment armory, New York City, last winter. From September 6 to 7 of this year he will conduct a circus at Paterson.

On Friday and Saturday evenings, September 19 and 20 in this city, the admission to the society circus of the Brunswick Club will be 50 cents with reserved seats 25 cents extra. The matinees will be 25 cents straight.

A local band will be engaged to furnish music and two big street parades are talked of.

BIDS FOR SENATE CHAMBER.

A Trenton Contractor's Offer Was the Lowest Submitted.

Bids for the construction of the new Senate chamber, for which the Legislature last winter appropriated $125,000, were opened Tuesday by the State House Commission. Lewis Lawton & Son, of Trenton, bid $124,450, and are likely to get the contract.

The other bids were: Joseph H. Cutley, $133,000; William Johnson, $129,575; Samuel W. Mather, $142,724; James W. Lanning, $142,500, and Robert Johnston, $163,594. The contract will not be awarded until next Tuesday.

Change in Price.

All of the local milk dealers have agreed that commencing with September 1 they will charge a uniform price of 8 cents a quart for milk. During the summer months some dealers have been charging customers 8 cents, while others but 6 cents a quart. The reason for this raise is that the price of feed is so high that the dealers cannot afford to sell milk at a profit for 6 cents.

Another Benefecial Society.

A branch of the Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Association will be instituted at St. Mary's School Hall next Friday evening by Miss Maria Quinn, of Newark. This will be the twentieth branch instituted by her in New Jersey.

Case Adjourned.

The contract case of James W. Trimmer against William Brown was adjourned Tuesday in Justice Huff's court for one week.

New Woman Words And Works

WHAT have women's clubs done that is worth while? Here is one thing at least. The women's clubs of Orange, N. J., secured the appointment of a sanitary inspector of their own sex. She is Miss Helen D. Thompson. Investigating unclean back streets and back yards and nosing into unpleasant tenements seem rather odd work for a Vassar graduate, yet this Miss Thompson is and does, and the result shows her to be the right woman in the right place. It has been proved that there are localities in which a woman sanitary inspector is more efficient than a man and that the interior of a tenement house is one of these. Part of the region known as "the Oranges" is noted for its eminently high tone and admirable sanitary condition. This is specially true of East Orange. But there are also the city of Orange itself and the township of West Orange, and all these are under the eye of Miss Thompson. Orange has a considerable population of Italians and Hungarians of the laboring classes, and what they know of common sanitary cleanliness could be printed in large type upon a ten cent piece and leave room for an ornamental border. In one instance in Orange a large block of tenements was drained outright into a swamp at the back of them, and this menace to life and health remained year after year. Miss Thompson is working to have it removed. Her best results are obtained by house to house visitations. Sanitary reform, like charity, must begin at home, and the mothers of the poor and ignorant classes must trust a woman where they would be offish to a man inspector and suspicious of him. Miss Thompson learned Italian enough to talk to the women. She has also a native tact and kindliness that opened their hearts to her so that good results from her work appeared very soon.

The famous school of architecture in Paris has 1,200 American students, but had no American women students until now. The first one is a California girl, Miss Julia Morgan. Before entering the school she studied and worked with a noted Paris architect, M. Chanssemiche. Her tutor says she has especial talent for invention and conception, which are the gifts particularly needed in our barren and incongruous American building schemes. Miss Morgan will practice her profession in San Francisco.

Deliver me from the whiner and dumper!

* *

Miss Eleanor M. Thomas, a young society lady, formed an automobile party of friends and with her own hands steered her machine on a trip from New York to Boston and return. It is the fad among fashionable ladies to possess automobiles and guide them themselves. Well, they cannot smash up and run over people and things any more frequently or effectually than men mobilists now do. That is one satisfaction.

* *

The Boston hotel for women was opened somewhat ahead of the date fixed. It has all the conveniences of a first class hotel, and to permanent residents it gives room and board, use of library and reading room and a weekly concert ticket for from $3.50 to $6.50 a week. Its name is the Franklin Square House. It is managed by women, Mrs. Susan B. Rangs being superintendent and Mrs. Harriet A. Roberts stewardess.

* *

Here is a good little story which proves that women take an interest in politics where they have the opportunity: The wife of a saloon did not approve a certain candidate for nomination as city councilman. They resolved to defeat him. They organized a united, harmonious, secret movement against him and in favor of another man who suited them better. At the primary the women's candidate was surprised to find himself nominated, while the other, supposed to be the more popular, was nowhere.

The secret of getting your own way is to be silent and tactful. Gather your mental force inside of you and launch it in few words. Never waste it in storm and bluster or babyish snivelling and tears.

A leading company of model tenements house builders and owners has as its renting agent and collector a young lady, Miss Blanche Geary. She is so successful that out of a rent roll of $50,000 she loses through bad tenants scarcely more than $50 a year. One reason why her success is that her housekeeper instinct enables her to maintain without trouble a close watch on janitors and plumbers. Her most grievous trouble is with scrubwomen and engineers who furnish the heat and not water supply. These people seem not sufficiently mentally developed either to know their duty or to do it.

* *

It is surprising that so few women have undertaken the house and apartment renting agency business. It would come naturally to them, and they could be very successful.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

SMART COTTON GOWNS.

Fancy For Mercerized Linens—Silk Petticoats With Wash Gowns.

Cotton gowns this season are very dainty, and there is quite a fancy for the pinks and deep reds in glace linens. White trimmings have rather a tawdry effect on this type of cotton, but black is frequently used in the form of black velvet ribbon, chantilly lace, etc.

Some of the dress hollands and art linens are so bright and effective with the silky, mercerized effects that they make up into rather dressy gowns, especially when trimmed with coarse lace.

Silk petticoats are now worn with wash gowns. They are certainly more comfortable and lighter weight than the long, unwieldy cambric garments, which are both troublesome and expensive on account of the frequent launderings necessary.

WHITE ETAMINE GOWN.

Nearly all the cotton gowns are softened with little collars of embroidery or crochet lace.

A gown of white etamine is here shown. The waist has a wide sailor collar edged with Irish crochet lace. The inner vest is of tucked chiffon, as also are the undersleeves. The skirt is elaborately trimmed with the Irish crochet lace, and there are two gored flounces edged also with the lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Dressy and Serviceable Hose—A New Tailor Made.

The prettiest gowns worn by the smartest women are invariably those of the pictures'que order; by that is meant those which have little individual touches.

Some of the most effective hose are made of silk petals resembling roses and poppies. One of the latest things in neckgear is a large flat collar of glace, partly veiled with another collar of plaited mousseline de soie with hand veinings and lace inserted therein.

DRESSY TAILOR MADE.

A wide collar of lace set over chiffon and having ends of the chiffon is also very pretty.

For cold, dull days nothing is more useful than the marabou boa. Very smart neckpieces are made up of black or ecru lace shirred up skillfully and intermixed with narrow velvet ribbons.

A serviceable tailor made is shown in the cut. It can be worn on many occasions owing to its dainty finish. The blouse coat has round revers faced with white embroidered silk. The sleeves are slashed to show full puffs of corded silk. The skirt has five folds simulating flounces. These are headed with tiny pipings of taffeta.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

Modified Louis Coins—Skirts of Lace and Lowlaise Silk.

Smart women have adopted the modified Louis coat in chine or brocade to wear with net and chiffon skirts, and a charming black or white toilet relieved with dainty coloring can be evolved in this manner.

Skirts of chine louisine silk with slips of lace are popular. Very dressy black skirts to be worn over separate foundations are of tucked voile trimmed with black passementerie or inlet with black lace. With these are worn unlined black lace blouses.

FRENCH FOULARD DRESS.

No matter how fashion changes, the large black hat, simply trimmed, is always in good taste and wearable on almost every occasion.

The new neck ruffles give a sloping effect to the shoulders which is not always becoming to short people. These should remain faithful to the feather boa or the round neck ruche.

One of the smartest Parisian foulard models is here shown. The material is in a delicate shade of old rose and it is trimmed with Venetian lace. The waist is laid into shirrings that simulate a yoke, and the upper halves of the sleeves are treated in the same way. The skirt has a plain front gore with a shirred yoke and slightly full side gores finished with three folds around the bottom.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

GOWNS FOR COOLER DAYS.

Alpacas and Serges Are Trimmed With Kiltings and Strappings.

Kilting is once more coming into fashion, but it is mostly used below the knees, as few women care for the bunchy effect around the hips unless in a light fabric. Cream serge dresses treated in this way, with a great deal of fullness around the feet, have the waists simply made, with insertions of kilting and touches of black braid.

Next to serges come flannels, and these are much used for yachting and even country wear, while Parisians are wearing spotted flannels instead of the plain shades popular last year. Albert in pastel shades is also a favorite. The smartest colors are green and blue. Alpaca lends itself admirably to strappings, and for this purpose either the material itself or satin ribbon may be used.

The coat shown in the cut was seen recently at the races. It is of pale gray cloth, with revers and cuffs of ivory panne embroidered in black.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Hard on the Dog.

"Billingsley has taught his dog to sing."

"Does he sing well?"

"He sings as well as Billingsley could teach him."

"I never heard Billingsley. Is he a good singer?"

"Well, the dog has been shot at seven times."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

From the World's Four Corners.

INDUSTRIAL AND COMERCIAL NOTES FROM MANY FOREIGN LANDS.

Cultivation of Oysters in Holland.

The cultivation of oysters forms one of the staple industries of Holland, and is steadily increasing in importance.

The old town of Goes is the center of the oyster culture in the Netherlands, and is about as quaint and primitive a place as can be found in Holland. Situated on the island of South Beveland, in the province of Zealand, Goes is entirely off the beaten route of tourists. The whole population, with few exceptions—men, women and children—is engaged in fishing, and more particularly in the oyster industry. Entire families are engaged in the cultivation of oysters during the whole year, for the oyster beds demand unceasing work. The oyster fisherwomen are a queer sight when attired in their costume—especially adapted for the purpose—tight-fitting red flannel knickerbockers, black stockings, a shirt with sleeves rolled up to the elbow, and a quaint sunbonnet which thoroughly protects the head and neck.

Though the natives of Goes are engaged all the year round in the oyster "parks," it is in April that the most important part of their work is done. It is then that the "collectors" are placed in the "parks." These collectors are curved tiles about a foot long, which, after being carefully washed, are covered with a layer of mortar. Thus prepared, the "collectors" are able to retain the oyster ova known to fishermen as "white spat," or "naissains," as they are termed in France. These embryos are very minute, and float about on the surface of the water until they become affixed to the "collectors." They are then gathered into boxes eight feet long by two feet in breadth, and the tiles are so arranged as to be constantly bathed by the sea water. From 300 to 400 larvae are attached to a single "collector."

In August, the "collectors" are removed from the "beds" and taken on land to undergo through a first process of cleansing. This operation, which is performed by women, is destined to cleanse the young oysters from all kinds of impurities and also from the small shells which, becoming affixed to the young oysters, might hinder their growth. Once thoroughly cleansed, the tiles are replaced in the boxes, where they remain until autumn. The "collectors" are then once more removed and the oysters, which are already the size of a shilling piece, are sufficiently strong to live alone, without being affixed to anything.

A number of the tiles are collected, the oysters begin the second period of their existence—an intermediate period of youth, so to speak—for though sufficiently developed to exist alone, they are not yet strong enough to resist the attacks of their murderous enemies. They are, therefore, placed for a few months in an apparatus called an "ambulance." These ambulances" are flat boxes about ten inches high the bottoms of which are of wire grating. Thus isolated, the young oysters are completely protected by a box identical with the one in which they are inclosed, but reversed, so as to constitute a kind of cage in which the water can circulate freely without allowing fish of crabs to enter.

The boxes, which contain no fewer than 3,000 oysters each, are arranged side by side, and firmly affixed to the bottom of the "park" by means of stakes. In this manner the young oysters can thrive in peace and without fear of being attacked by any of their numerous enemies, who appreciate oysters fully as much as man appreciates them.

The oysters remain three months in these boxes, during which time they are jealously cared for, being watered frequently to remove the impurities and sea-weeds which have gathered among them. At the end of the three months they have reached a diameter of from two to two and a half inches. They are now of sufficient size for sale, but not yet large enough to bring in much profit. They are therefore thrown along the bottom of the "park," where they continue to grow, their shell being of sufficient strength to withstand the attack of fish. The oysters continue to grow until the age of two or three years, when they reach the size of four inches in diameter. After the age of three they stop growing, and there is no advantage in allowing them to remain any longer in the beds.

The oyster fisherpeople of Goes, who form a community by themselves, all loans on property in the territory adjacent to Harput and Mezreh; others branches at Malatia, Arabkir and Eghin supply the needs of the remoter portions of the vilayet.

Persian Textile Monopoly.

Some three years ago the shah of Persia gave the minister of state the exclusive right for 50 years to spin and weave cotton and woolen fabrics in that monarchy. The concession permits the beneficiary to associate with himself either foreign or domestic capital and other aids.

A member of an Austrian weaving establishment has been requested to form an association for the exploitation of the Persian monopoly. Austrian textile manufacturers have a special interest in this matter, as they export $2,000,000 worth to Persia annually. Still, it is considered highly advantageous to Austria in sundry ways to form the proposed connection. It would presumably increase exports in general, especially of machinery to equip Persian factories. Should the connection with the monopoly go to some other country, the consequence, it is believed, would be disastrous to the Austrian textile industry by depriving it of peculiar advantages in buying Persian raw materials; besides, Austria's exports to Persia would be seriously affected.

Altogether, the project appeals strongly to popular favor, and preliminary steps toward the formation of the association are being taken.

Bohemia's Soft-Coal Production.

Statistics of the production of soft coal in the northern part of Bohemia for the year 1901 are just published. They show a yield of 18,283,498 tons—an increase of 992,401 tons, or 5.4 per cent., over 1900, when a strike of the miners, lasting two months, materially reduced the output, and also crippled industries in Bohemia and neighboring parts of Germany.

The number of miners employed in 1901 was 37,777, each of whom mined on an average 467 tons during the year—a decrease of 27 tons per man in comparison with 1900, doubtless due to the time concessions gained by the strikers.

The total value of the output was $19,327,650, or $1.057 per ton—an increase of six cents per ton, also presumably caused by concessions made to the strikers. FRANK W. MAHIN.

THE ATTRACTIVE VEIL.

Fashion's Arbiters Have Decreed That It Shall Again Be Worn.

If women would only realize that a floating veil falling lightly in the back is exceedingly becoming to all and at all times, no costume would be considered complete without one, by day in the street and at home both day and evening. All regal costumes for queens have the floating veil of tulle or lace, and women in general are perfectly free to wear it, but somehow it has been many years since even the drapery has been seen at the back of the hats. How pretty and graceful this is and how becoming it is we are now allowed to know for the first time in two generations by that tyrant of tyrants—fashion.

Veils of all sorts of filmy stuff are tied around the crowns of the hats and left to float at the back, and not only that, but there are special arrangements of light fabrics set at the back of the hats and allowed to fall at will over the back hair. This is a boon in that it hides the frouziness of the average back hair, and it is also pretty—more than pretty. It is particularly unbecoming, but from signs of the coming fall season we can foresee that the style is not to disappear into that mysterious receptacle for outlived fashions, for black velvet ribbon and other ribbon as well as beautiful barbes of real lace will take the place of the present diaphanous materials. It is the drooping of the trimming at the back in veil fashion that is so attractive that one wonders how it happened that no one thought of reviving it before. The floating veil goes so well with the Dolly Varden and Eugenie hats, with their drooping brims, and both are so poetic that it is not surprising that the summer girls have grown more beautiful than ever.

With a soft and delicately colored pongee shirt waist suit the very acme of summer comfort and beauty has been attained. Pongee itself has been found wanting in nothing that is necessary for an ideal summer gown, for now that desirable silk is produced in so many new and attractive designs and shades of color that it leaves little to be desired. It is firm yet pliable, strong yet soft, and its draping qualities are perfect. For some occult reason it takes any kind of trimming with excellent effect. Lace particularly shows up well. And a pongee dress can be cleansed indefinitely and come out like new every time.

In the illustration is shown a pongee dress of the kind called "shirt waist suits," and really nothing could be much prettier. This is in a soft beige shade with cardinal dots rather oblong than round. The waist and skirt are shaped by underlaid box plaits and these "run out" so as to afford the necessary fullness for the flare around the bottom and at the lower part of the waist. The sleeves are made in the same manner, with the full portion below the elbows where they are gathered into deep cuffs. The cuffs, stock and belt are all made of or trimmed with black velvet ribbon, and a row of this is also put upon the hat "to bring it out," as the milliners say.

It is surprising how much a little black velvet does brighten or at least accentuate anything on which it is applied. I do not think it will ever again be relegated to oblivion. For many years black velvet ribbon was not even remembered, but now that it has proved its value it will become one of the factors like lace, and so long as women now understand things better than they used to it will remain a standard.

The new hats are now being copied in such quantities that one can form a fair idea of what is to be worn this fall. I see many of the wide and irregular brims, produced in the loveliest, soft, silky felt, which is almost as delicate as the fluff of the milk-weed and softer and more beautiful than thistledown. Such hats so far are remarkable principally for the scarcity of trimming. "Something rich and fine, but very little of it," seems to be the rule. Foliage is so beautiful and imitates nature so closely that it is sufficient in itself, and some of it is so made that it seems to have the very frost showing on the superb and gorgeous autumn colorings. For instance, there was a bunch of autumn leaves in all their colors ranging from pale yellow through all the russet reds and brown with an underlying tint of green to deep purple and all these leaves softened by this frosty overbloom.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

The GRACIOUS WOMAN

"SHE doeth little kindnesses
Which most leave undone or despise,
For naught that sets one heart at ease
And giveth happiness or peace
Is low esteemed in her eyes."

quoted the woman softly.

The girl at her side followed her gaze to where it rested on a plain, middle aged woman who was advancing into the room, bowing slightly and smiling to the other occupants as she did so. "And is that the secret of her popularity?" she said. "I have often wondered, for she is not wealthy, beautiful or clever."

"She is more than that," returned the other; "she has the divine gift of graciousness."

Then, as the girl was silent, she went on: "I wonder if you, or, for that matter, half of the women nowadays, recognize the value of graciousness. It would appear not, for the quality is plainly dying out, but it often means the difference between a happy and an unhappy life. You know there is a great deal of truth in the axiom that we receive in return the same coin which we pay out. If in our heart of hearts we distrust, we also shall be distrusted. If our hearts are full of kindness and we radiate smiles and good will, we call out to ourselves just those very characteristics in those with whom we come in contact. And that is the way with the gracious woman. A little smile, a bow, a pleasant 'Good morning!' a heartfelt 'Can I do something for you?' when another seems in trouble—these cost little, but mean so very, very much.

"A woman may be a paragon of stern, unflinching virtue, and she will find no one to love her. More than that, she will do actual harm by making virtue seem unattractive and hard when it is only that she herself lacks graciousness. On the other hand, I am sorry to say, she may be a shining example of all that she should not be and yet attract young and old to her because she possesses graciousness."

"I think I understand," said the girl, "and graciousness doesn't always mean doing kindnesses either. You know how little groups of women will form on hotel piazzas, and sometimes, when they are very interesting, one doesn't always like to have a stranger come in and join them. Well, yesterday about five of us were talking coolly when Mrs. Hunterton came striding down the piazza in that uncompromising way of hers and proceeded to settle herself down in our midst. Well, of course she had a right to, for we all knew her, and yet for some reason we mentally resented it almost as if she were an interloper. Then five minutes afterward that gentle little Mrs. Smith came along and, stopping, said in her timid, graceful way: 'Your group looks so interesting! May I join it and have a good time too?' That was all, and yet we made room for her in a body."

The woman nodded her approval. "It is born in some," she went on; "in others it is acquired. You will notice it in very little children—small beings, who radiate smiles and sunshine and whom every one loves—while there are others—mere tots, too—who stand aside pensive and distrustful and as a consequence are unloved. And yet their whole unhappy futures might be changed if their mothers realized that all they lacked was graciousness. It is the one quality that is the substitute for eternal youth, that makes the gray haired woman who possesses it the center of a little circle of which she is the queen, while her younger and more attractive rivals wonder why they are left to themselves."

And the girl grew very thoughtful.

DINNER FOR A MONKEY.

Members of Gotham's Four Hundred Entertain an African Ape at Newport, R. I.

That jaded, blase section of New York society known as "the fashionable set" has succeeded in getting a new soul stirring and small talk producing sensation and for a few moments is a lap or two ahead in its tireless race and contest with ennui.

"Jocko," a long-tailed, blue-nosed, pink-eyed, chattering "monk" from Africa, the mascot of the steam yacht Taurus, was the happy medium through and by which the innermost circles of the "400" were stirred into life and animation.

This little animal chanced to flit across the gaze of Mrs. Stuvesant Fish as he lightly skipped in and out of the yacht's rigging. Mrs. Fish has an unrivaled reputation for getting up novel entertainments in the social world, and when she cast her eye on "Jocko" an idea struck. On the trip to Newport "Jocko" was taken to dinner in the saloon of the yacht and given a seat at the table. This was more for rehearsal of what was coming than anything else.

THE GUEST OF HONOR.

When the yacht arrived at Newport Mrs. Fish immediately began to carry her idea into effect. "Jocko" was taken ashore and driven to the tailoring establishment of Mr. O'Connor. That gentleman was informed that a fashionable suit of clothes was required for the little animal.

"Jocko" was driven to Arleigh, the villa of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lehr, where he was the guest of honor at dinner, invitations having been issued to the select few to meet M. Jocko. He was given a seat at the table, and, it is said, behaved finely. The suit he wore was a cardinal colored cloth trimmed with black braid and brass buttons, cut like a Russian blouse, with belt.

SHE LIKED PERFUMERY.

But Her Fondness for It Got Her Into Serious Trouble at the Doctor's Office.

They were discussing the fondness for perfumery manifested by many persons, which reminded the physician in the group of a queer case that recently came under his observation.

"Two ladies called on me," he said to a New York Times man, "and while one was in consultation with me in my private room the other whiled away her time by investigating the contents of a large case of bottles, jars, etc., in the outer apartment. Between the two rooms is a glass door, over which is drawn a shade, but the shade happens to be torn across one corner, so that it is possible to see from the inner room into the outer office.

"Hearing a rattling among the bottles, I stepped to the glass door and discovered the lady in the act of taking down one bottle after another and smelling the contents. At length she got hold of something which evidently had a pleasing odor, for finally she poured some of the liquid into her hand and smelled of it again, then hastily rubbed the liquid upon her nose and portions of her face contiguous thereto, replaced the bottle and took her seat, as she heard a rustling in the inner room.

"Knowing what the result would be, I detained the ladies in consultation for several moments. By that time, as the one with the desire for perfumery sat near a warm stove, her nose and portions of her face began to turn a deep olive color, and before they departed had assumed a beautiful dark brown. She had mistaken my favorite hair dye for perfumery. Needless to say that she became an 'invalid' and was not visible to her friends for a week."

CROWN PRINCE OF SIAM.

He Will Arrive in the United States in September and Will Be Received Cordially.

While the crown prince of Siam, during his approaching visit to the United States, will not be the guest of the government, he will be entertained and shown every consideration, the money for this purpose being taken from the contingent fund.

The crown prince's visit has been hastened by the deferment of King Edward's coronation. The prince was going to attend the coronation and afterwards make a tour of the United States. He will now come earlier than at first planned. He will reach this country about September 1, possibly before that date.

A committee of entertainment will be appointed by the state department officials, and pains will be taken to make the crown prince's visit an event of importance. The Siamese minister, Prya Akharaj Varadhara, has been in consultation with Secretary Hay as to the arrangements for the crown prince's reception. The minister was assured that the reception would be as cordial and as elaborate as the government could make it.

The suggestion has been made that if the crown prince is pleased with his visit to the United States his father, the king of Siam, will then visit this country.

Soon after congress assembled last December Senator Frye introduced a resolution authorizing the president to formally invite the king to visit the United States and be the guest of the nation. It was explained that the king had expressed a desire to make a tour of this country. The American minister at Bangkok, Mr. King, in a communication suggesting an invitation to the king, called attention to many unpleasant episodes attending the king's visit to Europe, although their precise character was not made clear, and saying his majesty would desire to guard against a repetition of these unpleasant episodes. Mr. King intimated that his majesty would not make the trip unless he received an official invitation, as otherwise he would consider that he was not wanted.

No action was taken by congress and the king of Siam did not receive an official invitation to visit the United States. He then abandoned the contemplated journey and announced that the crown prince would take his place.

Minister King, in describing his majesty's hesitation about coming to this country without a formal invitation, said:

"He would be very glad to go in a private capacity for the sake of the education it would be to him and his people, but he naturally feels a shrinking and fear to go in such a capacity, especially in view of the grasping position Uncle Sam is just now described as assuming."

PACIFIC COAST LINE.

It Abounds in Seaside Resorts of Every Description.

Patronized Largely by Wealthy Tourists from the East—Speculation in Beach Property Is Popular.

[Special Los Angeles Letter.]

WHILE the seaside resorts on the Atlantic coast have a world-wide reputation, less is known concerning those upon our western boundary, although the latter are fast growing in general favor. To the person who does not object to the desert trip, and with whom the expense of the journey cuts no figure, the Pacific shore line rivals the east in attraction. While southern California is in the same latitude as our southern states, the climate is much more even than in any other portion of the country. The winters are warm, and the summer days much cooler than those of the northern states. A breeze comes from the ocean until the middle of the afternoon, the humidity is low, evaporation being very rapid. Nearly the same amount of cover is required at night in summer as in winter.

San Diego excels in the matter of climate. Although it is but little north of the Mexican line, the variation in temperature is small from season to season. Coronado Beach is, probably, next to that at Santa Catalina Island, the finest for bathing purposes, although Los Angeles people might consider this statement unfair to their favorite Long Beach. During many years visitors were compelled to content themselves with the accommodations (none too good) afforded at San Diego, and ferry across the bay to the beach daily, if they were indisposed to pay the rates charged at the great hotel there. Now, residence at the "tented city" is the popular thing, and it is not uncommon to see a party of "first family" young ladies together with their chaperon tinkering with hammer and nails at the floor of their abode when all the carpenters happen to be busy. (People with trades are in demand at good wages in southern California at present.)

These tented cities are springing up all along the coast where there is drinking water, and possess the virtue of being easily moved, for fashions in beaches are very arbitrary and change frequently, like all other fashions. A few years ago Redondo was the most popular bathing place. It is beautifully situated, the undertow is not strong, the surf is fine and fishing excellent. It is now patronized by people who want a very quiet time by the sea, for it has been eclipsed by resorts later in favor. The only thing that can be urged against Redondo is the large quantity of pitch or asphalt thrown up by the ocean, but there is more or less of it all along this oil-bearing coast. Santa Monica and Ocean Park, which are practically the same resort, are subject to heavy, cold winds and the water is frequently very rough. Port Los Angeles is nothing more than a long pier built into the sea from Santa Monica, where there is no harbor and where it is often very difficult to make a landing. As a town on the bluffs, Santa Monica is rather pleasant, but the beach below, like Ocean Park, is low, and it is often remarked that it would not require a very large tidal wave to sweep the cottages with their inmates out of existence. The same is true at Terminal Island, which has, however, on the shore side, the advantage of still water bathing for those who dislike going into the surf. This island is more like a peninsula, for the place of attachment to the mainland is seldom covered with water. Terminal Island lies between San Pedro and Long Beach. The former town is located on high bluffs where an extensive view is obtained. Excursion steamers leave this point for Catalina Island, which is so well known to be, par excellence, the finest resort on the coast that it requires no further mention.

THE PET OF LONG BEACH.

The government is adding to the natural advantages of San Pedro, constructing here a rather fine harbor, which is the port for Los Angeles. Long Beach has leaped into favor because it has so very many natural advantages. It is near the city, has two railroads and a street car line, an excellent pavilion and the finest bathhouse south of San Francisco, completed at a cost of $75,000. The town is high enough to be beyond reach of danger in case of tidal waves has excellent drainage facilities and the finest beach along this coast of fine beaches. Two years ago there were few improvements. Now it is a town of homes, on a sort of plateau. The contour of the country protects it from the high winds, while there is always a pleasant breeze. It is one of the places which everybody likes, hardly knowing the reason why.

But it is only fair to enumerate the disadvantages of each place. There is at Long Beach a kind of undertow called a "rip." An experienced swimmer recognizes one forming a little way out and easily escapes it, but an amateur is sometimes caught. Two have been drowned at Long Beach this summer, which, added to other victims, makes a total of nine during the last three years. Perhaps this is not many when one takes into consideration the great number who bathe there. The citizens are now installing a system of life lines and buoys which will reduce the danger to a minimum. Property at Long Beach is expensive, away beyond the speculation point, especially near the water front, where in miles of surf one may see bathers enjoying themselves all day.

A few days since a new watering place was born, Playa del Rey (King's Beach). There are many things to be said pro and con regarding this point. There are said to be millions back of it, and it is to be an ocean resort for "millionaires." There is certainly little to attract one at the present time. Two spurs of hills run to the sea very near each other. Upon a high bluff it is proposed to erect a $200,000 hotel, with building lots around it varying in price from $1,500 to $2,000 each, with high-priced building restrictions. At this season the hill is a mass of brown sand. In winter, like all of southern California, it is a beautiful green. Just how the necessary water for household purposes and irrigation of grounds will be supplied, seems to be an open question. What is considered a strong feature of the place is a lake or lagoon, back a few hundred feet from the shore, which is to be dredged out and an outlet made into the ocean, so that fresh tide water may flow in and out. Just now the pool is stagnant, and said to contain a large number of sting rays, which are dangerous, and are to be dredged out. The lagoon will furnish still bathing. It is to be surrounded by a park. A large portion of the town is to be on the bluffs and land behind them, as the beach property, proper, is limited in extent.

This is a great scheme, and sounds well, and with the millions said to be back of it, may be carried to a satisfactory issue. A part of the property consists of the old Ballona ranch, and it was here that much money was spent, years ago, trying to construct a harbor from the lagoon. But sand kept drifting in, compelling the abandonment of the enterprise. Trains ran there at that boom time, but a few years ago the railroad company pulled up their tracks. Those who attended the recent sale (a new boom) had to stop at Alla (a signboard on the prairie) and were met by tallyhos and other conveyances and taken to the beach, about two miles distant. Women and business men pretty evenly divided the crowd, which was a very merry one. All minds were intent on values from a dollar and cent point of view. A few carloads of very tired, but good-natured people, were pulled up to Inglewood late in the day, where they were compelled to wait nearly two hours for an engine to couple on to draw them to Los Angeles.

Everywhere along the coast is the lovely California sunshine, with a full breeze reigning every day of this season, thus far, cool and pleasant. Restfulness is in the air, and on all sides something to delight the eye.

Modern Window Advertising.

Lay figures upon which to display clothing in shop windows have been in use for many years, and greatly improved, so that the good ones are now far from presenting that woodenness of appearance that was once commonly characteristic of them. But occasionally some clothing merchant, going in for realism, puts in his window, as a display figure, upon which to hang suits of clothes, a living man; and it is curious to see how soon a figure will fix attention. The same man in the same clothes, seen among other men, in the street or elsewhere, among familiar surroundings, might attract no special attention whatever. But in the unfamiliar surroundings of a show window he attracts the eyes of many.

NEW GRACE CHURCH.

Its Corner Stone Was Laid by President Roosevelt.

Will Be Ready for Occupancy on December 1—Pastor Is One of the Most Learned Men in Washington.

Not only is the white house to be remodeled, but next season President Roosevelt will worship in a brand-new church. His pastor, Rev. John M. Schick, D. D., is now building a new Grace (Memorial Reformed church, which will be ready for occupancy on December 1, about the time that President Roosevelt will begin the strenuous business of the next season.

The corner stone of this church was laid by President Roosevelt on July 1. It is to be a Gothic edifice of Cleveland Lower Canan gray stone, and will have a seating capacity of about 600.

At present Dr. Schick has a congregation of somewhat more than 200 communicants. The newspapers constantly refer to this church as the Dutch Reformed, but on this head and others Dr. Schick pleasantly explains:

"My church is not the Dutch Reformed church, although many persons prefer to mention it under that designation. Ours is the Grace Reformed church, and if it belongs to any national origin it is German. Our church is differentiated from the Lutheran churches in that its vivifying principle is republicanism, while Lutheranism is the church of the princes and monarchs. Our church took its origin in Switzerland when the Monk Zwingle, at Basle, proclaimed the republicanism of worship in opposition to the monarchical and feudal tendency of the Roman Catholics under the papal monarch. We are Reformed Catholics. The Dutch Reformed, German Reformed, Bohemian and Swiss churches all use the same catechism and have the same faith. The separation into nationalities came after the church had been established, and has little meaning. As a matter of fact we are older than Luther's church, because Zwingle had proclaimed his doctrine of opposition to Roman monarchical ideas before Luther began his reformation.

REV. JOHN M. SCHICK.
(Pastor of Church in Which President Roosevelt Worships.)

"I have been urged to erect a large church, but have thought that the structure now designed will be sufficient to accommodate my flock. The president is one of my communicants. The new church has been under consideration ever since the present modest edifice was completed. If after we have completed the new one there be sufficient money, we will remodel the parsonage, so that the two structures may be harmonious in their Gothic outlines. My congregation is not a rich one, but I have not found it difficult to collect the necessary funds, about $60,000.

"It has been said that we have been largely helped by contributions from sources outside the church. There have been some such, but not enough to detract from the enterprise of the local congregation. Of course I must refuse to divulge the contribution of the president, as neither he nor I consider it seemly to enter into such details. My congregation consists of sturdy Germans, Dutch and Huguenot families of the District of Columbia. We hope to be established in our new church about December 1."

Dr. Schick is a gentleman of medium size, with a placid, kindly countenance. He is very learned, but at the same time very charitable in his views. He can discuss doctrinal disputes with calm dignity and is thoroughly liked by his dissenting brethren of the cloth. He visits around among his flock and is especially popular with the children. At the white house the pastoral visits of Dr. Schick are gala times for the children. He is the especial prey of Baby Quentin and Miss Ethel. They rifle his pockets, make him disgorge candies, ride on his knees and interrupt his priestly admonitions to their father with the license of affection. Dr. Schick is the same genial, kindly pastor in the home of the humblest of his congregation. He is frequently invited by President Roosevelt to participate in the Sunday night suppers at the white house, which President Roosevelt reserves for a reunion of his family and personal friends.

Dr. Schick is one of the local authorities on all moot points concerning the period of the reformation. His historical reading is such that the most learned divines of other churches never contradict his assertions without careful revision of the authorities.

Siberian Butter in Eastern Markets.

Siberia is bidding strongly for the butter trade of the east. Not only are the markets of Dalny and Port Arthur supplied by the Siberian product, but it is also shipped in considerable quantities to the principal commercial centers of China and Japan. The possibilities for the production of both milk and butter in Siberia are unlimited.

Two grades of Siberian butter are sold in Niuchwang. The first grade —table butter—is put up either in two-pound rolls or in two-pound casks or tins. It contains very little salt and cannot withstand a warm climate; consequently it is successfully shipped only during the winter months. The price of table butter at Tomsk is 32 rubles per pood, or about 16 2-3 cents per pound.

The second grade is used only for cooking purposes, and is put up in five-gallon oil cans, casks or rolls. It retails at Tomsk at seven rubles per pood (about ten cents per pound). The cost of shipping freight from Tomsk to Manchuria is $1.80 per 36-112 pounds, but it is expected that this rate will soon be considerably reduced.

THE COAL STRIKE.

Is a period of thirty years there has been no strike to equal in length that at present existing in the coal fields of Pennsylvania, and considering the attitude assumed by the contending forces there is little prospect of immediate settlement. Notwithstanding the condition, operators appear to be optimistic, promising the public, upon whom really falls the burden of the fight, that there will be no famine. Further than this they are sanguine in the declaration that the commodity will not be a scarcity during the bleak winter months, the time when the suffering would naturally be the greatest.

Naturally it will take some time for the operators to catch up with their shipments. As a principle of economics so long as the demand is greater than the supply the price will remain at an abnormal figure. There is, however, one thing of importance, in this connection, to be taken into consideration. During the time of the strike the coal handling companies have been able to clean up as it were and their facilities for transporting the commodity, when work at the mines is resumed, will be greatly improved. When operations do commence again it is certain that the operators will go about the business with a rush for there are too many interests now being jeopardized by the present idleness. The roads themselves have keenly felt the scarcity of anthracite coal as is shown by the fact that soft coal is being used for many purposes for the first time on record. As a rule the dealers have acted fairly with the public, not advancing prices except where absolutely necessary, and the assurance given by many that when operations are resumed the commodity will only be sold in small quantities is very encouraging. The end is not yet, but the morrow is apt to change conditions for the better and the people must be contented to wait.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

There is a limit to the people's patience and that has been reached in the coal strike situation. The refusal of the operators to meet Mitchell with a view of amicably settling the difficulty has incensed the public. With apparent indifference to other rights, the operators have surely placed themselves in a position which reflects no credit.

The plea is that there is nothing to arbitrate. Without arbitration settlement seems impossible. This is the condition at the present time, and the public is vainly calling for relief. It may be all right for the operators, but it is not for the consumer. If this haughty position assumed by the masters of the situation is continued what is to be done? Will it not be natural for the public to demand that the Federal Government take control and operate the mines? This appears to be in line with the trend of thought today. There's room for thought in the suggestion anyway.

THE TOBACCO FIEND.

Statistics concerning the amount of tobacco consumed in this country during the past year show some startling facts. The use of the weed is surely on the increase. Either more cople smoke and chew or else those addicted to the habit are fonder of it than ever. Smoking in moderation, may not be harmful, but what can be thought of the unthinking individual who has cultivated the habit to excess. Gradually injuring his throat and lungs, shattering his nerves and generally wearing out his system, he is wont to give little attention to the fact that he is being wrecked by his own weakness. Some may pity a tobacco fiend, but should he be when the exertion of a fair amount of will power would remedy the evil?

CHANGE OF DATE.

The Council Meeting to be Held on Tuesday Evening on Account of Holiday—Busy Session.

As the first Monday in September falls on a holiday the Common Council will probably hold its regular September meeting Tuesday evening, September 2. This has been the rule in the past and will likely be followed this year.

There will be some important matters to be considered at the next regular meeting, including the hearing in the case of Griffin H. Freeman against L. M. Dunaway, members of the fire department, charged with an infraction of rules. The hearing was adjourned to the next meeting, awaiting the return of Corporation Counsel Marsh. He is now home and will represent the city at this hearing.

Miss Mabel Symons, of East Third street, has returned from an extended visit in Vermont.

METHODIST SOCIETIES PLAN TO CONSOLIDATE

Why Unity of Various Organizations Would be Beneficial.

MANY HAVE SAME AIM.

A LARGE COMMITTEE IS WORKING ON THE PROPOSITION.

Reduction in Collections Would Thus be Brought About—Six Societies Carrying on Different Work Could be Fused in One.

Methodists all over the United States are asking for a reduction of the number of public collections in the local churches. They say there is too much "begging" in connection with the preaching services, and both clergy and laity are demanding a change. Besides the various local needs—church expenses, neighborhood charities, etc.—there are general interests for which several millions of dollars must be raised annually. Some pastors claim that of necessity they are obliged to make a public appeal about every alternate Sunday, which they think is a little more than their congregations will endure for any length of time. For the purpose of relieving this unpleasant situation, the bishops have appointed a commission to consider the matter of consolidating the collections by uniting some of the benevolent societies. The gentlemen having this matter in charge—all representative bishops, clergymen and laymen—are:

Bishop Cyrus D. Foss, Philadelphia, Pa.; Bishop John M. Walden, Cincinnati, O.; Bishop Charles H. Fowler, Buffalo, N. Y.; Rev. J. F. Goucher, D. D., Baltimore, Md.; Rev. S. W. Thomas, D. D., Philadelphia, Pa.; Rev. D. L. Rader, D. D., St. Paul, Minn.; Rev. A. N. Fisher, D. D., Portland, Ore.; Rev. E. O. Thayer, D. D., Portland, Me.; Rev. J. M. Buckley, D. D., New York City; R. T. Miller, Cincinnati, O.; George Cochran, Los Angeles, Cal.; F. W. Tunnell, Philadelphia, Pa.; E. S. Dobbins, Morristown, N. J.; J. A. Patten, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Archer Brown, East Orange, N. J.

The officers are: President, Bishop Foss; vice president, Dr. J. F. Goucher; secretary, Rev. E. O. Thayer; assistant secretary, G. I. Cochran. A secret meeting of this commission has been held, but so many questions were raised that it was found impossible to reach final conclusions. A large sub-committee was appointed to collate all material facts, compare the various propositions and report the same at the next meeting. This committee is now at work studying the legal and other aspects of the proposed amalgamation of the societies. There are a variety of benevolent societies, each with separate management and charters, but all under the supreme control of the general conference, so that in their ultimate purposes they are a unit, although seemingly independent. The general conference is the only body that can make the consolidation suggested.

Although not so striking as the removal of the time limit, repeal of the paragraph on amusements or the admission of women delegates to the general conference, the question of congregational collections is one of vital interest to the 3,000,000 members of the Methodist church in all parts of the world. Within the past half century six Methodist societies have been developed for carrying on missionary and educational work of a universal character. They are the Missionary Society, Board of Church Extension, Sunday-school Union, Tract Society, Freedmen's Aid and Southern Education Society and the Board of Education. They are all essentially missionary. One-half of the money raised for missions exclusively is expended in this country among the foreigners, Indians on the frontier and in the cities. The other half is used in supporting central stations in Japan, China and Korea, India, Africa and Europe. About $1,250,000 is handled by the society each year.

The Board of Church Extension is a sort of Methodist co-operative bank organized for the purpose of helping weak congregations to build churches. It gives money and makes loans at a low rate of interest. By its aid over 12,000 churches have been erected, and it now has a working loan fund of $2,750,000, which is steadily increasing. The Freedmen's Aid and Southern Education Society carries on a work of education among the poor whites and the negroes of the South. It holds property and resources valued at over $2,000,000, and is reaching over 10,000 young people in the Southern States. Industrial training is being given to 3,000 students. The Board of Education has a loan fund of over $1,000,000, which is used to help young theological students and other Methodist young people to obtain education. The maximum amount loaned is $100 and the rate of interest is 4 per cent. Over $20,000 a year is used by the Sunday-school Union in supplying lesson leaves, hymn books and libraries to needy Sunday-schools. This society is auxiliary to the missionary society in its operations, as it sends libraries or gives money for Sunday-school purposes in all parts of the world. In one year, beside rendering a large amount of help to remote localities in the United States, it sent money to Denmark, St. Petersburg, Austria, Rome, Calcutta, Tokio, Korea and South America to pay for the translation and publication of lesson leaves in the native languages. The tract society publishes more than 1,200 tracts in fourteen languages and dialects. Large quantities of these publications are given away by local organizations for general distribution, and in the foreign countries they are scattered by colporteurs and native workers.

These societies are constantly urging the pastors and churches to give them separate collections, so that they will get more money. Naturally, the officials are not in favor of consolidation unless it could be managed so as to not decrease their incomes. Each one is confronted by unusual opportunities for investing money in Christian enterprises to good advantage, the missionary society alone is actually embarrassed by its opportunities. In India, especially, the natives are being converted so fast that the missionary force now in the field cannot baptize or care for them. It is said there are 10,000 converts that the missionaries cannot receive, simply because there are not enough pastors and teachers to do the necessary training, which is very important. Strenuous efforts are being put forth to increase the income of the missionary society to $1,500,000. All the other societies are suffering in the same way.

The total amount of money raised by the church for all purposes is about $19,000,000 per year, over $15,000,000 of which is for ministerial support and current expenses. For purely benevolent purposes of a universal nature, which do not immediately benefit the local church, the expenditure is $2,822,437 per year. All of this money comes from the pockets of the members of the church and congregation, with the exception of a few hundred thousand in legacies and special gifts. The Twentieth Century Thanksgiving offering fund of $20,000,000, which is steadily being raised, does not directly help the benevolent fund, as it is being applied to the payment of debts on church and parsonage property and the development of endowments for universities.

BIRTHDAY FETE.

Mrs. Susan Coles Stout, New Eighty-Five Years of Age, Was Tendered Elaborate Affair.

Mrs. Warren Ackerman, of Lyde Park, Scotch Plains, on Saturday, gave an elaborate dinner in commemoration of the eighty-fifth birthday of Mrs. Susan Coles Stout. Mrs. Stout who is the widow of Jared S. Stout, is the only surviving sister of the late Dr. Abraham Coles, and resides at Scotch Plains, in the memorable colonial homestead built by her father, Dennis Coles. Mr. Stout, Warren Ackerman and Dr. Coles were largely responsible for the erection of the beautiful gothic brick church at Scotch Plains.

Mrs. Stout, although in her eighty sixth year, retains all her faculties, is bright and happy, and, as the guest of honor, was very entertaining in relating of incidents connected with the early history of Scotch Plains. Mrs. Ackerman, as always, proved herself a charming hostess. The guests found her cozy, picturesque cottage profusely decorated with choice flowers and plants from her conservatories and grounds.

FARMER DREW PISTOL, FELLED TO GROUND

John Reidy, in a Dangerous Mood, Because of a Trolley Accident.

MOTORMAN TOO QUICK.

THE INJURED MAN IS NOT IN A VERY SERIOUS CONDITION.

Wagon Demolished, Horse Slightly Injured, But Reidy Escapes to Receive Wound Later—Trolley Company May Prefer Charges.

Following the smashing of his buggy by a Middlesex and Somerset trolley car at Conover's corner, Saturday night, Thomas Reidy, a farmer, of West Dunellen drew a pistol on the motorman and it is said threatened his life. He received in return a crack on the head with the controller handle which gave him a scalp wound and necessitated the services of Dr. Brakeley.

Reidy started for Bound Brook early Saturday evening, driving in a buggy and it is alleged, barely able to do so on account of intoxication. The motorman of the car claims that the accident which happened at 8:30 p. m., was due to Reidy's carelessness. The rig was struck and the horse was carried for some distance on the fender, but strangely escaped serious injury. Reidy also escaped.

He walked home after the accident, but evidently brooded over the fancied wrong the motorman had done him, to such an extent, that he procured a revolver and started for the trolley track. He remained some time and on starting for home boarded a trolley car. Reidy immediately began bulldozing with the motorman and finally drew the revolver and it is said threatened to shoot him. Before he could follow up his threat the quick witted trolley man snatched his lever up and took all the fight out of Reidy with one stunning blow. It was thought at first the man was badly injured and he was hurried home as fast as possible. Dr. Brakeley's examination showed that he was not seriously hurt.

It is said that the trolley officials will prefer charges against Reidy, although as yet nothing has been done.

LITERARY.

The author of "Elizabeth and her German Garden" will make her final contribution to an American magazine with an essay "On the Giving of Books," which is to appear in the September Century, and which hits off with characteristic humor the foibles of people who give books to friends.

There was one famous building of antiquity, it is said in an article on Lightning, in Leslie's Monthly for September, which, according to the records, was never once damaged by lightning during its thousand years of existence, although placed high on a hill above a city in a mountain region where thunderstorms are very frequent. It was the Temple of Solomon at Jerusalem. The temple was overlaid within and without by plates of gold. Now gold is one of the best of electric conductors, and in this way the whole building was protected with a perfection and thoroughness that has never been attempted before or since.

William Allen White has got into the game again, and takes the leading place in the September McClure's with an article on "Cuban Reciprocity, a Moral Issue," in which he speaks his mind about the beet-roots and insurgents and the administration policy—which, incidentally, happens to be Mr. White's policy, too. Shortly after he and Thomas Platt had had their says about each other last winter, Mr. White's health gave way; and this is his first magazine article for six months. To judge by the style of it, however, Mr. White's convalescence is now complete. It has the familar vim and dash, which give promise that from henceforth there will be something doing pretty regularly in the line which the Emporia editor has made his own.

FALLING TREE KILLS GIRL

Horrible Death of a Child Playing in the Woods at Fanwood Sunday.

HER LIFE CRUSHED OUT

Thoughtless of the Woodchoppers —Little Sadie Meisner, Was the Victim—She Dies Almost Instantly—A Funeral Instead of a Birthday Party.

Carlessness on the part of woodcutters, may be assigned as the direct cause of the death of Sophie Meisner, the eleven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Meisner, of Hunter avenue, Fanwood, whose life was crushed out, Sunday morning, beneath the branches of a falling chestnut tree. The huge trunk had been cut Saturday, and left just barely held up by the branches of another tree, so that it needed but a slight touch to send it crashing to the ground. Notwithstanding the fact that it was directly in the rear of the Meisner home and the spot was a favorite playground for the children, the tree was left to remain in this manner when the workmen ceased cutting. The mistake cost little Sophie her life.

Shortly after 9 o'clock, Sunday morning, Sophie and two smaller children of the family, started for the wood to spend an hour or two in play, and naturally, they were attracted by the inclined tree.

Totally unconscious of their peril they ran about it and it is supposed one of them must have jostled. The upper branches suddenly lost their hold in the other trees and without a moment's warning dropped directly on Sophie who was beneath it. When the trunk settled on the ground, she was pinned beneath it, with life extinct.

Mrs. Charles Krammer who lives in the vicinity, was attracted by the crash of the branches and cries of the frightened children and hastened to the spot. On learning the trouble she ran for help and brought several men to the spot, with whose help the tree was lifted from the body of the little victim.

It was taken to the house of the parents and Dr. Westcott was called. He could do nothing, however, as it needed but a glance to show that death had resulted almost instantaneously from a broken neck.

ADVANCE IN PRICE OF MILK

HIGH PRICE OF FEED CAUSES DEALERS TO TAKE THE ACTION.

Eighth Cents a Quart to be the Rate After the First of September.

Milk, not wishing to lag behind beef, ambitions to be in the same category as coal, will increase in price on the first day of September from the present plebeian charge of six cents a quart to the more patrician rate of eight cents. This action has been deicded upon by practically all the local dealers.

Scarcity of feed is the reason assigned for the sudden rise in value of the lacteal liquid. It is understood that notice has already been served on the majority of customers that the increase will go into effect as scheduled. "Two cents a quart, if you say it quickly, is not much of a rise," remarked a man who lives on a milk diet, but proportionatey it is greater than any advance in coal, or in that other product of 'the cow, beef." Watchung water may be that man's diet after the first of September.

Miss Elizabeth Kepler, of Watchung avenue, is spending her vacation at Atlantic City.

EXCITING GAMES IN THE CITY LEAGUE

The Hopes Colts Not Frisky Enough for the Y. M. C. A. Aggregation Saturday.

There's grief in the camp of the Hope Y. M. A. followers. It's all because of a crushing defeat administered by the doughty Y. M. C. A. team Saturday afternoon, when the West End colts had gone into the game filled with expectation of a glorious victory. A look of distress overspread Manager Cose's countenance at the early stage of the contest and when the game was over he appeared as one attending a funeral. The victors in this contest have now well nigh clinched the championship and Hope will have to do some mighty tall hustling to even tie them for first place. Contrasted with the gloom among the Hope rooters wast he joy in the colony of Safe Works' people. The latter aggregation severely punished the St. Mary nine and Manager Alex. Muir is strutting about with the "I told you so expression." Both contests were well attended and excitement ran high on several occasions.

Y. M. C. A. IN CLOVER.

Failure to connect with Dupee's delivery at critical points, deprived the Hope team of victory in its game with the Y. M. C. A., Saturday, and incidentally subdued the buzzing of the pennant bee in the Hope camp. Four widely scattered hits was all the Hope batsmen made and if a couple more could have been secured at odd times twice as many runs would have been tallied. On the other hand, the Y. M. C. A. men landed on the West End team's reserve pitcher, Rushmore, for eleven singles and one double. There were numerous fly outs and other retirements between them, however, and despite this number the association contingent made only four runs, while with one third the hits Hope sent two men over the plate.

Rushmore received support that could not be improved upon and by his own cool headedness kept the score down. In the first inning he was touched up by Moore and Barnes for two singles but both died on bases. In the second Egan reached first through Martin taking his grouder to retire Smith at second. He stole second and trotted home with the first run on C. Dupee's opportune single. In the third the association men were held down to one hit that brought nothing but in the third a double by Schoonmaker and a single by Egan sent the former across the plate. Two hits and a little fumbling in the sixth gave the Y. M. C. A. two more tallies and despite three more singles made in the remainder of the game they were unable to score further.

Up to the sixth the Hope people got nothing but ciphers, only three widely scattered hits being made in those innings. Rushmore made the first run by getting a free pass to first, a steal to second and crossing the plate through Montross' beauty double. Martin flied out, Shortman sacrificed to send Montross to third but a short grounder to Bolsterle made by Hartfelder, blasted Hopes chances for another run. The second run was made in the seventh by Munro who was hit and sent to first. He was given third by Barnes' bad throw to Egan and scored on Dally's single. Matters then assumed a roseate hue for Hope but it soon faded away. In the eighth and ninth, the Hope men went out in one, two, three order, not one of them reaching second. In the last inning Hartfelder flied out to Bolsteric, Munro was sent to first on balls only to let Moore make a double play by tagging him out on

SAFE WORKS ALERT.

Safe Works was sporting a keen baseball edge Saturday; St. Mary's was off somewhere in dreamland. That is the story of the game in a nutshell. The score, eight to two, in favor of Manager Muir's colts, is a mere incident.

An error by Crosty let in two runs in the third. Burns' single, Winn's muff of Mack's assist from Jackson's grounder, a drive into right field by Allen, which Earry should have had, but misjudged, got lost in the bushes, and gave Allen three bases, bringing in two runs in the fourth. Before the inning ended Allen scored on Cooney's safe hit. A fumble and two singles were responsible for two more tallies in the fifth. Barnes, after making a double in the eighth, scored on Willhelm's single.

Inability to connect with Tommy Burns' twists was another reason for St. Mary's defeat. Burns has been pitching such good ball of late according to baseball economics, he was scheduled to go up in the air Saturday, but his balloon ascension was postponed till some later date. Only six scattered hits were made off his delivery and seven men studied the atmosphere in trying to connect with his curious curves. At the bat Burns made two singles and a double.

The Safe Works fielders were all on their mettle too. Franklin made two difficult catches of hard flys out in centre field. Kaiser Wilhelm who ruled over right territory, gathered in everything that came his way. His Majesty showed up well with the stick. Cooney ran up in the bleachers in the early part of the game and pulled a difficult foul fly out of the crowd.

Catcher Allen was knocked unconscious by being struck by a ball in the second inning. He was taken over to the engine house and revived, and after thirty-five minutes delay returned and pluckily resumed play. Most favorably commented upon every side was the action of the St. Mary team in waiting for Allen, and generously offering to play the game at a later date, should he be unable to resume.

PARK GOLF CLUB.

Although quite a number of golfers of both sexes were on the Park Golf Club course, Saturday afternoon, but a half dozen scores were turned in for the President's cup. The course was at its best, and the contestants enjoyed an ideal afternoon. The honors went to H. C. Wells, W. R. Faber and H. Stnddiford, but the play did not affect the leaders.

MRS. M. R. SHAFFER DEAD

THE WIDOW OF CHAUNCEY SHAFFER PASSES AWAY.

Was Prominent in Woman's Christian Temperance Union Affairs —Funeral at Bound Brook.

The death of Mrs. Maria R. Shaffer, widow of Chauncey Shaffer, occurred at the home of her grandson, Chauncey M. Burt, of West Seventh street, Saturday afternoon. She had been ill about three days with peritonitis.

Mrs. Shaffer was in her eighty-first year and had resided in this city for the past five years. She was greatly interested in the Monroe Avenue church and was a faithful member. Her husband was a prominent Metropolitan lawyer and was very well known in Plainfield. He was an advocate of temperance and Mrs. Shaffer did much to advance the cause of the W. C. T. U. She is survived by eight grandchildren, most of whom live in this city.

To My Friends.

It is with joy I tell you what Kodol did for me. I was troubled with my stomach for several months. Upon being advised to use Kodol, I did so, and words cannot tell the good it has done me. A neighbor had dyspepsia so that he had tried most everything. I told him to use Kodol. Words of gratitude have come to me from him because I recommended it.—Geo. W. Fry, Viola, Iowa. Health and strength, of mind and body, depend on the stomach, and normal activity of the digestive organs. Kodol, the great reconstructive tonic, cures all stomach and bowel troubles, indigestion, dyspepsia. Kodol digests any good food you eat. Take a dose after meals. L. W. Randolph.

Off the Track.

The street railway sprinkling car ran off the track opposite Cooley's Sanitarium, Saturday evening. Traffic beyond that point was suspended for more than an hour.

B. & L. ASSOCIATIONS DEMAND REGULATIONS

Legislation to Protect Interests of Those Investing in Such Institutions.

UNFAIR METHODS USED.

STATE AND NATIONAL LOANS NEED ATTENTION.

What Prominent Men Have to Say on the Subject—To Guard Against the Innocent Public Being Fleeced by the Shrewed Promoters.

Directors of local building and loan associations endorse the proposition made by various men in similar organizations throughout the State that there is much need for legislation to protect their interests. They also declare that a closer supervision of the savings institutions by the banking commissioner should be made.

Ex-Judge P. Hamilton Gilhooly, of Elizabeth, is quoted as saying:

"When the amount of capital invested in these enterprises, and the owners of that capital, are taken into consideration, in my judgment the State ought to be more rigid and careful in the regulation of such associations than it is of savings banks and banks of deposit. The great bulk of the money in the hands of the managers of building and loan associations, has been deposited by industrious and thrifty people, mostly of small means, who cannot protect themselves against dishonesty and greed.

"There has been a feeling among the managers of local associations that there was no danger likely to result to the members except from the State and national concerns; and against these latter, the protest of genuine building and loan men all over the State has been constant and earnest, and the prediction among them universal that their methods would eventually result in their destruction. I think I am justified in saying that every national and State building and loan association has been originated and continued by self-seeking adventurers. Central offices are secured, respectable men are enrolled among the directors, canvassers are sent abroad armed with literature that is misleading and full of false promises, ingenious calculations are set before the unsuspecting public, whereby it is made to appear that enormous profits are to be realized, promises of eight and ten per cent. interest are given in writing, none of which are ever been fulfilled. Generally, the investments made by these concerns are of such character that local associations or local investors would refuse to take the risk. The canvassers are paid a certain percentage out of all the money that passes through their hands, large enough to consume any profit by way of interest that might be realized on that money. The officers obtain proxies from the members and by this means perpetuate themselves in power, and with the proxies vote themselves salaries that are only limited by the capacity of the concern which they operate.

"Up to the present time, State supervision over building associations has been absolutely nominal. All that is required of the associations is an annual report made by the secretary, never verified by any other authority. The State does not concern itself, or has not, up to the present time, about the management, nor has it ever inquired, so far as I have been able to ascertain, respecting the securities taken, nor examined into the investments made by the officers, nor concerned itself about salaries charged or expenditures incurred. There may be a score of rotten, worm-eaten associations in this State at present, and there is not a public official who has any intimation or suspicion of the fact. With banks it is otherwise. The examiners visit these institutions, scrutinize all the securities, compare the cash and other assets, look over the accounts, and if they do their duty, when they finish their work they can certify with reasonable certainty as to their condition. Savings banks are restricted in their investments and kept under strict surveillance. Building and loan associations should be placed under the supervision of the banking department, and submitted to like scrutiny.

"The objection against State control has chiefly arisen because of the expense that would be entailed upon each association. The cost of the examination and compensation of the examiners is charged upon the bank examined, and would be charge upon the association investigated. It is this expense that has alarmed so many of the managers, whose cardinal idea is to minimize the cost of running the institution, so that in the majority of local neighborhood building associations, the total expense for hall rent, secretary, treasurer and stationery, does not exceed one thousand dollars a year, and in many of the smaller institutions it does not exceed five hundred dollars a year.

"There are a great number of such enterprises still doing active business in this State. There are undoubtedly some local institutions that are not being justly and properly managed, but I apprehend they are very few. There are probably some dishonest officers among the many associations in this State. The case of the secretary of the Passaic Building and Loan Association, who absconded about one hundred thousand dollars, which has just come to light, shows that it is possible there may be others among the local associations who are not faithful to their trust. The example of the Republic Savings and Loan Association and The Milliners Building and Loan Association of New York, both of which transacted a large amount of business in this State, together with a great number of other State and national associations that have come to grief, ought to convince the public that it is high time that legislation was had which would absolutely prohibit such concerns from doing business within the borders of this State.

"I am firmly convinced that every local building and loan association in out city is honestly and wisely managed."

Another well informed man says:

"I do not know how far the commissioner of banking and insurance can go into the matter of examination of building and loan associations. If he has not the power to examine them in the most critical manner, he ought to call the attention of Governor Franklin Murphy to the fact, and it is safe to say that the governor will see to it that the power is conferred by the next Legislature. I speak from what I know when I say that state and national loans do not exercise the caution observed by local loans.

"It is safe to say that the security offered by borrowers in state and national loans would not be considered by local ones. The failure of foreign loans is inevitable, the directors or managers pay no attention to their workings. The State should step in and protect the innocent public, who are fleeched by shrewd promoters representing national and state loans."

Another Fortune.

Joseph A. Neal, of East Second street, has received word from Thos. B. Wallace, an attorney at law in Dromore, Ireland, that the death of a widowed sister at that place has left him the heir to a considerable fortune. Mr. Neal has retained Hetfield & Hetfield to attend to dis interests.

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS!

BALTIMORE, Md., March 26, 1902.

Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago, my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulting a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

Then saw your advertisement, accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

F. A. WERMAN, 730 E. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.

Our treatment does not interfere with your usual occupation.

PRECIOUS OLD WORKS ARE CRUMBLING AWAY

The Valuable Collection of the New Jersey Historical Society.

IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS

A DESCRIPTION OF SOME NOTEWORTHY VOLUMES IN THE LOT.

Though Becoming Unreadable They May be Saved by Application of Special Process — Some State Papers Amongst Collection.

Crumbling away from old age and lack of proper care many interesting and valuable documents may be found in the New Jersey Historical Society's library. Some of them were written in the latter part of the seventeenth century. They take one back to the early days of the colony. There are many that were written or printed between 1700 and 1800. Time-worn, stained and faded, covered with dirty finger marks and frayed at the edges, the ancient papers are gradually becoming unreadable.

There seems to be only one way to save these precious relics from losing practically all value. That way is to have them treated with the Emery process. The latter is applied by the Emery Record Preserving Company, of Taunton, Mass. The sheet of paper to be preserved is enveloped in a transparent silk covering that is put on with a press in such a way that no seams are visible. It is said that the silk covering is so durable that it will last for an indefinite time without showing signs of wear. The contents, meanwhile, are protected from the ravages of time, moths and constant handling. Should the silk eventually wear out it is claimed that the matter it incloses would be in as good condition as when the process was applied and could be again treated to the process if it is desired to keep it longer.

There is a large amount of matter in the Historical Society's rooms on which the Emery method could be used to advantage. Some of the manuscripts are official letters, while others record conveyances of land from the Indian and from the Board of Proprietors to settlers in the colony. Many others on miscellaneous subjects are equally interesting and important. Most of them are written on stout paper, varying greatly in regard to their condition. Some over two centuries old are in a better state than others of only half that age. A few are on parchment, and these are naturally in much better condition than the others, except that they are fully as soiled.

Of the more interesting papers, one that is not very sound, is a letter dated June 1, 1700, from Andrew Hamilton, the Governor of the colony, to the Board of Proprietors in England. Governor Hamilton advises the proprietors to act speedily in relation to the surrender of the government to the crown in order to quell the disturbances in the province. The Governor brings a very earnest argument to a somewhat abrupt close, as follows: "I am unwilling to begin the other sheet, and therefore take leave." This document shows its age greatly. It is falling apart where it has been creased, being kept in a book, and it is badly faded. The Governor's letter is printed in "East Jersey Under the Proprietors."

A few of the old documents have been framed, but there are many others nearly, if not quite, as valuable that need to be taken care of in some way. The bulk of the ancient papers were pasted in scrap books many years ago. They are badly stained by dirty mucilage that was used, and most of them are cracked where they are folded. Although some very old ones look better than others, the ones damaged the worst are, as a rule, the most valuable. There are 137 documents in one book bearing dates from October 17, 1681, to December 19, 1754. Besides the deeds and official communications there are wills, receipted bills for clothing, etc., several letters and broadsides, or printed sheets of paper of irregular publication, sometimes containing matter of a revolutionary nature, and therefore printed surreptitiously. There is part of the journal of the ship Catherine, a pirate and slave trader in 1732, plying between New York and Africa. It contains no account of anything very exciting or interesting.

There is also a portfolio containing about 100 maps. A few are engraved and some are drawn in ink on parchment. But most of the old and very valuable ones are rough ink drawings on ordinary paper. The latter are much more badly off from wear than the others. Several of those that have fallen apart by the creases wearing through have been pasted on linen. In some cases this must have been done a long while ago, for the cloth is yellow with age. One of the oldest maps is an ink sketch of the lands of Governor Barclay and Dockwra on the Passaic river and Third Mountain. It was made by John Read, being in lead pencil has name and the date 1685. There is an engraved map of the plan of battle fought near Camden on August 16, 1780. It was published in London in 1787. Several other maps of Revolutionary battle are in the portfolio. Then there is a very interesting map of Newark in 1806. It was drawn by Charles Basham, of Newark Academy, and engraved by A. Anderson.

There is little chance of any of these old documents and maps being treated with the Emery process for a number of years to come. The Historical Society is under a large additional expense in maintaining its present commodious quarters, into which it moved from the comparatively small rooms on Broad street about fifteen months ago. There is no money to spend on the Emery process, and no steps can be taken to aid the preservation of the documents and maps, or a few of the more valuable ones among them unless the necessary funds are especially contributed for that purpose.

The process is expensive. The State of Massachusetts spent a large sum of money in having it applied to some of its ancient documents. Many of these could not be deciphered except by experts before they underwent the Emery method, but after the various pieces were put together and pressed out under the silk they were perfectly legible.

There was an appropriation by the New Jersey Legislature in 1900 of $600 and another in 1901 of $1,000 to be expended on the process. Fifteen books belonging to the State were repaired by it, when the appropriations were exhausted. This made an average cost of $106.66 per book, of over fifty cents per page. The process is a secret one. The Emery company sent its men from Taunton down to Trenton, where the men allowed no one to watch them do the work.

S. S. CHILDS NOT IN RACE

POPULAR RESTAURANT MAN IS HOT AFTER THE SENATORSHIP.

He Does Not Seek the Congressional Nomination Either, According to His Friends.

Samuel S. Childs, of Bernardsville, will not enter the race for the Democratic congressional nomination in the Fourth district, nor will he be a candidate for the State senate, according to reliable authority. The famous restaurant man is taking a rest and it is said that his business affairs have been a heavy strain on him of late. Entering the field for either one of them nominations would mean hard work and it is said that he does not desire to undertake it.

Should Mr. Childs step out of the senatorial race, Major Nelson Y. Dungan, of the Second regiment, and former prosecutor of Somerset county, would very likely be named as the Democratic candidate. Mr. Dungan is a man of great popularity and is particularly well known throughout the county, where he has always resided.

There is quite a satisfactory understanding between Major Dungan and Mr. Childs, and in the event of the latter deciding to make a fight for the nomination Major Dungan is not likely to give him much opposition.

"Mr. Childs would make a good candidate and is my second choice," said Major Dungan laughingly when the subject was broached to him.

INCIDENT IN HISTORY OF QUAKER MEETING

An Unostentatious Wedding in Days of Yore and the Poem it Inspired.

THE QUAKERESS BRIDE.

THE "BRIDE" IS STILL A RESIDENT OF THIS CITY.

Poem by Mrs. W. B. Kinney, a Very Gifted Writer—Mrs. Elizabeth C. Stedman, Mother of E. C. Stedman, a Witness of Marriage.

The stories of the Friends' Meeting House at Plainfield, N. J., published in the New York Tribune of May 25, and the Newark News of May 23, has recalled to the minds of the town's oldest inhabitants many interesting facts in connection with the ancient house of worship, founded in 1787.

One of these pleasant stories is full of romance and literary remembrance. In this quaint meeting house on the twenty-sixth day of 12th month, 1838, occurred the marriage of Mary W. Harned and Isaac W. Laing. According to the custom of Friends, no ritual was used but the simple one in which the bride and groom pledge their troth, without the intervention of minister or priest. Mrs. Elizabeth Clementine Stedman, the mother of Edmund Clarence Stedman, who was living at the time of her widowhood at the country home of her father, David L. Dodge, on the place well-known for many years as the Martine Estate, was one of the guests at the wedding. The simple beauty of the wedding inspired the following poem, entitled "The Quakeress Bride":

No, not in the halls of the noble and proud,
Where fashion assembles her glittering crowd;
Where all is in beauty and splendor arrayed,
Were the nuptials performed of the meek Quaker maid.

Nor yet in the temple, those rites which she took
By the altar, and the mitre-crowned bishop and book,
Where oft in her jewels stands proudly the bride,
Unawed by those vows which through life shall abide.

The building was humble, but sacred to One
Who bends the deep worship that utters no tone;
Whose presence is said to the lowliest smiled,
But dwells with the contrite and lowly of mind.

'Twas there, all unveiled, save by modesty, stood
The Quakeress bride, in her white satin hood;
Her charms unadorned by the garland or gem,
Yet fair as the lily just plucked from the stem.

A tear glistened bright in her dark, shaded eye,
And her bosom half uttered a tremulous sigh,
As the band she had pledged was confidingly given,
And the low murmured words were recorded in heaven.

I've been at the bridal where wealth spread the board,
Where the sparkling red wine in rich goblets was poured,
Where vain display in its surplice from ritual read
And the solemn response was impressively said.

I've seen the fond sire, in his thin locks of gray,
Give the pride of his heart to the bridegroom away,
While he brushed the big tear from his deep furrowed cheek,
And bowed the assent which his lips might not speak.

But in all the array of the costlier scene
Naught seemed to my eye so sincere in its mien,
No language so fully the heart to resign,
As the Quakeress bride's—"Until death I am thine."

"The Quakeress Bride" is living still in Plainfield and was one of the guests at the New York Yearly Meeting this year. She is the mother of Mrs. Charles Sandford, of East Front street.

The writer of this poem afterward became the wife of William Burnet Kinney, founder of The Daily Advertiser, Newark, N. J. During her widowhood and a long residence abroad her contributions to magazines and periodicals were extensive. Nothing in her writings shows more fully her reverence for simple truth than her appreciation of the poetical beauty of the unostentatious Quaker wedding.

His Sight Threatened.

"While picnicking last month my 11-year-old boy was poisoned by some weed or plant," says W. H. Dibble, of Sioux City, Ia. "He rubbed the poison off his hands into his eyes and for a while we were afraid he would lose his sight. Finally a neighbor recommended DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The first application helped him and in a few days he was as well as ever." For skin diseases, cuts, burns, scalds, wounds, insect bites, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is sure cure. Relieves piles at once. Beware of counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

Albert Schomp, of West Front street, spent a few days recently at Whitehouse.

Miss May Hickey, of Raritan, is spending a few days with Plainfield relatives.

Mrs. K. A. Griggs, of Somerville, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Martin, in this city.

Miss Lillian Hope, of Plainfield, has been visiting friends at Raritan for a short time.

Fred Todd, of Plainfield, has been visiting relatives at Whitehouse for a short time.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 31, 1902—Communion and Transformation"—Text, Ex. xxxiv, 29-35; Luke ix, 28, 29.

"As he prayed the fashion of his countenance was altered."

So has it ever been; so will it ever be. Whoever talks with God will change and become like Him. In a very real sense this is true among men. A strong personality impresses himself on all who come in contact with him. Their opinions alter, the tones of voice become different, the walk and bodily actions gradually change and become more like that of the teacher. Part of this effect is from conscious imitation and part is involuntary. It is not uncommon to find two elderly persons who have lived many years together resembling each other remarkably in features, speech and in many other respects.

Companionship leads to similarity of nature and action. If this is true among men, how significantly true it is when we turn to divine companionship! This is the clew to the human participation in the divine nature. If the pure in heart see God, as Jesus declared they do, then looking upon Him we may expect that gradually there will grow like Him, so that godliness becomes their nature and we can see the divine characteristics in their words and work.

This is with us more than momentary ecstatic vision. Moses was in communion with God until the mountain until he began to see the plans and to feel the thrill of the divine intention. The power and glory of God got hold of him, so that hunger and thirst were forgotten in the glow and spirit of a great thought and a mighty purpose. It could not be otherwise than that the face must show the radiance of the light which was in the soul. As clouds high in heaven show the radiance of the sun not yet risen, so the face catches reflections of the light which have not come above the horizon of action.

The matter of most importance to us is neither the veil over Moses' face nor the white garments of Jesus, but the transformation which can come to us by like communion with God. Here lies one of the highest privileges of our earthly life. We can talk with God; we can enter into His thoughts, share His desires and aid in the accomplishment of His plans. Not only the preacher and the class teacher, but every one of God's children, can have companionship with Him. Our daily work can be glorified and all our doing lifted out of the dead level and naire of the corrupt and commonplace and transfigured in the light of God. Moses' face, which shone, had the same old skin bronzed by forty years of desert life, but when God talked to him it shone like the face of an angel. Jesus' garments were the same everyday working clothes He had long worn, but when the soul glowed under the revelation of coming agony, crucifixion, death and resurrection, the raiment became white as snow. Let God by His Spirit talk with our souls and all life, and its tasks shall shine with divine beauty and glory.

Silent Sorrow.

Far better the silence of sorrow than the sound of it. Far better the smile of fortitude than the cloud of doubt. Far better the calm, serene brow than the wrinkles of petulance. The child that believes in his mother laughs at the foot that overturns his castle of blocks, and with a shout of glee he builds again the ruined towers into greater height. So do those who believe in God bear His strokes and take up the broken life and rear it into loftier spiritual attainment. Those who sulk and complain behold naught except blight and loss. And is there anywhere in the world a sadder sight than that of a dispirited man or woman? It is pathetic enough to stir the grief of angels. Ah, yes, in the silence of sorrow souls grow great. A nobler living has risen grandly to the bending skies of God's love, like that which Solomon planned, upon which the noise of workman's tools was not heard. Out of a quietness of soul such as this have reached hands which have swung bells celestial into peals of joy.—Presbyterian Journal.

A Loss Indeed.

We can afford to lose much in this world. Most of our material possessions may be taken from us without any positive loss to life, but we cannot afford to lose faith in God or in each other. The man who has lost faith in humanity is ready to abandon faith in God, and such a man ought as well be dead, for all the good he can be to the world or to himself. The great doers of the world are the great believers. A doubter has never yet been successful in this world in spite of the blessings that are sometimes heaped on doubters. "Be not faithless, but believe," said Gideon on the night when there was fighting to be done.—Baptist Union.

The Paths to God.

The paths to God are more in number than the breathings of created beings.—From the Persian.

God's Thoughts.

God has a thought for the maple;
You may read that thought in the tree.
Would you know His thought for the granite?
Look at the granite and see!

His thought for the springing grass
Is told by the cool, green sod;
The rose unfolding its petals
Discloses the mind of God.

His thought for the butterfly's life
Is writ on the insect's wings;
The word He speaks to the skylark
You hear when it soars and sings.

We think we are more than the bird,
More than the tree and the sod,
Yet, say, are we living our lives
As true to the thought of God?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 31—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—Communion and transformation. Ex. xxxiv, 29-35; Luke ix, 28, 29.

The two illustrations of communion and transformation which we have before us in the topical references are those of Moses and of Christ. The first one is that of Moses upon Mount Sinai. There he had held communion and fellowship with God, and when he came down from the mount the people saw that the face of Moses shone or that it had been transfigured with the light of God. The same thing happened to Christ upon the Mount of Transfiguration. While He had fellowship and communion with God we are told that He was transfigured, and this transfiguration took place while He prayed. The fashion of His countenance was altered, and His raiment was white and glistening.

In these two references we see that communion and transformation go hand in hand. Moses was in communion with God when he was transfigured with heavenly light. Christ was in prayer and communion with God when His countenance was changed and His raiment was white and glistening. The desire and the ambition of every Christian should be to lead a transformed and a transfigured life. The light of God should shine forth in our lives, and this can be the case only when we are faithful in holding communion and fellowship with God. Of an aged saint whose life was so beautiful the question was asked, How does it come that his life is so transfigured? The answer was that he lived so close to heaven that he saw things that others did not see and heard sounds that they did not hear. His life of communion was rewarded by a life of transforming glory of God shone forth in his countenance and in his life above that which was manifest in the lives of others, and it was brought about by nearness to God in that and in life.

Communion and transformation are possible to all Christians. Communion with God is evidently possible to all. Through the Lord Jesus Christ we have access to the throne of God at all times and under all circumstances. God has encouraged us in His word to pray unto Him and to hold fellowship and communion with Him. The results of prayer in one case will not be different from other cases. If communion with God led to transformation in the case of Moses and in the case of Christ, it will also follow in the lives of all who spend much time in communion and fellowship with God. It would be absolutely impossible for the spirit of man to hold close fellowship and communion with the Spirit of God and this fact not to be produced in the life. This glory of God would necessarily shine forth in the life of one who holds constant communion and fellowship with God. We see those about us who impress us with the fact that the light of God is constantly in their lives. At times we wonder why it is that certain saints of God seem to be surrounded with a heavenly halo. Undoubtedly the cause, if we could investigate it, would be found in the fact that they spend much time in prayer and much time in communion, and it is while they pray that they are transfigured and the light of the glory of God shines constantly forth in their lives.

We scarcely realize what a great thing it is to live in the opportunity of communion with God. We would find it a delight to hold fellowship and communion with the great men of the world, but how much greater a delight it should be to hold communion with God Himself, who has made the world and sustains it by His power. There is not only the privilege of prayer, but there are many blessings attached to prayer. It is not only that God answers our petitions, but in this act of worship there is close touch and contact with the divine one, and this is impossible without producing beneficent results in our own lives. The cares of life are lightened, its burdens are easier borne after we have spent time in prayer with God, the dark places are lighted, and the ways are made easier of travel by the light that shines from above during the time which we spend in prayer and communion with God.

The Church and Economics.

The church has a relation to the whole life. It enters society as a wholesome, leavening influence, touching all that pertains to the every day living of the people. Its message is first of all the love of God. The first effort is to bring men to God, but it also seeks to help men and so lift them up to a higher level of life as well as to the hope of salvation. This all of life comes within its sphere. Expediency must determine what should be done to alleviate present suffering and to change the surroundings of the individual so as to develop industry, economy, enterprise and general thrift; but all this and more is the sphere of Christianity will reveal numberless ways in which to work for a social uplift.—United Presbyterian.

Present Opportunities.

That is the best kind of optimism which rises in existing conditions opportunities for doing the home, the life, the state and the church better. A cheery and expectant view of possibilities and attainments becomes a practical and animating incentive to the highest exertions toward an improved situation, whereby reforms are effected and worthy transformations come to the surface for the general benefit of all classes.—Presbyterian.

Revelation.

His mystic seal is set on everything.
For great and small are one to visual mind.
And in the dust, upon an insect's wing,
As in a world, we trace omnipotence.
—Benjamin F. Leggett.

STATE BANK NOTES TURN UP

MANY FROM THAT DEFUNCT INSTITUTION ARE BEING CIRCULATED.

They Appear Particularly in Middlesex County—Secret Service Officers on Watch.

"The bank notes of the defunct State bank of this city are turning up again quite numerously about the country," says the New Brunswick Home News, "having been put in circulation from several points, evidently. Henry G. Parker, the cashier of the National Bank of New Jersey, said today that he is receiving one or more inquiries daily about these bank notes, the inquirers wanting to be informed as to their value. Today he received an inquiry from a New York party enclosing four bills of $1 denomination. He has received so many similar inquiries that he has had a standing form prepared to send out in answer to them. It costs him considerable postage to be obliging to his correspondents.

"The notes which he received today had the name D. S. Lloyd signed to them as president. The writing was poor, and a forgery, as no one by the name of Lloyd was president of the bank. The bills were also dated 1878. This, too, has been filled in, as the State bank closed its doors in 1877. All the notes were signed by Cashier Coddington. These signatures were genuine.

"The secret service department has been endeavoring to get on the track of the circulators of these bank notes for some time. The way they became scattered about the country is of easy solution. When the bank became defunct, a great quantity of bank notes were on hand. They were allowed to remain in the building. After a time the place was cleaned out, and the contents, including a lot of the notes, were sold to a local junk dealer.

"He disposed of them to curiosity and stamp collectors, and in that way they became scattered. This transaction was innocent enough in itself, but some of the notes fell into the hands of counterfeiters and forgers, and they have put many into circulation."

SETTLING WAR CLAIMS.

Work of Commission Appointed to Ascertain Claims of Spanish War Volunteers.

Colonel E. W. Hine, Major J. F. Clime and Captain C. Albert Gasser, commissioners appointed by Governor Murphy to investigate the clothing accounts of New Jersey volunteers in the service in 1898, have organized by electing Colonel Hine, president; Major Clime, treasurer, and Lieutenant Charles J. Allen, Company E, First Regiment, National Guard, secretary.

The lieutenant will write to the captain of every company that saw service in the war with Spain to ascertain the exact condition of affairs in relation to the claims made by the volunteers. An effort will be made to give each man an opportunity to explain in what way he feels aggrieved and in what way he was overcharged by the State or the Federal Government. There is an idea prevalent that in some way the men have been charged too much money for their clothing, and in several instances these statements seem to be true. The commission expects to complete its report in the early session of the next Legislature.

Miss Ethel Huff, of Centreville, is visiting relatives in Plainfield for several days.

Miss Gussie Wyckoff, of Somerville, has been visiting Plainfield relatives for a few days.

County Clerk Howard, of Rahway, has been sojourning at Atlantic City for a short time.

The Misses Mercein, of Grand street, have returned from a pleasant visit with their aunt, Mrs. Frank Keller, of Elizabeth.

THOS. A. NEVINS, SR., PROMOTER, IS DEAD

Prime Mover in Organization of the Local Street Railway Company, Passes Away.

A REMARKABLE CAREER

DIES AT HIS HOME IN CASTLE CONNELL, IRELAND, YESTERDAY.

Starts Life as a Coachman, and Rises to Position of Promoter and Financier—At One Time Engaged in Banking Business.

A cable message received at Orange Thursday brought the news of the death Thomas A. Nevins, Sr., which occurred at Castle Connell, county Limerick, Ireland, Thursday morning. The elder Nevins had lived in Ireland several years, paying brief visits to this country each year. Coming to this country as a lad of twenty, Mr. Nevins began life here as a coachman, but his shrewdness and native ability soon led him into business as a contractor, and he became prominent as a successful promoter and financier. He was the prime mover in the Plainfield Street Railway Company and furnished considerable capital towards its construction.

He was a member of the Orange Board of Education from 1890 to 1894. He was born in Ireland on May 30, 1844, and in Orange was first employed by J. S. Otis, a member of the firm of H. B. Claflin & Co. Mr. Otis was the owner of large tracts of property, and was engaged in developing them, and this gave young Nevins his first ideas about money making. He worked hard and steadily prospered. He bought vacant land, cut it into streets, and sold it. He went into the electrical contracting business, and built trolley lines. He bought a large tract of land in East Orange, cut it up into streets, got the town to macadamize it, bid on the work, got the job, took the town's bonds in payment, and paid his own assessment for the improvement under the law which enabled him to make ten annual payments. He bought Holly Hall, the handsome residence of the late Gardner R. Colby in East Orange, named after H. Hudson Holly, the architect, lived there for a time and then went to Ireland and astonished people by buying Kileen Castle. He afterward sold it. Mr. Nevins made a substantial fortune by the consolidation of the street railways of Detroit, which he accomplished. He also consolidated all the gas interests in the vicinity of Haverhill, Mass. His latest scheme was to consolidate the trolley lines between Liverpool and Manchester. His son sailed for Europe a month ago to complete this deal. The lines were to be built entirely with American money. The father and son were engaged in the banking business at 45 Wall street, New York.

Among his near relatives is his son, Thomas A. Nevins, of Orange; a nephew, Michael Nevins, of this city, who is employed on the local trolley, and Harry and James McCormick, formerly of Plainfield. Mr. Nevins, the son, is now in Europe, as is also Harry McCormick, the latter having been there for a long time constructing trolley roads. James McCormick enlisted in the U. S. Army. His present whereabouts is not known.

SIGNAL VICTORY.

Proceedings Against Cab Company Brought to a Close Through Judge W. A. Coddington.

The proceedings instituted by Mrs. Lucy McVey against the Plainfield Cab Company and Mrs. Julia Peck, which were terminated by Chancellor Stevens' refusal to issue the injunction prayed for, have attracted unusual attention. The complainant's contention was that the cab company has been interfering with her alleged right of way through its property from North avenue to the rear of the McVey Hotel property.

In handling the case for the cab company Judge W. A. Coddington took the position that the bill filed in the cause was not specific and that no rights of the complaining party had received any interference. As for closing the large doors leading through the company's stable, Judge Coddington maintained that it was not shown that it is necessary to have them open at night. All the contentions of the learned counsel for the cab company were sustained by the court and the victory for Judge Coddington's client is complete.

BRANCHING OUT.

New Jersey Central Railroad and Reading System to Spend Millions for Collieries.

Plans are being made by the railroads looking to the end of the coal strike and the Reading and Jersey Central roads and the Temple Iron Company, it is said, will spend $3,000,000 developing new collieries.

These companies are also planning for a more economical management of the distribution of the coal to the various markets and the concentration of the sale under one agency for these three companies.

It is said the Reading will confine itself to sale of coal in the eastern markets instead of dividing the traffic with other roads to hold the western trade, and have large storages to hold the supply which may not be called for directly.

The Reading has hundreds of acres of coal land, so far undeveloped, and it is to these the company looks for the future supply.

EYES LIKE THE COLT'S.

A Western Horseman's Success in Subduing an Incorrigible New York Slum Girl.

Five families had successively volunteered to provide a home for the little "slum" girl, and the fifth had just sent her back to the arms of the benevolent organization which had charge of her. According to the reports from these families, says the New York Post, she was not only an infant fury, but a mendacious sneak, and the agent who was taking her back to the city felt discouraged at the prospect of having to misrepresent in order to make a sixth family take her.

A big, broad-jawed man, friendly with the spirit of the west, sat down beside him. Needing some one to share his troubles, the agent told him the whole story.

"I'll take that the girl," said the stranger. The agent gasped.

"You know I told you what a terror she is," he said.

"I know," said the man, "but I think she and I can get along all right. I don't know what I told you I was in the stock-raising business. I've got a colt on my farm that nobody can manage but myself. Well, that little girl has eyes just like that colt. As soon as we get to the station I'll telegraph to Randolph to my wife and tell her about it."

The sequel to the story is the most satisfactory part of it. The stockman's prediction proved true. The little girl was perfectly happy in her new home, and the couple have recently adopted her and legally given her their name.

GAVE THE WRONG ROLL.

Best Man Makes Singular Discovery in Dress Suit Year After the Wedding.

Immediately after a wedding which took place in Washington the best man started for South Africa, where he remained more than a year. On his return, says a writer in Harper's Magazine, he was given a dinner, and wore evening clothes for the first time since the wedding.

In the midst of the evening, fumbling in his waistcoat pocket, he astonished himself and his friends by pulling out a hundred-dollar bill. Where had it come from? A sudden thought flashed across his mind.

The next morning he went to the clergyman who had married his friends.

"Do you remember marrying Mr. Armitage and Miss Bently about a year ago?"

"Oh, perfectly," replied the clergyman. "I see them constantly at my church."

"Then will you pardon me if I ask you a delicate question in strict confidence. How much did you receive as your fee?"

"I will return frankness with frankness," returned the clergyman, smiling whimsically, "I was the single fee that ever came my way. After the ceremony the best man, with a profusion of thanks, slipped into my hand a small silver of plug tobacco wrapped in a wad of paraffin paper!"

LET THIS BE A WARNING.

Strange Series of Disasters That Befell the Stubborn Borrower of a Paper.

A man who was too stingy to take his home paper sent his little boy to borrow the copy taken by his neighbor, says the Youth's Leader. In his haste the boy ran over a $4 hive of bees, and in ten minutes he looked like a warty squash. His cries reached his father who ran to his assistance, and failing to notice a barbed wire fence, ran into it, breaking it down, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy, and ruining a $5 pair of pants. The cow took advantage of the gap in the fence and got into the cornfield and killed herself eating green corn. In pulling the racket, the wife ran, upset a four gallon churn full of rich cream into a basket of kittens drowning them. In the hurry she lost a $7 set of teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled through the cream and the parlor, ruining a brand new $20 carpet. During the excitement the oldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up 11 setting hens, and the calves got out and chewed the tails off four fine night shirts. The wife could have taken a paper of his own for $1 per year and saved all the trouble and expense.

Quiet Auction Sales.

At the Crabbet sale of Arab horses an American lady, who was among the guests, expressed great contempt for the quiet method of Mr. Tattersall, the auctioneer, says the London Chronicle. "I'd like you to hear one of our auctioneers," she said. "He would be an orator; and he would make those prices jump. That man doesn't know how to talk." It was explained to her that the auctioneer knew his business well-tipped, watchful bidders had examined the horses, knew as much about horses as he did, and knew just how far they were going. He knew, too, that at the first touch of oratory they would relight cigars and go for a stroll till he had finished. In this particular market, as the American lady finally admitted, the English method is quicker, honester and more effective.

HONESTY IS REWARDED.

Chicago Woman Gives a Whole Dime to the Man Who Returned $40,118 to Her.

A Chicago woman lost a bag containing papers and currency valued at $40,118 the other afternoon and when they were returned to her she rewarded the finder with $20,000.10. He was unable to reply or to learn her name before she hurried away, but later he recovered from the shock and placed the dime in a gilded frame.

The woman who lost the bag was nervous, middle-aged and dressed in black. She left the bag on a seat in a South Side elevated car. It contained $118 in cash, besides mortgages amounting to $40,000. The man who found it was Charles A. Stuckrath, a guard on the Union loop at Madison street and Fifth avenue.

At five o'clock in the afternoon Stuckrath, passing through the car, espied the portemonnaie and picked it up. When he saw what was in it he notified the officials of the road. About six o'clock the owner of the lost property entered the general offices of the Union loop in the Fisher building and excitedly told of her loss. She was referred to Stuckrath and hurried to his station.

GAVE HIM A DIME.

"I think it may be yours, madam," said the guard when she had described her loss, "but you must first identify it."

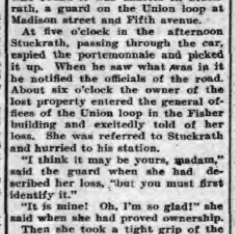
"It is mine! Oh, I'm so glad!" she said when she had proved ownership.

Then she took a tight grip of the bag, calmly opened it and carefully selecting a dime from within its folds gave the coin to the guard.

TRIED TO STARVE SNAKE.

But It Crawled from Its Prison, Hale and Hearty, After a Lapse of 18 Months.

"The man who tries to starve a snake to death is in a bad way," said a man who has had some experience in dealing with reptiles, "and it happen to know what I am talking about, because of a little thing that happened to me a number of years ago. There is really no telling how long a snake can go without food. It is estimated that a horse can live 25 days without solid food. A horse will live on water for that length of time. Bears can live six months without food. They generally live through the winter months by sucking their paw. Of course, they have food on hand, and they slip out to get what they can, but the main sustenance of the bear is the accumulated flesh of the summer. But I am inclined to believe that the snake can hold the record when it comes to doing without food. I have had occasion a few years ago which convinced me of this fact. I caught a rattlesnake in my henhouse in the southeastern part of Arkansas, and happened to catch him so that he could not get out. There was a good-sized rat hole in the place, and he darted into this as a last resort. I stopped the hole so the snake could not get out, and for the purpose of starving the reptile to death. I never thought anything more about the snake until more than 18 months after that, when I had occasion to make some repairs about the place. It was necessary to do some excavating. I was simply startled to find a short distance below the surface the snake I had supposed to starve to death. He was a little lank, and was not very active. But he was still alive. I felt sorry for the reptilian, and would not kill him, allowing him to crawl away. Since that time I have been convinced that a snake could do without food for a considerable length of time, and the claim that they can go 21 months does not startle me at all."



A LIVELY SNAKE CORPSE.

A MARVELOUS TREE.

Palm in Brazil Which is Put to Many Uses by the People of That Country.

Undoubtedly the most marvelous tree in the world grows in Brazil. It is the carnahuba palm, and can be employed for many useful purposes, says the Boston Transcript. Its roots produce the same medicinal effects as sarsaparilla. Its stems afford strong, light fibers, which acquire a beautiful luster, and serve also for joists, rafters and other building materials, as well as for stakes for fences.

From parts of the tree wines and vinegar are made. It yields also a saccharine substance, as well as a starch, resembling sago. Its fruit is used for feeding cattle. The pulp has an agreeable taste, and the nut, which is oleaginous and emulsive, is sometimes used as a substitute for coffee. Of the stem are made musical instruments, water tubes and pumps are made. The pitch is an excellent substitute for cork. From the stem a white liquid similar to the milk of the cocoanut and a flour resembling manioca may be extracted.

Of the straw, hats, baskets, brooms and mats are made. A considerable quantity of this straw is shipped to Europe, and a part of it returns to Brazil manufactured into hats. The straw is used for thatching houses. Moreover, salt is extracted from it, and likewise an alkali used in the manufacture of common soap.

TOMBSTONE AS EVIDENCE.

Importance of the Inscription in a Kansas City Lawsuit for Property Rights.

The title to Kansas City property valued at over half a million dollars has been clouded by a suit filed in the circuit court there by the heirs of the late Nancy Ann O'Brien to property, according to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, includes 52 acres in the fashionable residence district. Mrs. Priddy died in 1892. It is contended by her heirs, who are residents of Central Point, Ore., that she was 60 years old at the time of her death, while the defendants to the suit maintain that she was 66 years old. On this point the suit hinges. If she were but 60 years old she had not reached a lawful age to execute a deed at the time she disposed of her property here in 1852. There is no record of her birth, the only evidence of her age being her tombstone, and the claim is made that it has been tampered with. The tombstone, a slab of marble which was made in Oregon for use in the trial, shows this record: "Aged 60 years," but the cipher looks as though it might originally have been a "6," and it will be left to the court to decide whether it was or not. The court declares her age to have been 60 years at the time of her death the heirs will win.

Will Quickly Answer to "Hello," But Doesn't Know the Meaning of a Whistle.

A dog fancier says that city dogs would have to learn over a good many things if they were sent to smaller towns or the country.

"When you train a dog in a small town or the country," he says, "you whistle. A city dog doesn't know what a whistle means.

"You seldom hear a city man whistle to his dog when the dog is untied, and, of course, there is no use in whistling to one that is at the end of a string. Most city dogs are taught to come at the crack of a whip, or the ordinary call: 'Come here.'

"The city dog is also familiar with the salutation: 'Hello!' and he will frequently prick up his ears at that when he won't notice any other call.

"A city dog seldom barks on the street when he is at large. He may make signal rockets if he is tied up in a backyard, but rarely in the streets.

"You will find every sailor's dog a shipmate. They seem to have a fondness for sailors. An ordinary dog will follow a sailor when he wouldn't be coaxed by anybody else. The city dog's habits are peculiar."

Deadly Dukite Snake.

One who has been all over the world said on a recent visit to the New York Press: "Your Martinique friend, fer-de-lance, is not to be compared with the dukite snake of Australia. It is like the pictures you have seen of him, a long, red snake, with eyes the living embodiment of evil. The dukites never go alone. If you are unfortunate enough to kill one without killing its mate the latter will follow your trail remorselessly, like death, or fate, and, then if you jump at him from the spot, it will kill you as sure as you killed its partner."

Piff-Puff a New Game.

People who ping-pong too strenuous for hot weather may be interested in "piff-puff," a new New Zealand game of skill. The object is to play with a miniature pair of bellows and an air ball, which is very light. At each end of the table are upstanding goals, and the play lies in directing the ball through the opponent's goal. This, by a stroke of luck, may be done in a few minutes, or it may not be accomplished in a night.

LETTER FROM LEW THOMAS

A FORMER PLAINFIELDER RELATES A STORY OF AN ODD FIND.

The Manuscript Copy of a Robert Burns' Poem Was Picked Up In Philippines.

Sometime ago a letter from Lewis L. Thomas, addressed to the Newark Evening News, relating the finding of a manuscript copy of one of Bobbie Burns' poems, was published in that newspaper. A couple of months ago the strange disappearance of Mr. Thomas, who was formerly a newspaper man in this city, caused much excitement here where he has many friends.

It was generally believed at the time that he had been killed, his name being confused with that of a New England school teacher who had been murdered.

The Plainfielder is now engaged as a government teacher in the Philippines and his letter will be of interest to friends here. It is as follows:

"You can find any sort of old thing in the Philippines. You will find all varieties of wood, all kinds of fruits and all sorts of men—men whose people do not care to know anything about them; men whose people are weeping at home for them, and men whose creditors are looking for them. And they are all interesting. One of the strange and surprising things discovered in the islands is in the possession of Private Patrick J. M. O'Brein, of Company G, Nineteenth United States Infantry, now bound for 'God's country,' where such things as his find are apt to awaken more interest than in this land of money-getting. Private O'Brien carries with him a manuscript copy of Burns's 'A man's a man for a' that.' "In the spring of 1900 Private O'Brien was one of a detachment of eight men sent out to inculcate a little respect for the United States in the mind of the Filipino insurrecto or ladron. The region they were operating in was about Carcar. And the unusually poor marksmanship of the whole detachment indirectly brought about the find. If a certain escaping 'Tao' had fallen a victim to the ordinary skill of the deatchment he would have been left as any other dead on the field, and the men would have kept straight on without worming their way up a gorge lined with stiff underbrush. Into this gorge the Filipino had run and there had disappeared. A little search disclosed a part of his garments clinging to a jutting rock, and after a little clearing of brush an entrance to a cave was found. Within the cave was a large amount of legal loot. There was the usual quantity of Mexican money and clothing of all descriptions. It was speedily taken care of by the men, while the sergeant in charge was considering the best way to keep the soldiers safe from attack and preparing a report of the incident. O'Brien, of which was and showed him a paper, but the anxious sergeant only gave it a passing glance and kept on with his duties.

"A few days later the Hospital Corps man (now a contract surgeon) looked over the various shares of loot and immediately saw that O'Brien's was the cream of the capture. He and the sergeant are both Burns enthusiasts and are well acquainted with the peculiarities of the poet ploughman's signature. O'Brien was approached in more than one way to exchange his find for something of property, but the little Irishman steadily refused all offers.

"From other papers taken at the time it was learned that the copy originally belonged, long years ago, to a Scotchman named Cook, a native of Edinburgh. Cook's history is a romantic one. Early in the last century the mystery of the islands attracted him, and, with bag and baggage, he came over to enter the employ of Smith, Bell & Co., one of the oldest firms in the Philippines. He was satisfied to stay at Cebu. After a time long trouble took hold of him and he went up into the mountains in the vicinity of Carcar to try the benefits of a famous hot sulphur spring in the hills. He moved all his goods out with him and took up life in a Filipino shack with the invaluable bit of paper. But the sulphur baths of Carcar did not have the desired effect, and at last, in the final stages of the disease, the man went to a spring on the island of Negros, where he died, leaving all his property behind him. The careful natives took it all and hid it in the cave where at last it was found."

ALL-PLAINFIELD NINE WINS BENEFIT GAME

Local Aggregation of Stars Easily Defeats the Xavier Deaf Mutes Team.

PROCEEDS FOR CHARITY

A BIG CROWD OF BASEBALL ENTHUSIASTS WATCH THE MATCH.

Netherwood Fresh Air Home and King's Daughters Baby Camp the Beneficiaries—All-Plainfield Rolls Up Score in Sixth Inning—8 To 1.

It may not be exactly proper to say that the New York baseball team which played the All-Plainfield team, Wednesday, Aug. 20, was struck dumb by its fervor, but at any rate it was given a great surprise. The visitors were the Xavier Deaf Mutes. They were defeated by a score of 8 to 1, but such was the result of the game. But there was no kicking, that is, not in the ordinary loud voiced national game way, but the mutes nearly broke their fingers trying to tell how it happened.

The contest was for the benefit of the Netherwood Fresh Air and King's Daughters baby camp and was witnessed by a crowd larger than many of the Saturday attendances. It started off well and bade fair to be a close match for the first five innings. The score then stood two to one in favor of Plainfield when the locals developed a batting streak which netted six runs. The mutes tried hard to overcome the barrier and succeeded in shutting the home contingent out for the rest of the game but try as they might they could not send another man over the plate.

The result of the game was due in a large measure to the superb pitching of "Tommie" Burns of the Safe Works team, who was in the box for the locals. Two hits, both of them far from each other, were all the visitors made while ten batsmen swatted the air in a vain endeavor to find the sphere. He received faultless support and the team as a whole demonstrated that Plainfield can place a nine in the field that with a little practice in team work would prove almost invincible. Those of the Mutes who did get to first by some means, invariably died a second at the hands of Martin, formed a pair that let nothing escape. Taylor, Shortman and Doyle formed an outfield that robbed the visitors of several hits while the infield was the acme of strength. It consisted of "Smiling" Jimmie Montross, D. B. Martin, George Schoonmaker and George Bolsterlie. All held their positions down as though they always played them.

The Mutes played good ball. Brown had excellent control of the ball in all but the sixth inning when he was touched up badly. After that he settled down and did good work. His backstop, Hamilton, was a wonder, and First Baseman Haydon, left field Bruton and Third Baseman Mulcahy, played in snappy style. All are good base runners but their inability to find Burns' delivery kept them from scoring.

The summary is as follows:

BENEVOLENT COUNCIL HOLDS CELEBRATION

Progressive Organization of Jr. O. U. A. M. Observed its First Anniversary.

ENTERTAINING AFFAIR.

SISTER COUNCILS IN THIS VICINITY WELL REPRESENTED.

Rattling Good Programme—Bountiful Repast—Midnight Before Affair Was Brought to a Close—The Committee in Charge.

One year's existence as a fraternal organization, attended with rapid growth, was not allowed to pass unnoticed by Benevolent Council, No. 266, Jr. O. U. A. M. The first anniversary was Friday evening and in honor of the occasion an entertainment was given in Washington Hall, for the benefit of the council and visiting delegations. Among some of the sister councils represented were Franklin and Somerset, of this city, Twilight, of Scotch Plains; William G. Holton, of Dunellen; Friendship, of New Market; Elizabeth and Winfield Scott, of Elizabeth; George H. Adams, of Newark; Asbury, of Asbury Park; Union, of Rahway; Fairview, of Gallia; Goodwill, of New Brunswick, and Pioneer, of Bound Brook. With those from this city the number of Juniors filled the hall.

The visiting delegations were received by a committee appointed for the purpose and when all were seated an entertaining programme was commenced. It opened with an address of welcome made by Warden Robert M. Clark, followed by remarks on the part of State Councillor Brown, in the course of which he referred to the rapid growth of the order in the past year, which in round numbers was about 40,000. He spoke of Benevolent's work in congratulatory terms and at the close of his speech presented the Council with a charter, the first of the new style to be issued. Other addresses were made by various visitors who responded when called upon.

In continuation of the programme vocal solos of a high order of merit were rendered by Horace and Joseph Martin, guitar and mandolin selections by "Ragtime Tom" and "Jay," buck and wing dancing by the ever popular Lusardi and Bowers, vocal selections by Thomas Muir, violin selections by Kenneth Stewart, with accompaniment by Charles Suhr, Jr., and in conclusion Whitney Frazee operated his phonograph.

With the completion of the entertainment, all adjourned to the supper table where an excellent repast had been prepared. While the viands were being disposed of, a flow of wit and sallies of good natured jollity which characterizes Junior gatherings in general and Benevolent in particular, continued without cessation. It was midnight before the affair terminated and the visitors began their homeward journey, but not before Benevolent Council had been thanked collectively and individually for its successful anniversary celebration.

The committee in charge of the affair and to whom credit is due for its complete success consisted of George M. Ballantyne, chairman, Walter Fisher, Edward C. Searing, Charles Suhr, Jr., and H. J. Martin.

SON PREACHED.

Rev. W. R. Hart Occupies Pulpit of Trinity Reformed Church in Place of His Father, Rev. John Hart.

Rev. John Hart, of Neshanic, who was engaged to occupy Dr. Schenck's pulpit Sunday morning in Trinity Reformed church, was unable to fill the engagement and his son, Rev. William Reese Hart, who has recently accepted a charge in the Reformed church at West Farms, the Bronx, N. Y., was sent to fill his father's engagement. The young divine was only recently licensed to preach, in June, but he gives evidence of making his mark as a pulpit orator as he adds years to his life.

KENELM BREAKS RECORD

A. C. VAIL'S SPEEDY TROTTER MAKES A REMARKABLE SHOWING.

Honors Divided Between Palatina and Merit Wilkes—Fairmount Maid Wins Against Field.

There were several interesting races on the track at the Plainfield Driving Park Saturday afternoon, including some sensational finishes on the part of A. C. Vail's "Kenelm," who trotted to a road wagon. He made the first mile in 2:36, the first half in 1:21 and the last half in 1:17. The second mile was made in 2:29, the first half in 1:16 and the last in 1:13. The next mile was made in 2 23¼, the first half in 1:13 and the last in 1:11¼. The fourth mile trotted by this horse was made in 2:23¾, the first half in 1:12 and the last in 1:10¾. The last quarter was made in 34½ seconds. This exhibition is considered remarkable and has never been equaled on this track.

Honors were divided between Chas. Brower's "Palatina" and Edward Campbell's "Merit Wilkes," the first heat going to "Palatina," in 2:33 and the second to "Merit Wilkes," in 2:29. The third race was between D. C. Smalley's "Ned Davis," John Osborn's "Fairmount Maid," and N. B. Smalley's "Arion Maid." On account of a tire coming off the sulky, N. B. Smalley dropped out of the race. Osborn won both heats in 2:31 and 2:28.

"Palatina," has been shipped to New York, where he will be matched in a race on the speedway for $100 a side. The race will come off next week.

LIKES SOLDIER LIFE.

A Plainfield Boy Who Has Seen Service in the Philippines is to Re-Enlist Shortly.

Walter Hunt, of West Front street, has returned home after three years' service as a private in the Philippines. He was one of the soldiers present at the capture of Aguinaldo and was in many of the most important engagements taking place in the islands. He is enthusiastic over the treatment accorded him while in the service, and it is his intention to re-enlist after spending a short time in Plainfield with his parents.

Prize Winner.

The prize picture, "A scene along the Springfield road near Baltusrol," published in the New York Tribune last Sunday, was taken by Miss Anna W. Boorsem, of 112 Liberty street. The photograph is an excellent one and quickly recognized by anyone who has traveled over that road.

Substitutes for Panama Hats.

Panama straw hats are highly fashionable in Japan, though on account of the price, which is much higher than that of the ordinary straw hats, they are bought only by the rich or the fashionable. This obstacle may be removed if, as reported in an Osaka paper, the substitutes for the Panama straw found in middle Formosa are really adapted for the purpose. The substitutes are said to be the fibers of the leaves of a certain tropical tree of very rapid growth. Six fibers can be obtained from each leaf, which is about four inches wide and four feet long, and it is said that the cost of 10,000 fibers is about six yen. A certain foreign firm of Yokohama is said to have already given a large order for the fibers, and the Panama hats made with this new material may therefore appear on the market this summer. If the new fibers are really suited for headgear Formosa may be said to have hit upon a new resource.—Japan Weekly Times.

Joys of Camp Life.

Camping—living the day long in "God's own out-of-doors," and sleeping at night under the stars in the fragrant forest—is one of the sweetest modes of existence this world can offer; and in all America there is no section, of equal area, affording better or more diversified opportunities to the camper, boatman or canoeist than does the Adirondack region. Every requisite which goes to make up a camping or cruising ground has here been lavishly supplied by nature; captivating scenery, sublime in places, yet always repose-ful, millions of acres of verdant forests, thousands of navigable lakes, streams and ponds, range on range of majestic mountains, innumerable crystal springs, a climate and an air that are incomparable in their life-renewing properties—all these, and more, are found in most fascinating combination in the Adirondacks.—Harry V. Radford, in Four-Track News.

Fishing in City Streets.

In the town of Winchester, England, people may be seen in the public streets fishing for trout. Several minor streams feed the river Itchen, which flows so calmly and clear through the city. These streams often run open down a Winchester street here and there, or they thus run for a certain distance and then are conducted through underground passages for a fair length, after which they emerge once more to the light of day. Where they run underground there are in many places gratings that cover them from the street and lead the rain into them, but these are not sufficiently inclosed to prevent the keen fisherman from dropping his baited line through the grating and patiently waiting for a bite. He often gets such a bite, too, from a trout of good size, and he finds his line carried away some distance.—N. Y. Sun.

Trees as Cooling Agents.

We are in the habit of seeking the shade of a tree as a means of getting cool, but the tree has not only power it has of reducing the temperature. On the same principle that a lump of ice will cool the air around it, because its own temperature is uniformly about 45 degrees, that is to say, the temperature of the tree as a body. This is little understood, perhaps, but it is a recognized scientific fact, and it adds much force to the argument in favor of planting trees in cities. A clump of trees is capable of making a material reduction in temperature. The woods, therefore, are cool, not only because they are shady, but because the trees are constantly fighting out of the heat.—Science.

Troubles Enough.

Having once lost a case in New York "Counselor" Nolan sadly remarked: "My poor clients is little likely to get justice, done here until the judgment day."

"Well, counselor," said the court, "if I have an opportunity, I'll plead for the poor woman myself on that day."

"Your honor," replied Nolan, "will have troubles of your own upon that day."—Argonaut.

Sticking to One Location.

A singular illustration of the persistence with which the Japanese adhere to their family vocations is seen in an announcement in a Japanese newspaper that a certain celebrated dancing master was to hold a service in honor of the one thousandth anniversary of the death of his ancestor, who was the first of the family to take up the profession.—N. Y. Sun.

One Way to Avoid It.

"Dearie," said Mrs. Lovedovey, "I see in the papers that a man out west has had his stomach removed. I wonder why?"

A Pap Thomas Story.

Tom Styles, of Fort Scott, grows reminiscent about Gen. George H. Thomas. Styles was detailed to guard a pay car from Memphis to Louisville. At Paris he was left alone with the car for a short time. A drunken soldier came along and tried to enter the car, and showed fight when he was ordered away. At last, after the soldier had commenced to shoot with his revolver, Styles opened fire with his musket and brought the man down with a hole in his leg. On arriving at headquarters the young soldier was ordered to report the affair to Pap Thomas. He went with fear and trepidation, thinking of nothing but a court-martial. "I hear," said Thomas, "that you shot a fellow down at Paris the other day." "Yes," responded Styles. "Where did you hit him?" inquired the general. "In the leg," responded Styles. "Well, let me tell you one thing, young man," said the general. "This country has about all the cripples it needs. If you have occasion to do any more shooting, shoot to kill."—Kansas City Journal.

Consular Clerks.

The recent appointment of a consular clerk under the department of state has called attention to the peculiar status of those offices. The law provides for 13 consular clerks and fixes their pay for the first five years of service at $1,000, but allows them actual expenses when traveling or serving in foreign lands, which is usually the case. They are appointed by the president and serve practically for life. The statute governing their tenure provides that a consular clerk "shall not be removed from office except for cause, stated in writing, which shall be submitted to congress at the session first following such removal." This is the only instance in the history of the United States where the house of representatives has a direct interest in an office in the executive branch of the government. In practically all presidential appointments the concurrence of the senate is essential, but this is the only case where congress as a body has an interest.—Washington Star.

Women's Faces on Postage Stamps.

For more than 50 years our government has been making postage stamps. The first issue, in 1847, represented but two values, and on each was printed the likeness of a prominent man—a policy ever since continued. Other nations have women's faces on their stamps. Why not the United States? Surely we have representative women enough. Take Maria Mitchell, for instance, whose work for the insane marked an era; Maria Mitchell, whose pure mentality and magnificent reasoning faculty made her preeminent; Frances Willard, whose reform work claims recognition. Let us mention our most noted literary women. There is also a dusky face well worth considering: the face of a woman who holds a unique position in our history and who had much to do in keeping alive that struggling English colony on the James river—Why not her face? Why not Pocahontas?—Julia Fraser, in Ladies' Home Journal.

What Grant Saw in Canada.

Lord Dufferin, when viceroy of Canada, paid a visit to Washington while Gen. Grant was president. He casually asked the president whether he had ever been in Canada. The result was a striking example of Gen. Grant's brusque outspokenness: "No, I have never set foot on Canadian soil, but I have approached near enough to its shores in a steamboat to see the grass growing in the streets of the Canadian towns." Lord Dufferin saw that Gen. Grant shared with many of his countrymen at that time a common misapprehension in regard to the resources and destinies of Canada.—London News.

Thirsting for Knowledge.

A visitor to Porto Rico says that the schools are doing well, and that the intelligence of the pupils is as remarkable as their thirst after knowledge. He tells of a girl of 17 who walks 20 miles to and from school daily, and is so poor that she sleeps on a bare floor and brings most of her food. There's no need for truant officers down there, says this Mr. Preston. He went to a night school, where the men bring their own candles and sit on the schoolhouse floor in groups of three, one candle to each group.—Philadelphia Record.

Changed His Views.

At the clam dinner given at the Montauk club, Brooklyn, to celebrate the 61st birthday of Senator Depew, the senator said: "When I was 21 I thought a man of 40 very old and that he ought to retire. When I was 40 I thought a man of 60 had grown foolish and useless. When I got to be 60 I reversed my opinion and thought that 50 and 40 and 30 and 20 knew little of the pleasures of existence and the utilization of cultivated power."—Detroit Free Press.

Evolution of the Ice Man.

"The prehistoric mosquito," said the learned professor, "had a bill ten feet long—a bill that certainly would alarm any man in these days."

"Professor," asked the man with the inquiring mind, "was the prehistoric mosquito the prehistoric ice man? If so, I begin to take some stock in Darwin's theory of ancestral traits."—Baltimore American.

DEATH, A RELEASE FROM SUFFERING

Pain Endured With Christian Fortitude by Mrs. William H. Williams.

THE FUNERAL SERVICE.

REV. DR. J. R. BRYAN OFFICIATED AT THE IMPRESSIVE OBSEQUIES.

Beautiful Floral Tributes—"One Sweetly Solemn Thought," Was Sung—Interment in Family Plot at Highland Falls.

In the death of Mrs. William H. Williams which occurred Saturday at her home in East Sixth street, a sincere and faithful Christian, a helpful wife and mother passed away. Mrs. Williams was a great sufferer for several years, and death came as a happy release. None knew Mrs. Williams but to admire her for her noble life. She was thoroughly devoted to her home and her church.

Mrs. Williams went to the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, two years ago for an operation, but after an X-ray examination the physicians could only discover a slight inflammation about the gall duct and it was the opinion that the gall stones had been passed. No operation was performed and Mrs. Williams returned home, only to suffer more intense pain. Following her death a post mortem was held on Sunday by Dr. Zeglio. It was then that fifty gall stones were discovered, one a peculiarly shaped one being in a such a position as to prevent the gaining of strength and proper digestion of food. The other stones were scattered about in different places and all tended to aggravate the stomach and vital parts.

Mrs. Williams was fifty five years of age and was married to Mr. Williams eight years ago. Her home was in Monroe, N. Y. She left one daughter by her first marriage, a husband and the following step-children: Will F. Williams, Mrs. Fred Scudley, Miss Clara Williams and Miss Florence Williams. She also left three brothers, one sister and a mother, living in Orange county, New York. The funeral services were held at the home on East Sixth street last evening at 7:30 o'clock, when a large number of friends and neighbors gathered to pay their last respects. Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryan, of Albert street, a former pastor of Mr. Williams, conducted the services. Mrs. Williams for thirty-five years was a member of the Methodist church and at the time of her death held a membership in the First M. E. church.

Dr. Bryan spoke touching words in reference to the beautiful life and character of the deceased, and he also spoke of her strong home ties, where she would be missed much. In conclusion he offered a fervent earnest prayer. During the service E. E. Runyon sang effectively, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

There were many beautiful floral tributes from friends, relatives and neighbors. Early this morning the remains were taken to Highland Falls, N. Y., where they will be interred in the family plot.

S. R. BLACKFORD DIES FROM HEART TROUBLE

Died Quite Suddenly in His Home at 325 East Second Street Monday.

A SKETCH OF CAREER.

HE LEAVES A WIFE, ONE SON AND A DAUGHTER TO MOURN HIS LOSS.

Was a Member of the First Baptist Church—The Funeral Will be Private—An Opportunity Given to View the Remains.

Stella R. Blackford, aged 69 years, one of Plainfield's respected citizens, died Monday about noon at his home, 325 East Second street, where he has lived for some time past. Mr. Blackford's death was quite sudden, for he had been about the house and down town as late as Saturday afternoon, when he called on some friends. Death was due to enlargement of the heart.

Early Sunday morning the family physician, Dr. Davis, was sent for and remained with Mr. Blackford for several hours giving him temporary relief. Shortly before his death he went to the second floor of his home and upon reaching his room he made a peculiar noise, which was quickly recognized by his daughter Mrs. John Brokaw. She used restoratives at hand, but they were of no avail, life passing away soon afterward.

Mr. Blackford was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Blackford, of Piscataway, and he was born in that township. For many years he was a farmer and he followed this occupation most successfully until a few years ago. He was a sincere and devout Christian and was a member of the First Baptist church. Mr. Blackford leaves a wife, who for two years past has been an invalid and on account of a stroke of paralysis has been unable to speak a word during that time. He also leaves a son, Herbert Blackford, of New York, and daughter, Mrs. John Brokaw, of East Second street.

The funeral, which will be private, will be held from the late home Thursday afternoon a 2 o'clock, but any friends wishing to view the remains will have an opportunity Thursday morning from 10 to 11:30 o'clock.

Another Feast.

Next Monday a ping-pong tournament for the seniors will begin at the Y. M. C. A. Only a limited number of entries will be received. When play is completed the contestants will discuss the fine points of the game around the festive board.

NO HEARING FOR DUNAVAN

The Charges Against Fireman Dunavan Were Withdrawn and Others Substituted.

HEARING ADJOURNED.

All Was Ready for Hearing Before Common Council Today When Corporation Counsel Marsh Decided Charges Were Too General and Introduced New Ones.

During the early part of the session of the Common Council Tuesday, Mr. Lee moved to introduce the matter of Griffin H. Freeman against Louis M. Dunavan, members of the city fire department, for infraction of the rules and regulations of the department. Craig A. Marsh, corporation counsel, was present to represent the city, while Lawyer Robert M. Clark was present to represent Louis M. Dunavan. Both the accuser and accused were in the ante-room, as were also several witnesses. The lobby was also filled with interested spectators.

The result was that an adjournment was taken to Monday evening, September 8, at 8 o'clock, in the Council rooms, when specific charges will be preferred against Mr. Dunavan, in place of the original charges which, according to Mr. Marsh, are too general in their scope.

In the beginning Mr. Marsh stated that the charges were not specific enough and he desired to submit amended charges, and if agreeable to the defendant, he was ready to go on with the hearing. He misunderstood the defendant's counsel, believing him to be ready to go on with the hearing. Mr. Clark quickly replied that he was not willing to go ahead with the amended charges, but was willing to abide by the original charges.

Mr. Marsh then moved to discontine the original charges, and after this was done he submitted the amended charges, but not until Mr. Clark made an objection. He could see no reason why the original charges should not stand, but the Council could see no reason why they should and overruled his objection.

The amended charges were then presented and read by Clerk MacMurray, that is the first part in which the complainant and defendant are mentioned and the fact that the latter is charged with violating section 41 of the rules and regulations of the fire department, and giving the defendant a right to a fair trial is not to be denied. This was all read, until the specific charges were reached. Then at the suggestion of Clerk MacMurray, President Cornell referred the matter to the fire and building committee to be reported on later. According to the provisions of the resolution fixing September 8 as the time for a hearing, a copy of the charges must be served upon the defendant within two days from the date of presentation before the Council.

Upon the adoption of the resolution fixing the date for the hearing, the matter was dropped temporarily to be taken up next Monday night.

WILLIAM WATTS GONE; TROUBLE IN ACCOUNTS

His Employer, Peter Zimmerman, Has Made Complaint to the Police.

WAS A BUTCHER CLERK.

ACCORDING TO ZIMMERMAN, SHORTAGE IS NEARLY $1,000.

Watts Has Been in Zimmerman's Employ—How the Shortage Was First Discovered—Since Then Watts Has Left Town.

Peter Zimmerman, proprietor of the Plainfield Packing Company, made complaint to the police, Tuesday, that William Watts, a clerk who has been in his employ for the past fifteen months, had disappeared, leaving his accounts in a badly muddled condition. Since he quit work at the shop, Saturday night, no trace of him has been discovered but every effort is being made to locate his whereabouts.

According to Mr. Zimmerman, Watts' accounts show peculations amounting to nearly a thousand dollars. He has been in the employ of various butchers in the city and borough and for the past fifteen months worked as a delivery clerk for Mr. Zimmerman. His method, it is said, was to collect bills from the customers on his route, but made no returns to the book-keeper. By chance a customer called at the store whose books showed to be charged with $200 worth of meat. In the course of conversation Mr. Zimmerman asked for a remittance and was astounded when the astonished customer denied owing anything. She immediately repaired to her home and returned with receipts, signed by Watts, for the full amount. Nothing was said at the time but the suspected clerk evidently scented trouble and quickly took his departure. The investigation of his accounts is still going on and it will be some time yet before the exact amount taken can be ascertained.

Watts is twenty-eight years old, unmarried and has been living on West Fourth street. It is said his manner of living called for an expenditure that more than equalled his salary.

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 3—The first accident to the Presidential party since starting on its present tour, occurred here this morning, when a carriage in which President Roosevelt was seated was struck by a trolley car. The President was thrown from the carriage and slightly injured. He was able to regain his feet without assistance.

The force of the collision was so strong that the team of horses drawing the carriage was killed and the carriage was completely wrecked.

LEARNED OF WIFE'S DEATH.

Mrs. Henry Opdyke Died at Frutigen, Switzerland, Sunday.

Henry Opdyke, of Farragut avenue, received word this week of the death of his wife, Mrs. Mariam Whiton Opdyke, which occurred on Sunday last at Frutigen, Switzerland, of heart failure. Mrs. Opdyke, together with one of her sons and a daughter went abroad a year ago last June for their health. Mrs. Opdyke had suffered more or less with heart trouble, but the trip was believed to be doing her much good.

The funeral services were held in the Episcopal church, Zurich, Tuesday. Arrangements for bringing the body home have not yet been made.

Been Absent Over Twenty Years.

Fred C. Boehme and daughter, of Middlebury, Mass., are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kingston, on East Second street. This is Mr. Boehme's first visit to Plainfield in twenty-two years. He was the first night clerk at the Hotel Netherwood and he has many friends who have been pleased to meet him after so long an absence. He thinks Plainfield has changed very much.

Wheel Ran Over His Foot.

Lewis Randolph, of Park avenue, met with a very painful accident while returning from Florida Grove Saturday afternoon. The young man dropped something from the carriage, and while getting out to recover it the horse started suddenly. The rear wheel passed over his foot.

FACTIONAL FIGHT IN MANY JERSEY COUNTIES

Newark News Summarizes the Situation in Republican Ranks Through the State.

WHAT'S THE TROUBLE.

HOST OF NATIONAL, STATE, COUNTY AND CITY OFFICES TO BE FILLED.

Complexity of Issues Involved Together With So Many Nominations Makes it Very Hard for the G. O. P. Leaders.

With the Congressional nominations completed in six of the ten districts of the State, Republican leaders are turning their attention to the making of county tickets for the fights ahead, and in several sections of the State are having no easy task, declares one of the political writers on the staff of the Newark News. In many ways it is one of the most complicated campaigns the party managers have ever had on their hands. Besides ten Congressmen, eight State Senators and sixty Assemblymen, there are to be elected seventeen sheriffs, three county clerks and seven surrogates and a host of minor county officials, while in the thirty-two cities whose elections were consolidated by the Meeker act long lists of municipal officers, from mayor down, are to be chosen.

The complexity of national, State, county and city issues involved, and the difficulty of fixing up tickets with out breeding factional fights is giving the leaders about the biggest task they have ever had, and symptoms of returning life and activity among leaders of the Democratic party, imbued with a hope of regaining lost ground in the approaching campaign, is adding not a little to the trials and worries of the Republicans.

A factor that is playing an important part in several counties in the fight for Assembly nominations is the announced intention of certain leaders and others to turn down legislators eager for renomination who failed to meet with the approval of their county managers last winter in the attitude they assumed at the elections for United States Senator and State treasurer. The avowed refusal of the Assemblymen in question to be turned down without a struggle has started factional fights that will have to be threshed out in the county conventions, and the outlook for several particularly lively nominating scenes on convention floors is good.

One of the members of the last House of Assembly who is said to have been marked for slaughter is George Holman, of Ocean county. Holman served his first term in the Legislature last winter, and early in the session made himself conspicuous by pledging his support to John W. Griggs for Senator before the scramble for votes began in the contest for Senator William J. Sewell's seat was far advanced. Later, when Congressman John J. Gardner, the veteran Atlantic statesman, got into the fight, Holman was urged to withdraw his pledge to Griggs and take up the cause of the First District representative, whose district then included Ocean county, but refused to do so. When the contest for State treasurer came on, Holman again braved the wrath of some of his Ocean county associates by voting for Frank O. Briggs as George B. Swain's successor.

Senator George Shinn, of the same county, was in the combine of upper House members who believed themselves bound by "Senatorial courtesy" to support the candidacy of Senator Charles A. Reed, of Somerset, for the vacant berth, and among Reed's backers were W. H. Fischer, a Senate clerk, indebted to Reed for favors and his position, who took upon himself the task of delivering Holman's vote for the Somerset man. Reed was beaten by one vote in the caucus, and his defeat was charged up against Holman. After the caucus Fischer and other Reed boomers announced to Holman that he would be made a "yearling" for his attitude in the two caucuses.

In the remainder of the legislative session Holman made himself prominent by his efforts to secure oyster legislation for his county, and finally succeeded in passing an act that had the opposition of the majority leader and State Oyster Commission. When the bill became a law he was welcomed back to Ocean as a hero by the oystermen, and his interest in the subject was rewarded by his appointment by Governor Murphy on the special

ALL-PLAINFIELD TEAM PICKED

Will Meet the Crack Westfielders in a Series of Games Beginning September 13.

ARRANGED BY PRESS.

All-Plainfield Team Will Play Under Management of Y. M. C. A., Winners of Pennant, But Includes Best Players in League—First Game at Westfield—Meet Here Sept. 20.

Now that the City Baseball League is over, the local fans are awaiting with much interest the series of games between the Westfield team and an All-Plainfield nine which has been arranged through the offices of The Daily Press. The series will open a week from Saturday at Westfield, the second game will be played here a week later and the third at Westfield on Saturday, September 27. It will be the pick of the City League against the strongest team that has ever represented Plainfield's old rival on the diamond.

When Westfield first issued a challenge to Plainfield and the league officials took no action, it was accepted by The Daily Press. The Daily Press stood ready to turn it over to the league itself or to the management of the winning team in the league or, to organize a team of Plainfield's best players and send them against Westfield's crack aggregation. It was decided by the executive committee of the league not to take up the series. Arrangements have since been made with the management of the Y. M. C. A. team to assume the management of the All-Plainfield team which will meet Westfield in the series which will practically decide the championship of Union county. A team composed of the best players of the City League has been selected and will be ready to line up against Westfield Saturday afternoon, September 13.

Westfield has a strong semi-professional team and has been beating the strongest nines in the metropolitan district. It has made a wonderful record for itself and has made known the name of Westfield in places where that town was never before heard of. It will be hard proposition for even Plainfield's best and three of the hottest games of the season may be looked for when the two teams meet.

In order to make as good a showing as possible against the Westfield cracks, the very pick of all the league teams has been selected to form an All-Plainfield team. It is a very difficult thing to decide what players are entitled to the honor but capable and disinterested ones have looked over the available material and the following is announced as the All-Plainfield team which will meet Westfield:

Pitchers, Burns, (Safe Works), and Dupee, (Y. M. C. A.)
Catcher, Allen, (Safe Works.)
First base, Egan, (Y. M. C. A).
Second base, Martin, (Hope.)
Third base, Barnes, (Y. M. C. A.)
Short stop, Bolsterle, (Y. M. C. A.)
Left field, Lederer, (St. Marys).
Centre field, Moore, (Y. M. C. A.)
Right field, Franklin, (Safe Works.)
Substitutes, Schoonmaker, (Y. M. C. A.,) Winn, (St. Marys,) Montross, (Hope,) Keen, (St. Marys.)

There is great material there, good players every one. They have demonstrated that on the diamond this summer. It only remains for them to get a little practice together. Many of them played on the picked team which made such a strong showing against the Xavier Deaf Mutes. If they succeed in defeating the Westfield team, it will be a victory which will show that The Daily Press' trust in them was not in vain. Even if they fail to win, one can feel assured that such a team will make a showing worthy of this city which has long been one of the most enthusiastic centres of baseball interest.

Will Give Him Reception.

The Hope chapel Sunday-school contemplates according Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards a farewell reception before he severs all connection with the Crescent Avenue church. A committee, of which I. W. Travell is the chairman, is making preparations.

FEDERAL LAWS ABOUT SHIPMENT OF GAME

Timely Warning Just Issued by the United States Board of Agriculture.

ILLEGALLY CAPTURED.

MOST IMPORTANT PROVISIONS OF THESE LAWS BRIEFLY STATED.

Desire of Warning is to Secure a More General Observance of Act to Prohibit the Transportation of Game Illegally Killed.

A timely warning has been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture in order to secure a more general observance of the act of May 25, 1900, to prohibit the transportation by interstate commerce of game killed in violation of local laws. The department invites attention to the provisions of the federal and State laws relating to shipment of birds and game. These laws are intended to preserve for the common good certain animals and birds that are valuable as food, sport, or as destroyers of pests. They are generally supported by public sentiment, but are frequently violated through ignorance, as comparatively few persons realize the rapid increase in protective legislation or the numerous restrictions which have been imposed on the trade in game.

Sportsmen, market hunters, game dealers, commission merchants, railroad and express agents and all other persons concerned should, it is said, familiarize themselves so far as possible with the regulations now in force. A summary of the federal, State and county laws may be had on application to the Department of Agriculture.

The most important provisions of the various laws are briefly stated in the New York Tribune as follows:

It is unlawful for any person to deliver to any common carrier for transportation from one State or Territory to another, or for any common carrier or consignee knowingly to receive any wild animals or birds killed in violation of local laws. This prohibition applies, not only to game killed out of season, but to that captured in an illegal manner by traps, nets, etc., or for illegal purposes, as in some States for sale or shipment.

Every package containing game or birds, or any parts thereof, when shipped by interstate commerce, must bear a statement of the contents and the shipper's name plainly marked on the outside. Inattention to these details renders the shipper liable, not only to loss of his game, but also to heavy penalties for evasions of the law.

Shipping game in trunks, butter boxes or egg cases, concealing it among other goods, marking it "butter," "dressed poultry" or "household effects," addressing it with a tag made especially to hide the shipper's name and statement of contents, or resorting to any other device to conceal the nature of the shipment are all evasions of the law and subject the shipper to the same penalties as for its direct violation. False marking of packages is treated as a serious offence under some State laws, and is punishable by special penalties.

Four-fifths of all the State and Territories prohibit export of deer at any season; all those in which quail occur, except three in the South, prohibit export of these birds at all seasons, and practically each State where prairie chickens are found prohibits their export. As a result of these restrictions, it is almost impossible in the West to ship quail or prarie chickens to market outside of the State without violating some law.

Robins, swallows, cedar birds, meadowlarks, flickers, night hawks or bull bats, and a few other insectivorous species, as well as such birds as longspears, snow buntings and shore larks, which are useful in destroying seeds of weeds, are occasionally killed as game. They are, however, generally protected, and under no circumstances should they be sent to market or shipped out of the State.

Statutes even more stringent than those protecting game birds have recently been enacted by many States for the preservation of birds which are not included in the game list. Under these statutes birds which are in demand for millinery purposes are protected through the year, and the sale and possession, as well as killing, are prohibited. It should be remembered that the principal centres for millinery supplies are nearly all lo-

PROPERTY VALUES IN SOMERSET GOING UP

Annual Meeting of Somerset County Board of Assessors Was Held at Somerville.

INCREASED VALUATION.

ELSTON M. FRENCH, OF NORTH PLAINFIELD, RE-ELECTED CHAIRMAN.

Net Increase in Valuations Amounts to $71,713—The Losses in Farming Districts Were More Than Made Up in the Towns.

The Board of Assessors of Somerset county held its annual meeting at the Court house in Somerville Tuesday for the purpose of apportioning the taxes among the different townships.

For the fourth year Elston M. French was re-elected chairman of the board. Mr. French has come to be regarded as a recognized authority upon the taxation law. This fact was illustrated yesterday when it became known that some members without any intention of violating the law, have been illegally allowing reductions. Mr. French called attention to the fact and had the amount in error added to the total valuation. Chas. L. Voorhees was elected secretary.

The net increase in valuation over last year amounts to $71,713, almost the same as the increase of the previous year. Gains in valuation were made as usual in the towns, but are partly offset by losses in the farming townships, as the following statistics show:

Losses—Branchburg, $11,000; Franklin, $20,000; Montgomery, $51,000; Rocky Hill, $3,000. Total, $84,000.

Gains—Bedminster, $37,000; Bernard, $41,000; Bridgewater, $10,000; Bound Brook, $35,000; Hillsboro, $5,000; North Plainfield township, $25,000; North Plainfield borough, $1,000 total, $155,000; net gain, $71,000.

The figures given are in round numbers and approximately correct. Mr. French states that the increase in the borough ratables would have been larger but for the fact that the amount sworn off for indebtedness was greater this year than last.

DEATH OF J. H. HAROLD.

Prominent Resident Passed Away After Being an Invalid Sometime.

James H. Harold, of East Fifth street, died at his home Tuesday, following an illness of long duration. For several years Mr. Harold had been an invalid and was unable to leave the house. He was a resident of Plainfield about fifteen years and previous to that time he lived at Dunellen, where he was postmaster for two terms. He served in the Civil War, being a member of a New York regiment. He was also a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 78, G. A. R., of this city.

Mr. Harold leaves a wife, a daughter and two sons, Fred M., and Herbert J. Harold, all of whom live on East Fifth street.

The funeral services will be held this afernoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late residence, 142 East Fifth street.

There will be a special programme of interest to every member. Another event being looked to is the fall institute to be held in October. It is proposed to make this one of the best ever held.

Injured While Racing.

He was racing with John Reed when the latter swerved in front of him and caused him to lose control of his machine. He was taken to Dr. Long's office where the fractures were reduced.

Divorce Proceedings.

Ping-pong has become such a popular pastime at the Y. M. C. A. that it has become necessary to add another table and appurtenances to accommodate the players.

CONTRACT FOR NEW SEWERS

Awarded by Common Council to James Maybury & Son, of Passaic.

WERE LOWEST BIDDERS.

Eight Bids Were Received for the Extension of the Sanitary Sewers Through the West End—Some Other Business Done at the Council Meeting Tuesday.

The most important business considered at the regular meeting of the Common Council last Tuesday was that in reference to receiving and opening bids for the extension of the sanitary sewers in the West End of the city, according to a recent action taken by the council. There were eight bids in all and James Maybury & Son, of Passaic, were the successful bidders, their figures being $15,744. The next lowest bidder was Patrick J. Moran, of New Brunswick, his figures being $16,790, while Charles M. Meeker, of this city, was third, his bid being $17,594. The other bidders were Rice & Company, of New Rochelle, N. Y.; P. Frank Hawman, of Reading, Pa.; Jacques & DeRoss, of Elizabeth; Viscount & Company, of Elizabeth and William Hanna, of East Newark. These bidders were all very much higher than the third lowest man.

Mr. Tolles offered a resolution accepting the bid of James Maybury & Son and awarding the contract to that firm, after the usual formalities are gone through with. The work of building the sewers is to commence not later than September 20, and the contractor is given to December 15 next to complete the same. Of course, extensions of time can be given and probably will be.

In connection with the extension of these sewers it should be stated that a considerable part of the expense will be paid by the property-owners who are to be benefitted. There will be commissioners appointed to assess the property-owners for the improvement, and no doubt all but a few thousand dollars will be paid by them. The sewers are to be all eight inch, and this being one of the smallest sizes, the chances are the city will pay a small proportion of the entire cost. It is doubtful if it will be necessary to issue bonds for the work. This will be decided upon later.

Frank Linke, formerly manager for the Eastern Bottling Company, asked the Council for the return of his bond given when a license was given to the company in his behalf as manager. The matter was referred.

Mr. Mellick reported on the bond of W. F. Arnold, city treasurer and custodian of school moneys, for $25,000 additional on account of his duties as custodian of school moneys, stating that Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh has approved the same. The bond was recorded and filed. A resolution by Mr. Mellick provided for the transferring of $1,000 from the general fund to the fire fund. After the adoption of this resolution the Council took a recess of ten minutes upon the motion of Mr. Mellick as he had a few matters which he wished to bring before the members in private session.

After the members returned to regular order, Mr. Lee moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet Monday evening, September 8, at 8 o'clock for the purpose of granting a hearing in the case of Griffin H. Freeman against L. M. Dunavan, for violation of the fire department rules. The Council then adjourned.

IDEAL CHURCH WORK

City of Washington Has More Than Its Share of It.

Cathedral to Be Erected in the Vicinity of Cleveland Park—A Parish Animated by True Christianity.

[Special Washington Letter.]

ON THE beautiful hills northwest of Washington there is to be erected a cathedral for the Protestant Episcopal church of this diocese. For many miles around us we are "green-walled by the hills of Maryland," and guarded by the fastnesses of the hills of Virginia on the other side of the Potomac.

Grover Cleveland bought a summer home five miles from the white house on the hills which had never been brought into the real estate market. His going there induced others to follow; and to-day fully 15,000 good people have homes in that vicinity. Directly on the site of Cleveland's temporary home a village has been established, and Cleveland Park, as it is called, is composed of numerous handsome cottages, many of them costly and magnificent.

One mile farther from the city that the Cleveland residence Mrs. Hearst has built and thoroughly equipped a school for girls, their higher education and development in science and useful arts. The grounds are extensive, the buildings complete, the faculty superior, the water and air pure and healthful.

It is in this neighborhood that the new cathedral is to be built. The acreage is already purchased, and people who ride by on the electric cars can see the sign: "Cathedral Close," showing the chosen site for the home and place of worship of the bishop. Although the beginning has been made in the site selection and purchase, the plans have not yet been approved, and it may be another year before this important church work shall be well under way. But the determination to go forward in this matter, the final movement in the land purchase, marks an epoch—the practical commencement of a matter long in contemplation.

The bishop of this diocese has only a temporary or provisional home, and this is not proper for a diocese so prosperous as this one has always been. The pro-cathedral (that is the provisional cathedral) is the little church of St. Mark, on Capitol hill. It is used as the bishop's church, pending the erection of the cathedral. The purpose of the pro-cathedral is that the bishop shall have a church in which he may hold services at any time, fulfill his episcopal offices, and order the work and worship of the diocese in accordance with his ideals for the welfare and common good of all communicants, as well as of the clergy and congregations.

The church of St. Mark is located on the corner of Third and A streets, southeast; that is, four blocks away from the capitol, and only two blocks from the congressional library. You would naturally suppose that to be an excellent location, but it is not. Capitol hill is not the residential section of the prosperous, but of the financially mediocre. Although this is the pro-cathedral, and as such can be used by the bishop at any time, it has a regularly organized vestry, a regular pastor, and a complete organization, regardless of its relation with the episcopate.

In June, 1869, this church was organized by Rev. A. F. Steele, the assistant pastor of the church at the navy yard. There were 13 lay members, who elected vestrymen, and services were held in a cheap little old frame building in the middle of a block of ground, which was otherwise vacant and uncared for. The little church was surrounded with weeds, and it was in the midst of the worst of the weeds of sin in this city. Nowhere was church work more needed at that time.

Rev. Dr. Steele devoted the remainder of his life to the work of developing this church; and it was home missionary work of a most exacting character. The people were poor, and it was found to be difficult to secure assistance from people outside of the parish. The struggle for existence was a hard one. Twelve years elapsed before sufficient money was raised to secure building lots. The corner stone of the present edifice was laid by Rev. Dr. Addison, of Epiphany church, September 18, 1880; but the church was not completed until February, 1890, 20 years after the organization of the vestry. When the church was dedicated it was in debt $10,000. Considerable of this indebtedness was paid off, when Rev. Dr. Steele, after 24 years of faithful labor, was called to the cathedral beyond the veil which mortal eyes cannot penetrate.

Rev. Ar[illegible] pastor of Trinity church, Minneapolis, came to Washington and continued the work which had been laid down by the death of Dr. Steele, in 1895. He remained with the church until 1896, when Rev. Allan Griffith was called to temporary pastorate. In that year the church was offered to the bishop of Washington for use as the pro-cathedral, and accepted by him. On November 29, 1896, a concordat was executed between the bishop and the legal parochial authorities—the rector, the wardens and the vestrymen. Under the provisions of this concordat the bishop nominates the clergy and has control of the ritual and policy of the work. The rector and vestrymen retain their legal and canonical rights over the financial and pastoral concerns of the church. In the following month Rev. William L. Devries was appointed rector of St. Mark, and vicar to the bishop, in which capacity he still serves with the approval of the bishop and people.

Bishop Henry Y. Satterlee then enlarged the clerical staff by the appointment of Rev. C. H. Hayes and Rev. P. H. Rhinelander. The three clergy were then appointed chaplains. They, with the bishop, constitute a faculty. The deacons of the diocese live in the clergy house with this faculty for one year each, in post graduate study, thereby receiving practical instructions in homiletics and the pastoral charge. Being directly under the tutelage of the bishop, this post graduate year is of incalculable value to the young men who are to devote their lives to sacred work.

Seven years ago the new diocese of Washington was created, and Bishop Satterlee, not yet 50 years of age, was appointed its bishop. He is one of the best known and one of the national capital and is known throughout Episcopal circles as a man of superior natural ability and almost marvelous literary acquirements. He is of commanding presence, a grand figure in chancel and pulpit, a powerful yet prayerful speaker, and a gentleman of lovable character. His Episcopal ministry here has been eminently successful, as the prosperous and harmonious conditions of all of the Episcopal churches in this diocese make manifest. He is popular with the people of the entire city, as well as with his clergy.

Rev. Dr. Devries has been a successful rector of this church. When he assumed the duties, in 1896, the average attendance at morning service was 256, whereas it is now almost 600. The Sunday school attendance has tripled, and the debt of the church is almost entirely disposed of, while the annual income of the church has been increased from $5,500 to almost $10,000. The rector personally looks after the welfare of his people, attends the Sunday school and gives his constant endeavors to bring forth fruits in his vineyard. He is as diligent as his predecessor Dr. Steele, and is making this work his life work. The church has now under its patronage two chapels—the chapels of the Good Shepherd, not far from the government printing office, and All Saints' chapel at Benning, a desolate suburb, where there is great need of missionary work for "the submerged tenth" of this district. The flocks of the poor colored people, the deaf mutes, the supernumerated and the churchman's league.

Being at the head of the clerical staff of the church Bishop Satterlee has general oversight of all churches. He frequently preaches, holds monthly meetings of communicants, and attends the meetings of the larger and more important church societies. All this in addition to the work of the pro-cathedral for the young men of the discontented, the public services at St. Mark's and the hard work ordered. Under the direction of the bishop there have been developed four choirs, all volunteers, all under systematic training, and producing a high order of church music. The vested choir of men and boys is remarkable for its purity and mellowness of tone, as well as for its artistic renditions.

"The poor have the gospel preached unto them," because the church workers go into the highways and the byways and compel them to come into the chapels, where sacred music is rendered for them, and where the gospel is told unto them in the simplest language. The poor and needy are directed to the systematic charities. There is no suffering in this parish that human agencies can relieve. While Bishop Satterlee is not known to be opposed to foreign missions, he has developed the home missionary spirit throughout his diocese so that his willing workers are to be found in every part of this district, seeking the lost, the penniless and the hungry.

All of this good work will be multiplied when the new cathedral is completed, and appliances for good work are increased.

THE GAMBLING EVIL.

American Baseball League Strikes Earl B w at It.

Should Also Stop Sale of Liquor—Patrons of the National Sport Oppose to the Ordinary Procession of Intoxicated Men.

President Ban Johnson, of the American baseball league, asked his brother magnates to strike a blow at the gambling evil which in some baseball circles of the circuit has assumed remarkable proportions. It did not take the league session long to legislate against this practice. Behind Mr. Johnson's commendable action lies a story which illustrates how the fearless executive of the league came to realize to what an extent baseball could be robbed of its interest by betting.

When a well-known ex-ball player requested Mr. Johnson to put him on the list of American league umpires, the jolly, rotund president gave him a look calculated to wither the applicant.

"No, sir," replied Mr. Johnson, "I have no use for a man who would bet and throw a game. You did that years ago when pitching in a game in which I was the catcher. If you will throw a game in a country league for $50, how much would it take to get you to make dishonest decisions in an American league game? This league has no use for such men as you are. I am determined that as long as I have anything to do with professional baseball the game shall be free from gambling. If men will gamble, let them stick to cards and horse races. Baseball will be the national sport of this country so long as the republic lives—and that will be forever."

The seeker for the office of umpire retired without making a reply. He recalled the day down in Ohio when his team played a climax game with another rural nine and the animated scenes just preceding the game, in which a Columbus (O.) gambler made the money fly by betting on the team that was opposed to Ban Johnson's nine. In vain did the pitcher try to get in wild pitches at vital moments. He essayed all sorts of stunts in twirling so as to permit the other side to get a winning lead. But his catcher "tumbled." Try as he might, the pitcher could not get the ball past Johnson. Furthermore, the president of the league was a hard hitter in those days, and when he went to bat with three men on bases he told his pitcher that he would try to land a home run. The hit that followed was one of the most vicious ever made in the state until "Eagle Eye" Jake Beckley found his batting eye. It scored four runs and won the game for Ban's side.

After the game was won the pitcher coolly informed Ban that he was a "chump" for winning, and said that he would have split $30 with him had he played "right," which, of course, meant "wrong."

Yet, pleasing as the rule against gambling looks in the proceedings of the American league, and severe as the penalty may seem—betters are to be ejected from the grounds and their admission money is to be returned—the law must necessarily be a dead letter. It would require a police force equal to the total number of ball players in the league to prevent betting.

But, adds the Chicago Post, one thing which the league might have done with much more hope of abolishing an evil would be to pass a rule preventing the sale of liquor at a baseball park. The majority of patrons of baseball are not interested in whether Jones Smith bets his friend Harry Jones that a team will win or lose, if the wagering is done in the manner of betters at ball games and not openly, as betting is conducted at race tracks. But the many patrons who would take their best girl sweethearts to baseball games are opposed to the flaunting of liquor drinking before their eyes, opposed to seeing a procession of turbulent men coming from the bar with ribald jests on their lips about "a whisky being poor and the beer bitter, etc. Bottles flying from the bleachers to the ball field, it is true, are no worse for the players than pop bottles, but the turning of the lower portion of the grand stand into a saloon is scarcely in keeping with the high standard of baseball which the magnates insist upon.

The cities of the big leagues which are charged with permitting the sale of liquor at the ball park are the sore spots in baseball.

FROM THE WORLD'S FOUR CORNERS

Industrial and Commercial Facts and Figures from Various Foreign Lands.

On many of the islands of the Caribbean fishing is the main source of livelihood. It is not a pleasing prospect that confronts the island fisherman in his struggle against the odds of life, nor does the income from his chosen calling warrant a life of extravagant luxury. It is a life of hardship and constant danger that he leads, and the recompense is so meager that the poorest paid American workman would not consider living upon it possible.

Varieties of edible fish are not plentiful in Caribbean waters, nor are they easily captured. Flying fish and redsnapper constitute the fish menu, and both are caught where the water is comparatively deep and rough. The flying fish are surface fish, and are caught with nets. The water is first baited with fish heads and other unedible portions ground fine. This attracts considerable numbers of flying fish, and when they have congregated large circular nets are cast over them, on the edges of which are heavy lead weights. The weights cause the edges of the nets to sink rapidly, and once four or five feet below the surface they are drawn together with a string, and the capture is complete.

The redsnapper is caught with a hook and line, and must be fished for in considerable depths of water, some 15 to 20 fathoms. They are caught on or near the edge of coral reefs or banks, and their presence is determined by what the natives call the water telescope, a simple device consisting merely of a square tube three or four feet long, which simply cuts off the light from the surface and prevents it from obscuring the less brilliantly illuminated depths, thus making it possible to see the bottom in as much as 20 fathoms of water.

The smaller islands in the north of the Caribbean chain, including Saba, St. Kitts, Nevis, Montserrat, Antigua and St. Martins are the homes of the fishermen, and on practically all of these may be seen the crudely constructed camps of the fishermen, who sell their product as far south as St. Vincent and Barbadoes.

Practically the whole population of the Dutch island of Saba are engaged in the fish trade, upon which they rely entirely for the sustenance, and the recent volcanic destruction has brought many hardships to those who were not in the path of the terrible fires, but who suffer because of destroyed markets.

Meat and Dairy Products in New Zealand.

I give below a statement of the quantities and value of meats, butter and cheese exported from New Zealand from March 31, 1901, to March 31, 1902:

Description.	Quantity. Cwts.	Value.
Meats:
Frozen	1,671,731	$16,861,902
Preserved	27,902	279,040
Butter	719,493	4,317,000
Cheese	56,456	254,000

These exports went almost wholly to Great Britain. The increase in the export of butter is very marked, being 20 per cent. in quantity and 24 per cent. in value.

The dairy industry in New Zealand is advancing rapidly, and the government is doing all it can to promote the trade. Experienced government graders are constantly employed at the principal ports, examining the exports of these products and issuing certificates of quality. It is a rare thing in any part of New Zealand to be served with poor butter. The same is true of beef and mutton.

There are no droughts in New Zealand, and it is a fine grazing country. Cattle are never housed here, as the climate is mild enough for them to be left in the open all the year round.

The difficulty in exporting to the United States is the absence of direct communication by steam. To the west coast, the Oceanic Steamship company maintains a direct line, with fine modern steamers making every three weeks to San Francisco, but to the east coast there is absolutely no direct communication, which is so necessary for food products that must be carried in a frozen condition with as little handling as possible.

There are steamers running regularly to New Zealand and Australia from New York, and many of them are built to carry meat and dairy products; but they are all English steamers, and on the return voyage go to England, where everything destined for America has to be transshipped, which adds very much to the cost of delivery.

As shown by the figures given, the average cost per pound of the products mentioned is:

Frozen meat (including lamb, mutton and beef), five cents; butter, 19 cents; cheese, 9½ cents. These figures represent the f. o. b. New Zealand cost.

Beet Leaves for Fodder.

As an indication of the direction in which progress is now being sought for and promoted among sugar-beet growers may be cited the proceedings of a recent meeting of the Verein der Deutschen Zucker-Industrie, a national association of beet culturists and sugar manufacturers, wherein it was decided to offer a prize of 10,000 marks ($2,380) for the best process which can be devised for drying beet leaves and "heads"—i. e., the top which is cut off when the sugar beet is trimmed preparatory to grading. The desperate condition in which the beet sugar industry will be left by abolition of export bounties compels anew every possible economy in the conservation and use of each element in the raw material. This use of pulp, leaves and waste molasses as food for cattle is a chapter of the general subject which has hitherto attracted comparatively little attention in the United States. Its importance in Germany, as well as the present technical status of the leaf-drying process in that country, will be indicated by the conditions of the tests which competitors for the prize must be prepared to meet. These, as officially announced on the 27th of June, are as follows:

(1) Leaves and heads dried by the competing apparatus or process shall not contain water in excess of 12 per cent.

(2) The prepared product must be of good form and condition, as free as possible from foreign substances and smell, and not scorched or burned.

(3) The loss of soluble nutritive elements in the dried leaves as compared with fresh leaves shall not exceed 15 per cent.

(4) The working cost of the process, including depreciation and wear and tear of plant, shall be in such relation to the fodder value of the product that it will be, when properly installed and managed, economically profitable.

The remaining specifications provide that the plant for working the process shall not be unsightly or prejudicial to the neighborhood in which it is located; that the competing plans, drawings and descriptions must be filed before September 15, 1902, at the office of Privy Councilor Koenig, in Berlin, and the apparatus be ready for trial at a place to be designated by the commission during the period from October 15 to November 25 of the present year.

Trade of Port Arthur.

As there is no custom house at Port Arthur no definite figures can be given in regard to the imports, but a rough estimate shows that not less than 180,000 tons of cargo were imported into Port Arthur in 1901.

The principal imports were cotton piece goods, silk piece goods, metals, flour, household effects, paper, sugar and tobacco. Among other articles may be noted building materials, timber, kerosene, ammunition and machinery.

The number of all the trading houses and firms is approximated at 700 and their volume of trade at about $18,025,000 yearly. The following shows the shipping:

GRAY BOYS IN BLUE.

Will Meet Early in October in the Nation's Capital.

Elaborate Preparations Being Made to Give Them a Hearty Welcome —Candidates for Commander in Chief.

[Special Washington Letter.]

WASHINGTON is making extensive preparations, which are at the same time detailed and businesslike, to render the 1902 encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which is to occur at the national capital during the second week in October, an all-around success. Ten years ago the veterans of this patriotic organization were entertained as the guests of the capital city and the reception then accorded the members of the grand army proved to be one of the most notable experiences in their history as an organization. It is the purpose of the business men who have interested themselves in this year's reunion to make the encampment even more noteworthy. Three days, October 6, 7 and 8—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday—have been selected by Gen. Ell Torrance, commander in chief, and his associates of the G. A. R. executive committee as the period of the national encampment. The entertainment of the veterans and their guests, however, will approximately cover a week, beginning with the Thursday or Friday preceding the meeting of the delegates.

Monday has been set apart for the first day's session of the convention and a special and elaborate display of fireworks, at which all the officers of all the organizations then assembled in Washington and the president of the United States are to be present. On Tuesday the convention will continue and conclude its annual session, while all the general visitors to the city will view an attractive and picturesque parade of the Sons of Veterans, who meet simultaneously with the G. A. R., a regiment of militia from the District of Columbia and several battallons of regular troops—engineers, marines, cavalry and artillery—from the barracks about Washington. The third day has been set aside for a parade of the veterans, a sentimental desire on their part that none but soldiers who have seen service at the front should participate having been recognized by those in charge of the programme. In the evening it is probable that President Roosevelt will tender Gen. Torrance and the general associate officers of the auxiliary societies a reception at the white house. The display of fireworks will be presented a third time and several smaller receptions will be tendered the officers of the women's organizations by local chapters of those bodies.

This is a brief and tentative statement of the programme so far agreed upon, and is, of course, subject to change to conform with the later wishes of the commander in chief and his advisers. An extensive schedule of regimental, division and corps reunions has been arranged to cover the first two days of the encampment. Conventions of less noteworthy significance than that of the grand army will be held at the same time by various societies of survivors and auxiliary associations. Numerous excursions will be made to nearby points of historic and legendary interest, such as Mount Vernon, Braddock's Brook and the 200 or more battlefields within easy reach of the Potomac river.

The whole city will be handsomely dressed for the occasion. As a culminating number for each night's programme there will be a representation in fireworks of the fall of Peking. A lake of appropriate size will be constructed to represent the River Pei Ho. Representations of Chinese junks and other characteristic Chinese river craft will be constructed to make the view of Peking as realistic as possible. During the battle 500 young men will impersonate the soldiers who scaled the wall of the Chinese capital, and models of gunboats will depict the attack made on the city by the improvised fleet of the allied forces. Admission to the grounds—the extended spaces about the Washington monument—will be free, but the committee will provide several thousand reserved seats with boxes for the distinguished guests who are to view the display the first night.

The landscape gardeners in the employ of the government will contribute their share toward making the capital a grand army city in every respect. Already they have planted a variety of plant designs representing the various corps badges by which the veterans like to designate themselves. The florists who are doing this work are under the immediate supervision of Capt. George H. Brown, who is himself a veteran and a civil engineer by profession. It has been arranged that somewhere in the city each veteran will be able to find his corps badge painted in nature's colors. One of the prettiest designs is the trefoil of the second corps, done in rich red colors. All the foliage badges are in the exact proportion "laid down in the books" for the badge insignia provided for by act of congress in 1865. The second corps, by the way, will be particularly honored in Washington. It turned out some noted men, among them Gen. O. O. Howard, Gen. Miles and Gen. Thomas Francis Meagher, who commanded the Second brigade of the red trefoil division, known everywhere as the "Irish brigade." The finest display of plant badges will be at the pension office. On the south side of the great building are displayed in thrifty foliage plants the "Kearney patch" of the First corps, the trefoil of the Second, the diamond of Third, triangle of the Fourth, Maltese cross of the Fifth, Greek cross of the Sixth, six-pointed star of the Eighth, and crescent of the Seventh. On the west side are the minnie ball cross of the Sixteenth corps and the badge of the Ninth. At the census bureau are two beautiful badges, the Second and the Sixth, placed there by special request of Gen. Merriam, of Minnesota, director of the census. In all there are some 20 large floral badges fast advancing toward perfection in the public parks, among which those pictured herewith seem to be the most popular with the people of the city.

So far but little has been heard of grand army politics, although it is generally believed that the competition for the highest honor within the gift of the body lies between Col. John McElroy, of Washington, and Gen. Thomas J. Stewart, of Pennsylvania. Col. McElroy, although a resident of Washington, where he edits the National Tribune, is considered as the western candidate. The colonel was formerly in the newspaper business in Chicago and St. Louis. He began life as a typesetter, and worked at his trade until the second year of the war, when he enlisted in the army. He was captured soon after reaching the front, and was for a long time a prisoner in Andersonville. Gen. Stewart served with the One Hundred and Thirty-Eighth Pennsylvania volunteers, enlisting when only 16 years of age. In civil life he served as a member of the house of representatives in 1885. He was elected secretary of internal affairs of the state of Pennsylvania in 1886, and was reelected in 1890. He was appointed adjutant general by Governor Hastings in 1895, which post he has filled since. He has always taken an active interest in grand army matters, and has been commander of the post at Norristown, in which town he makes his home. In 1897 he was appointed inspector general of Pennsylvania department. He has also served on the staffs of several national commanders in chief.

Both of the gentlemen named are making an active canvass for delegates, of whom there are 1,500, and the friends of each seem sure that their particular choice is sure of winning the day.

LIGHT GOWNS.

Grass Linen Revived—Bright Colors Out of Style.

Grass lawn has been revived this season, and the robes, which come chiefly from Paris, are wonderfully tucked and incrusted with lace. The new robes in soft silk and wool materials are much appliqued with Arabian and guipure lace, and the designs form not only the borders and flounces, but have tunic arrangements and are appliqued in yoke fashion around the hips.

A great deal of gray is worn, but chiefly in very pale tints, and the silvery shade with pinkish tones is the most popular of all. Bright colorings are completely out of style. All the blues, pinks and heliotropes are soft and delicate, and the misty pastel tones are much affected.

Black lace is a good deal worn even on light colored gowns, and dresses of black or white taffeta are tucked and adorned with black lace set on in transparent fashion. A handsome gown of this description invariably has an air of distinction and can be worn either day or evening.

The plain but effective gown shown is of black chantilly over white silk. The collar is of white mousseline de sole. Dainty touches are afforded by the bows of liberty satin and the little square brilliant buckles.

To be smart this year your hat must be trimmed to match your gown, and this style will continue during the fall and early winter.

Medallions of silk are inlet into even cotton gowns, and, while plain colors are used, Persian designs are the favorites. A pretty gown of brown veiling illustrated this fad by being decorated with medallions of orange and brown Persian taffeta.

The smart dress shown is of coffee colored veiling with a fichu and yoke of ecru chiffon and a pale pink rosette.

In the matter of dress materials all those hairy stuffs resembling plush and beaver will be very largely employed. In colors green will be foremost, but the shade of blue called nationale and gray are likewise favored. Many costumes of dull red will be seen, and these will be combined with the new ecru tint.

A great deal of jet will be used, especially in trimming hats. Lace veils will be worn a good deal on beaded hats, especially those of black chantilly.

Irish lace will still be popular, and to this will be added cluny in coarser grades.

Clever Dog.

"The most remarkable dog I know," said an Albany man, "belongs to a neighbor of mine. Some time ago the dog was taught to go to a butcher's shop for a certain cut of beef that my neighbor liked. The butcher was instructed to send 70 cents' worth each time, and so the dog was given a dollar bill, which he took in his mouth and started away on his errand. Invariably the butcher would give the dog the meat and 30 cents in change, and the dog would jog back home contentedly.

"One day the butcher thought he would fool the dog, and so he gave him 20 cents instead of the correct amount. As the dog took the money in his mouth he seemed somewhat mystified. He went off, but it was not ten minutes before he returned, followed by a policeman."

PLAIN HOUSEWORK.

There Is Nothing Like It as a System of Physical Culture.

Would you be healthy and beautiful? Would you have strong, rounded arms, full chest, active, well shaped lower limbs that can dance all night and not feel it? Would you have a level head and a resourceful mind, trained muscles that never fail and in consequence a good digestion and a brave, steady heart that will pump for you with scarcely a perceptible hastened beat even while you walk up a steep hill or run upstairs?

Yes? Then do housework—just plain, common housework.

For developing lungs and chest sweeping is prime. Playing upon a washboard increases the limberness of the arms and wrists. It stiffens the fingers if one does too much of it, but we are not talking of too much of anything. Ironing is better than dumbbell practice. Polishing windows is better than swinging Indian clubs.

The rich man's daughter must search out devices for muscle development. For her have been invented tennis, pingpong, archery and dozens of cord and ring and bar arrangements. She is so put to it to get outdoor exercise that she must even take to hunting and galloping after hounds. The woman who does housework and gardening gets quite as healthful exercise without price and without trouble.

Nearly all country girls are healthy and comely until they get artificial notions from the city into their minds. Really and truly, in the matter of physical development and strong and independent character building, the country girl has infinite advantage over her sister of the city. Fine complexions and beautiful arms are found nearly always among women who milk cows and do dairy work. I have seen and studied girls of all stations and nations and have decided finally that the most fortunate of all are the daughters of well to do farm families in America, families in which the womenfolk do their own housework, tend flowers, ride horseback and rear chickens. A majority of the distinguished and successful feminine artists, teachers, writers, physicians and business women in the land today are from homes that gave them this noble bringing up. Those who later in life use their brains most effectively are the ones that in youth also learned to use their hands.

Though this fine country rearing is lost to the city girl, the healthful physical training of household work remains to her. Especially is she privileged in the matter of climbing stairs, which is so promotive of health in heart, lungs and muscles that running up and down stairs might almost be recommended of itself as a means to physical culture. Physicians are somewhat to blame for so much preaching of the ill effects of climbing stairs. There are none absolutely except to the confirmed invalid, and it is a genuine sign of the progress of the race that no woman except the most out of date is willing nowadays to acknowledge herself an invalid. Delicate females have gone out of fashion, for which let us thankful.

I know a few women who pride themselves on their weak hearts, but none of them does her own housework. One eats too much, another takes no active exercise at all, while a third laces herself so tightly that she ought to be sentenced to prison for it. Not one of them gives her heart any chance. A good, strenuous course of domestic labor would cure every one of these dames of her weak heart.

I know of one woman who says kitchen work makes her ill. When she is absent from her own house, doing nothing but idle visiting, she is well, but the day she arrives home and be*gins her domestic duties she says she* gets "kitchen backache." But this same woman also despises housework and proclaims it a "mean and sordid occupation." It is not. The meanness and sordidness are in the worker, not in the occupation.

There are not a few young women, and old ones, too, who make of household labor a really esthetic employment. They begin their tasks with joy, singing as they go. Their fine, delicate sense of cleanliness and order revels in the polished floors, shining windows, crystal pure glassware and snowy linens, which are made them by their own strong, skilful hands. These make of housework a real fine art. And their health is always good.

KATE UPSON CLARK.

The Successful Hostess

"SHE is one in a thousand," said the young matron appreciatively.

"What do you consider the chief requisite?" asked the engaged girl, with an eye to the future.

The young matron laughed. "Tact in the first place, tact in the second place, tact in the third place," she said.

"Oh, I suppose that means not bringing the wrong people together and saying the right thing at the right time! There is one woman I know who certainly can't do that. A guest of hers stepped up to make her adieus and say what a pleasant time she had had, and what do you suppose the blundering creature remarked complacently? 'Yes, I thought you would be glad to meet some nice people!' Fancy! You never could persuade the other woman that she didn't mean it maliciously, and she never put her foot in that house again."

"That's what happens to the woman who tries to entertain and makes a bad business of it. She sows her path in life with enemies instead of friends."

"When Jack and I are married," said the engaged girl, blushing, "we're just going to take a small house a bit out of town, so we can't attempt anything pretentious, but our little home is going to be wide open to all our friends just the same"—

"And that's one secret of being a good hostess," interrupted the matron —"to make people feel that you are always at home to them, not merely that the house is open on certain state occasions, when ice cream and cakes are served, and that on all others it is much better for them to stay away because of the disturbance their unexpected presence might cause in the household routine. No; the successful hostess is one who makes her guests welcome, no matter what the conditions. If it is Monday morning and she is helping her one maid, she will simply run down in her little cotton gown and not even excuse herself for the fact, and in the afternoon, if a friend drops in, she will urge her to stay for dinner without making any extra ceremony of the affair. That's the kind of house where people like to call. And if you live out of town," she went on enthusiastically, "you have a great chance. You can get up innumerable Sunday to Monday parties in the English fashion, which is becoming so popular here. Every one tries to get out of town over Sunday, and the acquaintance of a hospitable young woman with an attractive house is eagerly sought after. And this sort of entertaining is not expensive—a ping pong board, golf, a pleasant drive through country roads. But, above all, don't ruin yourself providing an expensive table. The usual family fare, well cooked and appetizing, is good enough."

"That's it," said the engaged girl. "When I go to see the Millers, who are really in quite straitened circumstances, I have a much nicer time than when I am invited by those horribly rich Benisons. Now, I know why—the Millers make me feel as if I were one of the family, and with the Benisons I am always labeled 'Visitor.'"

"Yes, that's the whole secret," returned the matron—"make your guest feel she is no trouble at all. Entertain so cleverly that you don't give the impression of entertaining. Don't map out a whole lot of events and drag your guest through them. Give her the opportunity to choose her own pleasures. Above all, be thoroughly simple and at your ease, and you will find that your guest will become so too."

AN OUTDOOR ROOM.

How a Comfortable Hot Weather Apartment May Be Made.

A summer room is a great comfort during August and September. It may be erected in the midst of a splendid garden or in a city back yard—it makes no difference.

In the first place, four poles or pieces of scantling are fixed in the ground where the room corners are to be. The tops of these are connected by four other pieces of wood, which should be screwed in position so at the end of the summer the structure may be taken to pieces. This is all the woodwork required. Indian or Chinese matting is used to cover the frame. This is lined on the inner side with plain colored cambric, preferably green. The matting is secured to the framework by tapes, so that if desired the sides may be raised or lowered. A pole is placed in the center of the room in order to raise the roof that the rain may run off easily. The wall matting at its lower edge is tied to pegs driven into the ground.

Now, as to the furnishing, the entrance may be hidden by a drapery on a bamboo rod. Folds of cheap figured cretonne will hide the inner framework. The floor should be the natural grass. Two or three lounging chairs and a table are all the furniture necessary. These are of bamboo or wicker. A hammock is a great comfort, but as it is not safe to swing it from the room posts it should be secured to a portable support consisting of two A shaped pieces joined together by two crosspieces one above the other. The highest crosspiece is secured to the apexes of the two A's, and the lower has its ends secured to the centers of the crossbars of the A shaped pieces.

A room of this sort may be constructed also of cangwork, and the only things needed are a wooden frame bored with a quantity of small holes just large enough to take the cane freely, a number of tiny pegs to fit the holes and a quantity of split cane, which may be obtained from a chair maker.

COOKING FOR THE SICK.

How to Tempt the Capricious Appetites of Convalescents.

Cooking for the sick ought to be taught as a special art, for much depends upon it. The slightest thing will "set" a sick person against food, to say nothing of the injury done to the delicate stomach by food hastily and crudely prepared.

In the first place, let me give a word of advice: Don't place too much food at one time before a person who is ill. Serve in grudging quantities and in the daintiest manner in order that the appetite may be aroused. More than one convalescence has been retarded through the patient being swamped with food which she had not the courage even to attempt to eat.

Only the freshest and best of everything should be used—the warmest filtered water, the reddest, soundest beef, the most perfectly ripe fruit.

Nothing should be used after it has been left standing any length of time, and no food should ever be left in the sickroom. Always keep food and drink for the sick in china, never in metal, not even in silver. A napkin over a saucer makes an air tight cover.

Milk used instead of water for poaching an egg for an invalid will impart a delicate flavor.

Wine whey makes an excellent dish. Take three ounces of sherry wine and half a cup of milk. Scald the milk, add the wine and remove quickly from the fire. Put on ice until cold and sweeten to taste.

FASHION NOVELTIES.

Indian and Persian Designs—Wide Lace Collars.

Indian and Persian designs of all sorts are having a great vogue. The silks in these patterns come very soft, so that they drape well, and for trimmings they are exceedingly rich.

Collars of lace insertion with stole ends will be worn on the fall coats. These can easily be made at home by any one with skillful fingers. One of the noticeable features of the late summer gown is the wide collar of lace, which extends well over the shoulders. Sailor collars of lace in every form are to be seen, as well as the vandyke and round shapes.

The blouse coat still retains the popular favor. It is made with or without tails and with an open or closed front. The triple coattails with rounding edges are considered very stylish, as are also the full Russian sleeves gathered into a band of silk or velvet, which material is also used to strap the coat.

The tailor made in the illustration is of black cheviot. The blouse jacket is collarless, and it has round revers faced with white silk. The skirt is plain with the exception of the triple gored flounce.

TO WEAR AT HOME.

Tea Gowns of Muslin and Point d'Esprit Are Very Fashionable.

Nothing is daintier for house wear than an artistic tea gown. Muslin makes up very prettily for this, provided one combines it with pale colored sashes and lace collars.

One of the easiest ways of evolving such a garment is to cut it on the empire pattern, with a round neck and flowing sleeves. A narrow double wrapteau at the back is a pretty break to the broad sash which ties over the bust on an empire gown, and the front can be draped to suit individual taste.

POINT D'ESPRIT NEGLIGEE.

It is one of the strong points of a tea gown, in fact, that it can be adapted to each woman's fancy regardless of the styles.

Some of the most beautiful muslins this year are so finely patterned that they resemble foulards. The pale green and white and blue mixtures are particularly effective, and the cream spotted muslins will always be in style, although they are not made so much over color this season, but rather over pure white.

The attractive negligee shown in the illustration is made of point d'esprit trimmed with white lace.

High transparent collars are often kept up, by a necklace of pearls or a dog collar. This is a very pretty fashion, but it should not be adopted by those with short necks.

some leading French houses are making three-quarter length coats of fine lace lined with accordion plaited chiffon in a variety of shades; others are making little sack coats entirely of embroidery.

The plain taffeta or moire coat with*out a lining still holds its own.* This is usually trimmed with a wide collar of chiffon forming or lace and is considered handsomer if kept all black.

The very elegant evening coat shown is of black bengaline silk trimmed with perpendicular strappings of satin. The sleeves are cut wide at the lower edges and are finished with wide and full frills of dotted chiffon. The large revers at the front are faced with white satin embroidered in black and gold.

sleeves and either a cape collar or a capuchin effect. It is practical to have one's dust coat made waterproof, for one is never sure of summer weather. Taffeta, too, still holds its own for wraps, and this fabric is now being manufactured in a soft but serviceable make.

For yachting and motoring there are some new linen hats in white, dark blue and even black. These are daintily trimmed with wings—red, white or scarlet—and chiffon veils draped carelessly around the brim.

White canvas shoes are once more in style for yachting and to wear with white pique and brilliantine dresses, but they are more carefully made and fitted than formerly.

The smart waist in the illustration is made of black pean de soie. The sleeves reach half way to the elbow, where they are finished with a bow and a wide frill of lace. The bolero opens over a softly draped underdevice of chiffon and silk. The fichu is of chiffon and lace.

A Long Row of Corn.

A Kingman county (Kan.) farmer is growing a row of corn a little more than twenty-five miles long for no other reason than to be singular and extraordinary. He commenced in a fifty acre field and went round and round in a circle with a line of corn till he had planted the whole in a single row, which commences at one of the edges and terminates in the middle. When he cultivated it, of course he had to plow the same way.

GOOD ROADS.

History has borne evidence to the fact that even the greatest reforms come slowly. The people have to be educated to appreciate those things which are really for their own advancement. Such has been the history of the "good roads" movement in the United States. Of late years, the more enlightened communities have realized the great advantages to be gained from the improvement of the highways and the work has gone steadily forward. Some of the very conservative places have still refused to see how well the problem has been worked out by their neighbors and put off the time when their roads shall be placed in the best possible condition.

Although counties like Union have already spent thousands of dollars in building good roads, there are a few counties in Jersey that remain in a benighted state and have refused to take advantage of the State aid in the work. Sussex has been one of the latter. Now comes the welcome news that the Board of Chosen Freeholders of that county has finally come to its senses and has started a campaign for good roads which promises to bring that county to the foremost ranks of any in the State. Out of 500 miles of roads in that county, it is planned to eventually macadamize 400 of them. It will, on the present lines, require something like sixty years to bring all this to pass.

It is welcome news to know that Sussex has started the campaign no matter on how modest a scale. It has not been done, however, without much opposition. And most of this opposition comes from the very men that will benefit most from it. The farmers of Sussex are now the chief opponents. They fail to see wherein they will gain and only see an addition to the tax rate without any corresponding advantage. If they would only look and see how the appearance of good roads in other communities has benefited the men of their same class, they would be fighting for instead of against the movement. They refuse to gain from the experience of others and it is only when the advantage is brought to their very doors that they will have to admit, however unwillingly, that good roads are a wonderful thing for the rural districts.

SOMERSET'S FACTIONS.

It is rumored that Mayor N. B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, will be the Republican candidate for surrogate in Somerset county. As to the truth or falsity of it, Mayor Smalley will say nothing as yet. When interviewed, he evaded a direct reply. Nevertheless the rumor has been quite persistent.

Just how much truth there is in the story, it is impossible to say. That is expresses the desire of certain of the Republican politicians in the other end of the county, there is no doubt. If North Plainfield's mayor does accept, it means a truce in the factional fight which has threatened the defeat of the G. O. P. in that county. With Smalley for surrogate, Frelinghuysen would undoubtedly be the Senatorial candidate. That would mean a combination of the two factions which have been headed by Lewis A. Thompson, of Somerville, and Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield.

Last year, the Reed faction held sway at the county convention. For some reason, which has not been explained, the other party assumed that it had everything its own way this year. The fallacy of the claim was demonstrated at the Congressional convention when Mayor Smalley so neatly overthrew the well-laid plans of the hand from the county seat. Now it begins to look as if the Thompsonites had learned their little lesson and wanted to divide the honors rather than taking their chances of not getting anything at all.

Senator Reed has no desire to return to the Legislature. He has so emphatically stated. As far as is generally known, North Plainfield has no candidate for the Senatorial nomination. While the friends of the present Senator would never stand for the nomination of Lewis A. Thompson, as was first suggested, it may be that they will be willing to meet the other faction half way and accept Mr. Frelinghuysen. There has been so much bad blood between the two parties heretofore that it is going to be rather difficult work to getting them into line, side by side. It will be interesting to watch developments in the case.

THE COMING ELECTION.

A popular error seems to exist in regard to the annexation election which takes place in the borough, September 16. This election does not settle the much discussed question of consolidation, no matter how it goes. The vote this time is merely to decide whether the county line shall be changed. North Plainfield might by the result of the election be placed in Union county and yet remain as distinct from this city as it is at present.

It is well to remember that a vote for annexation is not a vote in favor of consolidation for those questions are separate and distinct and must be settled at different times. No time has yet been set for the consolidation election. The question is subject to conference between the two Councils and it seems likely that some time will elapse before all the details can be agreed upon.

TWO WAYS.

With so many automobile accidents happening, it is not surprising that the newspapers all over the country have taken up the need of providing better control for the horseless vehicles which are now dealing death and injury among their passengers and unfortunate pasterby. The *trouble is not with the smaller car*riages of comparatively low speed but with the fast motor cars which possess intricate mechanism.

The Newark News makes the suggestion, which is by no means new, that all chaffeners be compelled to take out a licence before being allowed to operate these machines. Such a license would only be granted after the proper examinations had been passed which would show the chaffeur's thorough knowledge of the subject and his ability to control the machine under all occasions. This is the plan which is generally in force in the European countries and is there found to work with much success. While the automobiles are far more numerous on the other side of the Atlantic than they are here, the percentage of serious or fatal accidents seems much less. That the operators there are more capable and experienced is undoubtedly a very important factor in reducing the number of accidents.

Another Jersey newspaper believes that the State should pass a statute controlling the speed of automobiles throughout the State. While it might have a wholesome effect, it certainly would not prevent men, ignorant of the intricacies of these motor cars, from operating. The Newark News' idea seems to promise the best results, even if it might work a hardship in some few individual cases The trouble is that the simple and less speedy machines have to be governed by the same laws as the those powerful and complicated motor cars. The evolution of the auto may be expected, however, to eventually solve the problem which is now so troublesome to municipal and State authorities as well.

Short Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

Automobiles are doing queer things these days, but one of the most peculiar incidents on record occurred this morning on West Front street, nearly opposite Hill & Shupp's store. Dorsey W. Hyde was riding in his brother's machine, going toward Park avenue, when the two wheels nearest the trolley tracks struck the groove in the track and quicker than one could tell it reversed the machine completely so that it was heading the other way. The performance was so quick that many persons who saw it could scarcely believe their eyes. No damage resulted to the machine or occupants.

HOME FOR NEGRO SCHOOL

STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION HAS BOUGHT "OLD IRONSIDES."

Purchased Quarters at Bordentown Which Are Now Occupied by That Institution.

The State Manual Training and Industrial School for Colored Youths has now a permanent home by reason of the fact that the State Board of Education has finally decided to purchase "Old Ironsides," the property at Bordentown now occupied by the institution.

This famous tract of land contains 204 acres and was formerly the home of Mrs. Parnell, mother of the Irish leader, Charles Stewart Parnell. It will cost the State $15,000.

The purchase is already tentatively made and the board his instructed its standing committee to complete the purchase. The purchasing committee comprises W. D. Forbes J. B. Woodward, Sweeting Miles, Ulamar Allen and Joseph M. Byrn.

An appropriation of $35,000 was made by the Legislature last winter for the purchase of a site and for the erection of suitable buildings for this school. There now is left $20,000 with which to erect the buildings. Robert C. Dixon, of the town of Union, has been selected as architect and he has been instructed to prepare plans for the building.

The building for which provision is made will be but one of a number that will be required if the present plans for the work and scope of the school are to be effectuated.

It was largely due to the efforts of Rev. I. W. L. Roandtree that the $35,000 appropriation bill was passed last winter for the establishment of the school.

Rev. Mr. Roandtree has been constantly working for the school for ten years and his increasing labor in its interest was largely instrumental in the advancement of the institution.

It is believed that the postal authorities were obliged to increase the salary to get him.

ONE HORSE LOST IN FIRE

AN INCENDIARY BLAZE DESTROYED CHARLES JETER'S BARN.

One Horse Was Found in Field All Bridled—The Window Had Been Covered Up.

Fire, supposed to be of incendiary origin, destroyed a barn, in which a horse was burned to death, belonging to Charles Jeter, on Belmont avenue at 3 o'clock Monday morning. The crackling of the blazing building awoke the family of Mr. Bird living across the street, and the alarm was given immediately from box 132. The borough department promptly responded.

Two horses were stabled in the building. Chief Campbell found one of them in a near-by field with a bridle on. The animal had evidently been ridden a short time previously. It is thought that either some miscreant entered the barn to steal a horse and then set fire to the building to cover up his tracks or that a tramp looking for a resting place accidentally dropped a match and intended to utilize the horse to make good his escape. A blanket had been fastened over the window, thus preventing the discovery of the fire until it had gained good headway.

The total loss, comprising horse, barn and hay stored therein, is in the vicinity of $500.

KING SHOOT.

Members of Independent Gun Club Blazed at Eagle and Won Many Prizes.

The Independent Gun Club held its annual king shoot at the Maple avenue range Monday. The shooting was at an eagle placed on a fifty foot pole at a distance of fifty yards. Henry Haurand shot away the head, entitling him to be crowned king. John Lloyd knocked off the neck, taking second prize, valued at $5. Third honors went to the right wing, went to Adolph Berri, who also accidentally shot off the left wing, and the prize reverted to the club. Charles Jensen shot away the body, entitling him to the king medal.

The women immediately afterwards held a queen shoot. Mrs. Adolph Berri gave the finest exhibition ever seen on the range, making 101 out of a possible 108. Mrs. John Lloyd also did some remarkable shooting, making 89 points. Prizes were then awarded to the successful competitors. During the day several collections were rendered by the Saenger society.

FOOTBALL RULES FOR 1902

JUST BEEN ISSUED AND INCLUDE A NUMBER OF CHANGES.

Most Important Alteration is That Providing for Change of the Goals After Touchdown.

The new football rules for 1902 are just out, and for the first time it is possible to get an official record of just what changes were made by the rules committee at its summer session. The most important alteration in the rules is that providing a change of goals after each touchdown. The change also provides for a shift of goals after a goal from the field. A number of minor changes are made for the sake of clearness, and Rule 12, which refers to the length of the game, says that the referee shall, where but thirty minutes are likely to cut short the games, arbitrarily shorten the two halves, and that refusal to abide by the referee's opinion shall mean forfeiture of the game.

"Rule 16, section B," says the guide, "is a decided change, although how much it will affect the play only a season's work can determine." This paragraph reads: "In snapping the ball back, if the player doing so is off side, the ball must be snapped again, and if this occurs more than once on the same down, the opponents shall receive five yards, the number of the down and the point to be gained remaining unchanged." The penalty thus becomes less of the five yards instead of loss of the ball, and is less severe.

Rule 18 deals with the groupings of players, and it contains as an exception to section A the following: "One man of the side having the ball may be in motion toward his own goal without coming to a stop before the ball is put in play." Section C of the same rule elucidates a point concerning which there has always been much misunderstanding. "If five players, not including the quarter back, are behind the line of scrimmage, they must occupy one of the three following positions: First, all five of such players may be inside the positions occupied at the ends of the line of scrimmage, in which case two of these players must be at least five yards back of this line; or, second, if one of the said five players be outside of the position occupied by the player at the end of said line, then only one other of these five players must be at least five yards back of this line; but, third, all five of these players may be nearer than five yards to the line of scrimmage, provided two of them be outside the positions occupied by the players at the ends of said line. In this rule 'outside' means outside the outside foot of the players at the ends of the line."

In Rule 27, Section F, are additional points to still further prevent coaching from the side lines. "Only five men shall be allowed to walk up and down on each side of the field," says the rule. "As to water carriers, etc., the rule provides that "those of these shall come on the field of play without permission of the umpire." Violation of this rule is a foul, punishable by five yards loss. The punishment is mild and hardly fits the crime.

Changes have been made in Rule 28, which has to do with penalties. For holding the penalty becomes five yards set-back instead of ten. Also for unlawful use of the hands or arms, violation, as to off-side play, tripping and tackling below the knees, the penalty is fixed at a five-yard assessment, unless the offending side has the ball, in which case the punishment is instant surrender of the ball. If the ball be in the air when the foul is committed, it goes to the non-offending side.

The rule concludes with the following note: "Whenever a foul is committed which, in the opinion of the umpire, did not affect the play, the offended side may decline the penalty. In case of a run being made from this play, not more than twenty-five yards from the spot where the foul was committed shall be allowed."

THE LAST LEAGUE GAMES.

Y. M. C. A., 16; St. Marys, 3.
Safe Works, 10; Hope Y. M. A., 0.

The pennant in the City Baseball League has been won. Saturday's games completed the league series and definitely decided that the team from the Young Men's Christian Association was the winner. From the showing which the Y. M. C. A. has made during the season, there is not the slightest doubt that the honor was fairly and honestly won by the strongest team in the league.

Saturday's games contained the possibility of a tie for first place between the Y. M. C. A. and the Hope Y. M. A. teams. It was a forlorn hope for the latter nine and it failed to rise to the occasion. Instead of a desperate effort, the Hope players, with one exception, put up the worst exhibition of baseball they have shown since the season commenced and fell easy victims to the Safe Works aggregation which continued on its triumphal march. It not only lost Hopes' chances for a tie but resulted in a division of second honors with the Safe Works team.

The Y. M. C. A. played winning ball while the St. Marys were in a demoralized state. From the initial inning, the association boys began their demonstration which continued with much regularity until the St. Marys almost forgot that they were in the game. It was a crushing defeat.

Both of Saturday's games showed the failure of one team to meet the delivery of a pitcher and the strong batting prowess of the other. While large crowds witnessed both contests, neither was close enough to be really exciting. The people found much to enjoy, however.

Thus ends the season for the City Baseball League. According to the original schedule, it should have ended a week ago but rain compelled the postponing of two games which were played off Saturday. For some the final result was a surprise but it was generally conceded that the Y. M. C. A. should win if it was able to keep its team together. The defeat was felt most keenly by the followers of the Hope team who had been so confident of winning up to the last moment and then beheld their favorite team conclude its season with defeat.

HOPE'S DOWNFALL.

After playing championship ball all season, the Hope team crossed bats with the Safe Works nine, Saturday, and went through nine innings of a burlesque on the national game. No contest in the League series was more half-heartedly played on one side and but for the work of Shortstop Shortman the spectators wouldn't have got their money's worth. When the farce was over, Hope had suffered another shutout, the score being 10 to 0.

While the Hopes were wandering about in demoralized fashion, the Safe Works aggregation continued its triumphal march, started several weeks ago. Burns was in magnificent form and he had almost perfect support. Four hits were made off him but they were scattered and never resulted in getting a Hope runner any further than third base.

The Safe Works boys fell upon Hewit's delivery with much joy. One run, largely on hits, was made in the second inning. Six scores were tallied before they finished with Hewitt in the fourth. Then Monitros smiled sadly from the pitcher's box while the Iron Workers toyed with his curves for runs in the fifth, seventh and eighth innings. The ninth inning, as far as the Safe Works nine was concerned, wasn't necessary.

Nothing in the game of the Hope boys is worthy of special mention, as it was a simple case of demoralization all around, except for the fine exhibition given by Shortman. In reality he played the whole game and even a blow from a pitched ball, squarely in the stomach, failed to abate his enthusiasm and he went back in the game with renewed determination. Besides putting out five men, making five assists, taking part in a double play and making another unassisted, he came out without an error. He made one out of the Hope four hits.

Errors and misplays occurred with surprising frequency on the Hope side and Right Fielder Gordon even forgot his position. He tried to double up on center, leaving a gap for Allen to drop a fly that shouldn't have landed but one base but instead gave him three. It was clearly evident that something was wrong and there was. A dispute which occurred between the players, Friday night, is said to have been the cause of several avowing they wouldn't support others—and they certainly didn't.

Y. M. C. A'S EASY WIN.

Y. M. C. A. had no giant's task in trying to defeat the St. Mary's Saturday afternoon. Dupee was invincible, Doyle was easy; Y. M. C. A. was in fine fettle, St. Mary's was never more erratic; the result was a ratio of 16 to 3 in favor of the association nine. To the Y. M. C. A. players the winning of the game might have meant the winning of the pennant. And the tophy floated into their camp without even a suspicion of a ruffling breeze to disturb its folds.

Y. M. C. A. was first at the bat and began its steamhammer tactics immediately. Moore started off with a double, Barnes and Bowman followed with singles each; Bolsterle got a double, George Dupee a single, George Schoonmaker a base on balls, and every man of them crossed home plate before the inning ended.

The smashing proclivities of the Y. M. C. A. were in evidence again in the sixth. Four singles and a double, combined with a brace of errors in the field netted six runs.

St. Mary's made its only runs in the sixth and seventh. Taylor singled, got to third on a bad throw and came home on Lederer's hit. Lederer scored on a fly to left. Doyle went to first in the seventh on an error and tallied on Barry's double.

Barnes played a great game behind the bat and made three singles and a double. Berry Egan was back at first. Keefe, of St. Mary's, was unable to play and Madden was substituted at right field. Scott replaced Doyle in the box in the sixth.

'PLAINS GAME.

Scotch Plains, September 2—The local ball team took the strong Celluloid team, of Newark, into camp Saturday afternoon after one of the greatest contests the most ardent supporter could wish for.

Not until the seventh inning were the visitors enabled to bring a man across the plate. Two pretty singles by Hohmeyer and Powers tallied their one lone run in their half of the seventh. The locals began their scoring in their first inning, making one run. In the fourth three more were added to the score by timely batting and in the eighth three more, making a total of seven runs. Harvey struck out six of the visitors, while Parker, of the Celluloids, made four of Scotch Plains fan the air.

SAFE WORKS DOWNED.

The Safe Works baseball team received at High Bridge, Monday, a dose of the medicine it has been dealing out to the Hope nine. The crack Plainfield aggregation was shut out to the tune of 12 to 0. It would have been a different result, however, if the game had been played on respectable grounds, as the diamond is located in swamp where sword grass is as high as the players' knees. Manager Muir protested when he first saw the state of affairs but was finally induced to place his men in the grass lot. It was impossible for the Plainfielders to get about and the defeat resulted.

TWO FOR HOPE.

The Hope Y. M. A. team batted out victory at both morning and afternoon games against Clinton Avenue A. C. Monday. In the morning game the Hope colts clinched the game in the second inning by batting out six runs.

The Clinton Avenue boys hammered "Silent" Tuss Hewitt, but at critical points they failed to connect with the leather.

Y. M. C. A. VS. 'PLAINS.

Y. M. C. A. and Scotch Plains split even in a double-header Monday. The morning game was a splendid exhibition of baseball. It was impossible to pick the winners till the last ball had been pitched. The association nine finally won out by the score of 3 to 2.

'Plains tallied a run in each of the first two innings. Y. M. C. A. made its score in the eighth. Moore singled, went to second on Lederer's single, and both scored on Bolsterie's three-bagger. Dupee's hit brought Bolsterie home.

In the fourth inning, with two men on bases, Lederer made a catch at left field, the like of which is not often seen. Harvey smashed one out that looked like a three-bagger. After a long run with the ball, Lederer finally captured it on the tip of his fingers, and by an assist to second made a double play. Keen, of the St. Mary's team, caught for Y. M. C. A.

The closeness of the morning contest attracted upwards of 1,500 people to witness the afternoon game. Scotch Plains won by 12 to 7. It was a combination of slugging and errors. After rejecting an opportunity to shut out the side in the second, loose playing in the infield gave 'Plains eight runs before the third man was retired. The lead was too great to overcome, but Y. M. C. A. played a good uphill game.

The Scotch Plains lineup was practically the same as in the morning, except that Davis replaced Harvey in the box. Bowman pitched for Y. M. C. A., Dupee going to left field. McLaughlin played at first till relieved by Barry Egan in the fifth. Barnes caught.

FACTIONAL FIGHT IN MANY JERSEY COUNTIES

commission named to investigate the oyster industry of the State and recommend new and more general legislation on the subject.

As a rival candidate to Holman, the opposing faction have put forward Mayor William Butler, of Beach Haven, and it is said that the opposition is prepared to make an energetic campaign that will not fail for lack of the sinews of war. Holman, however, is not without friends, and among them are numbered a majority of the representative and influential Republicans of the county. Senator Shinn, despite his former allegiance to Sea Girt, has allied himself with Holman in the contest.

Other echoes of the Senatorial fight of last winter are being heard in Passaic and Bergen counties. In the latter, Assemblyman Joseph Tillotson, who early in the fight went over to the Dryden forces, incurred the especial enmity of former Governor Grigg's friends in that county, and may have oppostition in his third term aspirations, while in the home county of Mr. Griggs there is a feeling of resentment against the five Assemblymen from there who made Mr. Dryden's election possible by giving him their votes, that may result in the selection of an entire new delegation for next November. For different reasons, largely local in their nature, John Boyd Avis, the young Gloucester member, is being opposed for the Republican nomination by Joseph Gaunt, master of the State Grange, and William T. Brown, of Morris, may have to fight for renomination for a second term.

The only county where Assembly nominations have been made is Cumberland, and, unless the Democrats capture the majority in Chancery Clerk Stokes's bailiwick, the next Assemblymen from there will be Lieutenant Louis Miller, of the Naval Reserves, who made his first appearance in the House last winter, and B. Frank Buck, a young newspaper man of Millville, who is to succed William Moore, of Bridgeton.

The counties that are to elect sheriffs this fall are Atlantic, Burlington, Camden, Cumberland, Essex, Gloucester, Hudson, Hunterdon, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Morris, Ocean, Salem, Sussex, Union and Warren. State Senators are to be elected in Camden, Essex, Gloucester, Monmouth, Salem, Somerset, Union and Warren; county clerks in Essex, Gloucester and Sussex, and surrogates in Atlantic, Camden, Cape May, Hunterdon, Middlesex, Morris and Union.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 30, 1901.
Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.
About five years ago my right ear began to sing, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.
I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, specialists, aurists, etc., in this city, who told me that only a operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.
Then saw your advertisement, accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day after two weeks my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain Very truly yours,

MANY OFFENDERS IN COURT

MOST THRILLING WERE TWO WHO ENJOYED A PITCHED BATTLE.

Given Forty Days Straight—Colored Man Fined $5 for Sitting on Officer.

At Monday morning's session of the court, Peter Dickingon, colored, was fined $5 for disorderly conduct and resisting arrest. He was taken into custody by Patrolman McCarthy, Sunday afternoon, but refused to accompany the officer to the station. The policeman was thrown down in the struggle and Dickineon sat on him.

Theodore Dunlap was arraigned for drunkenness and sentence was suspended. He was arrested by Sergeant Frederickson.

At Tuesday morning's session, forty days straight was the disposition made in the cases of Stephen Koje and John Miller, who disturbed the peace and quiet of the city in the vicinity of East Third and Richmond streets yesterday afternoon, by throwing beer bottles, cobblestone and other missles at one another. Koje lost a square inch of scalp during the fight and Miller's head was so badly cut by flying beer bottles a physician had to be called. The row was stopped by Roundsman Mattox and Patrolman Lunger.

James Street was arraigned on complaint of Addie McCann, charged with assault. The fracas took place in front of McCann's wife's home on Pond place, whither he had gone to see his son. He was refused admittance and was then thrown off the porch by Street, a step-brother. The latter continued the row twenty minutes later when he met McCann at the corner of Lee place and South Second street. Street was fined $5.

William Haggerty was arraigned on complaint of Patrolman Vanderweg, charged with drunkenness. Sentence was suspended.

PYTHIAN KNIGHTS TO EXCHANGE COURTESIES

Perseverance Lodge to Entertain Members of Volunteer Lodge, of Elizabeth.

WILL GIVE RECEPTION.

A RETURN OF HOSPITALITIES WILL BE MADE LATER IN SEASON.

Past Chancellor Asa Pope Will Review Field Day Parade at Long Branch and Other Members Will Witness—Friday's Meeting.

Preparations for a renewal of the fraternal spirit, which is especially prominent among Knights of Pythias during the fall and winter months, was made at last Friday's meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P.

A communication was received from Volunteer Lodge, of Elizabeth, asking if September 19 would be a suitable date on which to visit this city as the guest of Perseverance. The communication was received amid applause and a committee was at once appointed to secure Washington Hall on that date and arrange for an elaborate reception and entertainment. It consists of S. J. Robinson, David Bowden, Harvey L. Paterson, Asa Pope and William J. Mattox. A second committee was also appointed to make arrangements for a visit by Perseverance to Elizabeth late next month or early in October. The latter consists of Donald McInnis, David Bowden and Thomas Muir. The lodge will go by special trolley in two cars.

In the business session of the meeting, the resignation of S. J. Clouston as inner guard was received and accepted and Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and Thomas Muir were nominated for the office.

A communication was read from the Supreme Lodge in which an invitation was extended Past Chancellor Asa Pope to accept a seat in the reviewing stand at Long Branch, Monday, when the annual Field Day of the order is to be held. The favored one signified his intention of taking his place among the notables and as a result many of the members outside of the uniformed rank which will attend in a body, announced their intention of taking part in the parade. The start will be made from Elizabeth at 8:30 and from present indications it will be one of the most successful Field Days ever held.

Following the business routine, the Lodge enjoyed an exceptionally pleasant hour of good and welfare, including a smoker. The latter came in the form of cigars, the gift of Brother Randolph Marsh, Jr., who recently joined the ranks of the Benedicts, an act which calls for Havanas to be passed among the Knights. The entertainment programme consisted of remarks from visiting Brother Mayo, of New Brunswick, Vice Chancellor Charles M. Ulrich, Robert L. Lee, William J. Mattox, Dr. N. W. Carrie and Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., piano selections by Harvey L. Patterson and Chancellor Commander William N. Runyon and vocal selections by Asa Pope and Thomas Muir.

H. H. McMurray, of Mountainside, has been granted a permit to build a stable on property at West Seventh street, near Monroe avenue. The building will be two stories, 28 feet front by 22 feet deep. George Campbell will do the carpenter work.

J. N. Martone, of Somerset street, was given permission to erect a dwelling, two stories, 14 feet front by 24 feet deep, on the corner of Hillside avenue and Lake street. William H. Clum is the architect, Joseph Ravin the carpenter.

DINNER AT GOLF CLUB.

Given by Miss Lydie Loizeaux to a Few of Her Friends.

A pleasing event of last Thursday was the dinner party given at the Park Golf Club by Miss Lydie Loizeaux, a member of the club, for a few of her friends. Covers were laid for fourteen. It was 7:30 o'clock when the guests sat down to the table and it was nearly 10 o'clock when the affair terminated.

Mr. and Mrs. Loch were chaperones for the affair and among those present besides them were the Misses Kampmap, Miss Davis, Miss Constance Patton, B. deS. Newhall, Henry W. Brower, Wm. Loizeaux and Edward Loizeaux.

STRONG ELEVEN FOR PLAINFIELD THIS FALL

Alis Team Will be Reorganized and Greatly Strengthened for Coming Season.

THE FINANCIAL PLANS.

CANDIDATES WILL MEET CAPTAIN PHILLIPS TUESDAY EVENING.

Alis A. A. Has Been Steadily Coming to the Fore and Will Now Have a Representative Team for Plainfield This Year.

While Plainfield has lacked a really representative football team for several years since the old Plainfield A. A. withdrew from the gridiron, the Alis A. A. has been yearly putting up a strong game and making a better showing. From being the crack junior team of this part of New Jersey, it has now arisen to a prominent place among the strongest amateur elevens. Plans are now on foot to have a representative eleven under the auspices of that organization this winter and only the support of the public will be needed to make those plans a reality.

A meeting of the Alis boys was held Wednesday evening at the home of Roy T. Phillips, of Madison avenue, last year's captain, when the subject was discussed and plans formulated. The subject of financial support has been a bothersome one in the past. A new plan was adopted which, if the games are supported as they should be, ought to put the team on a sound financial basis.

There is every indication that the team will equal in strength the famous old P. A. A. eleven which made such a reputation for Plainfield in football circles. There are already twenty men who have declared their intention of trying for the team. Nearly all of last year's team will be out and then there will be some splendid new material. Quite a coterie of old Princeton players are among the new candidates. These candidates will meet Tuesday evening for the first preliminary practice. They will report at the home of Captain Phillips and there will be a chance to look over the material and outline plans for actual work.

Last season's team was a strong one but it is expected that the eleven which the Alis A. A. will put on the gridiron this fall will be far superior to it. There are several weak points which will be materially strengthened. Some of the new canddiates will add much needed weight to the line. While Captain Phillips is saying little, he has in mind some important changes which will be announced later. There are some of the old Alis boys who have played together for nearly ten years. They will form a nucleus for the reorganized team. It is too early to attempt to give even a vague idea of the composition of the team but it may be accepted that it will be the equal of any that has ever represented Plainfield if the present plans do not miscarry.

BUILDING BOOM.

New Contracts for Buildings to be Erected in the Town of Lincoln.

The much bandied about town of Lincoln is at present enjoying a building boom such as was hardly ever dreamed of by its founder, S. D. Drake. Following closely upon the contract being awarded for the erection of the Lincoln Chamois and Leather Company's buildings, the Lincoln Steel Works Company has announced having broken ground for a large addition to its present plant. The plans call for a structure 300 feet long, two stories in height.

The Lincoln Water-Proof Company, one of the town's first industries, has also felt the business boom and has awarded a contract for the erection of a building equal in size to the present structure. In a short time it will be able to double its output. Dewey Park modestly comes to the fore to make known that J. D. Loizeaux, of this city, will shortly erect four houses at that place.

After Team's Owner.

Adam Stout, on behalf of his wife, Mrs. Elfrida Stout, has instituted a suit for $5,000 damages in the Circuit Court against Henry Haurand on account of injuries received by being knocked down by Mr. Haurand's runaway team near the corner of Madison avenue and West Third street about three months ago. Counsellor Robert M. Clark is conducting the case for the plaintiff.

Jean Davis, a student at Alfred University, returned to Alfred Sunday night after spending several days as the guest of Miss May Ross, of West Fifth street.

Miss Kizzie Neagle, of this city, has been visiting friends in Bound Brook for a few days.

GILLMORE TO DRILL SOLDIERS

GOVERNOR MURPHY WANTS HIM TO GO TO FORT RILEY, KAN.

To Witness the Military Manoeuvres at the Camp of Instruction Next Month.

Governor Murphy has asked Brigadier General Q. O'M. Gillmore to represent this State at the military manoeuvres at the camp of instruction at Fort Riley, Kansas, and it is believed the General will accept.

General Gillmore will be permitted to take one of his staff with him, and it is said that he will take Major Gilkyson.

When he returns after the camp General Gillmore will make out a report in writing to the Adjutant-General.

Military men throughout the country are greatly interested in the Fort Riley camp of instruction. The following is the programme:

The troops will assemble at Fort Riley September 20 and the manoeuvres will begin September 29 and continue until October 15.

The troops will be marched during their exercises over a tract of country about forty miles wide and sixty miles long.

The force will be organized into a division and will be commanded by General J. C. Bates, of the regular army.

Four regiments of regular infantry, two regiments of regular cavalry, six batteries of artillery, one battalion of engineers with hospital and signal corps outfits will comprise the force detailed from the regular army, in all about 8,000 men.

Two regiments of infantry from the State of Nebraska, two regiments of infantry from the State of Kansas and two battalions from Arkansas will be all the National Guard troops assembled.

The Governors of the various states have been requested by the Secretary of War to send a representative of their National Guard to witness and report on the manoeuvres.

FUNERAL OF STELLE BLACKFORD.

Services Were Held From the Home on East Second Street Thursday.

The funeral services of the late Stelle Blackford were held from the home on East Second street, Thursday afternoon, and although they were private, many friends and relatives were present. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, was in charge, and he was assisted by Rev. J. A. Cubberly, of South Plainfield, who offered prayer.

Dr. Yerkes in his remarks spoke of the exemplary Christian life and character of the departed and of his devotion and love for his home.

There were many floral tributes, including two large pieces and several smaller ones. The interment took place in the Baptist cemetery on Plainfield avenue. The bearers were Lewis Walker, Firman Walker, Peter Benwood, Isaac Dayton and William Dayton.

YOUNG WOMAN DEAD.

Miss Margaret E. Brown, Native of Plainfield, Died at Kokomo, Ind.

The Morning News, of Kokomo, Ind., under date of August 26, publishes the following item which will be read with deep regrets by many Plainfielders:

"Margaret E., daughter of Thomas E. Brown, of 214 West Walnut street, died Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, of tuberculosis. She was born at Plainfield, N. J., in January 1877. Just one year ago Monday Mr. Brown lost another daughter, Miss Stellar. The second blow has almost prostrated him."

Mr. Brown formerly lived in Plainfield, where he has a great many friends, and not a few will remember his daughter. He is an officer of the Monarch Mental Company, of Kokomo, and is very successful in business.

Take Care of the Stomach.

The man or woman whose digestion is perfect and whose stomach performs its every function is never sick. Kodol cleanses, purifies and sweetens the stomach and cures positively and permanently all stomach troubles, indigestion and dyspepsia. It is the wonderful reconstructive tonic that is making so many sick people well and weak people strong by conveying to their bodies all of the nourishment in the food they eat. Rev. J. H. Holladay, of Holladay, Miss., writes: Kodol has cured me. I consider it the best remedy I ever used for dyspepsia and stomach troubles. I was given up by physicians. Kodol saved my life. Take it after meals. L. W. Randolph.

Rev. E. E. Valentine, of Ambler, Pa., who preached at the First Baptist church last Sunday, was the guest while in the city of C. B. Rittenhouse, of West Sixth street.

Mrs. Charles Ward, of Brooklyn, has been spending several days with relatives in Plainfield.

Miss Ella Harper, of Somerville, has been visiting friends in Plainfield.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 7—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Ready for His coming.—Luke xii, 35-48.

The coming referred to in the topic is the second coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in this passage from Luke Christ sets forth the importance and necessity of being ready for His coming. "Blessed are those servants whom the lord when he cometh shall find watching. Verily I say unto you he shall gird himself and make them to sit down to meat and will come forth and serve them. * * * Be ye ready therefore also, for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not." Nor is this the only place where Christ emphasized the importance of being ready for His coming. It was a familiar topic with Him and was set forth both in precept and in parable.

Readiness for Christ's second coming is necessary and important because Christ is coming again. Some may doubt this doctrine, but Christians cannot. It is a conspicuous and deliberate teaching of the New Testament. "I will come again" was the declaration of Christ. "This same Jesus which is taken up into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven" was the testimony of the angels in Acts i, 11, and in the epistles Paul, James, Peter and John all emphasized the fact of Christ's coming and its important bearing upon the duties of the Christian. Christ will come again. Therefore we should be ready for His coming.

But we should not only be ready, but always ready, for the reason that no man knows the day or the hour when Christ will come. The fact is revealed, but the time is unrevealed. Nor is it to be revealed. Christ is to come as a thief in the night. In the parable of the virgins it was midnight, the most unexpected hour, when the cry arose, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh!" This is to be a characteristic of the second coming of Christ. He is to come suddenly and unexpectedly; hence the necessity of being prepared at all times for His coming.

Whether we are ready for Christ's coming is important matter. Upon our readiness depends our entrance with Him into the glories and joys of heaven. The wise virgins entered; the foolish virgins, being unprepared, were left out and were kept out. "The door was shut." Are we prepared? Are we ready in faith and life for His coming?

BIBLE READINGS.

Matt. xxiv, 44-46; xxv, 1-13; Luke xxi, 9-36; John ix, 4; I Thess. v, 1-6; II Tim. iv, 1-8; II Pet. iii, 1-10; Rev. iii, 1-3; xvi, 15.

Secretary Baer's Resignation.

In resigning his Christian Endeavor office, John Willis Baer, who, beginning as a missionary, has been secretary of the Presbyterian board of home missions, said: "I believe today in the underlying principles of Christian Endeavor as sincerely as I have these twelve years, and as a missionary and evangelist to the world the Church Christian Endeavor is only beginning to appreciate its power. As a worldwide bond of union to bring denominations and nations into practical co-operation and fellowship it is to continue to be used more increasingly. Christian agency. Its many sided and many tongued testimony for Christ is to win to it a greater number of the young in the days of their youth, as they live honest, consistent lives in the home, in the church and in the state. It is not because I love Christian Endeavor less that I ask to be relieved of my trust, but because I believe another can bring to my office new ideas, new methods, new enthusiasm, and carry the Christian Endeavor banner ever onward and upward, and at the same time that I may be able, with God's help, to address myself with fresh enthusiasm and consecration to the work of home missions and help to win America for Christ, and I turn to this new field believing it to be my life work."

One Way of Treating a Rogue.

It does not elevate human nature or spirit to have another think better of him than he is. At the same time it is an appeal to the better side of a man's or a boy's nature when you show confidence in him. No person wants to be known worse than he is counted, and even if one is surprised at your being ready to trust him without any knowledge of the facts he does not want to disappoint your good opinion of him. Many a rough boy has been inspired to be higher minded and conscious of being trusted with a special mission or assigned to the care of others by one who was willing to believe that there was a good side to his nature. On the other hand, a good way of making a rogue is to treat a person that you think he is such. Our shown estimates of others have a good deal to do with helping them up or down in life.—Sunday School Times.

Fellowship With God.

Fellowship with God is not to be sought only as a means to an end, for it is itself the end to which all means must contribute, but when it is so sought and cultivated for its own sake he who enjoys fellowship becomes the fountain of untold blessing to the church and to the world.—Rev. A. T. Pierson, D. D.

Trust in God.

It is a wise providence that we cannot see the future. We can see through one pane of glass easily, but through ten placed together we cannot see, yet each is transparent. By living a day at a time we get along well, and all is clear, although we cannot see through all the purposes of God concerning us. —Churchman.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Sept 7, "Pastors Necessary to the Evangelization of the World in This Generation"—Text, Isa. xl, 29-31; Acts i, 4-8; Luke x, 2; Prov. xxix, 18. Read Matt. viii.

Since the Master taught the disciples the model prayer the church has been praying, "Thy kingdom come." The expectation is that the earth shall some time be Christianized. Prophecy has declared the fact. The great question that confronts us and presses for solution is, "What factors are necessary to accomplish this work and to do it in this generation?" The argument is that God is abundantly able to do all His work and must be willing to have the end reached speedily. Whatever lack there is must be on the part of the church. What does she lack and how can this lack be supplied?

The Scripture readings clearly indicate:

First.—That the task of the church on earth is to "prepare the way of the Lord." Mountains are to be leveled and valleys raised up. The figure is as effective as familiar. Wrongs are to be righted, abuses corrected, righteousness and equity established. Our poets have sung of the coming golden age of fraternity, peace and prosperity. Our preachers have proclaimed the will of God and duty of man. Our earnest hearted have prayed and toiled, but the end is not yet. What more is needed? The church must more fully realize her mission to the world as an evangelizing agency. The duty to "cry aloud and spare not" does not press home on the ordinary Christian as strongly as it should. The general belief in the duty of the church to carry the gospel to the unsaved needs to become a personal conviction leading to individual consecration. Not many are called to be missionaries, but every one is called to be an efficient agent in this task. Intelligent interest in all the benevolent operations of the church is the duty of every church member and especially of every member of the Epworth League. What do we as a whole propose to do and how are we trying to do it should have careful attention of each one. Our church papers and reports of the connectional societies should have more attention. We need to know more of the facts connected with this our business, even if we in consequence have less time for fiction. Our work is before us. We must understand it. We are to aid in evangelizing the world. Let the idea be clearly defined in thought. Let us catch the vision of a world's redemption from sin and our part in redeeming it.

Second.—We must have power from the Holy Spirit. No other means is efficient. There is no substitute. We must be filled with the spirit of Christ and throw ourselves and all we have into the work. Thought, heart and hand must unite. We must be moved to the soul depths, and we shall then have power to move the world. If we feel, we shall make others feel also.

Third.—There must be work. The voice must cry. We must have talk—not random talk nor mere rhetoric, but the logic of law and love. There must be helpfulness of the hand in relieving distress of body. Men are to be saved now. Disease of body must be cured, disease of mind corrected and disease of soul cleansed. The power is of God, the application is for us to make.

The Christian Life.

The Christian life is worship as well as work and growth. Every true life reveals the glory of God. Life is the highest worship. What a revelation of God a good life is! The years of a man's life are the pages of a book on which is written the name of God. Looking backward always gives us a vision of God's help. His goodness and His grace have combined to make the year a year of blessing. His dealings with us always have a brighter look when we review them. The diamond gives back the light that it receives in all the beauty of its broken rays. Our saved souls are made beautiful by the light received from God, given back in praise and worship to Him. Every year of our lives should speak a message of God to the world. We are His children, and there is something wrong with us if the world does not learn something of Our Father from our lips and lives.—Christian Intelligencer.

True Conditions of a Christian Life.

Delight, enthusiasm, hope, content—these are the true conditions of a Christian life, just as song is the true condition of the bird or color of the rose. The bird is still a bird although it cannot sing and the rose is still a rose although its red grows dull and faded in some dark, close room where it is compelled to grow, so the Christian is a Christian even although his soul is dark, filled with doubt and he goes staggering on, feeling every moment that he will fall, never daring to look up and hope.—Phillips Brooks.

Way to Success.

The men whom I have seen succeed best in life have always been cheerful and hopeful men, who went about their business with a smile on their faces and took the changes and chances of their mortal life like men facing rough and smooth alike as it came and so found the truth of the old proverb that "good times and bad times and all times pass over."—Charles Kingsley.

Hope.

Beyond the storm tossed clouds of this gray life
A fairer sky filled with the light of promise gleams.
Beyond the darkness and the trouble rife,
Bay jewelwise, the glowing depths,
hope's bright star beams.
—Philadelphia Ledger.

THEATRICAL.

"Lovers' Lane" gives evidences of the same longevity that has marked "Way Down East." Although the coming season will be the play's third it will be acted by three companies as heretofore.

In Rice's "Show Girl," the most attractive of all the recent conglomerations of song, dance, costumes and scenery, commonly called "musical comedy," New York has seen several new comedians who had never before appeared in the metropolis. The principal and most important of these is Frank Lalor, who had previously appeared only in the smaller towns with a practically unknown farcical comedy. Another is Robert Dailey, a younger brother of Peter Dailey, whose efforts have heretofore been confined to vaudeville, has an important comedy role in the production for which he is well suited. A western song and dance team, Frank C. Young and Bessie de Voie, were engaged for their specialty, but were placed in two leading comedy roles in which they made a most pronounced success.

"Peggy from Paris" is the title of the latest work of the successful humorist, George Ade, for stageland and Henry W. Savage is to make the production in the early autumn. As in all of Mr. Ade's work there is a delightful vein of satire discernible from the beginning until the end, for he sees human nature with extremely good eyes and invariably finds the features which are humorous. "Peggy from Paris" is American from start to finish, dealing with the way a little lady formed things at home in Indiana after an extended trip to the French capital. In style the libretto is said to follow the author's "Fables in Slang," more closely than his already successful "The Sultan of Sulu" which was one of the really great successes of the spring season. Henry W. Savage, who controls all of Mr. Ade's writings for the stage for the next three years, will give "Peggy from Paris" a very elaborate production, it is stated. The music will, in the main, be from the pen of William Loraine, but there will be several interpolated songs from popular authors.

Quincy Adams Sawyer enters upon the last two weeks of its very successful engagement at the Academy of Music, New York, Monday evening. This latest pastoral play has gone entirely contrary to expectations. Before the engagement opened at the Academy, those who were expected to know said that the theatrical going public were tired of rural plays, and that the country was flooded with down east dramas. Such may be the case, but the unexpected happened in this case, as in others. The New York public is not tired of a good, clean, wholesome rural drama, with a strong natural story, abounding in comedy and realistic situations, and are demonstrating the fact by crowding the largest theatre in America at almost every performance. The last two weeks of its engagement promises to be as large as any in the history of this famous place of amusement, and if present expectations can be taken as a guide, "Quincy Adams Sawyer" will be favored the entire season with very big business. Following this New England play, for a limited engagement of only four weeks, will be the original Bostonians in a special new revival of DeKoven & Smith's opera, "Robin Hood," which opens at the Academy Sept. 8.

With September a new season in the theatrical world is begun. All over New York theatres are being hastily prepared for the autumn opening and the next few months will mean much to both managers and actors. However at Keith's there are no seasons, since this playhouse keeps open all the year round, and the coming of autumn will make little change on Union Square, save that the big European vandeville acts which make their appearance in greater numbers. The past summer has been a very profitable one to Mr. Keith and, to insure the continuance of the enormous patronage which is his, no effort and no expense will be spared to make his shows even better than they have been in the past. Heading the bill for the first week in September is Lillian Burkhart who, with a strong supporting company, will present a sketch called "Jessie's Jack and Jerry," which is considered her greatest success. The Four Garganys, comedy acrobats, who have second place on the bill, form the advance guard of the great European novelty acts which are billed to appear here during the autumn and winter. Genaro and Bailey, acknowledged to be the best dancers upon the vaudeville stage; Stuart Barnes, the celebrated monologuist; Mrs. and Mrs. Lavarni, in a side-splitting comical sketch; Mills and Boecher, who also have a sketch; with a score of other strong acts, and new pictures for the biograph and stereopticon complete the Keith offering. Noon to 11 p. m. 50 cents.

Miss Bessie Uylat, of Princeton, has returned home after a visit with friends in the borough.

NEW QUARTERS FOR THE STATE SENATE

Contract Will Probably be Awarded to Lewis Lawton at Meeting Tuesday.

HE WAS LOWEST BIDDER

SOMETHING ABOUT NEW HOME FOR THE UPPER HOUSE.

Will Not be Completed Until a Year From This Fall—It is to Cost $125,000—The Interior Will be Handsomely Furnished.

Trenton, Aug. 29—The contracts for building the new Senate chamber at the State house, Trenton, are to be awarded soon, and it is expected that the wing of the State house in which the old chamber is located will have been demolished by September 15. Already the chamber has been dismantled and the furnishings are being prepared for the auction room. The large chandelier which suspended from the centre of the ceiling has been hung in the supreme court chamber, where the Senate will hold its sessions next winter.

Six bids for the erection of the new addition were opened by the State house commission. Only one of the six, that of Lewis Lawton, of Trenton, was within the $125,000 appropriated.

Mr. Lawton's bid was $124,450 and the other bids were: Joseph H. Cutley, of Jersey City, $133,000; William Johnston, $130,575; James W. Lanning, $145,500; Robert Johnston, $168,324.

The contract will not be awarded until next Tuesday, but will undoubtedly go to Contractor Lawton, who built the new wing of the State house two years ago.

The new Senate chamber will not be ready for occupancy until a year from this fall. It will be nearly as large as the house of assembly. The improvement will cost about $125,000, and the new building will extend nearly to the top of the terrace on the west of the main building.

The new building will extend across the westerly side of the capital, offsetting the assembly chamber, which extends down Delaware street. Connection is to be made to the main building through a corridor from the main hall. This corridor will extend through the basement and first floor, and in it suitable provision will be made to shut off the new from the old buildings.

It is then to be continued across the new building, and on one side of it are to be four committee rooms, while opposite to them is the foyer or staircase hall, from which entrance is affected to the Senate lobby and to the stairways leading to the galleries leading to the court room.

The Senate chamber, including the corridors on each side, and the reception rooms, is to be forty by sixty feet. The central part to the dome will be thirty-six feet high. The interior of the chamber, it is proposed to finish with decorative panels and mouldings of plaster of paris, scagliola and imitation marble.

The doors and wood finish are to be of cherry, finished in mahogany. The arrangement of the rooms is such as to insure entire privacy to the members.

On the upper floor, besides the broad public gallery, a special gallery over the president's desk for the reporters is provided, back of which are to be four rooms and a lavatory. The seating accommodations of the upper gallery will be more than 200, and entrances are provided on both sides of the chamber by wide stairs leading to the first floor and up to the second floor.

The building will be made as nearly as possible fireproof throughout. The floors, except where carpet is used, will be covered with tiling, asbestalith or other similar material. All wainscoting is to be scagliola, with composition mouldings and ornamentations, highly finished. Stone stairs will lead to the second story.

The exterior of the building is to be faced with stone ashlar to the first floor and limestone above, and in general effect it will correspond with the rest of the Capitol.

Stone Sidewalk Complete.

William A. Woodruff, the owner of the property on Elmwood place, occupied by Joseph Randolph, is improving the same. The foundation is being repaired and a new porch being built. Another improvement is the laying of a stone walk in front of the house. This is the last stone walk to be put down and completes the flagging in the street.

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. William Barlow, of Prospect place, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Alice Adele Barlow, to Harry P. Henriques, of New York.

THOUSANDS OF SMITHS AT ANNUAL REUNION

Famous Smith Picnic Was Held Near Peapack August 28 With Much Success.

'TWAS A GREAT EVENT.

THE SAME OLD OFFICERS WERE RE-ELECTED ONCE MORE.

Rev. C. S. Woodruff was Principal Speaker of the Day—Others Who Talked—No Fakirs Allowed at the Gathering.

Somerville, Aug. 28—Smiths! Hundreds, yes thousands of them, and many who were not Smiths at all but married Smiths or claim claimed relationship to that wonderful family in some other way. There they were, out in the grove near Peapack, yesterday, to the number of fully six thousand in the last and most successful of the family gatherings which have become so famous since their origin twenty-seven years ago.

That Smith family picnic is a great event in Somerset county. Like yesterday, special arrangements are always made to have fine weather and the hosts that take advantage of the day make it a sight worth seeing. And the picnic yesterday was no exception.

The first reunion was held in the same grove on September 6, 1876, and the officers then chosen still officiate. They are: President, Isaiah Smith, of Millington; secretary, Abraham Smith, of Peapack, and treasurer, James D. Smith, of Peapack. The president for the first time in years is absent from the family reunion, being on a business trip to the Thousand Islands. Rev. Charles Rudolph Kuebler, of Hackensack, acted as president and called the clan together.

All of the officers were rechosen, and after a luncheon prepared by the Smiths for the members of the family who came from a distance, Rev. Charles S. Woodruff, of Bloomfield, N. J., was introduced as the principal speaker of the day. Mr. Woodruff is a Smith of the fourth generation, counting from the original John Schmidt, who emigrated from Holland in 1740. He made the opening address at the first meeting of the clan, in 1876.

Mr. Woodruff spoke in part as follows:

"This is the twenty-seventh gathering of the Smith family on these grounds. I had the honor to make the first address, twenty-seven years ago. I was then the only spinister in the family. We have found quite a number since. We are not here from sentiment alone. Our family has stood for several things of which we are proud.

"First—We stand for the sacredness of the family. This meeting on the old homestead shows this. The family is the unit of the nation. No nation is secure that has not a pure and strong family life. We cannot in these days of degeneracy, afford to relax in our devotion to the home.

"Second—We stand for the Christian faith. The Hollander is religious. They brought their Bible and church with them, and they gave to this land one of the strongest and most stable of our religious denominations.

"Third—The Smith family stands for the true source of all legitimate national wealth as tillers of the soil. The Dutchman was a farmer. He knew how to get the the most out of the soil. There is a tendency to get away from the farm. Men are eager to get rich in haste. But there must always be the producer, to feed the great mass of consumers. The poet sings for a few, and the artist paints for limited number, but the farmer gathers the fruit of his toil to feed everybody. The land produces the only true wealth. Such gatherings as these, which tend to the development of the social element and qualities of which I have spoken, do much for home and God and native land."

Other speakers introduced were Rev. Nicholas Bowers, of Basking Ridge; Rev. George Sulter, of Newark, and Rev. L. M. Conrow, of Lamington.

Abram Smith, the aged secretary, brought out his rollbook, upon which twenty-five thousand Smiths had already enrolled their names. Many new names were added. Many little Smiths in long dresses were in evidence at the signing of the roll.

The crowd began to arrive early. At 2 o'clock it was estimated that fully six thousand people were on the grounds.

Peter Benbrock, of Somerville, was there. He is an octogenarian, and, altough in no way connected with the Smith family, has never missed one of the twenty-seven reunions. Besides the people from every village within a radius of fifteen miles, several came from the far western states. The Seneca county (N. Y.) branch was well represented.

One of the features of the picnic was the absence from the grounds of fakirs. The prohibition of such people was advertised by the family, but, notwithstanding this, a familiar scene on the grounds was to see a "Reuben" wending his way amid the crowded grove holding one hand firmly over his watch, which had been the family time-piece for generations, and the other hand jammed deep into his trousers pocket safely guarding his last week's egg money.

The grounds on which the reunion are held form part of what was once a six hundred acre farm. New York people have steadily been purchasing parts of it until now it has dwindled to one hundred acres. If the ground is sold, and the picnics are discontinued by this branch of the Smiths, the Seneca branch, which has grown remarkably within the last decade, will undoubtedly continue the gatherings in its State.

PAULIST PRIESTS PROPOSED

NEW ORDER STARTED TENTATIVELY IN EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Is Claimed That the Middle West Has Need of Such an Organization.

A movement started tentatively some months ago to organize an order of St. Paul in the Episcopal church, has so far succeeded as to have a constitution drawn up and a preliminary head in Rev. C. R. Birnbach, of Pittsfield, Ill., who announces that a meeting will be called soon in the interests of the plan, and that pending the holding of such meeting he desires suggestions.

The constitution restricts membership to ordained men, but has a provision for laymen who are studying for ordination.

Only men in Episcopal priests' orders are to be eligible to vote in the conduct of the organization. It is provided that no priest of the order may labor in a diocese without consent of the bishop, and that upon parishes coming to be financially able to pay salaries of $1,000 a year if in the country, or $1,500 if in the city, the Paulist priest shall retire to make room for a regular priest, if requested by the bishop to do so. It is still further provided that Paulist priests may not, save under very strict conditions, become candidates for the vacant rectorates of the parishes which may have been built up by them.

This introduction of the distinction between regular and secular priests comes about in the Episcopal church in America in almost the same way that it came into the Roman Catholic church in Italy and France and for the same reasons. The establishment of an order of priests in the Episcopal church, while it copies the Church of Rome, and is historic, is not startling to the religious world, as it might have been forty years ago; for all religious bodies are today adopting plans, and even terms, from each other or from the past, wherever such plans and terms seem to be of service. The new Episcopal order of Paulists is designed chiefly for work in the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Missouri and Michigan, but is of course available everywhere. All Paulists are required to serve without pay, and, unlike most of the Roman regulars, may not live in community or acquire support by endowment. Like the apostle whose name they have adopted, they are to labor with their own hands, unless independent by possession of private means, and do the work of priests of the Episcopal church besides.

Founders of this new Paulist order give as reasons for their action the facts that many towns in the middle west are unable to support an Episcopal clergyman; that the leisure class from whom may be expected men willing and able to labor as missionaries and support themselves is just coming to exist in this country as it has long existed in England and France, and that Episcopal church extension in America and abroad can be thus accomplished in places where it cannot be by the usual means of a paid missionary supported by a central mission board.

Beware of the Knife.

No profession has advanced more rapidly of late than surgery, but it should not be used except where absolutely necessary. In cases of piles for example, it is seldom needed. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Save cures quickly and permanently. Unequalled for cuts, burns, bruises, wounds, skin diseases. Accept no counterfeits. "I was so troubled with bleeding piles that I lost much blood and strength," says J. C. Phillips, Paris, Ill. "DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured me in a short time." Soothes and heals. L. W.
